SCARCITY OF FOOD WILL NOT STOP THE WAR

Professor T. Tsuji, former instructor at the School of Oriental Languages attached to Berlin University, who remained in the German capital until September 10, 1916 despite various inducements to leave the country, writes of the German people in the January issue of the "Shin Nihon."

Prof. Tsuji went to Berlin in 1902 as instructor of the Japanese language, and after war was declared he remained in Berlin and continued his work.

He says that after the outbreak of hostilities it became dangerous to walk through the streets of Berlin, and he had to make use of a motor-car whenever he had occasion to go out. His students begged him to remain at home, but he went daily to his school. His contract with the university expired in July, and he left Germany on September 10th and returned to Japan via Russia.

Prof. Tsuji writes that the stories told him by the people of neutral countries respecting the conditions in Germany were not true, such stories erring on the side of exaggeration. However he admits that the opinions entertained by neutrals did not differ so very much from his own views. [A peculiar admission, but one which is not very clear to the translator!]

The cost of various commodities has greatly risen, and some articles are sold at twice the prices asked before the war. The lack of supplies raised the cost, and even the rich cannot now purchase what they want.

But Germany will never lack the ability to feed and clothe the people. Not only was the wheat crop this year fairly good, but in the new territories occupied by the German forces prisoners of war are put to agricultural work, and although supplies may not be abundant the Germans will not suffer from scarcity of food. In meat and butter they are meeting with a crisis, but he declares that it will be impossible for them to stop the war merely on account of the scarcity of food stuffs.

While the allies believe that the war was brought about by Germany, the people of Germany on their part attribute the war to the allied powers.

The sixty-eight million people of Germany fully realize that every step they take, every little thing they do, will directly effect the outcome of the war. The people have been educated to exercise their powers of judgment, conception and criticism, and while their opinions might differ all Germans have their individual opinion of the present war, and they are working under their own judgment.

The sense of duty and responsibility has been cultivated in the mind of all Germans, by the history of the nation and the measures adopted by the government, and every one, however insignificant the work he is doing, performs his part with the utmost energy and care. Therefore the Germans will never find themselves at a loss whatever calamity might befall them. Sixty-eight million German people are working like a single man.

The German people are practical as well as sincere, and the study they undertake is both theoretical and practical. Another point worth noting is their habit of investigating to the very bottom of a matter, they neglect nothing. They will discuss, investigate, study, until they are fully satisfied, and they do not stop their work when only half done.

Prof. Tsuji says that the Japanese lack this habit of thorough investigation. They are satisfied with surface investigation, they change their opinion, attitude, system and everything according to circumstances, and they have no foundation upon which they firmly stand.

Prof. Tsuji further criticises the Japanese on their lack of sincerity, and points out that the Japanese use flowery expressions and empty courtesies, but they are not honest, sincere, and courteous at heart. The Japanese endeavour only to keep up outside appearances. The Japanese do not pay attention to self-improvement, and when one thing is accomplished they are satisfied with it indefinitely and do not try to improve upon it.

In conclusion Prof. Tsuji says that the reason why Germany is so strong is because of the strong mutual organization of the entire race. The whole populace is working with one aim, and every one realizes his or her personal responsibility and is doing his best for the mutual benefit of the nation. Some believe that the Kaiser rules the whole German territory and the people are working under the Kaiser's directions, who compels his subjects to work for the country. Prof. Tsuji says that such an opinion is erroneous, and it is not the Kaiser that is holding the entire people of Germany together but it is the people themselves who join together of their own free will to work collectively for the good of the country.

The strength of Germany is the strength of the German people, and he hopes that the Japanese public will also follow the practice of the German public and organize themselves into one body, working eagerly and sincerely for the sake of Japan.

RELATIONS BETWEEN JAPAN AND AMERICA

The New York "Evening Post" published a Japanese Supplement on December 30th, in which is contained an article on the condition of Americo-Japanese relations written by Mr. David Lawrence, the Washington correspondent of the paper. The New York correspondent of the "Tokyo Asahi" transmits a summary of the article, which the correspondent says may be regarded as bespeaking the Far Eastern policy of the Wilson administration, on the whole. It is highly readable as the writer of the article has especial access to President Wilson and Secretary Lansing and is accordingly in a position to have comparatively accurate knowledge of the diplomatic policy of the present government. The gist of the article translated may be summarised as follows:

Japan and the United States must be on friendly terms, but the present situation offers, as a matter of fact, more or less menace to the smooth international relationship between the two countries on account of several international questions pending between them. On the close of the European war, the Far Eastern questions will naturally come to attract the keen attention of the world and become a question of grave significance and concern not only to the United States but also to the European powers. Hence there is a necessity of the various countries interested in Far Eastern affairs making clear their respective standpoints and frankly stating their respective wishes and views in order to facilitate the possibility of a rational solution of those questions. To the United States, it is a matter of vital importance to make clearly known to Japan her views and opinions about the various questions pending between the two countries. Despite wide cries clamouring for the betterment of Americo-Japanese relations, it cannot be denied that there are some doubts about the future of Americo-Japanese friendship, and the Americans entertain some doubts or even fear as to the so-called ambition of Japan. It is a matter of imperative necessity in the diplomatic affairs of the two countries to make fundamental researches into the origin and reasons of all these problems and find measures to remove all unfavourabe elements. If, on the contrary, efforts are not made for that purpose and these problems are left untouched and unsolved as at present the result will be only to make the situation more complicated and difficult to solve. As the best means to avoid useless complications, the United States administration must take measures to let the members of the Congress know that their utterances in the legislature, either good or bad, invariably produce an echo. An appeal should be made to their conscience and self-respect to refrain from making useless, injurious utterances, while Japan must be advised to seriously reflect on how deeply Japan's attitude toward China has impressed the American Government and nation. Japan's attitude toward her neighbour in recent years makes Americans suspect Japanese statesmen.

The immigration question is the most complicated problem of all, but it must be understood that the American Government is grateful for Japan's sincerity in keeping loyal and faithful to the immigration agreement. Meanwhile, it must be recognized that both governments are making efforts to check useless agitation and malicious legislation in connection with this question.

The bad impressions created among the Americans by Japan's so-called 25-clause demands have not been yet erased from their minds, nor apparently has Japan made any attempt or effort to erase that unfavourable impression. Japanese people may opine that the Chinese questions are properly Far Eastern affairs and the United States has nothing to do with them but the Japanese must not forget that the Americans possess the same sentimental interest towards China as they had toward Japan at the time when Commodore Perry knocked at the door of Japan. It is a fact that like Great Britain, France and other powers, the United States are anxious for industrial development and activities in China under the principle of the open door, but in this respect the powers interested are cognizant of the so-called preferential rights and are ready to act in recognition of the respective sphere of influence, commercial discrimination and virtual partnership between governments, which are, however, the usages or formulae of commercial and diplomatic thoughts of Europe. What the United States want are "equal opportunity," an opportunity for commercial competition and an opportunity for free commercial competition. If given an opportunity for commercial competition, the Americans will be glad to enjoy free competition with their merchandise and their manufacturing capacity. In short, the Americans want to display their competitive spirit in commercial and industrial activities just as they are fond of doing so in sports such as football or baseball. The principle of open door advocated by Mr. John Hay is after all one and the same with this principle.

The United States Government will accordingly give emphatic support and encouragement to the development of foreign markets for American commerce and industry, but America does not like her commercial and industrial activities to be controlled and oppressed in common with the interests of individuals and individual corporations. The tendency of the American nation, which is inclined to support the weaker nation apart from political and economic relations, is a matter to call for the attention of other nations and to be taken into consideration when they survey the display of American sentiments towards China. The American Government and the State Department have not yet recovered from the shock created by Japan's Number 5 clause demand to China, which still stands as a constant menace every time when Americo-Japanese relations are being discussed. If Japan's true intent and purpose was otherwise, certainly somebody has committed a blunder in making Japan's intention appear as is generally understood, and must be held responsible for having left such unfavourable impressions in America, which cannot yet awhile be erased from the minds of the American public.

The writer of the article further commenting on the views of the Japanese thinkers, who compare Japan-China relations to the Americo-Mexican situation, says that the United States only want to make the Americans share equal treatment as other nations in Mexico and engage in competition on the same conditions as other nations. Turning to the Monroe doctrine in Asia, the writer says that whilst Japan strives to check the territorial ambitions of the powers towards China, she must control her own actions on the same principle, and goes on to say that should Japan abandon her occupation of the German islands in the South Pacific after the conclusion of the war and return Tsingtao to China American public opinion will welcome and appreciate Japan's attitude, adding that when the United States makes the Philippines an independent country, the United States will request Japan to create a treaty of permanent neutrality or like agreement regarding the Philippines. After giving in detail his opinions about Americo-Japanese relations, which may be taken as reflecting the views of the American Government, as the "Asahi" correspondent has it, the writer urges that the two Governments no longer pursue the principle of momentary ease, but freely exchange views in case any doubt occurs as to their respective interests in the Far East, and take steps to control public opinions in case any undesirable utterances are indulged in about the international relations between the two nations. The writer concludes by saying that true friendship between the two nations can be maintained only by active and strong diplomacy and the sincere utterances and guidance of the influential papers of both countries.

DEATH OF MR. TONG MINT

A cablegram received at the Yokohama Office of the China Mail Steamship Co. announces the passing of Mr. Tong Mint, Vice-President and one of the founders of the Company, at San Francisco, on the 26th ult.

Tong Mint was an important factor in the commercial advancement of the Chinese-American colony of San Francisco. Born within a few miles of the City of Canton, he inherited all the business instinct common to his race. About thirty years ago he migrated to San Francisco, where he found a broad field for the exercise of his native talent as a world trader, and ten years later was recognized as a commercial leader among the Chinese of the New World. He was an active member of the powerful "Six Companies" organization, one of the Board of Directors of the Canton Bank, and was financially interested in many of the big import and export firms such as have helped to make famous the greatest seaport on the western side of the American continent.

DR. HAMILTON W. MABIE DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Dr. Nitobe, of the Tokyo Imperial University, who was the first of the exchange professors between Japan and America to go to the U.S., deeply regrets the death of his intimate friend, Dr. Hamilton Wright Mabie. Dr. Nitobe pays a high tribute to the deceased American scholar who, he says, was blessed with a rare personality which won him deep respect from all who came in contact with him. Dr. Mabie was regarded as one of the ablest men of letters in present day America where the general public, which is apt to disregard scholars at large, sincerely respected Dr. Mabie, so that his selection as the first exchange professor to Japan by the Carnegie Peace Corporation was indeed an instance of the right man in the right place. Dr. Nitobe says that he keeps the translation of a series of the lectures Dr. Mabie delivered in Japan and that his contemplated plan of publishing them has been hastened by the unexpected death of the celebrated author. According to Dr. Nitobe, Dr. Mabie's visit to Korea was made at the request of the late Prince Katsura and, during his sojourn in Seoul, many American missionaries dissatisfied with Count Terauchi's administration in the Peninsula came and expressed their discontents to him one after another, but as he was totally indifferent to these complaints the missionaries went so far as to stigmatize Dr. Mabie as inspired by the Japanese government. The Californian question was growing grave when he was lecturing in this country and Dr. Mabie sent telegrams to President Roosevelt urging the latter to clear away the misunderstanding of Japan. "While Japanese well understand America, Americans are ignorant of Japan so that there is work now given to me." This was the final statement made by Dr. Mabie to his friend, Dr. Nitobe, when the former was going to leave Japan. As expected, the tone of argument of the "Outlook" took a turn favourable to Japan immediately after his return to the United States and, despite the fact that many letters intended to spoil Japanese reputation in regard to the Sino-Japanese question were sent to the "Outlook" Dr. Mabie always remained sympathetically inclined toward Japan. Dr. Nitobe went on to say that Dr. Mabie was perhaps the only American who would have interpretted the Japanese proposal with sympathy to the American people when the peace conference is held after the present war, so that his death is especially regrettable. Mrs. Mabie is also a fine personality and was called by her Japanese friend "marchioness." At a reception given by Baron Shibusawa, Mrs. Mabie made a speech, which, according to her husband, was her first address and this is enough to show how much both Dr. and Mrs. Mabie appreciated the hearty reception accorded them in Japan, concludes Dr. Nitobe.

Tong Mint died in his 57th year, honoured and respected by both Chinese and American residents of San Francisco.

As a mark of respect the house-flag of the China Mail S.S. Co., at its Yokohama office will be kept at half-mast for a period of thirty days.

WHEN WILL THE WAR END?

The question when the present war will end is an engrossing problem, and it is interesting to hear the opinions of prominent men regarding the possible end of the war.

The "Jitsugyo no Nihon" has requested forty-five prominent men in Japan to express their opinions on the subject and their answers are published in the January issue of the magazine. Among the contributors are included authorities in almost every branch of science, authors, businessmen, bankers, and others.

The opinions vary, as is to be expected, and while some predict the close of the war within a few months or at the most a year, others believe that hostilities will continue for many years to come. There are many who do not give any exact duration of the war, saying that it is impossible to predict the end of the war. But the majority assert that the war will come to an end in the latter part of 1917.

Dr. Seitaro Sawayanagi, Dr. Tetsuji Aoki, Mr. Akita Shito, Director of the Yokohama Silk Conditioning House, Dr. M. Kambe, Dr. O. Oyama, Mr. Eitaro Okamoto, Director of Bureau of Forestry, Department of Agriculture and Commerce, Dr. M. Anezaki, Dr. T. Sakata, Count Y. Yanagizawa, and eleven others predict that the war will terminate before 1917 is over. They all point out that Germany and Austria have already exhausted their supply of food and munitions and will be unable to continue the offensive, and from next spring the Allied forces will drive back the enemy lines.

There are a few however among the contributors who believe that the war will come to an end before next summer, and among these are Dr. J. Soyeda, former Director of the Imperial Railways and Mr. Tetsujiro Miyakawa, Assistant-Mayor of Tokyo. Dr. Soyeda says that unless some unexpected change takes place the war will be over by July or August, but Mr. Miyakawa predicts that the end will come in April or May.

There are many who think that it will take two years to end the present war, but Mr. S. Kato, former Vice-President of the N.Y.K. thinks it will continue at least five years more.

Among the writers those who believe that the war will end in the latter part of 1917 form the majority, and next come those who think that the war will end in less than two years. Five years is the longest period mentioned by any of the contributors.

Dr. K. Onozuka, Dr. Chiyomatsu Ishikawa, Dr. Kakutaro Chiga, Dr. Tokuzo Fukuda, Mr. M. Naruse, Vice-President of the Fifteenth Bank, Mr. Tetsuji Hayakawa, Dr. Shinkichi Uyesugi, and Mr. Yamada do not make any prediction as to the date of the end of the war.

Mr. Shimomura, Chief of the civil administration of Formosa, says that the war will continue for some time yet, but he does not specify any time, and he reasons that because Germany is strong the war will continue for some time to come. While he hopes for an early peace he does not believe that an early conclusion of hostilities is possible.

HOW KAISER'S GOVERNMENT CONTROL THE PEOPLE

(By D. Thomas Curtin.)

Mr. Curtin gives some illuminating information about the methods by which the German Government maintains complete control of the people. In particular he explains the increased powers of the police and gives some instances of the working of the abuse known as "preventive arrest."

Those who are watching the hidden war in Germany through the fragments that come from Holland can gauge with fair accuracy the growing effect of the German casualty lists and the Allied blockade. The English newspapers announced on Monday last the closing down of the national safety valve—the debating society known as the Reichstag, which has been squelched until February 13th.

The German Government has now therefore complete control of:—

(1.)—Speech,
(2.)—The Press,
(3.)—The professors and pastors,
(4.)—Every kind of public meeting,
(5.)—Cinematographs and photographs.

all of which are, in effect, under the control of the police, manipulated by the Government.

As the German Parliament in no way resembles England's Parliament, so do the German police in no way resemble the British police. The German police, mounted or unmounted, are armed with revolver, sword, and machine-gun, with powers of search and arrest without warrant. They are allowed in their discretion to strike or otherwise maltreat not only civilians, but soldiers. Always provided with great powers, their position during the past few months has risen to such an extent that the words used in the Reichstag, "The Reign of Terror," are not an exaggeration.

Aided and even abetted by a myriad of spies and agents provocateurs, they have under what is known as "preventive arrest" throughout the German Empire and Austria so great a number of civilians that the German prisons, as has been admitted, are filled to repletion.

Now that the Reichstag has been closed down it will be increasingly difficult to find out what is going on in Germany, for though the Reichstag had no powers, it did give an indication of the great undercurrent of unrest, which applies, as I have said before, at least one-third of the people.

To a certain extent the Press was a little unmuzzled during the sittings of the Reichstag—not much, but somewhat, for the reports of Reichstag proceedings are strictly censored. Your Parliament, I understand, is supreme, and the Press Bureau has no control of its reports. The German Press Bureau, on the other hand revises and even suppresses the publication of speeches. When necessary, it specially transmits speeches by telegram and wireless to foreign countries if it thinks those speeches will help German propaganda.

Control of speech is accompanied by control of the Press, accomplished as follows:—

The Berlin and provincial editors are summoned from time to time to meetings. They are addressed by members of the Government as to what it is wise for them to say and not to say. These meetings constitute a hint that if they are indiscreet, if they, for example, publish matter "calculated to promote disunity." they may be subject to the increasingly severe penalties now administered. If a newspaper shows a tendency to kick over the traces a Government emissary waits upon the editor, calls his attention to any offending article or paragraph, and suggests a correction. If the newspaper still offends it is liable to suspension for a day or even a week. One or two insignificant provincial newspapers have been suppressed altogether, and the high price of paper is, in addition, automatically causing the stoppage of many.

With the Reichstag shut up, and the hold on the newspapers tightening, what opportunity remains by which independent thought can be disseminated?

In Poland meetings to consider what they call "Church affairs," but which were really revolutionary gatherings, afforded opportunity for discussion. These have been ruled out of order.

The lectures taking place in their thousands all over Germany might afford a chance of expression of opinion, but the professors, like the pastors, are so absolutely dependent upon the Government for their position and promotion, that I have only heard of one of them who had the temerity to make any speech other than those of the "God punish England" and "We must hold out" type. His resignation from the University of Munich was immediately demanded, and any number of sycophants were ready to take his place.

Clubs are illegal in Germany, and the humblest working men's cafés are attended by spies. In my researches in the Berlin East-end I often visited these places and shared my adulterated beer and war bread with the working folk—all of them over or under military age.

One evening a shabby old man said rather more loudly than was necessary to a number of those round him:—"I am tired of reading in the newspapers how nice the war is. Even the Vorwarts (then a Socialist paper) lies to us. I am tired of walking home night after night and finding restaurants turned into hospitals for the wounded."

He was referring in particular to the great Schultheiss working men's restaurants in Hasenheide. His remarks were received with obvious sympathy.

A couple of nights later I went into this same place and took my seat, but it was obvious that my visit was unwelcome. I was looked at suspiciously. I did not think very much of the incident, but 10 days later in passing I called again, when a lusty young fellow of 18, to whom I had spoken on my first visit, came forward and said to me, almost threateningly, "You are a stranger here. May I ask what you are doing?"

I said:—"I am an American newspaper correspondent, and am trying to find out what I can about the ways of German working folk."

He could tell by my accent that I was a foreigner, and said:—"We thought that you had told the Government about that little free speaking we had here a few days ago. You know that the little old man who was complaining about the restaurants being turned into hospitals has been arrested?"

This form of arrest, by which hundreds of people are mysteriously disappearing, is one of the burning grievances of Germany to-day. In its application it resembles what we used to read about Russian police. It has created a condition beneath the surface in Germany resembling the terrorism of the French Revolution. In the absence of a Habeas Corpus Act, the victim lies in gaol indefinitely, while the police are, nominally, collecting the evidence against him. One cannot move about very long without coming across instances of this growing form of tyranny, but I will merely give one other.

A German family, resident in Sweden, were in correspondence with a woman resident in Prussia. In one of her letters she incautiously remarked, "What a pity that the two Emperors cannot be taught what war really means to the German peoples." She had lost two sons, and her expression of bitterness was just a feminine outburst, which in any other country would have been passed by. She was subject to preventive arrest, and is still in gaol.

The police are armed with the censorship of the internal postal correspondence, telegrams and telephones. One of the complaints of the Social Democrat members of the Reichstag is that every movement is spied upon, and their communications tampered with by what they call the "Black Chamber."

By closing down the Reichstag for the next anxious three months, when, in the absence of a Rumanian success, the food shortage must get even worse than it is to-day, the Government believe that they have suppressed all manifestation of public opinion for a period during which they hope by submarines, Zeppelins, military operations, and foreign intrigue, either to frighten Great Britain into peace or to detach one of the Allies.

Whether those at the top really believe that they can succeed I have no idea. By this time they must have been woefully disappointed at the result of their submarine expedition to New York, which has apparently had no effect whatever in the United States. Designed to frighten President Wilson into a stoppage of munitions to the Allies, it seems to have caused but little excitement in my country.

The evil effect of the censorship of their own Press by the German Government is to hypnotize the thousands of Government bureaucrats into the belief that that which they read in their own controlled Press is true.

No people are more ready to believe what they want to believe than the governing class in Germany. They wanted to believe that Great Britain would not come into the war. They had got into their heads, too, that Japan was going to be an ally of theirs. They wrote themselves into the belief that France was defeated and would collapse.

Regarding the Press, as they do, as all-important, they picked out for quotation two or three British newspapers as exponents of British public opinion, whereas results have proved that these organs expressed the opinion of nobody but themselves. These newspapers expressed their honest if erroneous opinions.

But the German Government goes further than that. It is quite content to quote to-day expressions of Greek opinion from Athens organs well-known to be subsidized by Germany. Certain bribed papers in Zurich and Stockholm, and one notorious American paper, are used for this process of self-hypnotism. The object is twofold. First, to influence public opinion in the foreign country, and, secondly, by requoting the opinion, to influence their own people into believing that this is the opinion held in the country from which it emanates. Thus, when I told Germans that large numbers of the Dutch people are pro-Ally, they point to an extract from an article in "De Toekomst," and controvert me.

These methods go to strengthen the hands of the police when they declare that in acting severely they are only acting against anarchistic opinions likely to create the impression abroad that there is disunity within the empire.

Never, so far as I can gather, in the world's history was there so complete a machine for the suppression of individual opinion as the German police.

At the beginning of the war, when all seemed to be going well, there was no disunity in Germany. There was practically no censorship of the newspapers; the police were tolerant; every German smiled upon every other German; soldiers went forth singing, and their trains were gaily decorated with oak leaves; social democracy praised militarism.

Twenty-seven months of war have changed all that, and the Mecklenburgers and the other hosts who went singing on their way in the belief that they would be home in six weeks, loaded with loot as in 1870, have left behind homes many of them bereaved by the immense casualties, and all of them suffering from the increasing food shortage.

I have been too often to the war to prophesy. I have read too much of Prussian history to believe in the sudden collapse theory, but, through the Dutch and other neutral Press, I watch with increased interest and keenness the effect of the coming winter on the already gloomy spirits of the German peoples. Meanwhile I warn the Allied Governments that from information that has reached me since I have been in England, they will find more and more difficulty in getting news out of Germany.

The German Press will now give less and less indication of what is going on underneath, but the very silence of the Press will be proof of the pressure now exercised by Great Britain, her Army and Fleet, and those of France, Russia, and Italy.—"Times."

SENTENCE ON EGYPT'S SULTAN

Amsterdam, Nov. 17.—A dispatch from Beirut, Syria, says that a war tribunal has passed a sentence of death on Hussein Kemal Pasha, Sultan of Egypt, on the ground that he placed under foreign rule constituent parts of the Turkish Empire.

The death sentence was confirmed, the dispatch says, by an imperial decree.

Abbas Hilmi, who was Khedive of Egypt when the war began, espoused the cause of Turkey and was dethroned in December of 1914. The British Government then proclaimed the appointment of his uncle, Hussein Kemal, as Sultan of Egypt.

NEW ANTI-TYPHOID VACCINE

Dr. Chantemesse has introduced into the French army a new form of vaccination against typhoid. It is a complete dose of typhoid and paratyphoid bacilli in a solution composed of sesame oil, a little oleate of cholesterin and purified neutral lanolin. Only one injection is necessary; this is painless; the resulting immunity lasts two years.

THE EUROPEAN WAR

ON THE FRENCH FRONT

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Dec. 26.—General Sir Douglas Haig, in his Monday evening communiqué, says: "We successfully raided the enemy trenches south-west of Lens and eastward of Armentières, taking some prisoners. The enemy blew up the village of Camouflt(?), south of St. Eloi, but the damage done was slight. We have systematically shelled the enemy defences of their Headquarters north of the Somme, doing much damage."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Dec. 29.—Although no operation on a big scale is being carried out on the British front at present, the Germans are never given a moment's peace. The correspondent of "La Liberte," on the British front, relates how never a day passes without raids on the German lines inflicting heavy losses on the enemy. The Germans are kept continually on tenter-hooks, never knowing where the next blow may fall.

This harassing has exceeded all expectations. Besides these raids, the British artillery fire is becoming ever heavier. The big guns are continually showering shells behind the enemy front. In particular, attention is paid to the lines of communication, where the firing is seriously hampering the supply services. And this is what the British "Tommies" call the "off-season"!

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Dec. 29.—The French communiqué, on Friday afternoon, read: "After a fierce bombardment, the Germans launched strong attacks over a front of 3 kilometres, from west of Hill 304 to east of Morthomme Hill. The attacks were broken by our fire. Only some fractions of the enemy penetrated our trenches south of Morthomme."

Five enemy aeroplanes were brought down on December 27.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Dec. 29.—In a despatch of about 16,000 words, Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, under date of December 12, deals with the "bare outline of recent important occurrences. The British part in the battle of the Somme, Sir Douglas describes " as one of the greatest, if not the greatest struggle that has ever taken place."

He mentions the stupendous preparations made, including the vast stores; the construction of new railways, gun-emplacements, trench tramways, dug-outs for ammunition, food and water; engineering material; the digging of scores of miles of deep communication trenches; also numerous well-borings sunk and 120 miles of water-mains laid.

Sir Douglas defines the three-fold object of the offensive as follows: Firstly to relieve Verdun; secondly, to assist the Allies in other theatres of war by stopping further transfer of enemy troops from the west; thirdly to wear down the strength of the enemy.

Sir Douglas Haig then describes the actual operations, naturally covering a good deal of ground covered in previous despatches. He claims that all three objectives of the battle were achieved and says: "Anyone of these results, itself justified the battle of the Somme. The attainment of all three amply compensate for the sacrifices of ourselves and our allies bringing us a long way towards final victory."

Sir Douglas says the fact that the strength of the enemy, in November, on the western front was greater than in July, despite the abandonment of the Verdun offensive, justifies the first two claims. Regarding the third, he admits that any statement must depend in some degree upon the estimates of the individual losses. Nevertheless, there is sufficient evidence to show, without doubt, that the enemy's losses in men and material were considerably higher than those of the Allies, while our advantage was greater morally. Four-fifths of the enemy Divisions on the western front were thrown successively into battle—some twice and some thrice. Undoubtedly, towards the end of the operations, the enemy's power of resistance was very seriously diminished.

The British leader concludes: "The power of the enemy is not yet broken, nor is it possible to estimate the period before the object for which the Allies are fighting will be attained. But the battle of the Somme placed beyond doubt the ability of the Allies to gain those objects. The German army is the mainstay of the Central Powers. Fully half of that army, despite a defensive supported by strongest fortifications, suffered defeat on the Somme. Neither victors nor vanquished will forget this, and though bad weather has given the enemy a respite, there undoubtedly will be many in his ranks, who will begin the new campaign with little confidence in the German ability to resist our assaults."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Dec. 30.—That the British have taken over a new section of the front in the Somme theatre is indicated by a French war correspondent with the British troops. This new sector was taken over Christmas.

Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Friday evening communiqué, states that the British have made a successful raid on the German trenches east of Le Sars. The trenches were found to be greatly damaged by the British artillery fire. The British have repulsed an attempted raid east of Armentières.

Intense reciprocal artillery activity south of the Ancre and in the neighbourhood of Beres is reported.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Paris, Dec. 30.—The Friday evening communiqué states that the French have raided and wrecked German trenches between the Oise and Aisne Rivers.

The Germans have violently bombarded the French positions between the Meuse and Avocourt. The French have frustrated several bombing attacks on this front. The French aviators have bombed different German munitions works, including that at Neunkirchen.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Paris, Jan. 1.—The Sunday evening communiqué reports nothing important.

The French troops, at Verdun and on the Somme, captured 78,500 Germans during 1916.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 2.—The French communiqué, issued on Monday evening, reads: "On the right of the Meuse a strong enemy coup-de-main east of Dea Chambreuville, was completely foiled. It is relatively quiet [illegible]."

On the river Bystrica, the Russian artillery scattered an enemy company on its way in a north-eastern direction from Bosmach. In the Wood Carpathians on the Moldavia frontier one enemy ambush with one machine-gun was seized. The Russian Fusiliers, availing themselves of the fog, succeeded in dislodging two 6-inch trench motars, which had been abandoned by the enemy in the fight of December 23.

Later. Western front. The enemy's heavy artillery and howitzers are firing on the Russian positions east of Zarkuv, also in the sections Carbuzov and the Gukalovec forest. The Russian scouts crossed to the western bank of the river Bysterica bringing a part of the enemy materials to the Russian bank. The enemy attempts in crossing the Dniester, south-east of Galicz and Simikovcz have been stopped by the Russian fire. On the Moldavia frontier, the enemy assumed the offensive on the front Gleshutte Seasmezoi, pressing upon the Russian troops and seizing one range of, heights north and south of the Dovtiana line. In the Oltus valley, east of Sesmezo, the fight is going on. The enemy's advance south of Sesmezo, has been checked by the Russian fire. An enemy aeroplane has been knocked down by a Russian battery, the aviators being taken prisoner.

Rumania. The Russian troops, after a stubborn resistance were pressed back on the section Rimnik Sarat and were obliged to retreat beyond the river. The enemy's attacks south of the Danube, were repulsed with heavy losses for him, the British cuirassed motorcars taking an active part in this fight. The valiant commander of the British motorcar detachment continued, in spite of being wounded, the direction of his detachment, which greatly aided in turning the enemy to flight.

Caucasus front. In the night before December 25, one Turkish battalion attacked in the region of Petra Kale, but was stopped by the Russian fire, and the Turks were driven back into their trenches. West of Mush the Russian scouts dislodged the Turks from their trenches taking a number of prisoners. The Russian troops, in the Van Lake region, having repulsed one Turkish Vanpost, developed their advance and seized the village Ataman, the Turks being compelled by the Russian onslaught to retreat eastwards.

Rumania. The enemy performed during the day a series of fierce attacks on the whole Russian front, succeeding on the upper Rimnik in pressing upon the Russian cavalry and the Rumanian infantry. On the Rimnik roadway the Russian troops, having repulsed several enemy attacks, were obliged to evacuate the trenches, which had been destroyed by artillery fire. The enemy attacks in all the other directions have been repulsed with heavy losses for him. The Russians took during their counterattacks several machine-guns. The fight on the whole front continues. In the Dobrudja, skirmishes are going on.

[OFFICIAL TO RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Dec. 30.—Western front. An enemy ambush was attacked north of the Koldychell Lake by the Russian scouts, a number of prisoners being taken. On the Oginsky Canal, south of Sovinka the Russian scouts attacked a German officers vanpost. The enemy took to flight after a bayonet charge, leaving a number of prisoners and wounded in Russian hands. The Russian artillery successfully scattered 3 enemy companies which were advancing in the Prisovec valley. On the river Bystrica, the Russian scouts attacked an enemy advanced trench in the Pacikov region, putting a part of the defenders to the sword and taking prisoners, among them one wounded officer. A disordered artillery fire lasting for several hours, was thus provoked on the side of the enemy, who took this action for a main attack. The Russian artillery fired in the same region successfully at an enemy battery situated south of Rybno. On the Moldavia frontier, north and south of the Oitus valley the enemy carried out energetic attacks against the Russian trenches, succeeding by his repeated blows in seizing several heights and in pressing upon the Russian troops in the Eastern direction. The Russian troops are fortifying themselves on new positions north from Herja and east and south from Sesmero.

The enemy in Rumania is leading stubborn attacks in the upper part of the river Kasin, on the Moldavia frontier and near the sources of the river Susuhitza, also along the river Putho. The enemy being supported by light and heavy artillery, continued, with strong forces, his attacks on the front north and east of Rymnik-Sarat directing the main effort along the railway. The enemy succeeded in seizing the village Bordsji and pressing upon the Russian troops 15 kilometres north east of Rymnik-Sarat. The enemy's attacks to the south as far as the Danube have been repulsed with heavy losses for him. In the Dobrudja firing is in progress.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Dec. 30.—A Russian official despatch by wireless reads: "The enemy has occupied several heights in the Ojtuz valley. We are consolidating ourselves north of Hasha, and south and east of Sosmezo. The enemy has continued his obstinate attacks north-east of Remnik-Serat, mainly along the railway. He has captured Baltzatzi and pressed us back near Sutzesti. We have, however, heavily repulsed his attacks south of the Danube."

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, Dec. 31.—The enemy has obtained reinforcements and, after repeated attacks, has captured some heights to the south of the River Oitus. The Russians have retired to new positions. The enemy assaults south-west of Focsani have been repulsed. The Rumanians have been pressed back north-westwards of the Buzau-Focsani railway. All enemy attacks, in the region of the Buzau-Braffoff railway have been repulsed with heavy loss.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 1.—Fighting on the Moldavian front is likely to assume increased importance. The German plan apparently is to combine a frontal attack with an outflanking movement.

There has been desperate fighting in the Oituz valley, which, with those immediately adjoining, converges on the Trotus in the rear of the advance positions won by the Russians during the past month.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 1.—The Russian official communiqué reports that a German offensive southward of Pinsk was repulsed.

On both banks of the Kazino, the enemy attacked the Rumanians strongly. Eastward of the Moldavian frontier, the Rumanians maintained their positions, but were obliged to retire in the region of Patroanu (Pentilau?), to the west of Focsani. Twenty-three enemy battalions attacked the Russians and Rumanians in the centre of the Dobrudja and compelled them to retire to their next line of defense.

There has been a fierce battle in the Oituz valley. The enemy is stubbornly attacking on the Moldavian frontier, but their offensive north-west of Fevej failed. The Rumanians proved victorious here and took many prisoners. The Russians and Rumanians have dislodged the enemy at Bardeschi. The enemy repulsed the Rumanians north-west of the Buzau-Focsani railway.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 2.—A Russian official message, by wireless, says: "Enemy groups advancing, after fierce rifle and machine-gun fire exchanges, southwest of Brody, were driven back. The enemy offensive on the Moldavian frontier has been dispersed. All enemy attacks north of the Oituz valley were repulsed. The Rumanians counter-attacked, and regained their positions on the river Kazina. Despite continuous, fierce attacks, the Russian detachments in the Dobrudja have withdrawn to new positions."

AUSTRIAN NAVAL ATTACK FAILS

[OFFICIAL TO THE ITALIAN EMBASSY]

Rome, Dec. 28, 8 p.m.—During the night of the 23rd, enemy destroyers attacked the small craft watching the Canal of Otranto, but they were counter-attacked and chased by French destroyers. The German communiqué to the United Press of New York is a lie.

The above message was received here from the Italian Minister of Marine, Vice-Admiral Camillo Corsi. The lying German communiqué referred to was telegraphed to the "Nichinichi" from San Francisco and printed by the "Japan Times" as follows:—

San Francisco, Dec. 26.—A Berlin official claims that four Austrian destroyers invaded the gulf of Otranto, in the southern extremity of Italy, and sank two patrol boats, after repulsing six Italian destroyers.—"Nichinichi."

JOFFRE TO BE CREATED MARSHAL OF FRANCE

KOKUSAI-HAVAS

Paris, Dec. 27.—The following statement was issued last night:

"The Government of the French Republic, desiring to show its recognition of the eminent services rendered to the country by General Joffre, has decided to raise him to the dignity of Marshal of France by a decree, which will be submitted at the earliest possible moment for ratification by the two Chambers."

There has been no Marshal of France since the death of Marshal Canrobert in 1895. This dignity is the highest in the French Army, and was created in the

Victor of Battle of Marne

13th century by King Louis IX. [better known as Saint Louis] of France.

There is no one more worthy of this title than the great commander, who will go down to posterity as the victor of the battle of the Marne. General Joffre, at that place, shattered the pride of the enemy and upset his military organization by checking his march on Paris, and laying the foundation for his ultimate defeat.

TWO BRITISH DESTROYERS LOST

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Dec. 26.—The Admiralty reports that two destroyers were sunk in a collision in the North Sea on December 21. The weather was bad at the time. Six officers and 51 men were lost.

FRENCH BATTLESHIP LOST

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Paris, Dec. 31.—A naval communiqué, issued to-day, announces that the battleship Gaulois, 11,105 tons built at Brest in 1896, was torpedoed in the Mediterranean on December 27. The vessel sank within half-an-hour, but owing to the discipline and coolness of all on board, and the rapid arrival of patrol boats, only four of the crew were lost. Two of these were killed by the explosion of the torpedo.

MR. JOHN BUCHAN'S WEEKLY SURVEY OF WAR

[British Embassy Despatch Through Kokusai]

London, Dec. 31.—Operations of magnitude on the British front in France are still impracticable. The reason is not so much the softness of the ground as the extraordinary extent to which it has been pitted by shell holes in the whole of the Somme area. Few of the holes are less than five to six feet deep and as they cover the ground almost uninterruptedly and are filled with unfrozen stagnant water the impossibility of infantry action can be readily understood.

Elsewhere there was considerable activity in trench raids. Many have been carried out with the utmost vigour and with notable success. In one case the enemy's lines were occupied for considerably over one hour, and besides the casualties inflicted and the prisoners captured, the local defences were very thoroughly destroyed.

The lull in operations has assisted the transfer to the British of a further sector of the French front. This was taken over successfully without a hitch.

The significant movement has been in the East and the advance of the British in the Sinai peninsula. This has been carried out with complete success and without encountering serious resistance.

The capture of El Arish in the north marks a progress of about 99 miles from Canil.

Admirable organization overcame the natural difficulties of the advance over the waterless desert. It is somewhat surprising that the enemy made no attempt to defend this important position.

Further south the capture of Magdhaba resulted in a large haul of prisoners. Of the enemy force, it is estimated that approximately two thousand were killed, and no less than 1350 including 45 officers were captured with several guns and many rifles and large quantities of ammunition. Still further south, the column advanced through Mitla pass and destroyed two enemy camps in the direction of Pakhl. In Mesopotamia, there has been fresh progress. The British forces continue to gain ground south and east of Kut and the Turks have moved their chief base north of the Tigris to a safer distance behind the front.

In Rumania the enemy advance has been slow and much hampered by an increased stiffening in resistance except in the Dobrudja.

The first Rumanian army is being reformed in Moldavia. The Russian troops have taken over the greater part of the lines of defence.

By direction of the Rumanian Government the oil wells and refineries in rear of the principal oilfields have been destroyed.

GERMANY'S PEACE PROPOSALS

News From All Sources

Paris, Dec. 23.—The Senate, yesterday, passed a vote of confidence in M. Briand, the Premier, and his Ministry. The resolution carried is another striking reply to the peace campaign launched by Germany in some neutral countries, and shows that nothing can induce France to conclude peace as long as the Germans remain in possession of any part of her territory.

The text of the resolution passed is as follows: "Affirming that France cannot conclude peace with the enemy who occupies her territory, we are resolved to carry on the war, which was forced upon us, up to a victorious conclusion worthy of our soldiers. We record the statements made by the Government and are confident that, in agreement with the great commissions and under control of Parliament, it will take the most energetic measures definitely, to secure material superiority over the enemy; to organize under single and active direction the forces of the Army, Navy and Nation, at home and abroad, to defend with perseverance and firmness the dignity and prestige of France."

The resolution was passed to the Orders of the Day.

San Francisco, Dec. 25.—The Swiss Government has issued to all belligerent powers a Note to the following effect:

"The recent proposal of President Wilson to the belligerent countries, which has flashed a hope for peace over Europe, has produced an immense and far-reaching echo in Switzerland. Switzerland has decided to devote herself by every means to conciliate the belligerent countries and to work for the establishment of a permanent peace, however humiliating the efforts may be to herself."—"Asahi."

An official dispatch received here yesterday confirms the truth of the above San Francisco despatch. It is also reported that the Governments of Denmark, Sweden and Norway will follow suit and issue a similar Note to the belligerent countries shortly.

In this connection, an authority in Government circles here is credited with the following observation:

The first peace proposal made by Germany was given out on the 12th, and whilst the attitude of the Allies toward the German feeler made through the American Government was still undecided, President Wilson issued to the belligerent countries a Note inviting the views and opinions of the respective countries about peace negotiations, the Note having been issued on the 18th. The speech of the British Premier re the German proposal in Parliament on the 18th and the declarations of the Russian Chamber and of the French Premier in the secret session of the Senate on the 19th have apparently nothing to do with the proposal of President Wilson, as those speeches and declarations were made before the presentation of the American President's proposal. But what calls for attention is the fact that part of the submarine cable line between England and America had been monopolized by the communications between the British Government and the American Government sometime before the 18th when President Wilson's proposal was formally submitted to the belligerent parties. Moreover, prior to the German proposal diplomatic negotiations, perhaps about the peace question, were made between the American Government and the German Ambassador in Washington at any rate, there is reason to believe so. Further, while the American Secretary of State, Mr. Lansing, professed that the proposal of President Wilson was not made from any motive of mediating between the belligerent parties, and declared that there was no change in the attitude of America toward the war, there are sure signs of the German Ambassador in Washington having had a conference with Mr. Lansing on the 21st, when, it was reported that the German Ambassador stated that his conviction about the possibility of peace negotiations had been strengthened after his interview.

From these and other circumstances there seems to be no doubt that some negotiations between the German and American governments about the recent German proposal have taken place and that the key of the secret of the negotiations is in the hands of the German Ambassador. Again there were negotiations between the British Government and the Washington Government over the submarine wires prior to the proposal of President Wilson being issued on the 18th, the key of the secret of these negotiations being held by Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador to Washington. Thus it would seem that with Mr. Lansing as the central figure there is some movement afoot in Washington between the Ambassadors of Germany and Great Britain for bringing the attitude of their home governments toward peaceful rapproachement. Viewed from these observations, and judging from the tone of the official utterances in Great Britain and Germany it may be presumed that Germany will in the near future tender generalized peace terms to the Allies through the intermediary of the American Government as a step toward paving the way for peace negotiations. What attitude the Allies will take in such an eventuality, of course, forbids any supposition, but in such event the Allies will perhaps come to seriously consider the question and take measures to give answer to Germany, after deliberate consideration of her proposal.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

New York, Dec. 26.—The Associated Press correspondent at Berlin sends a wireless message to the effect that: "Germany and her allies, in replying to President Wilson's latest Note, proposed an immediate meeting of belligerent delegates in some neutral city to discuss terms of peace. The Central Powers say that the task of preventing future wars can only be begun after the end of the present struggle."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

New York, Dec. 26.—Germany's answer to President Wilson a transmitted by H.E. Mr. Gerard, U.S. Ambassador to Berlin, is as follows:

"The high-minded suggestion made by the President of the United States of America in order to create a basis for the establishment of a lasting peace, has been received and considered by the Imperial Government in the friendly spirit which was expressed in the President's communication. The President points out that which he has at heart, and leaves open the choice of road. To the Imperial Government, an immediate exchange of views seems the most appropriate road in order to reach the desired result. The Imperial Government begs, therefore, in the sense of its declaration made on December 12, in which it offered its hand for peace negotiations, to propose an immediate meeting of the delegates of the belligerent States at a neutral place.

"The Imperial Government is also of the opinion that the great work for preventing future wars can be begun only after the end of the present struggle of the nations. The Imperial Government, when the moment shall have come, will be ready with pleasure to collaborate entirely with the United States in this exalted task." The Note concludes with the usual diplomatic terms of politeness.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Dec. 27.—Germany's latest move is regarded as another adroit attempt to rush the Allies into a so-called Peace Conference, at any cost, with the object of jockeying them into a false position in the eyes of Neutrals. Last night's bombshell, however, is unlikely to have the desired effect in America since Germany, which has persistently refused to reveal her peace terms, deliberately ignores President Wilson's appeal to both sides to place their cards on the table.

Moreover, Germany has violated all diplomatic courtesies in allowing the publication of the Note in Berlin before its receipt in Washington, President Wilson thus receiving the first news from journalists.

New York, Dec. 28.—Among Americans cognizant of the German intrigues in this country, it is becoming more and more apparent that Germany is manoeuvring to induce the neutral Powers to take some united action not so much for peace as for a peace conference. It is believed that Germany's purpose is to shift the conflict from the fields of battle to the halls of diplomacy.

The New York "World" this morning calls attention in an editorial to the fact that President Wilson requested from each of the belligerent nations a definite statement of its objects in the war and the terms on which it would consider peace. Germany, the "World" points out, has not met this suggestion; instead she has merely taken advantage of the opportunity to return to her Note of December 12. by proposing an immediate conference of the belligerents.

Digitized by INTERNET ARCHIVE
Original from UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS AT URBANA-CHAMPAIGN

. The "World" says that in the light of Germany's reply it is impossible either honestly or sincerely to purpose to back the German peace proposal. It is plain enough now that the whole proceeding was a game invented in Berlin for the propitiation of neutrals and the bedevilment of the German public.

The New York "Tribune" declares that beyond all cavil the underlying motive in President Wilson's action, as disclosed by Mr. Robert Lansing, was to prevent if possible a new German submarine campaign with all its incidental perils to the United States. The "Tribune" asks whether the President will now continue to give force and character to the German manoeuvre under the same threat.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Dec. 28.—Reuter's Agency learns that the reply of the Allies to the German peace proposal is being drafted in Paris. The Allies are in mutual communication regarding this reply. It is not likely that there will be any official action on the American and Swiss Notes until the German Note is dealt with.

It is officially announced in Washington that Sweden has addressed a peace appeal to the belligerents.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Dec. 28.—The telegraphed text of the Allies reply to Germany anent her proposals for peace, has been approved by all the Allies. The Allies make clear to belligerents and neutrals alike, in their reply, that no hope need be entertained of ever persuading the Allies to surrender their potential victory for the sake of a peace, which will be only a German peace, so long as German militarism remains unbroken.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Copenhagen, Dec. 29.—The Governments of Sweden, Norway and Denmark have each sent a Note to the belligerents containing an expression of Scandinavia's strongest adherence to President Wilson's proposals. The Notes state that the senders consider they would be wanting in their duty to their peoples' feeling of humanity if they failed to support any action contributing to end the ever-growing moral and material sufferings of the masses, which the war entails.

Washington, Dec. 30.—A joint peace Note from the Governments of Norway, Sweden and Denmark has arrived here, expressing a lively interest in the proposal of President Wilson that the belligerents should issue a statement of their views regarding peace terms.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Dec. 31.—The joint reply of the Allies to Germany's peace Note was communicated by the French Government to the United States Ambassador at Paris, to-day.

The reply begins by stigmatising the German proposal as illusory. A strong protest is made against two material assertions contained in the German Note—namely the attempt to throw the responsibility for the war on the Allies and the claim of victory for the Central Powers. Both assertions, the Allies state, are untrue. Such claims alone are sufficient to render sterile all attempts at negotiation.

The Allies, the reply continues, are as strongly devoted to peace, to-day, as in 1914, but after Germany's violation of her solemn engagement, Germany's promise is not sufficient foundation upon which to re-establish the peace she has broken.

The mere suggestion, without a statement of terms, that negotiations should be opened is not a peace offer. Germany is putting forward a sham proposal, lacking all substance and precision. It is less a peace offer than a manoeuvre. It is founded on a calculated misinterpretation of the character of the struggle in the past, the present and the future.

Washington, Dec. 31.—Mr. Lansing refuses to comment on the Associated Press message from Berlin, which states that President Wilson has sent a second Note, explanatory to the first, which has not yet been presented to the belligerents.

It is suggested here that the message from Berlin may refer to a statement transmitted to all American Diplomats, explaining the President's action.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 1.—The Allied Note in reply to the German peace proposals continues: The German offer does not consider the facts, dates, and figures establishing that the war was desired, provoked and declared by Germany and Austria. The Allied reply proceeds to recall that it was the German delegate to The Hague Conference, who refused all proposals of disarmament; that Austria refused the satisfaction offered by Serbia; that, subsequently, Great Britain suggested, after conference with France, that an international commission should be arranged; that she asked the Kaiser to go to arbitration and that Russia and Austria actually came to an understanding on the eve of the conflict, "but to all these efforts Germany gave neither answer nor effect. Belgium was invaded by the empire which had guaranteed her neutrality and yet had the assurance to proclaim treaties scraps of paper and assert that 'necessity knows no law.'"

The Note proceeds to point out: "These sham offers of peace" rest on the war map in Europe alone, which represents only a superficial passing phase of the situation and not the real strength of the belligerents. Peace concluded on these terms would be only an advantage to the aggressors, who after imagining they could reach their goal in two months, discovered, after nearly three years that it would never be obtainable. Regarding the future, the reply declares that the innumerable outrages by the enemy, against belligerents and neutrals, demand penalties, reparation and guarantees of all of which Germany avoid to make mention. "These overtures are really nothing more than a calculated attempt to influence the future course of the war and finally impose a German peace."

The Germans would also create dissension among the Allies, stiffen public opinion in Germany and among her allies, who are all severely tried by their losses, worn out economically and crushed by the supreme effort imposed upon them. Another object is to deceive and intimate neutrals and finally satisfy a new series of crimes of submarine warfare, deportations for forced labour, forced enlistment of inhabitants to fight against their own countries and violations of neutrality.

Fully conscious of the gravity of the moment, and equally conscious of its requirements, the Allies closely united one with another, and in sympathy with their peoples, refuse to consider a proposal which is empty and insincere.

Once again, the Allies declare that no peace is possible as long as they have not secured reparation for violated rights and liberties, the recognition of the principle of nationalities and the free existence of small states. No peace is possible, the reply concludes in dwelling on the enormity of Germany's offences against Belgium, until the Allies have brought about a settlement calculated to end, once and for all, the forces which have constituted a perpetual menace to the nations, and to afford the only effective guarantees for the future security of the world.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 2.—The newspapers, in chorus, express approval of the allied Note, in reply to Germany's peace proposals. The Note, they say, has finally cleared the air and created the best impression among all the Allies, especially in France and Italy, where it is regarded as the "writing on the wall." It removes the last doubt that the Allies are determined to end Germany's methods of treachery.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 1.—The Allies' reply has staggered the Americans, whom German propagandists had led to believe that the members of the Entente were struggling among themselves to secure peace at any price. The reply will, undoubtedly, have the healthiest effect on the air of America.

Washington, Jan. 1.—Spain's reference to a second American Note, in her reply to President Wilson's Peace Note, has created surprise here. The explanation given by the State Department is that although no second Note was despatched to Neutrals, American Diplomats in neutral capitals were instructed, when presenting the Peace Note to suggest that, if the recipient government deemed it wise to act in the matter, the United States thought the time opportune. It is stated definitely that no other government knew in advance of the action contemplated by the United States, nor was there any attempt to act in concert with other Powers.

Washington, Jan. 2.—The Senate, today, discussed a resolution proposed by Mr. G. M. Hitchcock, democratic member for Nebraska, endorsing the Peace Note sent by President Wilson. Action in the matter, however, was postponed by consent. The Republican leaders wanted the matter referred to a Committee.

Mr. Jacob H. Gallinger, republican nominee from New Hampshire, declared that he had received many letters and telegrams to the effect that the resolution proposed disregarded Washington's advice to avoid entangling alliances when they endangered the Monroe Doctrine.

straight-forward, lucid document. Amongst the latter, may be enumerated the following journals.

The New York "Herald" says: "The Government of Germany saw to it that its pretended peace propositions were spread broadcast. Can it suppress the allied reply? Will not even the German people insist upon the publication of the text? The day the German people read that calm, judicial arraignment of crimes committed by their Government in their name, they will realize why it is that their Government has come to be looked upon as a pariah among nations. That day will mark the beginning of the real peace movement, because it will mark the beginning of the end of Prussianism."

The "Tribune" has come to the decision that the war must go on. It says that one thing the reply indicates is that the well-meant, but ill-advised intervention of the United States is a closed incident.

The "Sun" calls the response, the Entente's indictment of Germany.

The New York "Times," which believes Germany's distress compels her to sue for peace, declares that the incident should be marked, not because Germany's first impossibly bid met its expected inevitable rejection, but because, forced by a need that would not be denied, she made the bid.

The Washington "Post" expresses the opinion that the allied response spells the doom of Germany. For, "behind that answer, is the inflexible purpose of the most powerful league of nations ever formed, united in bonds sealed in their own blood. That purpose is to beat Germany, to beat her down to surrender once and for all time, so that peace, when it comes, will be a peace of civilization, created for civilization by civilization."

The "Post" predicts that some more neutral nations will be involved in the war before the end of the great conflict.

An official dispatch from London, received at the Foreign Office on Dec. 26, gives a summary of the comments of the British press on the proposal of President Wilson, which are unanimously unfavourable to the President's move.

The "Times" begins with the statement that the motive of the American ideal is sometimes quite incomprehensible to other nations. The paper by no means doubts the declaration of President Wilson, but regrets to say that such proposal as made by the American President is liable to lead to misunderstanding especially at the present moment. The paper has no doubt that in connection with the proposal of President Wilson the allied governments and nations will take the same step as adopted by the American nation at the time of the war between the North and the South, when Lincoln and Seward, backed by the sentiments and judgment of the American nation, rejected the interference of all European powers in the trouble. President Wilson states that the object of the warring parties seems to be the same on the whole, but, says the paper, the wide disparity of the objects of the Allies and the Teutons is well understood by, and widely known to the countries the world over. "We are possessed of the same human sentiments as President Wilson and all other Americans, and indeed, we are fighting on account of that sentiment." As long as the enemies of the Allies fail to recognize their crime and are so proud as to claim the position of victors, the Allies cannot agree to enter upon peace negotiations with them on any terms whatever, because such will be tantamount to recognizing the victory of militarism over democratism and endorse the breach of humanity and justice. For this reason alone, the Allies cannot listen to the proposal of President Wilson.

The "Daily Telegraph," while admitting the sincerity and fairness of the American Government, says that the present proposal of President Wilson was by no means opportune. The enemies of the Allies finding themselves in a distressed situation, and having been forced to take the defensive are determined to save themselves by resorting to tactful diplomatic manœuvres as the only alternative left open to them, and as the only means to enable them to escape from their dangerous position. The reply of the Allies to the proposal of President Wilson is fully expressed in the word of President Lincoln who stated that "We started the war for a noble object and the war will come to an end with the achievement of that lofty ideal."

The "Morning Post" expresses itself as rather surprised at the proposal of President Wilson. America may be justified in making such a proposal as she is situated so far from the arena of the war and does not feel directly the danger of being involved in the war, which may account for her taking such a superficial view of the situation, says the paper, but it fails to see any sound reason in the action of President Wilson. If the American President is so anxious to have the war terminated at the present moment there is only one way, that is, the United States should join the war on the side of the Allies and thus contribute to the termination of the war by precipitating the defeat of Germany.

The "Daily Mail" says that President Wilson wants to know the terms the Allies would propose for peace which have, however, been declared by Mr. Lloyd George, the Premier, in his speech in Parliament, namely, the complete restoration of the territories occupied by Germany, sufficient reparation and an effective guarantee for the future. While Belgium, Northern France, Poland, Serbia and Rumania are still being trampled by the enemy, it is an insult to the Allies that America should persuade them to enter upon peace negotiations.

An official dispatch from Paris received at the oFreign Office on Dec. 27 reports that the comments of the Swiss papers on the declaration of the Swiss government to support the proposal of President Wilson of America are anything but favourable. They are unanimous in appreciating the attitude of the neutral states which propose to make efforts for the restoration of peace from a lofty ideal and view points of universal peace and humanity, but they doubt the efficiency of the measures proposed by the neutral states, which profess the fair principle of humanity at the present belated time while they took no steps at the time when the Teutons had forced war on the allies in disregard of justice and in the breach of treaties. They further state that to secure an assurance and guarantee for future safety from such a country as Germany, to whom the breaking of treaties is a byword, is impossible unless the allies win the final victory over the Teutons, pursuing the principle embodied in the address of King George to the British Parliament and the resolution of the French Senate.

An official dispatch from Berne received at the Foreign Office on Dec. 27 says that according to the Berlin correspondent of the Neue Zuricher Zeitung, Germany will not change her policy on account of the proposal of President Wilson. It is now the turn of the allies to say, whether peace negotiations are to be opened or not. Germany will deliberate on President Wilson's proposal after she receives formal replies from the allies. The Neue Zuricher Zeitung says that the note of President Wilson has, on the whole, had a cold reception from both the belligerent forces, and remarks that the words of President Wilson, who announced that the United States had a stake, direct and indirect, in the war, are worthy of keen attention.

The Note of M. Camille Decoppet, the President of the Swiss Republic regarding the peace proposals, which was handed to the Ministers of the various Powers in Berlin, on Dec. 25th, was transmitted to the Tokyo Government the following day by Mr. Miura, the Japanese Minister to Switzerland. It is understood that the contents of the Note go no further than the proposal of President Wilson and only express the wish of the Swiss President of the speedy termination of the war in order to relieve neutral countries from the distressed situation in which they have been placed on account of the war.

In other words, the Note mentions the trying conditions in neutral countries, which are suffering from the want of supplies of various commodities and daily necessities through the stoppage of traffic and communications, and points out that the continuation of the war will place the neutral nations into still more distressed circumstances, to relieve which sad situation Neutrals want to have the present war concluded as soon as possible. It is expected that the other neutrals, notably Spain, Sweden, Norway and Denmark, will also start a similar movement and perhaps will make efforts for the realization of their object in co-operation with the American Government.

The Allies, it is expected, will send a similar reply to their overtures as will be sent to the American President. The peace movement is unlikely to show any appreciative development for some time yet.

Various opinions are entertained by the Japanese military authorities on the peace question, and even upon the motive of President Wilson in sending his note varying opinions are expressed by military officials. Some say that the President was urged by the religious bodies which had been attacking the war from the humanity standpoint, and by twenty-four million German-Americans to send the note, while others opine that he was approached by those interested in war trade to sound the opinion of the Allied powers and find out the real situation of the war. There is also another opinion which avers that President Wilson sent the note from his noble idea of stopping the cruel war, and that he was not influenced by any political or other power.

However they all agree t at President Wilson's note would have no effect on the war situation, and it would not serve to bring the warring nations to open peace negotiations.

The clause of the Kaiser's reply stating that Germany desires the opening of a peace conference at some neutral city is regarded as a proper proposal, and they say that even the Allied nations can not disregard this proposition. While still continuing the actual fighting, they believe, the warring nations could hold a meeting to discuss peace terms.

But the conference would end in disagreement, as the terms desired by both sides differ so materially, and especially in the Balkan problem they would never arrive at an agreement. To Germany the present is the most favourable time for the discussion of peace, but the Allies will not consent to stop the war until they have driven back the German forces. If peace were concluded at this moment Japan could insist that she had taken Tsingtao, but in spite of this Germany would soon obtain another base of activity on the China coast.

Another opinion is that peace negotiations may be successfully concluded in the Spring. The reason that Germany made the peace proposal was to prevent the Allies prolonging hostilities and also it would seem that Germany realized that even among the Allied powers there was a general longing for peace.

According to news emanating from Germany, the Kaiser is willing to discuss terms with the Allies regarding the return of all conquered territories to the original owners, the payment of an indemnity, and the limitation on military preparations.

It is believed that peace negotiations may be opened early next year. For some time both sides will be engaged in diplomatic manœuvres, and it will be about May or June when the actual peace conference will be held on the ground of the uselessness of sacrificing so many human lives.

Lieut.-General Fukuda reached New York recently en route to Japan after having visited the various theatres of war in Europe. In an interview with the New York correspondent of the "Asahi," he outlined his impression gathered during the tour in Europe. His views, as cabled to the "Asahi" by its New York correspondent, are to the following effect:

I have studied the war conditions of all our allies except Italy and what has impressed me is the formation of a small war cabinet both in England and France. In England the war council comprised of about twenty members was responsible for the prosecution of the war, but it is quite apparent that decisive and active military operations are hardly to be expected in that way. It is highly gratifying that Britain has realized this and the reorganisation of her Ministry is, therefore, a reflection of her renewed determination in carrying on the war. From a military point of view, now is the best time for Germany to discuss terms of peace, and in view of the fact that things are about to go from bad to worse for Germany, she is believed to be in a hurry to make peace. Germany thinks, it is presumed, that the peace move, even if it falls flat, will serve to relax the morale of the Allies' troops, so that she is now zealously spreading her wild peace talk.

Some American military experts observe that even if the war continues a year longer under favourable circumstances to the Allies they can hardly turn the scale in their favour completely, but this view I hesitate to endorse. As an officer of one of the Entente powers, mine may naturally differ from a disinterested person's point of view, but according to my personal observation there is a great probability of the theatres of war becoming gradually favourable to our allies. I am an outsider as regards politics and economics but even from a military standpoint, I believe, the discussion of peace terms is out of place at the present juncture. I am happy to say that Major-General Wood, the brain of the U.S. Army who has paid me a visit, is of the same opinion as myself in regard to peace which, he asserts, is entirely beside the question.

SIGNIFICANT STATEMENT BY U.S. LABOUR LEADERS

Washington, Dec. 30.—The Labour Leaders have issued a statement that the 400,000 railway employes concerned must themselves decide what course to pursue if the operation of the new railway labour law is delayed beyond January 1 by litigation or otherwise. This step means that a strike is probable.

Note:—The new law is the Adamson eight-hour law. It is of interest to note that on November 19 the following special message was received by the "Manila Bulletin" on the subject:

President Wilson will confer to-morrow on the latest difficulties which have arisen in connection with the alleged refusal of some of the railroad companies to live up to the Adamson eight-hour law, and the possibility of compulsory arbitration to settle the differences between the men and their employers will be given careful consideration.

Yesterday the president received a delegation representing the American Federation of Labor, one of the delegates being "Mother" Jones.

While conversing with the president, she stated that she hoped that there was no class divi forming in the country, as she believed this would be the very worst thing that could happen to the nation.

Speeches were made by Consul-General Sammons, Mr. Tang Shao-i, Mr. Williams, Mr. Murdock, and Mr. Shu, President of the Chinese Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Tang Shao-i emphasising the necessity of closer economic relationship between China and America stated that if the Chinese and Americans conduct commercial and industrial enterprise in China in the spirit of harmonious and sincere co-operation they will be able to realize mutually profitable results, but no success will attend any co-operation if the parties concerned lack the spirit of sincerity and harmony.

His remark is to be highly recommended to the consideration of Japanese business man interested in economic affairs in China. Other speakers also laid stress on the importance of respecting mutual interest and harmonious co-operation between the Americans and Chinese.—"Asahi."

He was, as a matter of fact, the first exchange professor to come from America and his lectures delivered in the universities in Tokyo and Kyoto were listened to with much interest and enthusiasm. A sincere friend of Japan, he was a great admirer of the Emperor Meiji and few Americans have ever won more universal popularity in Japan. Dr. Mabie was President of the New York Kindergarten and professor of William University, and held degrees from five different universities in America. He was widely known as an earnest student of Shakespeare. Dr. Mabie was the author of many noted publications including some on Japan and the Japanese. "IRISH" PROMOTION CEUSES STORM IN A TEA-CUP

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

Shanghai, Jan. 2.—The Central Government has ordered General Yang Shan-teh, military Governor of Shanghai, to proceed to Hangchow. General Yang will probably take with him the force of 10,000 troops, at present concentrated in the vicinity of Kiangnan Arsenal, for the purpose of restoring order in Hangchow.

The trouble at Hangchow appears to have been chiefly due to the bickerings of officials, which were brought to a head by the "Irish" promotion of Mr. Hsia Ting-han, who from the lucrative position of Chief of Police at Hangchow was removed to a similar post at Chekiang. It was the attack on his successor Fuk Chu-yung, which started the present storm in a tea-cup.

CONSTITUTION FOR CHINA

The most important and necessary step to be taken by China, is to establish a perfect constitutional government, says the "Tokyo Nichinichi." However a perfect constitutional government cannot be established while the people are fighting among themselves, and the political parties are opposing one another. The "Nichinichi" declares that what the Chinese are doing is entirely contrary to what they wish to accomplish.

When President Yuan died, and the situation became favourable for the organization of a good constitutional government, the Chinese leaders proclaimed that they would work together for the one aim of perfecting their government, but up to today, they have not done anything to strengthen the constitutional government of China. The Southern and Northern people have been constantly fighting, and the civil and military officers have been always struggling to gain more influence than the other.

They have been only considering their own personal interest, and they oppose anything that might tend to disturb their personal interest, and they have been constantly endeavouring to hurt the names of other persons.

Recently the problem of sending a special envoy to Japan was brought up in China, but the Chinese government is unable to decide the matter. Three names have been mentioned as special envoy, and all three had been again cancelled. The Government notified the Japanese Government of the coming of the envoy, but he has not come to Japan as yet.

This problem may be only a small affair, but it shows the condition of the Chinese Government and politics in general. On the other hand, the Ministers passed without giving any consideraton the loan from the United States, forgetting that it is one of the most important problems of China.

The paper advises China that until the personal quarrels and differences are taken out of the national politics, it will be impossible for the nation to make any progress.

THE LOAN TO CHINA

The "Jiji" trusts that the representatives of the Quadruple group will quickly decide upon the loan to China, and hopes that the United States will be invited to join the group.

The political situation of China is still in a chaotic state, but the paper believes that the most important item in improving the government and administration of China is to supply the country with necessary funds, as she is at present so financially depressed that she is unable to undertake any improvement either political or industrial.

The paper does not believe that the protest of the Quadruple group against the loan negotiation with a certain foreign bank, is timely and proper, and declares that without paying any attention to another loan China may desire to make, the representatives of the group should quickly decide in favour of the Chinese demand of the loan of 100,000,000 yen.

In accepting the demand of China, Japan should be prepared to supply a large part of the loan, as England, France, and Russia will not be able to meet the demand on account of the war. Japan, on the other hand, now possesses sufficient surplus money to meet the demand, and for Japan the loan would be an ideal investment for her surplus money. The paper hopes that Japanese capitalists will realize the benefit of the loan, and be determined to supply the entire amount to China, if necessary.

To invite the United States to the group, the paper declares, would be the first step of co-operation between Japan and the United States in investing in China. The development of China, and opening up of the locked resources of China would be equally profitable to the United States and Japan. There are some who believes that China should be opened up with only the assistance of Japan, but in fact it is an impossible task for a poor nation like Japan and it is necessary to co-operate with the United States. As Germany is no longer in the original Group, the paper hopes that the United States will be included in her place.

GERMANS WANT PEACE

The "Tokyo Asahi" says that the reply of Germany to the Note of President Wilson, proves that Germany is eager to open peace negotiations. The paper states that it is not necessary for the Allies to consider what was the true motive of the Kaiser in making the peace proposal, but when Germany truly desires peace, peace negotiation will be held. However at this moment although Germany speaks of her desire to conclude peace, her attitude and action do not prove that she is really wishing for peace. While offering to open peace negotiations, she does not state her terms of peace, and speaks of maintaining permanent peace only after the conclusion of the present war.

It is not yet known what President Wilson will do upon the receipt of the reply from the Kaiser, as the Note President Wilson sent to the warring countries and the neutral powers, only signified his desire and hope for peace, and does not state that he will act as peace maker. When the reply from the Allies reaches the hands of President Wilson, he can not act merely upon the desire of Germany. If President Wilson endeavours to stop the war at the request of the Kaiser, it will be nothing but a useless and worthless endeavour.

Germany stated at the end of her reply to the United States that the work of concluding peace would be a noble task. The "Asahi" laughs at this clause, and says that it is very strange to hear such words from the mouth of one who originated the present war, and all nations on both sides of the war must feel it ridiculous.

The Allies are always for peace, and they have been struggling to regain the peace that was broken by the Kaiser, and the conclusion of peace is in their hands.

Neutral countries are third parties in the present war, and they have no voice in the peace negotiations. It will be Germany and her Allies that will finally beg for peace, and it is the Allies that will listen to the peace proposals.

The "Asahi" is confident that to the Note of President Wilson, to Notes of Sweden and Switzerland, and to possible Notes from other neutral countries, the Allies will have only one reply, and it will be a refusal to consider the Notes.

The paper declares that the peace talk is still premature, and the people of the Allies will not pay any attention to the peace cries raised by the enemy and the neutral public. Giving a flat refusal to all such Notes, the Allies will keep on fighting until they attain the end for which they have already sacrificed the lives of their citizens, their commerce, industry, and money.

APPRECIATES BRITISH ACTION

The "Chugai Shogyo" begs to express its appreciation of the British measure to allow the import of Japanese knitted goods again to England. The paper says that the Government should really appreciate the step taken by the British Government, and should feel glad that the Japanese products are again allowed to be sent to England. Knitted goods were prohibited to be imported to England on October third, and in consequence of the objection made by the Japanese manufacturers and government, import was to be allowed until January first. But finally the ban has been removed.

The "Chugai Shogyo" takes this opportunity to advise the Japanese manufacturers and Government to pay more attention to the quality of Japanese goods exported to foreign countries. The criticism that the Japanese goods are inferior has been heard from all quarters, and even the knitted goods of Japan are considered very inferior by the British merchants, and the public do not place any confidence in the Japanese knitted goods.

The paper thinks that on this occasion when the import is again allowed, the Japanese manufacturers should endeavour to send only the best quality of knitted goods and win the confidence of the British consumers. There are many Japanese manufacturers who are making an excellent quality of knitted goods, but there are also many who do not pay any attention to the quality sent abroad as long as they obtain profitable prices for their products.

Some manufacturers think that the export of knitted goods to England is only temporary, and it does not pay to give so much attention to the articles exported, but the paper is confident that if the proper articles are sent at the proper price, the trade will for ever continue even after the close of the war.

On this good occasion, the paper hopes that Japanese manufacturers will realize their ultimate profit in sending proper articles to foreign lands, and if they fail to send articles to satisfy the foreign market, even though the trade is permitted by the British Government, the dissatisfaction of the British consumers in Japanese knitted goods will stop the trade in the end.

The paper also asks the Japanese government to adopt proper measures to prevent the export of inferior articles, which cause foreigners to denounce Japanese manufacturers and merchants, thus entailing loss of confidence among foreign buyers in Japanese goods in general.

GERMANY AFTER TWO YEARS OF WAR

(By Herbert Bayard Swope.)

Herewith is presented a summary of the series of nineteen articles entitled "Inside the German Empire," which "The World" published daily, beginning Nov. 4. They dealt with the conditions of the Kaiser's realm concerning which but little knowledge has been afforded America, due to the interruption or cessation of the ordinary channels of communication. Because they form a contribution to contemporaneous history and possess therefore a referential value. The "World's" articles, revised, elaborated and illustrated, are to be published in book form by the Century Company. A sincere effort has been made to preserve objectivity and to let the facts speak for themselves.

The high lights of "The World's" pictures of Germany to-day are:

Her keen desire for peace, but not a peace at any price;

Germany's belief that she is fighting a war of defense; that her defeat means her destruction;

Her hatred of America;

The menace and the possibility of the resumption of ruthless U boat warfare;

The well-defined trend toward liberalizing the Government;

The unbroken spirit of the German people, no longer certain of eventual victory, but determined not to accept defeat;

The mobilization of her industries and finance and the plans for the future;

The failure of the British starvation blockade through the remarkable German systematization;

The great strength of her military position and her conservation of man power and war supplies;

The military occupancy of portions of France and Belgium and Russia;

The German "road to the east" through Austria-Hungary, Serbia, Bulgaria and Turkey, and what it means to her;

Germany's acceptance of the belief that American neutrality makes that of the other neutrals possible;

Germany's right guard against spies;

Ludendorf, Hindenburg's shadow, and his commanding influence.

In making an epitome of the series, the first subject treated is:

The desire for peace is strong within the empire, but there is no belief that the end is near. There is no definite articulated peace plan in Germany to-day; her discussions are all along lines of generalities. A wide gulf separates her from the allies in that Germany is willing to make a peace on the basis of the victories she has won and is winning, while the allies seek a peace on the basis of what they expect to do—the victories of the future. The peace question falls into three divisions in Germany: First, the peace of victory, with German imposed conditions—a contingency that even the most enthusiastic patriot no longer believes probable.

Second, "Peace with Honour," which means in substance a return to the status quo ante, which most of the reasonables in Germany are eager to see brought about; and Third, the peace of defeat, which has no advocates.

As the Germans see it, peace can come—

First, through the complete defeat of the allies by Germany;

Second, through the complete defeat of Germany by the allies;

Third, through a compromise and the re-establishment of conditions as they were before the war;

Fourth, the liberalization of the German Empire.

The Germans no longer look to a decisive victory over their enemies, but on the other hand, they are certain that their enemies shall not be victorious over them. So the first two of the "ways out" afford but little hope of a workable settlement. The third measure is one that most of the intellectuals of the empire expect to see realized, either by direct arrangements with the allies or through the defection of Russia from the side of the allies to the cause of the central powers.

The liberalization of Germany might easily remove some of the obstacles in the way of the allies' consent to a compromise, but those who advocate it most earnestly agree that the reform should not come until after the war; that it would be unwise to rebuild the political structure at this time, and further, that to do so now would be seemingly to yield to the duress and coercion of Germany's enemies, which have proclaimed their intention of forcing a greater democracy upon the empire in the effort to destroy the supremacy of the militaristic caste.

Although eleven separate interrogatories have been addressed to the German Government by neutral nations regarding the re-erection of Belgium, Germany has declined to give any assurance on that point, and while in the Chancellor's speech of a few days ago he disavowed any original intention on the part of the empire to seize Belgium, he gave no undertaking as to the present intent or plan.

There is strong sentiment in Germany to-day that her future will lie bound up with that of Russia and Japan, forming a "Dreibund of discontent." Within the last few weeks emissaries of Germany and Russia have met secretly for the purpose of bringing the two countries together, and though nothing has thus far developed, the Germans, whose influence has always been strong in Russia, still have hope.

As in the other warring countries, it is evident that the fear of the accounting that each of the Governments must render causes each to defer the making of peace until the most favourable opportunity.

In a statement which I prepared with the approval of Dr. Zimmermann, whose appointment of the Secretaryship of Foreign Affairs was announced a few days ago and which was also submitted to the Chancellor, the Germans answer the question, "Why do we fight?" by saying, "We fight for our existence as a nation." The claim is made that Germany has divorced herself from any thought of conquest and that she is now fighting defensively—fighting, she says, for the right to live and to grow.

In German eyes, the nations aligned against her are actuated by more selfish motives. The statement reads:

"France publicly declared her intention of possessing Alsace-Lorraine; Russia is bent upon seizing European Turkey; Italy demands a part of the Austro-Hungarian realm; Rumania too has covetous eyes upon our allies' land—in short, all the allies are similarly actuated. while England's aims are the most monstrous of all—she is bent upon crushing Germany wholly and wiping her from the face of the earth."

Regarding Belgium, this statement is made: "Even with Belgium a danger point in our back and our flank, there is no real desire in Germany to possess her land. We are anxious only for such a disposition of her future as will safeguard us, and it must always be borne in mind that in safeguarding us Belgium will herself be safeguarded."

Germany will not officially guarantee the inviolability of the former Belgian boundaries. In fact, she has withheld such assurance from all contiguous countries. Poland, which was recently given a so-called autonomous government, has not yet received any definition of her territory.

The strongest reaction Germany produces on a visitor to-day is the unalterably fixed determination of her people to gain an honourable peace or suffer destruction.

Regarding relations between the two countries, I said:

"Throughout Germany to-day the hatred for America is bitter and deep. It is palpable and weighs you down. All the resentment, all the blind fury Germany once reserved for England alone has been expanded to include us and has been accentuated in the expansion. The Germans have an outlet for their feeling against England—they express themselves on the battlefields and through the Zeppelins and submarines; but against America they lack a method of registering their enmity. And so this bitterness that cannot be poured out has struck in and saturated the whole empire."

The grounds of the hatred the Germans feel toward us are:

First, the American supplying of munitions to the allies;

Second, Britain's illegal blockade, for which we are held responsible, since we have not stopped it;

Third, Britain's interference with the neutral mails, which we permit;

Fourth, the allies' world-wide blacklist, which we are accused of tolerating;

Fifth, the submarine doctrine America has compelled Germany to accept.

Possibly there is a sixth clause which applies to the other belligerents as well as Germany—hatred born of envy engendered by the fact that America is out of the war and is prosperous.

Jagow, a former Chief Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and Dr. Zimmermann, his successor, discussing the American attitude toward the belligerents, epitomized the sentiment of their country when they said to me: "The American neutrality toward Germany is one of the head; toward the allies it is one of the heart. What America does for the allies she does voluntarily and gladly; what she does for Germany she does because she must."

There is a strong agitation in Germany, at present held in check, which, however, does not lessen its strength, for the resumption of the ruthless U boat type of warfare. It is a constantly growing menace, and many of the intellectual leaders of Germany believe that only peace can prevent the plan being consummated. Its adherents believe that indiscriminate sinking without warning would be the mightiest blow deliverable at England, and at the same time they feel it would satisfy the deep resentment against America.

Because of his part in forcing the Germans to modify the plan of U boat operations, and to conduct it under the cruiser warfare plan, President Wilson is cordially hated throughout the empire. His defeat would have been hailed as a great German victory—not because Mr. Hughes was viewed as a friend of Germany, but because Wilson was regarded as an enemy.

Unless America is able to remedy the conditions by being the means of bringing peace to the empire, the new generation in Germany will be steeped in hatred for this country, which will prove a barrier between the two nations for years to come.

The spirit of the German people remains unbroken, although their motto has changed from "siegen" (conquer or win) to "durchhalten" (hold through, or stick it out). If the certainty of victory has left them, they still have the conviction that they shall not be defeated. I was told and I believe that before Germany suffered herself to be overwhelmed her women would be armed and sent into the trenches.

Led by the Liberals, and approved by the Emperor, there is a well-defined programme under way toward the establishment of a more democratic form of government, which is to have as its main feature responsibility of the Chancellor to the people through their Reichstag, instead of being responsible only to the Kaiser.

The plan was outlined in a striking interview given me by Excellenz Zimmermann, one of the biggest men in Germany to-day, who will bulk even larger when that country's political stage is reset by the Liberals.

There is small likelihood that the changes will be made during the war, on the principle that it is bad business to swap horses while crossing the stream.

If the war has done nothing else, it has taught the German people that after all there may be a middle course between "world power and downfall." The dream of a great world super-state, which is but another name for a Germanized world, has been largely dissipated. But all the factions of political thought are unified in their devotion to their country; Germany's spirit has not wavered; her courage still answers every test; her soldiers are still untouched in their bravery and skill; and every sacrifice that she asks is being met willingly, almost gladly.

The empire's commerce is characterized by conservation for present needs and preparation for her plans for the future. In these there is no idea that I could find of dumping German-made goods in American markets; she has no raw materials, and for several years to come after peace she will not have the money to buy them. Alfred Lehmann, the man who sent the Deutschland to America and one of the leaders of business life in Germany, declared to me that for ten years after the war Germany would be busy binding up her own wounds, and would need our help to regain control of her own markets, instead of be-

The German Government fosters combinations of all sorts and has established great Central Purchasing Bureaus. She has established an Imperial Transition Commission to handle the economic adjustments of labour and capital that the end of the war will necessitate.

The German war loans now approximate $16,000,000,000. In spite of this enormous sum, a striking increase has been shown in the total of savings-bank deposits.

Through the establishment of a sort of autocratic socialism, in which the Government makes provision for every detail of national life, including a compulsory civilian labour, the empire has become almost self-sufficient and self-supporting. Women have entered every field of labour heretofore consecrated to man, and, while they are doing well in their undertakings, they form a large part of the problem that must be wrestled with when peace arrives.

Germany may be suffering privation, but she is not starving, and she will not starve. Through ration cards issued against state food depots, she has organized her resources in such a way as to secure sufficient and equitable distribution throughout the empire. Her preparations are such that, even with abnormally bad harvests, she could last for years yet. It is easy to buy luxuries in the country, but extremely difficult to buy the necessaries. The Government permits the sale of these only when an actual need exists. So far removed from actual want is the empire that the soup kitchens which have been established in the various big centres of population are scantily patronized.

The belief of the people in the inconquerability of their army is supreme. From the purely military standpoint, Germany believes that if the war were to be stopped to-day, she would be the overwhelming victor. In proof of this, she points out that she holds 11,600 square miles of Belgium, 8,400 in France, 112,000 in Russia, 34,800 in Serbia, 5,600 in Montenegro. Against this total of 172,400, not including the immense mileage won in Falkenhayn's Rumanian campaign, the General Staff admits that France holds 100 square miles of Alsatian territory and that Russia has 8,400 miles in Galicia and Bukowina. It should be said that Germany has lost almost all her great African colonies, that a part of Turkey is held by Russia and a small part of Austria is in Italian hands.

The statement was made to me by the General Staff that the Anglo-French offensive on the Somme had failed; that the allies cannot break through. Nor do the Germans delude themselves into the belief that the test on the west front is merely physical; they know that the fight is a spiritual one and he who keeps his spirit aflame will prove the final winner.

The Germans have now a total of almost 1,700,000 prisoners in the empire. According to the figures I got in Berlin, total German casualties are in the neighbourhood of 2,700,000, of which about 1,100,000 forms the net permanent loss.

Germany lays emphasis upon the fact that Britain was the first to order the internment of alien civilians, and that it was only after England imprisoned something like 26,000 Germans that Germany put into concentration camps the 6,000 English living within the empire.

The great problem in Belgium is the refusal of the natives to work. This has caused the Germans to adopt the vast scale of deportation that is now being put in force. Neither France nor Belgium is happy under the military occupancy, but, apart from the deportations, the German rule, severe, suspicious, ruthless at times, carries with it a sense of responsibility to the subject peoples which any fair observer must admit. It is a common thing to see displayed in Belgium pictures of King Albert and his family, and in captive France photographs of President Poincare and Gen. Joffre.

The Commission for Relief in Belgium plays a large part in the feeding of both the Belgians and the French. There is actually a greater variety of food in Belgium to-day than there is in Germany.

The plight of the Polish, Lihuanian and Galician peoples is the worst of all in distressed Europe. They live in a no man's land, and relief is extremely difficult to get to them because of the restrictions the allies have placed upon the shipment of supplies, owing to the refusal of Germany to make the agreement as to their disposition demanded by the Allies. The American Jews are doing a great work in this section; so too is the Rockefeller War Relief Commission. The Rockefeller Relief is also busying itself in an effort to preserve European posterity by saving the lives and the health of the prisoners.

COMMERCE AND PATRIOTISM IN GREAT BRITAIN

We saw the other day that a manufacturer, speaking of the future, said that money-making was not the greatest thing in the world. It is true, and yet it was almost completely forgotten in the national trade before the war. There was a time in the history of English commerce when almost the whole export and import trade of England was managed by regulated companies. These companies, like the Muscovy Company, Levant Company, the Merchant Adventurers, and so forth, were composed altogether of Englishmen, and they regarded nationality as so important a matter that a member was not even allowed to marry a foreign wife or to own real property abroad. They were all sworn by solemn oath to be faithful to King and Company and to report anything which might be dangerous to the realm of England or the interests of their trade. These rules and oaths were no empty forms; they were the result of hard experience in the struggle for national independence, and they embodied a national ideal, an acknowledgment that in trade there was something greater than money. The great Companies arose out of war and national poverty; they made their way by organisation and the pursuit of the national ideal, and there was a time when Germany was as much penetrated by British trade as England was by Germany before the war. We are apt to give Germany credit—or even discredit, as some people think—for organisation, and forget that Germany learned the lesson from England and, excellent copyist as she is, improved upon that lesson. The Germans have studied the history of England with a reverence and care which is a compliment to the greatness of our past, but their purpose was no compliment to our present, for they designed by imitating those methods which we had forgotten, and that spirit which had waxed dim within us to take our place in the world.

Most of us are not too old to remember the hordes of German clerks who swept over this country some twenty years or so ago, and freely entered almost every mercantile and shipping business. Our business men whose chief desire was in fact to obtain cheap labour, made almost a virtue of employing these commercial spies, and read lessons to young Englishmen on the virtues of German frugality. As a matter of fact not the most meagre clerk could have lived on the pittance those Germans received from the Gradgrinds who employed them, but they were subsidised upon a national system by the German employers, and their purpose was to steal all our commercial and industrial secrets. This could not have happened in the Seventeenth or Eighteenth Century. When the French two hundred years before tried to steal our skilled weavers the death punishment was imposed by a jealous Parliament on those who accepted bribes to betray the industrial secrets of the country. There was then a National Policy; but the laissez faire principles of the Manchester School seduced Englishmen from those old ideals of a national trade and a national industry, upon which the foundations of our greatness had been well and truly laid. Holland had been seduced long before by the same pernicious doctrines. And where Holland is now, England will be unless our business community learn once again to put country before money, and take up the work of national organisation in real earnest.

How is it to be done? It seems to us that the only sound way is to organise, trade by trade and industry by industry. The miscellaneous collection of a whole community is of little practical value, as the diversity of interests between one trade and another prevent effective work. The organisation which is to succeed must be a business organisation with practical aims, and a nucleus of common practical interest to keep its members together. There are many people who are even now sitting still in the vain expectation that the Government will step in and do the work. That Englishmen should entertain such an idea is in itself almost a sign of degeneracy. The Government will do nothing until it is forced. The only interest of the politicians who have captured the administration is to keep themselves in office, with the least possible disturbance to the existing order of things. Everything may go as long as they remain. As for the officials, they live in a world of their own, remote from the realities of life, and their design is to add to their powers and their establishments. There is a real danger that England may be strangled by these two interests working together, the political interest and the official interest. In other days there was an organized commercial interest, as well as a strong and independent House of Lords to counteract such influences; but nowadays the lawyer, the politician, and the official run undisturbed, like rats in some old disused malthouse. Our manufacturers like the coneys of the rock, are a timid folk. They are also simple outside their own business and they believe that they may get most by hanging in with the Government. They deceive themselves. There is nothing to be done except by pressure, and the pressure must be sharp and effective. If the manufacturers could enlist the co-operation of their workpeople and the alliance of the agricultural interest there might then be a power strong enough to lay down and carry through a national policy on a basis of production. But there is an infinite amount of spade work to be done, and no one as yet seems willing to do it. We have seen some amateur attempts, but so far they have resulted in little or nothing.—"Morning Post."

A report from Karuizawa says that ice-skating there has become exceedingly popular on account of the breaking of ice on Suwa Lake, and all skaters who proceeded to Suwa went thence to Karuizawa.

Karuizawa is experiencing a record crowd this winter, and at present, as there is no other good ice-skating place besides the Hokkaido, all skaters of Tokyo, Yokohama, and other parts of the country are gathering at Karuizawa. Among the notables who skated at Karuizawa recently were Mr. Bastin the Belgian Consul, Mr. Elket, the skating expert and others.

An official dispatch received here on the 5th inst. states that German submarine commerce raiders are now very active off the coasts of Portugal and Spain, the centre of the ruthless warfare being the coast extending from Lisbon to the Spanish ports of Finisterre, Vigo, Gijon and Bilbao. The result is that there have been victims of German U boats almost every day. Three or four enemy submarines are in "ambush" off the port of Bilbao now and the city consequently is in a paralysed state. The coast from Lisbon to Bilbao, therefore, is warned as being in the most dangerous sphere of the submarine campaign.

"The Distant Snow Clad Mountains," which is the Imperial New-Year-Poem subject for 1917, seems to have greatly inspired Japanese poets, for the number of poems submitted in the new year poetry competition at the Imperial Palace from various parts of the Empire this year shows a remarkable increase, compared with last year. Altogether about 37,000 verses were presented to the Court poetry office, of which 31,020 poems have passed the first examination. At the final examination only six poems will be selected and be read in the august presence of the Emperor and Empress. In the number of verses sent in to the Court for competition, Tokyo prefecture is said to head the list, the prefectures of Aichi, Kyoto and Niigata coming next.

A strange story is told that a sewing needle has travelled about all in the body of a woman named Ushi Oga, aged 54, of the town of Urado, City of Kochi, of Kochi prefecture, for a period of forty years.

About forty years ago the woman got a small needle stuck into her thigh accidentally, and since then felt nothing of it lodged in her flesh until 1913 when she began to suffer a great deal of plain in the legs. She then received medical attention, but underwent no operation. But about three weeks ago while she was rubbing one hand against another she felt something pricky and found the very needle lost sight of in her body lying there half corroded.

A shocking murder is reported to have been committed by a man named Kichiuyemon Nagao in the town of Minakuchi, Koga-gun, Shiga prefecture, on the 2nd inst. He had gone mad and seizing his daughter aged 9 swore he had dreamed that she was possessed with a demon. He then thrust a scythe into her mouth cutting her throat. He hacked the lifeless body in many places and finally took to flight. Alarmed at this terrible news the police in the neighbourhood lost no time in tracking the homicide, until they succeeded in arresting him in the heart of the Matsuo-san hills in the town limits.

On examination he was found to be mentally deranged at the time of his crime, though he had long been free from attack of insanity, to which he had once been subject.

The warship Chiyoda of the coast defence service, grounded on a sunken rock in the Shimonoseki channel early on Monday morning, but although two large holes were made on her sides, she succeeded in refloating herself by her own power.

The Chiyoda left Port Arthur on January sixth for Kure for repairs, and it was early on Monday morning as she was passing through the Shimonoseki channel, near the Kanefuse light house, north of Moji, the current was so strong that she became unmanagable running soon on the rock.

The Captain of the boat at once set the pumps at work, as the water was rushing into the holds from the two holes on the sides, and immediately wired to Kure for assistance, but before help arrived she had refloated.

The Chiyoda is a historic vessel having participated in the engagement of the Yellow Sea in the Japan-China war, in which she took an active part. She was built in England in 1890 and is a coast defence boat of 2,430 tons.

THINKS WOMEN OF JAPAN ARE BACKWARD

The January issue of the "Toa no Hikari" (Ex Oriente Lux) contains several interesting articles by prominent Japanese upon the question of the policies to be adopted after the war for the development of Japan.

Mr. Gendo Miwada writes an interesting article upon the proper education of Japanese women after the close of the war. He points out five defects in present-day Japanese women, and declares that it is necessary that the Japanese women should endeavour to correct these faults and prepare themselves for their future activities.

The Japanese women, says Mr. Miwada, lack the ability of organization, and in the past while they had been developing their individual ability, they had not organised themselves for any movement or purpose. Individually, he says, Japanese women are not inferior to those in Europe and they have sacrificed themselves for their parents, husbands and children, but they have never worked for the sake of national questions. There are many organizations established by Japanese women, but they have not done any service, as the women themselves lack the ability of strongly organizing and getting together for one purpose.

Secondly, he says that the Japanese women lack economic ideas, and they should take more interest in everyday life and the economics of their household. He says that the Japanese are leading a double life, so to speak, and while they have to possess the full variety of the Japanese dress, they have to have also European dresses. They eat Japanese food, but also European dishes appear at their table. Such matters might be of only small concern, but in these matters Japanese women show their lack of judgment in daily affairs. Even in the question of food, it is not necessary to stick to purely Japanese food, but also it is an absurd idea to think that purely European dishes should be eaten. With proper judgment, the good points of the two could be picked up, and an ideal food for the Japanese of to-day be found. Ordinarily women refuse to use meat in Japanese dishes, but there is no reason that meat could not be so used properly. The lack of such useful judgment and knowledge causes a waste of money and material. It is said that the Japanese wastes one-third of the meat, as they do not know how to use the rest. In the matter of houses, women, who have the largest interest, are not paying any attention, and while the country is so often scared by the black plague and other epidemics, houses are not improved at all. Whenever the spread of the pest is heard, the entire population eagerly set themselves to catching rats, but there is no Japanese house which is built in such a manner that the living of rats within the house is impossible. In many points, Japanese houses could be easily improved by women.

He also attacks the frequent occurrence of divorces, and says that such a large number is a shame to the country and especially to its women. He believes that the cause of most divorces is due to carelessness in concluding marriages.

The Japanese women are inferior to men in the matter of education, and while they are intellectually inferior, not only can they not obtain the respect and admiration of men, but they are unable to assist men to develop the country. While the education of women is neglected it is impossible for the nation to make healthy progress.

The Japanese family system which has so long a history, is a peculiar institution of the country, but he declares that it is a wrong attempt to keep up a syetem as it has been in the past. It should be modified and improved with the progress of the country. While to import individualism of other nations as it is, is absurd, to for ever continue in the former manner is equally absurd. The old customs of the country could be improved to suit present conditions, and while keeping up the peculiar spirit of the country it is necessary to take up the good points of the customs of other lands.

He concludes by saying that the improvement of Japanese women, especially their education, is one of the most important matters which must be seriously considered in future.

OKUMA ON PEACE

Marquis Okuma, former Prime Minister and the President of the Peace Society of Japan, has expressed his opinion on the German peace proposal for the "Yorodzu," of which the following is a translation:

The German peace move may end in failure because of the mediation of America, but the main question is whether or not both sides have the strength to carry on the fighting. They seem still to have the necessary power, however, at present and therefore I may say that if peace were concluded under the present circumstances the war would result in nothing decisive. The greatest war history has ever witnessed is a conflict between peace and militarism and a struggle between freedom and despotism, and to conclude peace when Germany is not yet on her knees is to endorse the existence of Prussian militarism. Nothing could be more dangerous than this. I believe that the Allies will not easily come to talk about peace before the enemy gives out his peace terms substantially, and when and how peace will be restored is really an interesting question, but it is very difficult for any one to predict regarding it. The Allies will, I observe, continue fighting vigorously as long as they do not gain advantages in the eastern and western fronts and the Balkan theatre of war, and moreover peace is impossible unless the return of Alsace-Lorraine, the restoration of the territory occupied by the Germans, reparation for the damage done, the restoration of Triest to Italy, the complete restoration of Belgium and the cession of the enemy's colonies in the Orient and the South Sea are pledged. The continuation of bloodshed is a very deplorable thing for humanity, but in order to bring permanent peace to the world, I believe we must not yet lay down our arms.

HOKKAIDO IMMIGRATION INCREASES

During last year the number of cases of immigration to the Hokkaido, as registered at the Hokkaido Immigration Office, stood at 23,770 persons of 12,658 households, showing an increase of 6,727 persons apportioned to 3,762 households over that of the previous year.

LIEUT.-GENERAL AOKI. FUTURE MILITARY ADVISER

Lieut.-General Nobusumi Aoki, who it is reported will be shortly engaged as adviser to the President of China, returned to Tokyo Wednesday afternoon. He has been long in China, where he was stationed by the order of the Central Staff Office to which he belongs. It is understood he has returned home by the order in connection with his engagement as adviser to President Li Yuan-hung, and will again proceed to China after a few weeks' stay in the capital.

Interviewed in the train by some reporters, Lieut.-General Aoki stated among other things that the arms used by the Chinese army are mostly German, the Japanese arms coming next in order. There are, of course, arms of other foreign countries also in use in the Chinese army, so that one may expect an exhibition of arms of various countries in Chinese barracks without going to a military museum. Now Japanese arms are gradually increasing especially since the outbreak of the European war.

A noteworthy tendency is the growth of American enterprise. Many American capitalists and business men, who have derived great profits and enriched themselves in the Europeon war, are coming to China and seeking to invest their means in commercial and industrial undertakings in China. This is a matter worth paying attention to, and calling for the consideration on the part of Japanese.

The political situation in China is still in a chaotic condition. Some people are inclined to attribute the situation to the political strife between the North and South, but this is not the correct survey of the situation, which is to be attributed to strife between the rulers and the ruled. But there is no fear of an outbreak of another revolution, because the Chinese populace are quite tired and weary of civil war, of which they have had enough in the past. At Shanghai there are assembled many influential leaders of the southern elements, including Tseng Chun-hueng, Sun Yat-sen, Chang Chi and Hu Han-min, but for what purpose they are there is quite unknown. Tseng Chun-hueng and Sun Yat-sen have apparently abandoned their former ambitions, and are interested in business enterprises to which they are determined to devote their efforts in future. As to Premier Tuan Chi-jui, he seems to be greatly misunderstood by many of his countrymen as well as by Japanese. He is not so ambitious a man as supposed, and he well understands Japan and the real capacity and strength of Japan. In that respect, Feng Kuo-chang, the new vice-President is the foremost of the Chinese statesmen. He fully understands that China must rely on Japan for her development and progress.

THE ARMING OF MERCHANTMEN

In connection with the arming of merchant steamers, it is further learned that the Government originally submitted the matter to the shipping concerns to sound their views preparatory to taking measures. The Nippon Yusen Kaisha has already convened a meeting of the Board of Directors and discussed the matter. As the result of the conference, the company at once started investigations into the matter and telegraphed to its branches abroad to ascertain the views and attitude of the foreign governments about the proposal. The replies and reports from those branches having been already received the company will shortly hold another conference of directors and make its final decision which will be submitted to the Government through the Communications Department.

The Naval Authorities are quoted as stating that the question of arming the merchantmen originated in the movement of the shipping concerns, who applied to the American Government through the Foreign Office authorities to ascertain whether the American Government would permit the passage of armed merchantmen through the Panama Canal. The motive of their movement is supposed to have originated in the advice of shipping concerns in allied countries. The latter, some time ago, suggested to their Japanese confrères the idea of arming merchant vessels in view of the activities of enemy submarines. The Naval Authorities are ready to furnish the necessary weapons, officers and men for the arming of the steamers at any time, though they have not as yet received formal applications for help. The merchant steamers of the allied countries each carry four 3-inch guns as a rule, and the Naval Authorities consider similar equipment will suffice for Japanese ships. They are of the opinion that the arming will be of very little use to tramp steamers or small steamers with a speed not exceeding 14 knots, but the measure, if resorted to in the ocean liners of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, Toyo Kisen Kaisha or Osaka Shosen Kaisha, will be of great service for safeguarding them from the attack of enemy submarines.

An official of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha is quoted as stating that the question of arming merchantmen engaged in the ocean voyage to Europe and America is being studied as a problem of momentary importance by the Board of Directors of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha and the Osaka Shosen Kaisha, which are running a regular steamer service to Europe. The question, however, requires deliberate study as the matter not only involves considerable expenses, but also has a grave bearing under International Law. The company authorities are making investigations into the matter in order to weigh the advantages and disadvantages of the enforcement of the measures. Even in case the measure is decided upon, the companies concerned will not make public details in view of the wide-spread activities of enemy agents.

THE FOOD SHORTAGE

The striking shortage of foodstuff in Germany to-day is once more endorsed by an authoritative report from Switzerland received in a certain quarter here yesterday. According to this reliable dispatch, the grain crop in Germany last year, showing as it does an increase of 2,500,000 tons compared with that for 1915, is far less than the normal crop before the war. The potato-crop last year is only twenty-one million tons, while it was fifty million tons in 1914 and fifty-one million tons in 1915. The potato stock in Germany which totalled 80 million tons after the crop in 1915, decreased to 27,900,000 tons last year, and was of far inferior quality, and, in view of these facts, the German Government has reduced the daily consumption of potatoes to ¾lb. per head, since January 1.

The supplies of meat, milk and fatty matters in Germany are daily threatening to grow short. Though there is no statement made as to the grain stocks Germany seized in Rumania, it is considered to amount to only two million tons, the greater part of which, however, will be given to Austro-Hungary and others and Germany herself is to take but a small portion thereof. According to the German press, the scarcity of foodstuffs is now keenly felt throughout Germany and the supplies from neutral countries are becoming more difficult to obtain. The German authorities are demanding of the people the utmost curtailment in eating, but whether or not the German nation can endure her hardships until the next crops, is quite problematical. The dispatch states that Prussia has decided to release those now in prison with a view to supplementing her Army.

EDUCATIONAL DEPTS PLAN'S

The programme for the next academic year, as prepared by the Education Department in accordance with their educational policy relating to the provision of schools under the Government control, is interesting. The programme shows that the establishment of the new Hokkaido University has been fully decided upon and it will be commenced in September this year.

It is presumed that the Education Department has in consideration the establishment of an independent agricultural college and the separation of the College of Economics from the College of Law in the Tokyo University will be made for the purpose of making the former an independent establishment, and this course of action may also possibly be followed by the Kyoto Imperial University. But the last consideration will probably debar the educational authorities from adopting the measure for the present on account of the greater expenses entailed. When the new university proposed becomes a matter of fact, the supply of students to the new institution by the present high schools, which are limited in number, will not be sufficient to meet the demand.

This inevitability will necessitate the increase of high schools, at least to the number of three though the programme under review provides for the increase of two schools of the grade.

PUBLIC GAZE TURNS TOWARD THE DIET

With the actual opening of the Diet only twelve days off, the political situation became exceedingly critical, and opinions have been expressed that the present session of the diet will not progress smoothly. The attitude of the Cabinet has also changed towards the political parties, and since the beginning of the year, all parties have been preparing for the coming struggle in the Diet, which they believe will certainly come.

A report says that the Cabinet Ministers have recently seen Prince Yamagata and that the meeting with the Prince shows their anxiety over the outcome of the coming session. Another says that the appointment of Dr. R. Mizuno as Vice-Minister of the Department of Home Affairs, is a preparation of the Cabinet against an emergency. Dr. Mizuno was formerly a leading member of the Seiyukai, and he only resigned from the party in order to take up his position in the Department of Home Affairs.

The Terauchi Cabinet is also preparing to communicate with the leaders of the political parties upon diplomatic questions, and it is said that within a few days, Count Terauchi will invite Viscount Kato, Mr. Hara and Mr. Inukai to his official residence, and discuss the problems in this connection, and especially upon the Chinese policy and the peace problem in Europe.

It is reported that Messrs. Hara and Inukai would not oppose the Government policies on diplomatic affairs, and would probably give their support to the Cabinet. But it is still doubtful what attitude Viscount Kato will take in the matter, and it is likely that he will not give any definite reply on the occasion, on the ground that on such an important question he has to consult his fellow members.

All interested in politics are now watching the attitude of Viscount Kato, as the future of the present session of the Diet will be greatly affected by the attitude of the Kenseikai and Viscount Kato, its strong leader.

CHENGCHIATUN AFFAIR DRAGS

The Japan-China negotiations over the Chengchiatun affair have been resumed between the Japanese Minister and the Chinese Foreign Minister, says a Peking dispatch. Baron Hayashi, Japanese Minister, went to the Foreign Office yesterday afternoon and interviewing Dr. Wu Ting-fang, the Chinese Foreign Minister, expressed Japan's opinion re establishment of the Japanese police stations in North Manchuria and Eastern Mongolia, and demanded the reply of the Chinese Government. Dr. Wu Ting-fang replied that he would submit the matter to the consideration of a cabinet conference and give a definite reply according to the decision of the Ministers. The interview thus ended without arriving at any definite conclusion.

NEW SCIENCE LABORATORY HELP TO INDUSTRIALISM

Baron Shibusawa and others on the committee of the Scientific Laboratory met on January fifth and decided, it is reported, that the system and plan of the Laboratory will be made public about January 15th.

The Laboratory will be established to encourage the study and investigation of scientific matters and to advance the industrial condition of Japan, and further the Laboratory aims to stimulate the inventive mind of the Japanese and improve productive efficiency. It intends to keep in close touch with the industrial circles of the country, and the entire world as well.

The full prospectus of the Laboratory, which will soon be published, says that it will undertake pure scientific investigation, application of scientific discoveries and science to industries, investigation on special subjects on request, education of scientific investigators, encouragement of inventions and discoveries, and public lectures.

Special attention will be given to the application of scientific investigation of industries, and the Laboratory plans that in this direction, investigations regarding electricity and electro-chemistry, instruments of precision, chemical compounds of medicine, dyestuffs and rubber, food stuffs and beverages, oils, protection from mineral fumes, prevention of mine explosions, resistance and motion of steamships, explosives and guns, fire and earthquake proof buildings, will be made as soon as the necessary equipment are installed.

TO IMPROVE TOKYO'S EDUCATION

The Tokyo City Council has decided to appropriate the sum of 150,000 yen which is the increased amount of the City's income from the tramway service together with 630,000 yen which is provided for in ordinary year's budget for education for the purpose of increasing the number of elementary schools in the city, between the academic years of 1916 and 1927. It has been decided however to spend only 100,000 during the current year out of the 150,000 yen above referred to. And next year 100,000 yen will also be derived from the same source. By this means the city authorities intend to increase the number of schools of the primary grade to 86.

After 1927 the city intends, it is learned, to make further necessary arrangements for the improvement of city education in conformity with the needs of the times.

TRAMS HAD HAPPY NEW YEAR

The new year has proved a very prosperous one for the Tokyo Electric tram bureau. During the first three days of the new year, the number of passengers of the cars in Tokyo totalled 2,410,000, with aggregate receipts of about 100,000 yen. Compared with the corresponding period of last year, this shows an increase of 400,000 in the number of passengers, and about 20,000 yen in the company's income.

Meanwhile articles left in the cars by cheerful passengers on the New Year's Days were extraordinarily numerous. Altogether 827 articles were forgotten in the trams during the first three days, among which were purses, hats, gloves, neckcloths, comforters, packages, etc.

FOREIGN OFFICE TO HAVE FIVE COMMISSIONERS

The Government has decided to create the office of commercial and industrial commissioners in the Foreign Office. These commissioners will be stationed at various important cities and towns in foreign countries and engage in investigations mainly into commercial and industrial conditions in the countries where they are stationed, with a view to furnishing Japanese commercial and industrial circles with knowledge and information concerning commerce and industry, making tours of inspection to various districts in case of necessity. To begin with, five commissioners will be appointed with the opening of the new fiscal year, commencing April next and will be stationed at London, New York, Shanghai, South America and in the South Sea islands. The commissioners will be appointed from among able men in commercial and industrial circles, as their function is purely commercial and industrial, having no connection with diplomatic or political affairs. The former commercial commissioners had been attached to the Department of Commerce and Agriculture.

LOCAL SERICUL TURISTS ARE SUPERSTITIOUS

Many superstitious beliefs prevail in Japan as in England. The following account, brief as it is, may give an idea what kind of superstition sway the minds of Japanese sericulturists. The Patron Deity of Sericulture in Japan is generally believed to be Ukemochinokami, who is fabled to have been slain by Susanoono-Mikoto, brother of the Sun-goddess Amaterasu-Omikami long ago and out from the part of his face occupied by his eyebrows grew a lot of silkworms, besides which cattle grew out of his temples, etc.

This tradition justifies the superstitious sericulturists in worshipping the deity. In most districts when the silk trade is prosperous every temple and shrine distributes talismans to devotional sericulturists who are thereby saved from failure in the crops.

In Ibaraki prefecture, the shrine called "Kokage (literally 'shadow of silkworm') Jinja" is, as a tradition has it, dedicated to Princess Konjiki, daughter of Great King Rinyi of old China. The fair Princess, being ill-treated by her step-mother was first exiled into the mountains inhabited by lions and next to mountains occupied by hawks or sometimes sent adrift on the wide main or buried alive, but still she lived. So jealousy drove her step-mother to resort to the measure of sending her to sea again in a vessel built of mulberries and at last the Princess reached the harbour in the bight called Toyorano-ura in Hitachi province, Ibaraki prefecture. And there she died but out of her corpse grew silkworms. This belief gave rise to the custom of worshipping Princess Konjiki among the silk trade men in that locality.

A few remarks are necessary as to the talismans above referred to. They are of paper, bearing in particular cases the figure of a cat catching a rat, or the faces of "Tengu" gobbins with long protruding noses, which are sometimes bent at the point in the case of "Karasu Tengu."

WRECK OF THE KAIHO MARU

Mr. Nakabayashi, First Engineer, and forty-nine others of the steamer Kaiho Maru which was wrecked off Pratas Island on November 10th, returned to Kobe recently on board the steamer America Maru.

According to Mr. Nakabayashi, the steamer Kaiho Maru left Kobe on November 6th for Calcutta, and on the eleventh the first mate on the bridge saw the breaking of waves in front of the steamer, and before it could be stopped it had stranded. The crew at once lowered a boat, but it was smashed against the side of the steamer, and it was decided that until the sea became calmer, no attempt of escape could be made.

The place where the steamer stranded was about ten miles off Pratas Island, where she struck a large horse-shoe shaped coral reef, within which were seen the remains of six steamers which had probably met the same fate as the Kaiho Maru.

On the 14th the sea became a little calmer and the First Mate lowered a boat, and together with several men started for Pratas Island, but no trace of the boat or the crew could since be ascertained. Meanwhile the huge waves damaged the steamer every day, and the crew on board could not do anything but await their fate. On November 27th, seventeen of the crew tried to lower a raft, but it was broken before it touched the water. In the afternoon, they launched a boat, and finally reached Pratas Island after a five hours struggle with the elements.

Pratas Island is about four miles in circumference, and is not inhabited. On the shore were seen many human bones, probably of the crew of the six steamers wrecked on the reef. They were unable to obtain anything to eat on the island, but an antique hen and a cat. They caught and ate the hen, but the cat escaped capture.

On December 4th, the seventeen sailors repaired their boat and proceeded to Hongkong. The others remained on the steamer, and were rescued by the steamer Kaijo Maru on December 18th.

JAPAN SIGNIFIES HER CONSENT TO RULES

It was announced on the 6th inst. that Japanese Government had informed the French Ambassador here on December 28th that the resolutions passed by the Economic Conference of the Allies held at Paris last June, had been acknowledged by the Japanese Government. The French Government asked Japan to recognise the resolutions, through the French Ambassador.

The Japanese Government consented to the resolutions passed at Paris, and informed France that Japan believed the resolution was passed so as to have a similar policy adopted by all the allies, and that according to the peculiar situation and condition of each of the allied countries, regulations could be adopted and also exceptions to the rules could be made by the law of each nation.

ON THE FRENCH FRONT

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 3.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig announces, in his Wednesday evening communiqué, that the enemy's artillery, in the morning, showed much activity in the neighbourhood of Souchez and in the southern half of the Ypres salient.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 5.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his evening communqué on Thursday, says:—"We made successful raids on the enemy trenches to the north-east of Arras. On two occasions we entered the foe's positions in the neighbourhood of Wytschaete. We drove off a party endeavouring to approach us to the east of Armentières."

London, Jan. 6.—Reuter's correspondent with the British Headquarters in France says there is ceaseless activity on the British front which is now nearly one hundred miles long. The motto is "no rest for the enemy." The guns never cease their ruthless work of destroying the German defences and taking their human toll. The Germans are most persevering in the work of repairing but it must be a disheartening competition. This is an eternal making good of the torn wire entanglements, breached parapets and obliterated trenches against the ever-swelling volume of devastation.

The correspondent emphasises that it is an illusion to suppose that because the British hold only one-fourth of the western front, their share in the struggle can be expressed by this ratio. "It is a question of the density of men not of mileage," he writes. "It is a question of the number of enemy divisions held in any particular area by the concentration there."

"Though the western front is four hundred miles long, it is quite conceivable that the war may be won upon a line, less than a tenth of that length."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 6.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his communiqué on Friday evening, reports: "An enemy raiding party entered the British lines south of Loos. There was heavy fighting, but the enemy was speedily driven out, leaving numbers of dead in the British trenches. Some British were missing after the raid.

The British have successfully exploded a mine north of Givenchy.

In the Somme theatre, the British batteries have bombarded the trenches opposite Les Boeufs and Guedecourt and west of Gommecourt. The German lines in the neighbourhood of Hill 60 have also been bombarded.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Paris, Jan. 7.—The Saturday evening communiqué reads: "There have been violent artillery duels, during the afternoon, in the region of Paschendael. Our artillery were successful in bombarding the enemy organizations along the Somme front. Coups-de-main by the enemy at Butte de Mesnil-Maisons, in the Champagne district, and at Arracourt were frustrated by our fire."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 7.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Saturday evening communiqué reports. "We seized two posts to the north of Beamont Hamel, and, after repulsing the enemy counter-attacks, consolidated them. We made a successful day-light raid, on a wide front south-east of Arras, and penetrated as far as the enemy's third line, destroying many dug-outs and damaging the opposing defences. We took 240 prisoners.

"Since Christmas Day, our aeroplanes have bombed a number of places of military importance, behind the enemy's lines, with good results."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 7.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Sunday evening communiqué reports:—"We were successful in repulsing an enemy attack on Beaumont-Hamel. We also made a successful raid on the enemy trenches, south of Armentières, where we took 19 prisoners. A short heavy bombardment, in the morning preceded an attempt by the Germans to enter our trenches, south-west of Wytschaete. We drove off the attack in disorder, the enemy suffering considerable losses. Our fire also broke up an enemy attempt north of Ypres to raid our lines under cover of an intense bombardment."

The French communiqué, on Sunday evening, announced that there had been a lively artillery struggle in the sector round Neuport-les-Bains in Belgium.

The German official communiqué states that the British attack south of Arras broke down under the fire of the German guns. The weather has restricted fighting.

ON THE RUSSIAN FRONT

Petrograd, Jan. 3.—Western Front: The enemy's aeroplanes have been showing increased activity at different points and dropping bombs promiscuously. One of them was brought down by artillery fire south-east of Vinesky Lake, the occupants being taken prisoner. South-east of Rovel, three hostile aeroplanes were also brought to earth, the aviators being crushed to death when the machines crashed to the ground.

The enemy artillery has been maintaining a strong fire in the direction of Lolocheff, near Batkuv and Garbuzor. Afterwards his infantry assumed the offensive along the whole front. In spite of the Russian artillery fire, the enemy succeeded in penetrating the trench occupied by one Russian Company, but was at once dislodged by a counter-attack and repulsed. The enemy has been using smoke-shells in the Manilovka region.

Near Iesupol the Russian artillery fire scattered a party of trench workers firing also successfully on Iesupol. On the Moldavia frontier, the enemy twice assumed the offensive from Kotumba to Sulcha and further south, but was everywhere repulsed. A part of the trenches, previously lost in this place, was recaptured by the Russians.

Rumania. The Rumanians are advancing north of the Kazin river. The enemy attacked the Rumanians east of Sovech, on the upper part of the river Sustchik, but was repulsed and retreated westwards under the pursuit of the cavalry. By a renewed attack with outnumbering forces, the enemy succeeded in pressing the Rumanians back to their previous positions. The enemy in close formation, under the cover of hurricane artillery fire, and using asphyxiating gases, attacked one Russian regiment along the railway south west of Focsani, but being met by the Russian fire retreated and ceased his attacks. One Russian Fusilier Regiment performed a strenuous attack on Gulianka, seizing this place and taking prisoner 6 officers and 205 soldiers, also 5 guns and 8 machineguns. The village Kiovens was also taken and the enemy was pressed back in the southern direction. According to supplementary reports a British cuirassed motor-car sallied forth, on December 30, on the roadway Brailov-Vizira along the Danube inflicting heavy losses upon the enemy.

In the Dobrudja the enemy performed a series of attacks near Macin, but they were all repulsed and the enemy pushed back.

Caucasus front. West of Kalkit the Russian scouts pierced a Turkish defense taking a number of prisoners and arms.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 4.—The long stubborn retreat of the Russians, to the Sereth River line, stretching across the land on the threshold of Moldavia is now virtually over.

The army under General Falkenhayn is now approaching Focsani and Fundeni bridgehead. These two positions are the two main points in this 50-mile line of fortifications. It seems clear that the two armies are on the eve of a big battle, which will have important consequences.

The River Sereth is a tributary of the Danube. It rises as the Great and Little Sereth in the Crown land of Bukowina in the Carpathians, and flows south-east through Moldavia, and then S.S.E. to join the Danube on the left bank, 5 miles above Galatz, after a course of 260 miles. Its chief tributaries are the Suczava, Moldava, Trotus, Berlat and Bisritz.

Petrograd, Jan. 5.—In Moldavia, severe enemy attacks to the west of the River Sereth were repulsed.

In the Dobrudja, after a whole day's fierce fighting 10 miles east of Brailoff, in which the enemy suffered heavily, the Russians began to cross the Danube.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 5.—The Russian official communiqué reads: "We attacked the heights on the Rumanian frontier near Mount Betoch and took 600 prisoners, 3 cannon and 16 machine-guns."

[OFFICIAL TO RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Jan. 6.—Western front. The enemy's attacks 40 kilometres west of Riga have been repulsed. The Russian troops, by a bold attack seized a village on the south-western extremity of the Babit Lake, and, after a fierce fight, took possession of two ranges of enemy trenches east of Kalnzem (20 kilometres south-west of Riga) taking a number of prisoners and machine-guns. The enemy's counter-attacks were repulsed and the Russian troops advanced further, reaching the river and seizing a position south-west of Kalnzem. Three officers and 272 soldiers have been taken prisoner, also one light battery and 6 ammunition carts captured. The enemy's counter-attacks had no success. The Russian aviators took a distinguished part in this fight.

Thirty kilometres south-east of Kovci, an enemy column, by the skilful action of the Russian scouts and the Russian artillery was partly annihilated, partly taken prisoner. An enemy ambush south of the Kavorla mountain was also partly put to the sword, partly taken prisoner.

Rumania. The Russian scouts, north of Zolotvina, attacked an Austrian company taking prisoners and putting a part of the men to the sword. A German company, which tried to approach the Russian trenches, north of Kotumba, was surrounded and partly annihilated. The enemy, south of Kotumba, succeeded in dislodging the Russians from one height and in pressing upon them 2 kilometres in an eastern direction. North of the Uza Valley, the enemy was repulsed with heavy losses into his trenches. The enemy's attacks between the Slonik and Oitus Valleys were repulsed, and the height south of the Oitus seized. The enemy, with outnumbering forces, attacked the Rumanians on the upper part of the Sushitza, pressing upon them towards Rekosa. The enemy succeeded also in pressing upon the Rumanians near Koprurij (12 kilometres south-east of the Putna and Zavala confluent) and also north-west of Odobesci. All the enemy attacks near this place were repulsed. The enemy concentrated the fire of his heavy artillery on Ramniceni, and attacked the front from Ramniceni to Gulianka, pressing upon the Russian vanguards. The enemy attack on the roadway Gulianka to Olenesca was stopped by the Russian fire. Braila was evacuated on January 4 by the Russians, the enemy retreating beyond the Sereth.

Caucasus front. Snowstorms are raging at many places. The Russian troops seized Bicharlo. The retreating Turks seized the rocky mountain ridge south of Bidshar on both sides of the road to Senne.

[OFFICIAL TO RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Jan. 6.—In the Rumanian theatre, the forces of the enemy which attacked the Russian lines in the region of Cotumba, on the River Trotus, have been repelled by the Russian fire. After a vigorous artillery preparation, the enemy made five attacks on the hills south of the River Chebonigh, but was everywhere repulsed.

Three attacks by the enemy south of the River Oituz have been checked. The enemy compelled the Russians to withdraw east of Topeschy and north of the confluent of the River Putna and the Sabala, south-east of Fokchany. In the region of Kepreria the Rumanians retired northward, repulsing all the attacks of the enemy in the region of Kapatunu.

Three divisions and thirty batteries of the enemy attacked the Russians south of the River Buzeu, northwest of Braila, compelling them to withdraw.

In the Dobrudja, east of Braila, all the violent attacks of the enemy were held in check by the Russians until the evening of January 5 in spite of the outnumbering forces of the enemy. On that evening, however, the Russians were compelled to begin their retreat beyond the Danube.

On the western front, on January 3, the Germans, after a strong artillery preparation, occupied an island in the western Dvina, north of Dvinsk, and during that night assumed the offensive from this point, but were repulsed by the Russian fire.

On the Caucasus front, in Persia, in the direction of Burudjirek, the Russians, after having pierced the enemy's positions, succeeded in occupying Dovlet-Abat. By an energetic pursuit, the Russians forced the enemy back as far as Nekil-Abad.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 6.—The Russian official report, coming to London by wireless, states that the Russians have repulsed five strong enemy attacks on the heights south of the Chebonigh River, in western Moldavia. They have also repelled three attacks north of the Oituz River.

Three enemy divisions, supported by thirty batteries, attacked and pushed the Russians back south of the mouth of the River Buzeu, which flows into the Sereth about ten miles northwest of Braila.

The enemy has launched fierce attacks at Vokororons, east of Braila, in the Dobrudja. There was a stubborn battle, lasting the entire day, in which the enemy suffered great losses. The enemy, in the evening, forced the Russians to withdraw to the other bank of the Danube.

The Russians have bayoneted many Austrians and taken the rest of a reconnoitering party, north of Zolotvin, in Galicia, prisoners.

A later Russian communique states that the Russians have attacked and occupied a position southeast of Kalntzen, southwest of Riga taking 275 prisoners.

The enemy has compelled the Russians to withdraw two versts south of Cotumba, on the Trotus River. The Russians have occupied a height south of the Oituz River.

Superior enemy forces have pressed the Rumanians back at Rekoza, on the Suchiza River. The Rumanians have also been pressed back in the region of Koprurja and north of Odoleschi, which is three miles northwest of Fokchany.

An Austro-German offensive along the line of Rimnichini, Zulianka, Kiovenu and Machieni has driven the Russian advanced posts back four versts after stubborn resistance.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 7.—According to a German official message, by wireless, the Russians destroyed most of the factories before abandoning Braila.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 7.—The Berlin official communiqué reads: "We pushed back the Russian and Rumanian forces between Oituz and Patna valleys. We stormed the heights of Odobesti. The Russians, attacked along a 25-kilometre front between Focsani and Fundeni, and advanced in the direction of Obilesti.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 7.—The Russian official communiqué reads: "In the Oituz valley we retired in an easterly direction northwest of Focsani. The Rumanians are now restored in their positions at Kapatunu. In the same area we drove off a dense attack. Southwest of Focsani, we have assumed the offensive, and have reached a line with Rastetya Lake."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 8.—The Russian report from the Riga front says that in the fighting there 500 prisoners have been captured in a raid on the trenches. The Germans claim to have taken 1300 prisoners in the struggle at Mitau, where the Russian attacks failed.

MR. JOHN BUCHAN'S WEEKLY SUMMARY OF EVENTS

[OFFICIAL TO BRITISH EMBASSY THROUGH KOKUSAI AGENCY]

London, Jan. 6.—Except in Rumania, there have been no important operations in any theatre of war during the last week. In Rumania the enemy continues to press forward but slowly, and with increasing difficulty. Possibly his advance will continue, but it is not likely to alter the situation seriously.

The Russian counterstroke may be delayed, but is undoubtedly preparing. The ultimate importance of this campaign will not be decided until after the Spring and early Summer operations.

Elsewhere Germany has an unsuccessful balance against her. In France, the fighting is of a decidedly winter character, but is being waged as vigorously as the conditions will allow. A great weight of artillery and superior direction by our airmen causes the enemy continual losses and is steadily damaging to his morale.

It is noticeable that Field Marshal Haig's despatch on the Somme campaign clearly disproves the German contention that our offensive has failed to accomplish its purpose. Over half the German army has been in action and continually worsted. The effect on the morale on both sides, is obvious, while the fact that so large a proportion of Germany's total strength was permanently pinned to the spot, has had a seriously crippling effect on the enemy's whole strategy.

At Verdun and on the Somme the British and French, besides valuable gains of territory and position, have captured considerably over one hundred thousand prisoners.

The growing weight of evidence is that the Central Powers are experiencing an increasing shortage of the raw materials necessary for producing essential military material. Doubtless this was one of the main considerations in their endeavour to obtain an early peace.

CAMPAIGN IN MESOPOTAMIA

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 3.—It is officially reported that the British forces in Mesopotamia, in spite of the heavy rains, have made further progress on the right bank of the Tigris, east and north-east of Kut-el-Amara.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Copenhagen, Jan. 4.—Two Zeppelins have been destroyed by fire in a shed at Tondern in Schleswig-Holstein. The fire was caused by a short-circuit of one of the electric wires lighting the shed.

News From All Sources

London, Jan. 3.—Reuter's News Agency learns that no reply has yet been sent by the Allies to President Wilson's Note regarding peace. It has been considered desirable that a reasonable interval should elapse between the delivery of the answer to the German Note and the reply to the American President.

A rough draft of the Note has already been made, and it is now being considered. Probably it will be despatched in a few days. It has already been announced that the Spanish Government will not associate itself with the despatch of the United States; neither is it expected that the Netherlands Government will take any action.

It is of especial interest to observe that the attempts of North America to obtain the co-operation of the South American States have not met with any great measure of success. Such important States as The Argentine and Brazil and several smaller States, will take no action. It is certain that verbal explanations have been made by the American representatives at various capitals in order to elucidate points that were not clear.

New York, Jan. 3.—When the Senate was in session to-day, Mr. G. M. Hitchcock, democratic member for Nebraska, again made a speech in support of his resolution endorsing the Peace Note of the President.

Senator Henry C. Lodge, Republican, from Massachusetts, opposed the resolution.

Mr. Lodge said he was of opinion that, immediately after the announcement that the Note had been despatched, the widely published press interview with Count Bernstorff, in which he was quoted as strongly approving the Note, was responsible for the general misinterpretation of its real character and purpose. The matter was one that had aroused much suspicion, said Mr. Lodge.

Congress, said the speaker, should not act on the clamour for a peace, which might only mean breathing space, during which the warring nations would gather fresh strength for the renewal of a struggle, which possibly would involve the United States. Such a peace was not worth having. The right of the President to mediate was not in question, said Mr. Lodge, but such offers should always be made along well-recognized lines.

Senator Lodge quoted the Biography of Colonel Roosevelt to show that when the latter was President during the Russo-Japanese war, he had reason to believe that mediation would be acceptable to both sides before he offered it.

Mr. Lodge accepted in full faith the President's declaration in the Note that it was in no way associated with the proposal of the Central Powers, but unfortunately he believed a different interpretation had very generally been placed upon it already. Also, added Mr. Lodge, some of those sympathizing with Germany deemed it friendly, while it was unfavorably regarded by those friendly to the Allies.

In conclusion Mr. Lodge said: "If the misinterpretation of the Note has been general, its endorsement by the Senate will proclaim to the world that the Congress of the United States is ranged beside one of the belligerents. In bringing about peace, I do not wish to see the United States ranged beside either belligerent. Personally, I myself do not wish to be ranged against the side which I believe to be fighting for the cause of liberty against autocracy." Action in the matter was again deferred at the request of Senator Hitchcock.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, Jan. 3.—The Frankfurter Zeitung quotes Count Julius Andrassy as announcing that the terms of peace of the Central Powers will be shortly communicated to President Wilson.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

Washington, Jan. 4.—Officials here refuse to comment on the statement attributed to the Hungarian statesman, Count Julius Andrassy, that the Entente could learn Germany's peace terms through President Wilson. They are equally reticent concerning the reports that Ambassador Gerard has sent the terms to the President by cable.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 4.—The Allies' reply to President Wilson is still being drafted. Whereas the reply to Germany was purposely negative regarding terms, rehearsing only the conditions of peace which would be unacceptable, it is expected that the answer to President Wilson will indicate more precisely the only preliminaries upon which the Allies are prepared to negotiate.

Washington, Jan. 5.—Mr. Lansing, Secretary of State, announces that President Wilson is not contemplating sending another Peace Note.

In the Senate to-day, Mr. James H. Lewis, Senator from Illinois, supported the resolution of Mr. G. M. Hitchcock endorsing the Peace Note of the President. Mr. Lewis expressed the opinion that the continuance of the war would involve the United States in hostilities. Apparently he referred to the submarine controversy between Washington and Berlin. He asked the House:—"Do you feel that the people of this nation are in such a temper to ever again allow any Commanders of ships, Captains or other Army Officers of the Corps Diplomatique to visit upon this country injury to citizen or property, and escape under the excuse that they acted under a misconception of orders or through zeal? If these conditions are repeated, America will not again accept that form of apology, but will resent it, and punish the perpetrators to the fullest extent in her power."

Late in the day, Senator Hitchcock accepted a substitute resolution, put forward by Senator Wesley L. Jones, Republican returned by Washington. The amendment was to the effect that the Senate did not approve the Peace Note, but approved the President's request that the belligerents should state their terms.

The substituted resolution was eventually passed by 48 votes to 17.

The Kokusai News Agency is authorized to state that the American Ambassador, His Excellency Mr. George Guthrie has received a special despatch from the State Department at Washington, stating that the press report, published yesterday morning, to the effect that President Wilson intended to issue a second Note, is entirely without foundation.

A dispatch from Berne received at a certain quarter here states that the Swiss papers have published a report credited to a reliable source to the effect that Germany and Austria are preparing a second note to the Allies indicating their terms of peace negotiations. The principal terms are given as follows:

1. Germany will withdraw from Belgium and instead claims the possession of the Belgian Congo.
2. Germany will withdraw from northern France and instead claims the return to her of the German Colonies occupied by the Allies.
3. A new kingdom of Poland shall be created, the extent of the kingdom to be limited within the boundaries of the grand duchy of Warsaw excluding the province of Suvalki.
4. The kingdom of Lithuania shall be created by amalgamating Vilna, Kovno, Grodno, Suvalki and Courland; local autonomy to be granted to Courland.
5. Eastern Galicia as far as the river San shall be ceded to Russia.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 5.—The impression is growing that Germany has so far climbed down that she has communicated to President Wilson at least the outlines of her peace terms, which originally she flatly refused. Meanwhile, the authorities at Washington maintain absolute secrecy. Americans, however, are convinced that important developments are progressing under the surface.

The chastened mood of the Germans is attributed to the British blockade, which is grinding slowly but surely. The spectre of economic ruin, with its inevitable consequences of internal commotion, is evidently frightening the German leaders of all parties, although some continue their threats of "frightfulness." The feeling of fear has been increased by the shortage of the harvest of potatoes—Germany's mainstay. The harvest this year was 20,000,000 tons compared with 51,000,000 in 1915.

On December 12. Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, announced in the Reichstag that Germany and her Allies had proposed to the hostile Powers to enter at once on peace negotiations. Cables at the time gave a brief outline of the Text of the Note and of the Imperial German Chancellor's speech. We give below the full text of the Note and Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg's speech:—

The most terrific war ever experienced in history has been raging for the last two years and a half over a large part of the world—a catastrophe which thousands of years of common civilization was unable to prevent and which injures the most precious achievements of humanity.

Our aims are not to shatter nor annihilate our adversaries. In spite of our consciousness of our military and economic strength and our readiness to continue the war (which has been forced upon us) until the bitter end, if necessary, at the same time prompted by the desire to avoid further bloodshed and make an end to the atrocities of war, the four allied powers propose to enter forthwith into peace negotiations.

The propositions which they bring forward for such negotiations and which have for their object a guarantee of the existence, of the honour and liberty of evolution for their nations are, according to their firm belief, an appropriate basis for the establishment of a lasting peace.

The four allied powers have been obliged to take up arms to defend justice and the liberty of national evolution. The glorious deeds of our armies have in no way altered their purpose. We always maintained the firm belief that our own rights and justified claims in no way control the rights of these nations.

The spiritual and material progress which were the pride of Europe at the beginning of the twentieth century are threatened with ruin. Germany and her allies, Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria and Turkey, gave proof of their unconquerable strength in this struggle. They gained gigantic advantages over adversaries superior in number and war material. Our lines stand unshaken against ever repeated attempts made by armies.

The last attack in the Balkans has been rapidly and victoriously overcome. The most recent events have demonstrated that further continuance of the war will not result in breaking the resistance of our forces, and the whole situation with regard to our troops justifies our expectation of further successes.

If in spite of this offer of peace and reconciliation the struggle should go on, the four allied powers are resolved to continue to a victorious end, but they disclaim responsibility and history.

After reading the note, the Chancellor said:

"Gentlemen, in August, 1914, our enemies challenged the superiority of power in the world war. To-day we raise the question of peace, which is a question of humanity. We await the answer of our enemies with that serenity of mind which is guaranteed to us by our exterior and interior strength and by our clear conscience.

"If our enemies decline to end the war, if they wish to take upon themselves the world's heavy burden of all these terrors which hereafter will follow them even in the least and smallest homes, every German heart will burn in sacred wrath against our enemies, who are unwilling to stop human slaughter in order that their plans of conquest and annihilation may continue.

"In the fateful hour we took a fateful decision. It has been saturated with the blood of hundreds of thousands of our sons and brothers, who gave their lives for the safety of their home. Human wits and human understanding are unable to reach to the extreme and last questions in this struggle of nations, which has unveiled all the terrors of earthly life, but also the grandeur of human courage and human will in ways never seen before. God will be the judge.

"We can proceed upon our way without fear and unashamed. We are ready for fighting and we are ready for peace."

SITUATION AT ATHENS

London, Jan. 1.—The Allies have sent another Note to Greece, in which they demand the dismissal of those Greek officers responsible for the attack on the Allied troops on December 1, the firing of salutes to the Allied flags, the release of Venizelists arrested, reparation for damage, and the reduction of the Greek army to a minimum which shall work as the police hereafter. As the result of the Allied blockade of Greece, the situation in Greece is grave and the present demand of the Allies is expected to be acceded to easily.

Salonika, Jan. 1.—An enemy aeroplane has been passing over the town every day. It is supposed that besides spying it is engaged on a postal service to Athens, which, except for wireless is completely isolated.

There are indications that the blockade is effective. The scarcity of cereals is beginning to be seriously felt in southern Greece.—Reuter.

Athens, Dec. 31.—The Italian Minister has handed the Government a Note demanding reparation for the events which occurred on December 1 and 2 and other demands.—Reuter.

Piraeus, Jan. 1.—The Note presented by the Triple Entente to Greece to-day demands the reduction of the Greek forces outside the Peloponnesus to the number absolutely necessary to maintain order; the transportation to the Peloponnesus of all armaments and munitions exceeding those corresponding to this force; the prohibition of meetings of Reservists and the carrying of arms by civilians; the restoration of the Allied control over the railways, posts and telegraphs; the immediate release of political prisoners and indemnification for those who have suffered unjustly in consequence of the events which occurred on December 1; the removal of the officer responsible for the orders given on December 1; apologies by the Greek Government to the Entente and a public salute of the flags of the Allies.

The Note intimates that Allied troops may shortly be landed to be conveyed to Salonika over the Larissa railway. It reserves full liberty of action in the event of the Greek Government giving further cause for complaint and pledges that the Entente will not permit the Venizelist forces to cross the neutral zone.

It declares that the blockade will be maintained until these demands are satisfied.—Reuter.

Athens, Jan. 1.—Italy has presented a Note to the Government endorsing the Note presented by the Triple Entente.—Reuter.

London, Dec. 23.—A Venizelist telegram from Salonika states that the persecution of Venizelists in Athens continues.

The Royalists are celebrating their boasted victory over the Allies and University students have been tortured and professors imprisoned for having demonstrated in favour of the Entente.

All the streets in Old Greece hitherto named after M. Venizelos are being officially changed to "1st December."

The Minister of War has conveyed King Constantine's congratulations to the troops for their exemplary courage and behaviour on the 1st when he claimed that they had saved the country from the enemies who were hoping to overthrow the dynasty.—Reuter.

Athens, Dec. 23.—The text of the Greek Note mentioned on the 20th regrets the continuance of the blockade and says that the Entente's toleration of the artificial extension of the revolutionary movement in the islands is disquieting the population and hampering rapprochement between the Entente and Greece. It urges the Entente to seek with Greece an improvement in the present situation with a view to a quicker settlement of the questions at issue and declares that if anarchy spreads in the country the Government may no longer be able to maintain order.—Reuter.

"The Times" has received from M. Venizelos, leader of the National Defence movement at Salonika, the following further statement of his motives and aims in the present struggle, and of his hopes for Greece after the war:—

At the moment when the first contingents of the National Army are leaving for the front to take the first steps towards the accomplishment of the task which prompted the inauguration of our national movement, I desire to express through the medium of your columns my sincere gratitude to the Allied Press and peoples who have been so ready with their keen and sympathetic support of our national struggle.

In fighting this fight we wish to wipe out the stain which has been placed upon the Greek nation by the disregard of our Treaty obligations to Servia; we wish to play our part in the freeing of our territories invaded by the Bulgarians; we wish to emphasize in a tangible and concrete manner our absolute conviction that Greece can never progress, nor even exist, as a free and independent State, except by continued maintenance of the closest contact with those Powers who have supported her on every occasion; who rule the Mediterranean, and who at this very moment are fighting for the liberty of Europe and for the right of every small nation to live in freedom and independence.

This is what we are fighting for, and this is the struggle which the Athens Government are endeavouring to discredit by falsely representing it to be anti-dynastic.

If the formation of a National Army, destined to fight side by side with powerful Allies against the common foe, and destined to fulfil the obligations of our alliance with heroic Servia, constitutes an anti-dynastic enterprise, then in such case our struggle may evidently be characterized as such.

On the other hand, if, in the ordinary honest interpretation of the phase, only a movement is anti-dynastic which aims at over-throwing a Throne, at changing the form of government, or at replacing the reigning Royal family by another dynasty, then the accusation brought against us is a wanton calumny.

Neither can we be accused of being anti-dynastic if we have come into open conflict with the Crown on account of the system of despotism set up at Athens and on account of our resolve to claim in the name of the people the right which is theirs according to our Constitution, by which the people are entitled to decide their own destinies.

Even, however, if it be this conflict which has provoked our movement, I desire to state, nevertheless, most emphatically that our movement has not been organized with the object of achieving the settlement of that conflict.

We have no intention of settling the question by force of arms, nor of dealing with the question at all whilst the war lasts. Our entire attention is absorbed by our country's enemy.

As soon, however, as the war is terminated, and after we have ensured, as far as possible, the safeguarding of our country's national interests and raised Greece from the position into which she has been assigned by the violation of the Greco-Servia Treaty, then we will see what guarantees can be obtained for the future against the possibility of a certain limited number of persons around the King imposing upon the Crown opinions which are in direct contradiction to the will of the people, and forcing upon the people against their will a policy calculated to drive our country to national suicide.

The conflict to which I have referred can only be thoroughly and efficiently settled in one way, and that is by the free verdict of the people. We shall ask to be assured of this freedom in a practical manner, and we are convinced that the Allied Powers will assist us to this end. For it is only in the event of the Greek people, after the war, being prevented from expressing their decisions freely and without pressure, that the danger of civil war would arise. The settlement of the Greek constitutional problem is a matter which will doubtless interest the Entente Powers both from a political as well as from a moral point of view.

Nothing but the re-establishment of the constitutional regime, which has been violated, and the right to decide their own destinies can offer any guarantee that Greece will continue in the future to maintain close and cordial relations with the Powers of the Entente. Whereas, on the other hand, the maintenance of absolutist rule, from which we have been suffering for the last 20 months, would facilitate Greece's departure from her natural path, and would render possible a rapprochement between her and the Central Empire.

Such is the objective of the struggle which we have undertaken.

We wish to fight for our national interests side by side with our natural and traditional friends.

We wish to make good, as far as we can, the harm that we did to heroic Servia by the nonfulfilment of our engagement.

We wish finally to ensure in the future the right to be a free people, the masters of our own destinies.

In a word, we are struggling for precisely those principles, for the triumph of which over Prussian militarism the Allied Powers are waging their great war.

In these circumstances we feel that the Great Powers who have done so much for Greece in the past will appreciate the position in which Greece finds herself to-day, and we are confident in our hope that the Powers, appreciating likewise the goal that we are striving to attain, will grant us that material and moral support of which we are in need to enable us to bring our struggle to a successful conclusion.

ANOTHER GERMAN LIE SCOUTED

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, Jan. 4.—The Dutch papers scout the German accusation that the British are laying mines along the Dutch coast. They point out that no sane person could believe that the British Navy would lay mines along British sea-routes, where enemy ships do not exist.

CUPBOARD IS NOW BARE OF POTATOES IN PARTS

London, Jan. 7.—Information as to the determination of the people in Germany to prolong the war, derived from various sources, corroborates the stories of destitution in the country.

It is an undoubted fact that the population is starving in many parts owing to the lack of potatoes.

Neutrals who have recently been in Berlin all speak of a real absence of food. In January (?) it is said, the people looked weak and there were constant hunger riots in Saxony, Wurtemburg, and Bavaria. It is thought the people cannot resist much longer.

Letters to and from prisoners of war all show despondency. The effect of the blockade is making itself increasingly felt, but bad as the situation is, it is misleading to speak of the enemy's immediate exhaustion.

The recent peace proposals can have but one meaning namely the recognition by the Central Powers that they cannot win the war.

It is realized by the Allies that the peace at which they aim can only result from Germany's defeat in the field.

London, Jan. 6.—Reuter's News Agency learns from an authoritative source that information received in the past few weeks both from official and private sources in belligerent and neutral countries shows that at no period of the war has there been such striking evidence of rapid progressive economic deterioration in the enemy countries as during the past two months.

There is abundant evidence that in Germany, Hungary and Austria it is now realized that the relief in respect of food supplies to be expected from Rumania will not be forthcoming. The thorough and systematic manner in which the grain and oil in Rumania were destroyed completely disillusioned the enemy and this, combined with the failure of the potato harvest, has brought the internal distress in Germany to a point not far from irremediable disaster.

The precise figures of the German booty in Rumania are not available, but it is unlikely that Germany has secured enough to compensate for the loss of the potato harvest. Moreover, any benefit derived from the Rumanian booty is lessened by the fact that Germany's allies are contending for it.

SOME SOUND ADVICE

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 8.—The "Times," in an editorial printed after the publication of the Kaiser's Order to his Army, says that any talk of peace is simply silly. The only way to secure peace, the journal continues, is to inflict a decisive military defeat on the enemy. "It is all important," adds the 'Times,' "that we should increase our superiority on the Western front, and not run any risk by the dissipation of our efforts."

GERMAN MONARCH OF THE LARDER

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 8.—The German newspapers testify to the growing scarcity of food in Germany. The "Frankfurter Zeitung" says that Germany is now practically self-dependent for supplies of milk and butter while cheese has entirely disappeared from the bill of fare. The "Cologne Gazette" remarks that further restrictions in the issue of rations of potatoes is necessary, and the allowance should be reduced to three pounds per week.

The Municipality of Essen has protested against any such action being taken. At a meeting of the Berlin Municipality, the policy of Herr Batocti, the Food Dictator was denounced by his critics, including Herr Werouth, the Burgomaster. The latter dwelt on the scarcity of milk and potatoes. The Council has resolved to urge the Government to secure the equitable distribution of food, and to ask that less favouritism be shown in the country districts. The Bavarian Ministry has ordered the hotel-keepers to cease providing food to foreigners.

The New York "Times" declares that the reason for the issue of the German Peace Note is the apprehension of starvation as a result of the British blockade.

IVERNIA IS TORPEDOED

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 4.—The transport Ivernia, 14,278 tons, was torpedoed in bad weather in the Mediterranean on Monday. Four military officers and 146 men are missing. The ship's casualties are not yet known, but it is hoped that only the officers are missing. These are the ship's surgeon and the Chief Engineer according to what is known at present.

The Ivernia was a British steamer of 14,278 tons, built in 1900 and registered at Liverpool. The vessel was owned by C. S. Swan & Hunter Ltd. of Newcastle.

ENTENTE HOLD IN ROME MEETING OF IMPORT

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 6.—Mr. Lloyd-George and Lord Milner, accompanied by official advisers, have arrived in Rome. It is officially stated here that they have gone to participate with the French and Italian Governments in an exchange of views on the general situation.

The news of Mr. Lloyd-George's arrival in Rome comes as a big surprise. The French party at the conference includes M. Briand, Premier; General Lyautey, Minister of War, and M. Albert Thomas, Minister for Munitions. Russia is also represented.

The fact that Rome has been selected for what is probably the biggest conference of the entire war has aroused great enthusiasm in the Italian capital, where Mr. Lloyd George is already popular.

This conference is regarded here as the most tangible proof to the whole world of the absolute accord of the Allies.

Paris, Jan. 6.—As a demonstration of the complete accord existing between the Entente Powers, the conference of the representatives of the Allies at Rome is regarded as the most significant conference of the war. It is considered conclusive evidence that the German effort to sow dissension among the Allies have failed, and that the unity of the Entente has never been so firm as now.

The official statement of the Italian Government on the conference says that the meeting is of such importance as to shape the trend of the world's history. The war is to be continued until the Allies win a final and decisive victory it is stated.—"Asahi."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Rome, Jan. 8.—The members of the Conference of the allies have again put on record their Governments' complete agreement on various questions discussed. It has been decided to carry out still closer co-ordination of efforts.

ISSUE OF NEW LOAN BY BRITISH GOVERNMENT

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 6.—The British Government will issue a new war loan next Thursday, is the official statement made here today.

The new loan will be the "biggest loan in history," it is believed, and its issue has dwarfed all other financial questions. The secret conditions of the loan are still carefully guarded, but the confidence of the market is shown by the fact that the gilt-edged securities have been steadily rising for a week.

It is generally believed that the new loan will yield 5 per cent per annum.

The "Times" forecasts that the loan will be for an unlimited amount, and expects that with the conversions and the new money together it will represent the unprecedented amount of £2,000,000,000.

In expectation of a rush the Bank of England has engaged outside premises. It is estimated that the prospectuses and similar publications in connection with the loan will require 300 tons of paper and will cost about £15,000.

MYSTERIOUS TRAGEDY AT PETROGRAD

Petrograd, Jan. 2.—The body of M. Rasptin, a famous monk, has been recovered from a frozen cave (near the Petrovski bridge) on the Neva river. Meanwhile the police had found blood-stained spots in the garden of the Yuspoff Palace, which however, the secretaries of Prince Yuspoff, attributed to their slaughter of mad dogs. The police have cleared the garden of the bodies of the dead dogs, and removed the blood-stained snow.—"Asahi."

It has now become clear that the victims of the tragedy in the Yuspoff Palace include a monk, M. Gregorie Rasptin. He was monk attendant on the Tsar, whose confidence he greatly enjoyed, and his advice was not infrequently taken by His Majesty. He was the son of a monk of the Church of the Holy Innocents at Irkutsk, and was quite uneducated. But ever since he became a monk in the Imperial Court, he utilized the superstitions for which the Tsar's Court is noted, and gradually grew in influence. The Tsarevitch who was very delicate in health was given up by all the physicians and the sound health which his Highness now enjoys is said to have been miraculously brought about by Rasptin, and this made the position of this queer monk remarkably high at court. An attempt on his life was then made by those jealous of his ever-growing influence and the weapon the would-be assassin used on that occasion is now in the personal possession of the Tzarina, who patronized Rasptin more than her husband.

That this monk was very anti-German is well-known. An incident which made him more than ever anti-German took place in May, 1908, when the Kaiser visited the Tsar. Rasptin was beside the Tsar on that occasion, but an insult was offered him by German officers, and he whispered in the presence of the Kaiser "This insult shall be avenged some day."

Since the outbreak of war, he has left no stone unturned to eradicate the German influence in Russia and was always watched by German spies. The murder of Rasptin, therefore, may be accounted for by those well-informed in these circumstances.

MR. LODGE COMPLETES SPEECH IN SENATE

Washington, Jan. 4.—In completing his argument in the Senate against Mr. G. M. Hitchcock's resolution endorsing the Peace Note of the President, Senator Henry C. Lodge, Republican nominee from Massachusetts, declared that it would be taking a leap in the dark to precipitate Congress into the midst of incomplete negotiations of which they knew nothing.

"It is apparent to everybody," said Mr. Lodge. "that when we abandon our traditional policy of separation from European politics. we are taking a great step which should not be taken without the most thorough knowledge of what is intended. and the distance we are invited to go."

Mr. Lodge argued that approval of the Note carried with it the approval of the principle of international co-operation.

Senator James H. Lewis, Democratic nominee for Illinois. denied that endorsement of the President's action endorsed the note in its entirety. Endorsement, he alleged, was merely an expression in favour of peace.

New York. Jan. 4.—The correspondent of the Associated Press at Washington asserts that if the reply of the Entente to Mr. Wilson's Peace Note fails to meet the proposal for an early avowal of the terms demanded by each belligerent, the President will not let negotiations drop, but will make at least one more move.

PROPHESIES YEAR OF VICTORY

KOKUSAI-HAVAS

Paris, Jan. 6.—General Nivelle, the new commander of the French armies of the north and the northeast, addressed the following New Year order to his troops:

"Soldiers of the Republic! As another year of the war draws to an end, you may survey with pride the work accomplished. At Verdun you broke down the most powerful assault that Germany has ever launched against any of her adversaries. On the Somme, rivalling in courage our British allies, you have, in the course of a long series of attacks, given proof of tactical superiority over the enemy, which will be all the more marked as time goes on.

"Never has our army been more fit, more valiant, or in possession of more powerful means of warfare.

"It is under these brilliant auspices that the year 1917 open. You will make of it a year of victory. Absolutely confident of this, I address to all my officers and soldiers my affectionate New Year's greetings."

GERMAN KULTUR AND GERMAN POLICE RULE

(By "The Times" Correspondent Formerly in Berlin.)

There is no reason to suppose that the recent debates in the Reichstag on the police tyranny, the Press censorship, the suppression of public opinion, and cognate subjects will lead to any result other than the familiar expressions of mild indignation—such as that which came from the National Liberal and Pan-German leader, Dr. Paasche—and perhaps a little innocent legislation. But the reports which have now reached us of the detailed charges against the Government constitute, even as passed by the German censorship for publication, a remarkable revelation. It should be remembered in reading them that the whole subject had been discussed in the secrecy of the Reichstag Committee, and that what is now disclosed is in the main only what the Government has been unable to hush up or to hide.

In his introductory speech on "preventive arrests" the Socialist deputy Herr Dittmann said:—

"Last May I remarked that the system of preventive arrest was producing a real reign of terror, and since then things have got steadily worse. The law as it was before 1848 and the Socialist Law, of scandalous memory, are celebrating their resurrection. The system of denunciation and of agents-provocateurs is in full bloom, and it is all being done under the mask of patriotism and the saving of the country. Anybody who for personal or other reasons is regarded by the professional agents-provocateurs as unsatisfactory or inconvenient is put under suspicion of espionage, or treason, or other crime. And such vague denunciations are then sufficient to deprive the victim of his freedom, without any possibility of defence being given him. In many cases such arrest has been maintained by the year without any lawful foundation for it. Treachery and low cunning are now enjoying real orgies. A criminal is duly convicted and knows his fate. The man under preventive arrest is overburdened by the uncertainty of despair, and is simply buried alive. The members of the Government do not seem to have a spark of understanding for this situation, the mental and material effects of which are equally terrible."

"Dr. Helfferich said in the Budget Committee in the case of Dr. Franz Mehring that it is better that he should be at large and do something for which he would have to be punished. According to this reasoning, the best thing would be to look up everybody and keep them from breaking the law. The ideal of Dr. Helfferich seems to be the German National Prison of which Heine spoke. The case of Mehring is classical proof of the fact that we are no longer far removed from the Helfferich 'deal.'"

Herr Dittmann went on to say that Herr Mehring's only offence was that in a letter seized by the police he wrote to a Reichstag deputy named Herzfeld in favour of a peace demonstration in Berlin, and offered to write a fly-sheet inviting attendance at such a meeting. Mehring, who is over 70 years of age, was then locked up. Herr Dittmann continued:—

"How much longer will it be before thoughts become criminal in Germany? Mehring is one of the most brilliant historians and writers, and one of the first representatives of German intellectual life—known as such far beyond the German frontiers. When it is known abroad that such a man has been put under a sort of preventive arrest merely in order to cut him off from the public for political reasons one really cannot be astonished at the low reputation enjoyed by the German Government both at home and abroad. How evil must be the state of a Government which has to lock up the first minds of the country in order to choke their opposition!"

Herr Dittmann's second case was that of Frau Rosa Luxemburg. He said that she was put under arrest many months ago, without charge being made against her, and merely out of fear of her intellectual influence upon the working class. All the Socialist women of Germany were deeply indignant, and he invited the Government to consider that such things must make it the positive duty of Socialists in France, England, Italy, and Russia "to fight against a Government which imprisons without any reason the best-known champions of the International proletariat." The treatment of both Mehring and Frau Luxemburg had been terrible. The former, old and ill, had had the greatest difficulty in getting admission to a prison infirmary. Frau Luxemburg a month ago was taken from her prison bed in the middle of the night, removed to the police headquarters, and put in a cell which was reserved for prostitutes. She had not been allowed a doctor, and had been given food which she could not eat. Just before the Reichstag debate she had been taken away from Berlin to Wronke, in the Province of Posen.

The third case was that of the well-known Socialist Frau Kate Duncker. Her husband was in the field, she had three children, and her Socialist activities among the young were concerned with scientific and economic questions.

The fourth case was that of a married working woman in Berlin named Spahn who had been under arrest for three months without having committed any offence, and was prevented from keeping her two children while her husband was in the field.

Herr Dittmann then gave a terrible account, some of it unfit for reproduction, of the treatment in prison of two girls of 18 whose offence was that on June 27th they had distributed invitations to working women to attend a meeting of protest against the procedure in the case of Herr Liebknecht. He observed that they owed it entirely to themselves and to their Socialist training if they had not been ruined physically and morally in their "royal Prussian prison." When they were at last released they were informed that they would be imprisoned for the rest of the war if they attended any public meeting. Herr Dittmann proceeded:—

"Here we have police brutality in all its purity. This is how a working-class child who is trying to make her way up to knowledge and Kultur is treated in the country of promised 'new orientation,' in which (according to the Imperial Chancellor) 'the road is to be opened for all who are efficient.' These are the methods by which the spirit of independence is systematically to be killed. That is the reason for the arrests of members of the Socialist party who stand on the side of determined opposition. You imagine that by isolating the leading elements of the opposition you can crush the head of the snake.

Herr Dittmann's next case was that of Dr. Meyer, one of the editors of the "Vorwarts," who was arrestel many months ago. He is suffering from tuberculosis, but is not allowed to go to a sanatorium. Another Socialist journalist named Regge, father of six children, has been under arrest since August, his only offence being that he has agitated against the Socialist majority. Herr Dittmann then dealt at length with the Socialist journalist named Kluhs, who has been in prison for eight months, also for his activity on behalf of the Socialist minority against the majority, and was prevented from communicating with his dying wife or attending her funeral.

Herr Dittmann gave the details of three cases at Dusseldorf and one at Brunswick, and then explained how the military authorities in many parts of Germany are deliberately offering Socialists the choice between silence and military service. A well-known trade union official at Elberfeld, named Sauerbrey, who had been declared totally unfit for military service because he had lost several fingers on his left hand, was arrested and charged with treason. He was acquitted, but instead of obtaining his freedom he was immediately called up and is now in training for the front. Herr Dittmann said that this case had caused intense bitterness, and added:—

"The Military Command at Münster is surprised that the feeling in the whole Wupper Valley is becoming more and more discontented, and the military are now hatching new measures of violence in order to be able to master this discontent. One would think that such things came from the mad house. In reality they represent conditions under martial law, and this case is only one of very many."

Herr Dittmann gave several instances of men declared unfit for service who had been called up for political reasons, and he ended his speech as follows:—

"In regard to all this persecution of peaceful citizens there is a regular apparatus of agents-provocateurs, provided by officials of all kinds, and the apparatus is growing every day. If these persecutions were stopped a great number of these agents and officials could be released for military service. In most cases they are mere shirkers, and that is why they cling to their posts and seek every day to prove themselves indispensable by discovering all sorts of crimes. Because they do not want to go to the trenches other people must go to prison. Put an end to the state of martial law, and help us to root up a state of things which disgraces the German name."

The Alsatian deputy Herr Hans said that Alsace Lorraine is suffering more than any other part of the country, and that more than 1,000 persons have been arrested without any charge being brought against them. Herr Seyda, for the Poles, said that the Polish population of Germany suffers especially from the system of preventive arrest.

In his contemptuous reply, which showed that the Government was confident that it had nothing to fear from the majority in the Reichstag, Herr Helfferich said:—

"The institution of the dictator comes from ancient Rome, from the classical Republic of antiquity. (Laughter.) When the State was fighting for its existence it was found necessary to place supreme power in the hands of a single man, and to give his Roman dictator authority which was much greater than the authority belonging to preventive arrest and martial law. The whole development proceeds by way of compromise between the needs of the State and the needs of protection to the particular level of civilization reached by the particular State. (Socialist cries of "Very true.") We are not at the lowest level. When one considers the state of things in Germany in peace time we can be proud. (Socialist interruptions.) I am proud of Germany. I think that our constitutional system before the outbreak of war and our level of "Kultur" were such that every German could be proud of ("No, no.") I hope that we shall soon be able to revert to those conditions."

Herr Helfferich went on to argue that repression in Germany is really much milder than in France, England, or Italy; and for the debate on the censorship, which followed the debate on preventive arrest, he came armed with an account of the Defence of the Realm Acts. When he enlarged upon the powers of the British Government he was interrupted by cries of "It is a question not of theory but of practice," and the Socialist leader Herr Stadthagen made a scathing reply. Herr Stadthagen said:—

"Even if everything in England is as Herr Helfferich described it, the state of things is much better there than in Germany. Herr Helfferich stated that cases in which arrest and search of dwellings may take place, but those are cases in which similar action can be taken in Germany in time of peace under the ordinary criminal law. The Englishman has quite other rights. He has the right to his personality, and, above all, the officials in England, unlike Germany, are personally responsible. When we make a law, that is repealed by the Administration. That is the whole point, but Herr Helfferich does not see it, and he does not see that we live in a Police State and under a police system. Did it ever occur to anybody in England to dispute the right of immunity of members of Parliament? Did it ever occur to anybody in England to go to members of the Opposition in Parliament and demand that they should resign their seats on pain of arrest? Or has anybody in England been threatened with arrest if he does not withdraw a declaration against the committee of his party? Two newspapers have been suppressed in England because they opposed munitions work. I regret this check upon free criticism in England, but what would have happened in Germany? In Germany there would undoubtedly have been a prosecution for high treason. In England, moreover, the newspapers are allowed to reappear, and that without giving any guarantees. In Germany we are required to give guarantees that the papers shall be conducted by a person approved of by the political police. Herr Helfferich employs inappropriate comparisons. I will give him one which applies. The political police in Germany is precisely what the State Inquisition was in Venice."

An interesting point in the censorship debate was the disclosure of the fact that the local censors do what they please, and that especially in Alsace-Lorraine even the proceedings in the Reichstag are not allowed to be published. Herr Seyda protested against the peculiar persecution of the Poles. He remarked that at Gnesen no Polish paper has been allowed to appear for the past two years.

But as significant as anything was Herr Stadthagen's account of the recruiting for the political police. He said that the police freely offer both money and exemption from military service to boys who are about to become liable for service. He gave a typical case of a boy of 17. The police called at his home and inquired whether he belonged to any Socialist organization and whether he had been medically examined for the Army. A police official then waylaid the boy as he was leaving work and promised him that, if he would give information of what went on in his Socialist association, he could earn from £4 to £4 10s. a month and be exempt from military service.

GREAT BRITAIN'S ARMY

New York, Dec. 11.—Frederick R. Coudert told the members of the National Security League at their meeting at the Hotel Astor that by next spring the British munition factories would be producing four times as much as at present.

This was one of the things he had learned during a visit to the British and the French front in September and October.

"You do not realize the time it takes to produce munitions in adequate quantities," he said. "I happen to know the experience of some of our manufacturers who thought they would have reached maximum in ten months when it really took twenty-four.

It takes a year to make the big guns.

"France was saved at the Marne by the 75's, but the 75 is now a defensive weapon only. For offensive the larger guns are essential, but the general result of the controversy which has been raging for some time over the general merits of very large and medium-size guns has seemed to be the conclusion that guns of medium calibre are better for most purposes and that great guns are valuable only in exceptional circumstances.

After the first of the year Great Britain will have, probably, the most numbered, best organized and best equipped army in Europe. Its late development removes it from the burden of old models of equipment and gives it an opportunity to begin with the newest models of aeroplanes and artillery. England had to learn that 150,000 men, no matter how good, were useless, and millions were needed.

"Now they have the millions. Sir Douglas Haig told me that he had 1,500,000 men under his command, and there must be 3,000,000 or 4,000,000 at home.

"The organization of the armies behind the line is amazing. Back from the firing line, out of danger, the great system of roads for the enormous traffic required by the supplying of the army is kept up by the work of prisoners, who, after a few days, become happy and cheerful, with such a discipline that they are kept under an almost nominal surveillance and work well under the direction of their own non-commissioned officers."

Mention of the gallantry of French and Canadian troops was heartily cheered, particularly of the Canadians, of whom Mr. Coudert said:

"I felt that after all it was a consolation to know that North America produces such a fine race of men."

THE STUDY OF CHINA ADVOCATED

The "Jiji" insists upon the necessity of having a full knowledge of financial conditions in China in order to bring China and Japan closer in friendship as well as in commercial relations. While Japan is anxious for friendly relations with China, the Chinese Government and public also hope for a rapprochment, and the "Jiji" declares that this desire on both sides to become friendly is a good indication, and the Japanese capitalists and manufacturers should endeavour to invest capital in China and open further markets in China at this good opportunity.

The European nations are at present unable to direct their attention towards China, but the "Jiji" says that as soon as peace is declared they will certainly open commercial activity in China, and the United States which formerly did not show much interest in the trade with China, has also begun to show a keen interest since the beginning of the European war. The United States will, the "Jiji" believes, direct her commercial activity towards the Far East and South America, when the war in Europe comes to an end, and it is necessary for Japan to be prepared for the commercial rivalry in China after the war and she should at this moment collect informations and study the situation in China.

To enable the study of China to be made, it is necessary to establish a new organization, as although there have existed many such organizations in the past, their activities had been limited, and they were unable to obtain proper financial information regarding China. The "Dobunkai" has been sending promising young students to China and making them investigate into the true financial conditions, and their reports proved valuable, but at the same time, on account of the lack of proper funds, they are unable to extend their activity as much as they desire. There are also reports from the Japanese Consuls stationed at China, but the Consulates have no facilities for special investigation.

The "Jiji" proposes that bankers and traders who are interested in the improvement of the trade with China, should contribute a certain sum of money each to the establishment of an organization, when sufficient investigation of the financial conditions could be easily made.

There are many who are called experts on the Chinese affairs, and while their insight into the true condition of China and their opinions are to be respected, there is a tendency for their opinions to be founded upon material obtained themselves and, consequently, in many cases they are only true with regard to the special localities they have studied and to the special cases they have investigated, and their information does not cover the entire country. Ten of such experts have ten different opinions, and the public is at a loss which to believe.

The "Jiji" regrets that most of the people who studied China in the past neglected financial and commercial subjects, and directed their attention to political affairs. While we should be well informed about politics in China and political undercurrents, at this moment when it is evident that all the nations of Europe and America will soon direct their commercial activity to China, the establishment of an organization to investigate the financial conditions and possibilities of China is absolutely necessary. China, being so large a country, only an organization with sufficient funds will be able to make a thorough study of the country, and the paper firmly hopes that the merchants and bankers will be interested in the establishment of such an organization.

THE CONFERENCE AT ROME

The conference of the representatives of the Allied powers at Rome, is the most significant incident since the beginning of the year, says the "Tokyo Asahi." In Vienna a conference of Germany and her Allies is also to take place, and although the object of the two conferences will be entirely different, the two conferences will probably mark the history of this year.

It is clear that the Conference at Rome is opened to discuss the future plan of campaign. With the defeat of Rumania, the Allied powers have to consider and adopt one uniform aggressive plan for the future, and while some rumours say that the conference was held in Rome as Italy is anxious to make independent peace with Germany, the fact is entirely the contrary, and Italy is more than ever bent upon her determination to stick to the Allies until the very end of the war.

The Conference at Rome is to decide the future plan of the Allies, and the geographical position of Rome is suitable for such discussion, as at present the defeat of Rumania is the most important point to be considered in the future campaign.

The "Asahi" does not believe that Germany is on the point of starvation nor the news that Germany will not be able to fight much longer, but the paper declares that the further fighting will be totally disadvantageous to Germany and her allies. The Kaiser is wise enough to see it, and it was for this reason he proposed peace. The paper believes that the Kaiser will try to conclude peace in every way possible.

The "Asahi" does not believe that the German forces will take as aggressive steps as they did in the past. Probably they might attack Salonika, but they will never attack the Italian front. The Kaiser has been urging his soldiers to fight with determination, but it is only to keep up the courage of the German soldiers, and his true wish is the conclusion of peace.

The paper is pleased that the Allies refused to consider the German proposal of peace, and hopes that at the Conference at Rome, the Allies will decide to send more troops to Salonika, and drive out the enemy on the Italian front. The paper says that the Allies should utilize this good opportunity and prepare for an aggressive attack on the German and Austrian forces from every direction. The hope of the final victory at an early date will be born at the Conference at Rome.

THE TERAUCHI CABINET AND CHINA

In the past three months, the Terauchi Cabinet has done nothing except follow the rules set by the Okuma Cabinet, and the "Jiji" is surprised to see the Cabinet confront the present session of the Diet without having formed any decided policy. In the question of becoming friendly with China, the present Cabinet anticipated successful results, but in its negotiations with China, the Government has failed.

It is the opinion of the "Jiji" that relations with China can not be improved by mere expression of good will or so called diplomatic negotiations. It is only possible to gain the good will of the Chinese public and to become friendly with the Chinese Government, when the Japanese Government changes its fundamental attitude towards China and the Chinese. In the past what the Japanese Government declared and what they actually did were opposite, and it made the Chinese think that Japan had ambitions on Chinese territory.

Besides the officials of the Department of Foreign Affairs, the military officers maintain a certain influence and power in forming the policy towards China. In governing the leased land in Manchuria, there are army officers at the head of the local administration, and the establishment of the imposing official building has given the Chinese unpleasant qualms. Also the Government is not properly ruling the lands owned by the South Manchuria Railway, and outlaws and thieves are left unmolested. Not only the Chinese but the Japanese in the district have suffered from the activities of these outlaws. Japanese troops are still stationed at Hankow but the "Jiji" declares that at present the presence of troops there is unnecessary, and only causes wild rumours. Even in Tsingtao, it is not necessary at present to station so large a number of soldiers, and even one half of the present force would be sufficient to hold the German possession.

What the Army of Japan does in China causes the Chinese to doubt the intention of Japan towards China, and while, on one hand, the Government preaches friendly relations with China, on the other, the military officers in China are giving an entirely different impression. Not only the Chinese, but the foreigners believe that Japan is planning to annex China.

The cause of such misunderstanding and bad impression, is, the "Jiji" says, because of the independent action taken by the Foreign Office and the War Office. While a decided policy is adopted by the Cabinet, the War Office does whatever it pleases in China, and the Foreign Office plans another thing. This lack of principle and uniformity of policy is the cause of the all difficulties in China.

The "Jiji" says that if the present Cabinet desires true friendship with China, the first step to be taken will be the adoption of one decided policy which should be followed by all Departments. The "Jiji" says that as Count Terauchi is a Field-Marshal and has influence among army officers, he can make the War Office obey him in case he really desires friendship with China.

ECHOES OF SHAM PEACE PROPOSAL

London, Dec. 13.—The German peace proposal is rejected by the "Times," which says:

"Germany's proposal bears no relation whatever to the objects for which we are fighting. She has been trying by all the means at her disposal to induce us to make the suggestion of mediation. The attempt has lamentably and conspicuously failed, and as she does not judge that any neutral power could proffer mediation with much advantage, she falls back on the indirect offer to the belligerents as a pis aller. It is above all things a symptom of her conscious weakness.

The Allies must absolutely reject any idea of mediation in any shape and from any quarter as long as the basis proposed is the triumph of might and not right. They must refuse with equal firmness even to talk about an armistice until the lands the enemy has overrun are restored and compensation made. They must renew the enunciation of their peace terms, laid down once for all in Mr. Asquith's Guildhall speech, and must redouble their efforts to force these terms upon Germany and her accomplices."

Von Bethmann-Hollweg's cries of "Kamarade" will not weaken English determination to continue the struggle, says the "Globe." Addressing the chancellor, the newspaper continues: "We did not seek this bloody business, but, being in it, we mean to make a clean job of it. There is no statesman in the British Empire who dares to talk to us on such a peace as that of which you dream. We must slay or be slain. Our duty is clear."

Germany's peace proposal caused the greatest sensation in Scandinavia according to a Copenhagen despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company.

The Dagens Nyheder of Copenhagen says that it learns in authoritative Swedish circles that it is believed there that the German offer will not meet with immediate rejection by the Allies.

The Copenhagen Politiken believes that in view of what has happened during the last few days in Russia, France and England it is unlikely that the Allies will agree to start peace negotiations. This paper says:

"Premier Trepoff's declaration that Constantinople is the aim of Russia and the fact that the governments of England and France have been changed into special war governments do not give the impression that a wish for peace exists in those countries. It will not be surprising, therefore, if the German offer is refused, although it will be difficult for the Allies to give an absolute refusal."

London, Dec. 13.—Although little confidence is shown in London that any result will come from the peace proposal of the Central Powers, and the opinion prevails quite generally that the time is not opportune even to discuss terms, there is an undercurrent of feeling that something would be gained by making the world acquainted, definitely, with the objects of the belligerents. The attitude of the British Government toward the offer will be made known in the House of Commons tomorrow, provided sufficient time shall have elapsed to permit consultation with Great Britain's allies, and the statement is awaited with the greatest interest.

If the press which supports the administration correctly interprets official opinion, little time will be taken up with consideration of the movement of Germany and her allies, although the moderate opinion of the country does not favor too hasty a rejection of the overtures. It is believed the German people, once acquainted with the objects of the Entente, might be more inclined toward peace, and that for that reason, if for no other, the terms of the Entente Allies should be made known officially to the Central Powers.

The possibility that President Wilson will make some suggestion when forwarding the offer is also much discussed. It is intimated that he might at least express willingness to convey the terms of the Entente to the Central Powers.

The report is current here that Emperor William is about to announce the granting of a parliamentary form of government to Germany.

San Francisco, Dec. 13.—Dr. David Starr Jordan, member of the American Neutral Peace Conference, and chancellor of Leland Stanford, Jr. University, was quoted last night as follows on the German proposal for peace:

"Germany's proposals, while only an initial step in the great conference yet to be held, are, in my opinion, thoroughly sincere and frank. They are made at a time when the Central Powers have reached the height of success and necessity must be reckoned with by the Allied Powers because they are fair in the matter of territorial restorations.

"Our part in the great peace meeting will be a mighty task. This country, serene in its position of peace and intrenched with its financial power, should prove a big factor in cementing a world peace. However, President Wilson must be cautious before he makes advances. He must move slowly in all his dealings. It would be a terrible calamity if, owing to a misstep, Germany's peace proposal should not materialize.

"The world awaits with anxious moments the manner in which Germany's proposals are received by the Entente Powers."

Paris, Dec. 13.—The offer of peace of Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg is received with a chorus of derision in the French press. The newspapers are unanimous that it is an admission that the situation is getting critical in Germany and that the chancellor wishes a way out before it is too late. His move is considered to have the additional advantage that, in the event of its failing, it will enable him to throw the blame for the continuation of the war on the Allies, which he hopes will have a moral effect on Germany and the neutral nations.

"A slumsy trap" is the caption under which the morning papers print the chancellor's speech.

"The time for feints is over," says the "Petit Journal." "We are no longer in the presence of the trial efforts of those persistent appeals to interviewers and newspaper articles. Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg summoned the Reichstag, not to hear his speech, but to be confronted with a fact. We do not know if at Berlin there are people so naive as to imagine that the Allies are likely to swallow this clumsy bait, even on the morrow of the events in Rumania. In any case Field Marshal von Hindenburg's statement shows that the military cherish no such illusion.

"What is still more certain is that the treacherous German move aims at something else than genuine peace. It seeks an internal and external effect. In Germany it is intended to convince the people that the government is not responsible for the continuation of the struggle. Abroad, it desires to persuade neutrals that the Allies are pursuing a policy of ambition. That is the explanation of the pretended moderation in the tone of the speech. The speech merely emphasized essential weakness which temporary successes can not hide."

The "Petit Journal" continues: "It is because Germany knows she can not win that she desires to end the war. Her plan, however, is doomed. It will fail before the immovable resolution of the Allies."

The "Matin" characterizes the peace proposals "as mere talk," saying: "They contain no territorial, political or other conditions which could serve as a basis of discussion. Germany simply says, for the hundredth time, that she never desired war and wishes only to protect her rights and that if her enemies will not listen she will throw the blame of further bloodshed on them.

"The device is too obvious. It could not deceive any but the most ignorant.

"Another motive is the necessity of making Germany accept the sufferings and sacrifices of another winter campaign. If only their civilian population had to endure this, not much harm would be done, but the army is beginning to feel the strain. During the last few weeks, rations have been reduced and in three months' time they will be very poor indeed. Germany is compelled to talk peace but she does it as vaguely as possible in the hope of spreading dissension among her enemies and keeping her coalition together."

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES

It is reported that the Department of Agriculture and Commerce will soon adopt a measure to standardize the measurements and weights used in Japan. The Department has been of the opinion that the present systems of measures and weights could be improved, and has been investigating their defects.

The new measure will be adopted to make foreign trade easier and more convenient, to make measuring and weighing easier and accurate, and to guarantee the net weight and measurement of merchandize.

As the first step to regulate the system and insure accuracy, the Department will increase the number of inspectors to enforce the law and make further investigations. The former regulations will be altered in many cases to improve the system, and especially the Department will strongly enforce a law standardizing the weight or measure of standard merchandise.

A stricter regulation will be also enacted for the inspection of weighing and measuring apparatus, and the superintending of their manufacturers.

CHAMPION SNAKE CATCHER

According to the old calendar of Japan, 1917 is the year of the "mi" (snake). While snakes are usually hated by people, it is strange to learn that over ten thousand snakes are sold in Tokyo every year. Some are skinned, and others are sold as specimens, but many are also sold to superstitious people who believe that snakes are a good medicine for consumptives.

In Tokyo, Mr. Kinzaburo Nakamura of Naka-okachi-machi, Shitaya, is known as the champion snake catcher, and in his store over five thousand live snakes are always displayed for inspection and sale. According to him, he sells over ten thousand snakes a year.

Mr. Nakamura catches all the reptiles, himself, and every year in the early spring he starts on his snake catching trip which lasts until the end of the summer. He states that the majority of his snakes are sold to people who use snakes as medicine, but many are every year exported to foreign lands. In his store there is every sort of snake inhabiting Japan.

The snakes usually eat during June, July, August and September enough food to last them all winter, and in April they come out from their holes. They are in the best physical condition in November and December. It is difficult to catch snakes in winter unless one knows well their habits. The champion snake catcher says that he could catch fifty to sixty snakes in one hole during the winter, the ability of a snake catcher lying in locating the wintering holes.

Mr. Nakamura has over twenty five years of snake catching experience, and he is confident that any snake smaller than twelve feet in length could easily be caught by him without assistance. One of the narrow escapes he had took place some years ago in the Shichibu mountains. He located a hole and tying a chicken at the end of a stout cord, he placed the bait at the entrance of the hole, and waited. He waited four days and nights but the snake inside the hold refused to be lured out, and finally he fell asleep at his post. Suddenly he felt a sharp pain in his leg, and found that a huge snake more than eight feet long had caught his leg in its mouth, and was dragging him towards the mouth of its hole. He was drawn about ten yards before he could finally free himself, but the snake had disappeared into its hole before he could catch it. The wound in his leg was a bad one.

His usual method of catching a big snake is to jump at its head, and tie a stout rope around its neck. But if his first attempt fails it is difficult to capture it. Many a time, he has had a long struggle with huge creatures, and once he struggled with a six yard snake in the Asama mountains for two hours, before capturing it. He sold the snake for fifteen yen, which he says was too little for his two hours' work.

He once met a band of hold-up men in the Hakone mountains as he was searching for snakes. He quickly took several large snakes from his bag, and declared that that was all he had on him at that moment. The robbers all quickly disappeared. This year being the year of "mi," he hopes for a most prosperous business.

HEAVY SNOWSTORMS IN MOST DISTRICTS

According to a dispatch from Kanazawa, in Ishikawa prefecture, the heavy snowfall which visited the district on Sunday night has again stopped traffic on the Hokuroku line. In consequence of the storm a train which left Toyama station was held up between Awazu and Komatsu on Monday. Goods train No. 201 was despatched to the rescue. From Kanazawa also a rescue train, with some railway officials on board, went to the scene and the snow-bound train was taken to Awazu. On Monday morning a down-train after leaving Kanazawa at 7.49 a.m., reached Kureha station but could not continue its journey further owing to the bad weather until the arrival of help, when it eventually reached Toyama. The first train to leave Nanao on Monday when between Morimoto and Kanazawa had to put back to Morimoto. Owing to a goods train being snow-bound, traffic was delayed on the Hokuroku line on Monday from one to three hours.

A dispatch from Takata in Niigata prefecture says that the railway traffic on the Shinyetsu line has been suspended near Katamachi and Hachisaki by snow drifts 10 feet deep. At Ichifuri on the Hokuroku line no traffic is possible.

In the district near the town of Yao, Nehigori, in Toyama prefecture incessant snow since January 3, is reported, and between the village of Nimpu and Ohase it is lying about 11 feet deep, all communication being dislocated. In the town of Fukuoka, Nishitonami-gori, Toyama prefecture an old woman aged 60 was crushed to death by the snow-packed roof of her house collapsing. In the village of Kume, Himigori, of the same prefecture the death is reported of a girl aged 7 by the fall of a house owing to heavy snow.

Since Monday morning in the district near Nagaoka, in Niigata prefecture, there has been an unprecedented fall of snow and trains are detained in many places.

In Hokkaido a snow-storm has been raging since Sunday night, and has gathered more strength since Monday morning, causing great damage to houses in the city of Muroran. In the harbour, fishing boats were overturned and one fisherman was drowned. Telephonic and telegraphic communications have been interrupted in many cases in the city and the inter-city telephone service is discontinued except with Hakodate.

Trains are running 40 minutes behind schedule. At Hakodate at 11.40 on Sunday night, a thunderstorm occurred which is a rare occurrence in winter. The Saikai Maru (20 tons displacement) which was at anchor in the harbour, ran aground in the hurricane. A train near Yakumo station was derailed and all the traffic has been suspended on the government railways in that district.

NEW SCIENCE LABORATORY

As regards the raising of the fund for establishing the new scentific laboratory promoted by Mr. Rokuro Hara who has already contributed 300,000 yen for that purpose, it is learned that Barons Mitsui, Iwasaki, and Okura have decided to contribute 500,000 yen each to the fund. Inasmuch as the rules pertaining to the disposal of the fund will shortly be submitted to the committee after their compilation, it may be expected that the fund will be opened for public contributions very soon.

SERIOUS BLAZE AT MUKDEN

The Japanese Red Cross Hospital at Mukden was destroyed by a fire which broke out on the premises of the building on the morning of the 5th instant. According to a Mukden dispatch the fire originated in the engine room attached to the hospital in the small hours of the morning. The flames at once spread and consumed the adjacent wardrooms which were gutted in a small space of time. Thanks to the desperate efforts of the medical staff and nurses, the patients were all removed to a place of safety, no casualties occurring. As the water in the river was frozen owing to the intense cold which registered 20 degrees below freezing point, the flames could not be brought under control until about four o'clock in the morning, when all the buildings were reduced to ashes save an old building which escaped through the efforts of the Japanese and Chinese troops and firemen, who assisted in extinguishing the flames. The loss of medical instruments, which were destroyed, is believed to reach an immense sum.

SEVEN FROZEN TO DEATH IN NIKKO MOUNTAINS

A report reached Tokyo on Monday that seven lumbermen have perished in the Nikko mountains from cold and exposure. On December fourth, seven lumbermen employed at the lumber factory at Kuriyama-mura, started for a neighbouring village to attend a funeral, but on their way confronted a blinding snow storm, and became lost in the mountains.

All seven men are used to the mountains and every byway of the vicinity and relying upon their knowledge, they did not retreat, pushing on in the storm. As they did not come back to the village a search party was sent out, and the frozen bodies of the seven men were found. It is reported that as the storm continued, the searching party had great difficulty to locate their bodies.

HOMELESS CHILDREN CLAIMED BY DEATH

"The Russian Government is doing wonders in the matter of relief, but, unfortunately, the military demand is ruthless and peremptory. It has the first call; and, in any event, there are certain things now most urgently needed which even the Russian Government cannot supply, and I have come to Japan to ask for this help and to ask in the name of the women and children who are sick and suffering unspeakable misery.

Mr. T.W. Whittemore, a young American, of much prominence in research work, who has sacrificed much in the cause of humanity in this war and who has for some time been at work in Russia, was a guest on Sunday at the American Embassy. Mr. Whittemore comes with the full endorsement of the American Ambassador in Petrograd and of the Russian authorities. He is a member of the well-known Committee of the Grand Duchess Tatiana. He is at the Imperial Hotel, and hopes to return to Russia in ten days with a sufficiency of supplies to last for a little while, and help to save some of those among whom he is working. The story he tells is another terrible revelation of the unspeakable horrors and misery entailed upon millions of people by the devastations of the war.

Mr. Whittemore tells of how, when the army of the Grand Duke retreated from the Prussian frontier, the peasants fled before the oncoming German army, taking what little they could and leaving their homes to penetrate further eastward. He describes how these millions of people, mostly women, children or old men were swept in waves over this long frontage and swarmed over the villages and the country sides, occupying every available shelter as they came, and then, as these were filled, the rest kept moving on and are still moving. Deprivation, neglect and disease, with decreasing medical supplies and possibilities of attention, have made the condition of these unfortunate people very terrible, indeed. The Russian central Government and the local Government and our Committee have done all possible in the face of the tremendous demands upon them in the military situation, but the dread scourge of typhus and the on-coming rigors of winter have added to the horrors these people have to face.

"We do not want money so much as medical supplies," said Mr. Whittemore to the Kokusai News Agency, "'Medical supplies of the simplest character and, of course, as much warm clothing as we can get. We believe that if these good people of Japan could realize how much they can do because, by reason of their geographical position, they can the more speedily send relief, we would get what we ask for without a day's delay. We want what cannot be supplied in Russia. I want to take back with me at once

100 pounds of Aspirine
25 pounds of Quinine
100 pounds of Permanganate of Potash
100 pounds of Vaseline
10 pounds of Pottasium Chlorate Tablets
200 pounds of Cotton Wool.

"I want yards of adhesive tape, and, I have been told, that here in Japan, they make a paper waistcoat, and, if we could get these, we would be willing to place orders and buy as many as could be supplied. Any warm clothing for the children would be acceptable.

"I would be very grateful for any assistance the Japanese or the foreign newspapers can give us in making known these urgent needs. It would take too long to tell of the heartrending scenes I have just come from witnessing. It must not be thought for a moment that this appeal comes as the result of any indifference or neglect on the part of anyone in Russia, official or civic. The strain there brought on by the war and first demand for military preparation, military supplies, and the care of the wounded and the men at the front is almost all absorbing. The charity and the sympathy of the Russian people is wonderful, but we cannot get the medical supplies and Japan is the nearest point. We will get them from America and orders are being placed there. The people of America will give, and give freely, but week of time in this terrible winter can be saved by a prompt action on the part of Japan, and from what country in the world could the response more gracefully come? And who could reap a larger credit in the eyes of the human and the civilized world than this country, which, but a decade ago was itself at war with these people among whom I am working and who are now coming to regard Japan as a great and generous neighbour, and an ally whose assistance would be twice given, if it is given quickly?"

"I will appreciate suggestions from any of those of your more influential and wealthy men who may be interested in this work of great charity and of great kindness; and I will be glad to give any further information or details to commercial bodies or individuals'"

"I am sure that, with a true realization of the situation, the response would come immediately, for it is only a small amount after all, a drop of relief, as it were, in this sea of suffering, but a drop of water and a touch of human sympathy that relieves and brings hope again to the suffering body and the despairing soul. It is the answer to the cry of little children."

MORE EARTHQUAKES IN FORMOSA

Another violent shock of earthquake visited Nanto prefecture, Formosa, at 2 o'clock last Sunday morning. The centre of the shock was Horisha district and neighbourhood, which was also the centre of the recent earthquakes. Much damage is expected to have been done in the district, but no details are yet to hand. Most of the houses and other buildings which had been partially destroyed in the recent shocks have probably been completely demolished, but no casualties are reported. The shock is supposed to be an after shock of the recent earthquakes. Comparatively feeble shocks were also felt in various districts throughout the island at the same time. At Taihoku, the capital of the island, comparatively severe shocks were felt seven times Sunday morning and afternoon. The origin of these repeated shocks at Taihoku is believed to be different from that in Nanto prefecture. The Nanto authorities have despatched a relief party to the afflicted districts.

NEWS AND NOTES

Two German prisoners of war at Marugame, Kagawa prefecture, have become instructors in the Prefectural School of Technology in Takamatsu, near Marugame. The school has recently secured the permission of the military authorities for the employment of these two German scholars, and the enemy professors now go to the school by train every morning escorted by two Japanese soldiers. They are Max Noiman and August Adra.

The Sumitomo family has realised such an enormous profit from its copper business, that Baron Sumitomo has determined to distribute 5,000,000 yen amongst the employés in recognition of their services. Of the amount 1,200,000 yen will be divided among the miners, coolies and workmen numbering 12,000 men, and 3,500,000 yen amongst 3,000 other employés. Shares in the Sumitomo Kabushiki Kaisha have been given to senior clerks instead of cash. One watchman is said to have received 500 yen as a special bonus.

The crew of the O.S.K. liner Canada Maru, arriving at Yokohama Wednesday from the States, say goods in Seattle and the neighbourhood remain congested. The price of commodities has been running higher, but the local people are not affected, as they earn much more than ever in view of the general business activity in consequence of the construction of warships in that district. The party of Japanese holiday-makers from Colorado, who arrived at Yokohama by the above str., report there are about 4,000 Japanese residing there.

About 1,700 students of the Kure elementary school in the city of Kure of Hiroshima prefecture have been sketching maps of the vicinity of the naval port at Kure as well as taking a census of the city under the direction of their principal. The boys have thus committed a breach of the regulations, though unconsciously, in sketching within the prohibited zone. The school authorities, who naively plead ignorance in reference to the rules in force, are now trying to arrive at a compromise with the Port authorities.

Railway collisions seem to have become the order of the day in Japan in view of their frequency. On the morning of Friday last a train which was scheduled to start for Shinjo station was shunting in the precincts of Yokota station in Akita prefecture to get in trim for starting and collided with another train which was standing in the station after having arrived half an hour late. In consequence, the engineers and stokers of both trains were more or less seriously injured, but happily there were no casualties among the passengers.

The establishment is announced of a wireless station at the Amarube Post Office, near Maidzuru. It is also reported that in view of the supply of war materials to Russia and the necessity of wireless communication from the vessels carrying such goods with Vladivostock and Japan, another wireless station will be established in the north-western corner of the Noto Peninsula. Expenses required therefore are to be defrayed from the money voted under the extra military Budget.

After continuous research for fifteen years, Mr. Mitsuo Osato, aged 32, has recently discovered an effective injection against diseases of leprous and tuberculous lineage as well as nervous disease, which he will make public shortly. It is said that in 1912 Mr. Osato and his father discovered by joint research an injection known under the name of "Osato fluid," several injections of which proved quite effective for phthisis patients and others. The new injection he will make public is said to be the perfection of this "Osato fluid."

Anxiety is felt about the fate of six hundred employes of lumber mills situated in the mountains of the Kochi Prefecture, as the recent heavy snow fall has entirely cut off their supplies. Some of the mills are over ten ri from the villages, and no news has been received from the mills for many days. It has been customary for supplies to be sent daily to the mills.

The villagers are planning to organize a party to proceed to the mills, but on account of the continued snow fall, they have not yet been able to start. In the Kochi Prefecture it seldom snows and this is the first fall of snow in the past thirty years. Unless assistance reaches the mills shortly, it is feared the lives of the 600 mill-hands will be endangered.

PARTY LEADERS SPEAK OF MONDAY'S INTERVIEW

Viscount Kato, the Kenseikai president, who had an interview with Premier Count Terauchi on Monday morning at the latter's invitation, as already reported, talking about the meeting with the Premier is quoted as stating that Premier Count Terauchi and Viscount Motono, the Foreign Minister, explained the proceedings of the diplomatic negotiations with China in the past and the principle of the Government's diplomatic measures towards that country in future. The interview consisted of hearing reports on the diplomatic dealings in the past and the Viscount merely listened to the reports of the Premier and the Foreign Minister, and was not asked to express his views on the subject. As regards the contents of the reports, the Viscount was requested by the Premier and the Foreign Minister to keep silence but he had obtained their consent to make public his views, which were that the policy embodied in the reports submitted to him was in no way new and was in the main the same as the policy followed by the Foreign Ministers of preceding ministries. The Viscount is quoted as stating that he failed to see for what object Premier Count Terauchi had especially invited the presidents of the political parties and submitted such reports.

Mr. K. Hara, the Seiyukai president, who was also interviewed by the Premier and the Foreign Minister on the same subject, reporting his interview at the meeting of the Seiyukai leaders held at the residence of Mr. Yamamoto on Monday evening stated that the Premier and the Foreign Minister submitted the reports on the diplomatic proceedings with China of the preceding ministry pointing out its diplomatic failures towards China and gave in detail the proceedings of the Japan-China negotiations conducted by the present Cabinet since the latter part of last year, after the coming into existence of the Ministry. Thus was frankly disclosed the Government's intended diplomatic measures towards China in the future. Mr. Hara refrained from minutely dwelling on the contents of the interview, but stated that the measures of the Ministry were on the whole a tolerable approach to the opinion of the Seiyukai though they could not be said to be entirely satisfying.

Mr. Inukai, the Kokuminto leader, who attended the interview with Mr. Hara, had expressed his approval of the government measures and declared that if the government followed such policy it would surely serve to mitigate the excitement of the Chinese public towards Japan's attitude in future and would lead to opening up the way for satisfactorily fulfilling the fundamental policy of Japan towards China. Mr. Hara declared himself to be of the same opinion as Mr. Inukai in this point, but said he believed that the policy of the present ministry towards China would contribute to making good the failures of the diplomatic policy towards that country followed by the Okuma ministry. Mr. Hara, in conclusion, stated that the Premier and the Foreign Minister had nothing to say about the Government's opinion in connection with the European war, perhaps the Government could not be expected to form definite opinion about that question as yet because of its grave significance.

Mr. Inukai, the Kokuminto leader, also gives his impressions of the interview with the Premier and the Foreign Minister on Monday afternoon. Of course he refrains from touching upon the important part of the interview, because he was asked by the Foreign Minister to keep strict silence about the matter until the Foreign Minister makes a full report on the subject in the Diet on its reopening. The Premier and the Foreign Minister openly spoke at the interview of the Government's diplomatic dealings with China in the past. The policy of the present ministry was, according to Mr. Inukai, greatly different from that of the Okuma Ministry, on the whole, and its main principle may be summed up in that the Government, in dealing with China, wants to make endeavours for promoting the good and welfare of the Chinese nation with the spirit of sincerity and for realizing the advancement of true friendship between the two neighbour nations, always keeping in view the interests of the four hundred millions of the Chinese people, without making any discrimination between the political factions of the country. This principle is quite in consonance with the desire and ideal cherished by the Kokuminto, said Mr. Inukai, who expresses himself quite satisfied with the principle of the Chinese policy of the present Ministry.

CHINA POLICY AND PARTIES

Of the results of the meetings of Premier Count Terauchi severally with Viscount Kato, leader of the Kensei-kai, and with Mr. Hara of the Seiyu-kai and Mr. Inukai of the Kokuminto on Monday all that has reached the public so far is little more than a conjecture, strict secrecy being promised for the time being in each case. Nevertheless there is reason to believe that a very shrewd conjecture has been made. The fact is by the force of circumstances, there is little room for results that permit widely divergent conjectures. In the first place obviously the meetings were held with the object, on the part of the Government, to ask the leaders to support its policy toward China. The basic principles with which to guide the Empire's relations with China have long been established, namely sincere friendship and harmonious co-operation for the peace of the Far East, and the preservation of China's territorial integrity. More or less modifications have been introduced by the preceding Cabinets in the details of their policy for the fulfilment of these principles which are at the same time the great objects of the Empire, and it was these modifications that have occasioned attacks and counter-attacks in the past. The public does not know, for the moment, what kind of modifications Count Terauchi and Viscount Motono now propose to introduce; but in the light of past experiences it is not difficult to perceive that at Monday's conferences Mr. Hara and Mr. Inukai promised their support of the Government's policy, while Viscount Kato reserved it, as is generally conjectured. There stand the results of the meetings.

One glaring fact that stands out in the Empire's relations with China is the unsettled political condition of that country and the consequent uncertainties in its attitude toward this country, and it may be argued that it is this latter circumstance which occasions the modification of policy on our part. But, on the other hand, it may be pointed out with equal or even stronger force that the uncertainties in China's attitude are the reflection of frequent changes in this Empire's policy. Perhaps it is too bold to say that the fixing of a permanent policy to be pursued with unswerving steadiness and with the backing of a united nation in this country will have the immediate effect of putting a stop to the domestic political disturbances in China. Seeing, however, what counter-effect the utterances of public men and the press of this country produce in China, it is assumable that the permanency of policy on our part will at least have the result of steadying China's attitude toward this country. Just as our relations with China occupy the most important place in all our international situation with a very strong bearing on our domestic politics, so do relations with Japan in China. Who dares say that the elimination of anxieties concerning her relations with this country will have no indirect effect of gradually subsiding internal dissensions in China? We hold that the most crying need of the hour for the Empire in its foreign relations is the unity of the nation and the permanency of its policy toward China.

The unity of the country we speak of will never come unless a great influential party sets the example of conceding its contentions for the sake of national interests. Such a party is now the Kensei-kai. Viscount Kato may demur that since there are in the Terauchi Cabinet men who for political purposes exploited to its utmost the China policy of the late Government, his party cannot support whatever proceeds from a Ministry that includes these men. Such vindictiveness is small and mean and wholly sets aside the real interests of the country. Remember men who furnish the noblest examples for a country are always the men who undergo the greatest self-sacrifices. They are the more admired and respected. The Kensei-kai, if it gracefully and patriotically agrees to put China questions outside the pale of party politics, will in no way suffer in its prestige, but will instead centre in itself the gratitude of the nation for its disinterestedness, and will thus add to its influence. With all there is in view on the morrow of the termination of the great war, the need has never before been so pressing as now for this Empire to have its China policy built on a united nation and its relations with that country strengthened and solidified on the basis of true friendship and sincere co-operation. We appeal to the patriotism of the Kensei-kai that it mark the reopening of Parliament with its undivided support of the Government in its China policy.

COUNT TERAUCHI MET WITH PARTY LEADERS

As previously reported Count Terauchi the Premier invited the presidents of the three political parties to an interview at his official residence Monday to exchange views on diplomatic affairs of state. Prior to this Count Terauchi had caused General Oshima, Minister of War, to visit the presidents of the three parties and invite them to see the Premier and exchange views on diplomatic questions, which invitations the presidents of the political parties accepted. At first it was expected that the interview with all three would be held at the same time and the Premier would submit the views of the ministry on diplomatic questions to the trio and listen to their opinions But as the result of an objection on the part of Viscount Kato, the president of the Kenseikai, who disliked to sit with the heads of the other two parties, the interviews were held separately.

The first interview was held between Count Terauchi, and Viscount Kato at ten o'clock yesterday morning. Viscount Motono, Foreign Minister, was also present. At the interview the Premier and the Foreign Minister submitted the report on the diplomatic proceedings between Japan and China, mainly relative to the negotiations over the Chengchiatun affair and explained the new policy the Government had decided to take towards China. Viscount Kato listened to the statement of the Premier and the Foreign Minister, and after a short time took his leave, it is learned, without expressing any opinion of his own or of the party he presides over.

At three o'clock in the afternoon Mr Hara, the president of the Seiyukai, and Mr. Inukai, the president of the Kokuminto, repaired to the Premier's official residence and had an interview with the Premier and the Foreign Minister. The proceedings were the same as at the interview with Viscount Kato, but nothing is known as to the particulars. It is, however, learned that the course of the diplomatic negotiations with China will be made public by the government in the form of an official statement shortly.

With regard to the interview between Premier Count Terauchi and the heads of the three political parties, it is reported that the contents of the conference is kept in strict secret and nothing will be announced about the matter by the government or the presidents of the parties, until some time later when the government will issue a statement on a proper occasion. Mr. Hara the Seiyukai President, and Mr. Inukai, the Kokuminto President, who had an interview with the Premier and the Foreign Minister yesterday afternoon, left the Premier's official residence after about two and a half hours. Viscount Motono, Foreign Minister, remained and sat in conference with the Premier for some time. Still it is unquestionable that the main subject of the conference was the exchange of views on the Government's diplomatic policy toward China as the Chengchiatun affair as the centre of the problem.

As regards the result of the interview between the Premier and heads of the political parties, a well informed authority is quoted as stating that Viscount Kato, the Kenseikai president, will not be induced to approve the views of the present Ministry in view of the fact that the Viscount supported the diplomatic policy followed by the Okuma Ministry and warmly defended the Okuma administration against the attack of its opponents, who criticized the diplomatic policy of the Okuma Cabinet towards China as a failure. The reason that the Viscount declined to sit in yesterday's interview with the Premier together with the Presidents of the Seiyukai and the Kokuminto is interpreted by some as reflecting his dislike to see the failures of the Okuma Cabinet in its diplomatic dealings with China disclosed by the statement of the Premier about diplomatic proceedings in the past. As regards Mr. Hara, the Seiyukai President, it is observed that perhaps he will reserve expressing any definite opinion of his own or his party on the views of the Ministry, but will prefer to deliberately consider the subject and after consulting with the influential leaders of his party adopt a final attitude. It is needless to say that Mr. Inukai, the Kokuminto leader, will not approve the measures of the Government in view of his strong determination to fight with the ministry and do the utmost for the overthrow of it. In such a situation, what is most interesting to onlookers is the attitude of the Seiyukai which is rather approaching the Government there being reason to believe the possibility of such eventuality, in view of the recent movements of its leaders. With the coming to the capital of the parliamentary members now in the provinces, for the reopening of the Diet, a week hence, the political situation is expected to present more animation.

THE CHENGCHIATUN AFFAIR

Anent the Japan-China negotiations over the Chengchiatun affair a Peking dispatch says that on the 5th Baron Hayashi, the Japanese Minister, handed the Chinese Foreign Minister Dr. Wu Ting-fang a Note in which were detailed the demands of Japan and her reasons therefor. The Note pointed out the disadvantage to both countries of the procrastination of the settlement of the negotiations and advised the Chinese Government to take steps for speedy conclusion of the negotiations demanding at the same time a definite and final reply to Japan's demands. Two days later, namely on the 7th, Baron Hayashi, interviewed Dr Wu Ting-fang and again called his attention to the advantage of speedily settling the outstanding problem and laid stress on the importance of promoting friendship between the two nations by removing the present undesirable complication which stood in the way of closer friendship.

On the 12th the Chinese Government sent its reply to the Note of Baron Hayashi. The reply of the Chinese Government was on the whole a repetition of the views to which China has adhered from the very beginning. A refusal was made to Japan's demands for the establishment of Japanese police stations in Manchuria and Mongolia and the engagement of Japanese military advisers. Still the Chinese reply by its tone showed an apparent intention to concede to Japan's latest request and arrive at a settlement. This sign of rapprochement gives hope of a satisfactory solution being arrived at. On the arrival of instructions from the Tokyo Government, Baron Hayashi will open fresh negotiations with the Chinese Government and arrange an agreement on the matters already settled between the two parties.

JAPAN'S SYMPATHY FOR HER ALLIES

At the instance of Baron Shibusawa, Mr. B. Nakano, the president of the Tokyo Chamber of Commerce, influential business men, and other persons, a plan has been launched to raise a fund for the relief of the allied forces and to dispatch envoys to the allied countries on a mission of sympathy from the Japanese nation to the countries warring on the side of the allies. The scheme has secured the support of Premier Count Terauchi, Viscount Motono, Foreign Minister, other Ministers of State, many distinguished government officials, nobles, and influential business men in Tokyo, Osaka, Kobe, Yokohama, Kyoto and Nagoya. The first meeting of the promoters and supporters will be held in Tokyo about the middle of this month, when ways and means for the execution of the project will be discussed.

One of the promoters of this significant humanitarian project hopes that the mission which is to carry messages as well as gifts to Europe with a view to the practical demonstration of the Japanese sympathy for the people of the Allies fighting for the common cause will comprise several members of the Diet led by Prince Tokugawa, the President of the House of Peers and Mr. Shimada, the Speaker of the House of Representatives. It is hoped to raise some two million yen by popular subscription to purchase gifts. The promoters are also said to cherish the desire of bringing some of the wounded soldiers of the Allies to Japan to be cared for.

The plan of dispatching a delegation from the Japanese nation on the mission of extending relief and sympathy to the wounded and sick soldiers and other sufferers of the war in the allied countries has made fair progress. Baron Shibusawa, the chief promoter, called on Premier Count Terauchi at his official residence yesterday afternoon and held conference with the Premier, who is a warm advocate of the scheme. As the result of the conference, it was decided to hold a meeting of promoters at the Premier's official residence on the 17th and discuss the ways and means for the execution of the plan. Invitations have been already issued in the name of Count Terauchi to the members of the Imperial Diet, prominent nobles and a number of leading business men of Tokyo, Osaka, Kobe, Nagoya and Yokohama. It is reported that Prince Tokugawa, the President of the Upper House, will be nominated President, and Baron Shibusawa and Mr. Shimada, the President of the Lower House, Vice-Presidents of the commission.

CHENGCHIATUN AFFAIR IS PRACTICALLY SETTLED NOW

Peking, Jan. 12.—At a meeting held this afternoon at the Waichiaopu between Baron Hayashi, the Japanese Minister, and Mr. Wu Ting-fang, the Chinese Minister of Foreign Affairs, the details of the settlement of the controversy over the Chengchiatun affair were practically agreed upon. An exchange of notes is expected to take place within the next few days and without the necessity for a further meeting.

Peking dispatches to the vernacular press report that at Friday's conference between Baron Hayashi, the Japanese Minister, and Dr. Wu Ting-fang, the Chinese Foreign Minister, at the Waichaopu, the Chinese plenipotentiary submitted the reply of the Chinese Government based on the decision of the recent conference of the Cabinet Council and stated that the Chinese Government could find no room for further concessions on the part of China owing to the inconvenient circumstances in which China was placed, and in that respect the Chinese Government was anxious that the Japanese Government would reconsider the question. Another version has it that in her reply submitted to Baron Hayashi at Friday's conference, China abides by her former demands and asks the Japanese Government to reconsider the matter.

It would seem that there is something contradictory between the different reports coming from the same source. While one report says that as the result of the conference on Friday, an understanding has been established and the affair has been practically settled and the present negotiations will be brought to an end, the other report says that the Chinese Government still sticks to its objection to some of Japan's demands and asks Japan to reconsider the matter. A Peking dispatch dated the 12th reports that President Li Yuang-hun on the 8th sent a message to the military governor of Yunnan to the effect that as regards the Chengchiatun affair the Peking Government has ordered the Waichaopu to strongly refute Japan's request and as China was determined to stand by her protestations against Japan's demands and strive to maintain her national dignity and honour, the provincial authorities need not worry about the matter.

In this connection a vernacular paper reports that the main items of Japan's demands re the Chengchiatun affair consisted of the punishment of those Chinese responsible for the unlawful firing upon the Japanese troops, the payment of proper compensation for the damage sustained by the Japanese, a proper apology by the Chinese Government, the engagement of Japanese military advisers and the establishment of Japanese stations at important places in North Manchuria and Eastern Mongolia. Of these demands the first three items are quite reasonable and proper demands which China ought to have acquiesced in and fulfilled without being asked by the Japanese Government. More important are the demands pertaining to the establishment of Japanese police stations and the engagement of Japanese military advisers, which form an important object of Japan's demands and constitute the backbone of the recent negotiations. In view of the disorderly behaviour of the Chinese troops and the frequent occurrence of unlawful acts by them at the expense of the Japanese subjects, these two demands are matters of imperative necessity and a guarantee important for safeguarding the lives and interests of the Japanese subjects in Manchuria in future; otherwise their personal safety and interests will always be at stake and imperilled by the frequent wanton assaults of the Chinese troops.

From this motive the Japanese Government presented the demands as the minimum terms, and naturally the Japanese military authorities expected that the Chinese Government would be ready to acquiesce, provided China had a sincere wish for friendly relationship with this country. Baron Hayashi, who succeeded Mr. Hioki, strove to make the Chinese Government realize the reasonableness of Japan's demands and agree to her request, but taking advantage of the ministerial change in Japan the Chinese Government has resorted to its usual procrastination and obstinately refused to acquiesce in Japan's rightful demands on this or that pretext. Meanwhile, the present Ministry has changed its policy and under the fair pretext of promoting friendly relations between the two countries has given up the two most important demands as a short cut to sweeping away all outstanding questions between the two countries. In consequence great dissatisfaction is expressed in army circles.

U.S. IMMIGRATION BILL

No report has been received in official quarters about the passage through the Senate of the amendment of the American Immigration Bill, which was reported by press telegrams from America. Though official confirmation is lacking, the report is believed to be true in view of the experiences in the past and the recent attitude of Congress. The amended bill, which provides special prohibitions on immigration according to the latitude and longitude of the countries the immigrants come from, has little to do with the Japanese immigrants, who are still controlled by the so-called "Gentleman's Agreement." The feature of the new Bill is a clause pertaining to the literary test of immigrants, which is principally aimed against immigrants from Southern Europe. It may perhaps call forth protests from the Italians and Jewish Americans, as there was to be a similar proposal introduced the year before last. The President will, in such case, reject the Bill as on the previous occasion. Still if the bill be supported by over two-thirds of the members, for which there is every possibility, when it is submitted for the second time it will become law and the long standing question will be settled.

CHANGCHUN CUSTOMS AND JAPANESE FABRICS

The Chinese Customs office at Changchun, says a despatch to the "Asahi," regards those who purchase cotton fabrics from Japanese merchants as traitors and punish them accordingly. A heavy tax has been placed upon the Japanese cotton fabric to become effective from Jan. 1 (Chinese calendar). An agent of the Mitsui Bussan Kaisha at Changchun was arrested by the police on Jan. 11th for violating the law governing the import of Japanese products, and after receiving mistreatment, the agent was fined 590 yen to be paid within three months. The agent informed the Mitsui Bussan Kaisha which appealed to the Customs office, but the appeal was dismissed. The agent having already paid the full amount of the fine was released. This incident has greatly scared Chinese merchants and among them are many who tried to move out of the locality, but the Chinese authorities prevented them from going away. Many Chinese merchants have also appealed to the South Manchurian Railway for protection, and on this account trade has been depressed.

The Japanese consul is expected to protest against such treatment. It is believed that the high Chinese officials are attempting to drive out the Japanese articles on the ground of encouraging the consumption of home products.

It is believed by Japanese residents that the attitude of the Japanese Government regarding the Chengchiatun affair showed weakness and the Chinese officials have begun to misuse their power again.—"Asahi."

FOREIGN CRIMINALS IN JAPAN

Interesting statistics has been drawn up by the Department of Justice of the criminal cases connected with foreign residents in this country. According to the investigation made, the number of criminal cases involving foreigners which were handled by the public procurators' office throughout Japan in 1916 totalled 338, of which, however, 184 cases were dropped. To classify the criminals by nationality, China heads the list with 328, America coming next with 17, Russia, 12; France, 6; Germany, 9; Austro-Hungary, 4; Italy, 2; India, 3; Portugal 2 and Spain, Holland, Switzerland and the Strait Settlements 1 each. Five women were also before the court.

The following is their classification by punishment:—death, 1; penal servitude for life, 1; imprisonment exceeding 5 years, 1; imprisonment exceeding one month, 70; penalty, 128; detainment, 29, while 4 were discharged.

The classification by nature of offence is:—obstruction of the execution of official duties, 3; breaking a seal, 3; opium-eating, 37; forcible entry, 3; forgery of documents, 2; audltery, 1; gambling, 54; murder, 4; injury, 11; abduction, 1; burglary, 13; violation of the customs duty regulations, 17; infringement of the patent medicine regulations, 49; infringement of the tobacco monopoly regulations, 16; violation of the regulations for the control of opium, 10; violation of the Police regulations, 3; infringement of the regulations for guns and gunpowder, 3; infringement of the strategical zone regulation, 4; fraud, 18 and the purchase of stolen goods, 1.

ON THE RUSSIAN FRONTS

Petrograd, Jan. 8.—Western front. The attacks of the enemy on the Russian front between the Tirulmarsh and the river Aa have been repulsed by the Russian fire. During the preceding fighting south of the Babit Lake, 30 kilometres west of Riga 500 Germans were taken prisoner.

Rumania. The Russian troops, by a sudden assault, captured the enemy's trenches in the Oitus valley, taking a number of prisoners. The counter-attacks of the enemy were repulsed. The enemy attempts in attacking one of the heights north of the river Kazin have been repulsed by the Russian fire. The Russo-Rumanians on the upper part of the Sushitza and north-west of Focsani retreated under the pressure of the enemy somewhat to the east. The Rumanians succeeded in re-establishing the position occupied by them before the fighting on January 5, north-west of Focsani. Massed enemy columns advanced against the Russian and Rumanian troops near Pesesci, 6 kilometres southwest of Focsani, but were scattered by artillery fire. The Russian troops, assuming the offensive, reached the line between Rasipitza and a lake 5 kilometres, south-west of Kengulesci 13 kilometres south-west of Rasipitza. The enemy attacks against the Russian troops on the lower part of the Buzëu river have been repulsed.

Caucasus front. The usual firing continues on the front. Storms are raging and snow has been falling continually for about three weeks.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 9.—By the capture of Focsani the Germans have turned the western extremity of the so-called Sereth lines, which run forty miles eastward from Focsani. The Russians, however, who have been bearing the brunt of the fighting while the Rumanians were refitting in their rear, have another defensive position along the River Sereth, behind which is the formidable line of the River Pruth, which forms the eastern boundary of Rumania.

The front on which the Austro-Germans, under the command of Marshal von Mackensen, are operating, is 123 miles long, not counting their front in the Dobrudja. The German line runs between the mouth of the Sereth and Gyimes Pass. Half this front lies in the mountains, where the fighting has consisted of a series of struggles for isolated heights.

The enemy has still to face the Allies' main positions on the heights west of the River Trotus and the Sereth.

Meanwhile the Russians have gained a heartening success twenty miles west of Riga, where a spirited advance across the frozen marshes has brought their line forward four miles at one point.

Yesterday's German communiqué states that in a heavy snowstorm the Russians have recaptured Glandon Island, north of Illuxt and southwest of Riga.

The Allies, the Berlin communiqué says, are tenaciously defending the valleys into the Moldavian plain. The prisoners captured by the Austro-Germans Monday, when Focsani was taken, now total 99 officers and 5,400 men, while three guns were also taken.

The Russian official report says that the Russians have thrown back an enemy offensive west of Riga and have captured an island in the western Dvina River, north of Dvinsk. Seven machine guns and four trench mortars were taken there.

The Russians have defeated German attacks south of the Oituz River. The Rumanians have fallen back six versts west of Monistar and Kachinul on the Kazin River.

The Russians have taken up new positions along the line of the Putna and Sereth Rivers.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Jan. 10.—Western front. The fight near the Babit Lake, west of Riga continues. The Russian troops after a stubborn fight, seized the enemy's positions, taking a number of prisoners and advancing 2 kilometres southwards. The enemy attacks, east of Kalnzem, have been repulsed by the Russian fire and counter-attacks. So far 21 heavy and light guns, ammunition carts and different accessories have been captured. North-east of the Vishnevsky Lake a daring rush on the enemy's trenches was performed, prisoners and materials being seized. On the Shara, south of the Sluck roadway, an enemy aeroplane was brought down by a Russian aviator. During the night before January 9th several groups of enemy's aeroplanes were dropping bombs on Luck.

Rumania. Repeated attacks of the enemy against a height north of Slonika were repulsed by the Russian fire and counter-attacks. Eight attacks performed by the enemy, north of the river Kasin on the night before January 9th were all repulsed. The Germans attacked the Rumanians twice west of Monasterkazin (on the river Kazin), but were repulsed, suffering heavy losses. The enemy succeeded, south of Rekos, in pressing upon the Rumanians but by a counter-attack, performed during the night, the front was re-established, 270 prisoners and 2 machine-guns being taken. The enemy, supported by strong artillery fire, stubbornly attacked the Russian troops near the mouth of the Rymnik, but was repulsed. Six officers and about 70 soldiers were taken prisoner.

London, Jan. 10.—The Russian official communiqué says:—"The battle west of Riga continues. We have captured an enemy position between Tirul marsh and the River Aa. Since January 1, we have captured 21 heavy and 11 light guns. Eight hostile attacks north of Hasino failed. The enemy pressed back the Rumanians north of Rekoza. By a counter-attack, the Rumanians regained their lost position and took 270 German prisoners."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 11.—The Russian official communiqué reads: "Fighting continues south of Lake Babit. We captured a village east of Kalnzem. The enemy gained possession of two heights north of the Mituz River.

The enemy crossed the Putna, north of Focsani, but our counter-attack threw him back with heavy losses.

A message from Petrograd confirms the news that the Russians completely pierced the first line of German defences, 8 miles to the north of Mitau. The Russians were equally successful on the left bank of the Aa, in the region of Schlock, where they threaten to turn the entire German flank in the region of Mitau. They are within four miles of the town, where the inhabitants were already panic-stricken.

Petrograd, Jan. 11.—It is confirmed that the Russians have completely pierced the first line of the German defenses, eight miles to the north of Mitau. The military authorities lay stress on this success, because the Germans employed all technical means there to render the positions impregnable.

All the German counter-attacks, with fresh reserves, completely failed to reconquer the lost ground.

The Russians have been equally successful on the left bank of the Aa, in the region of Schlock, where they are menacing a turning of the German flank in the whole region of Mitau and are advancing within four miles of that town, where a panic had already commenced.

[OFFICIAL TO RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Jan. 12.—On the Western front, the Germans attacked on January 11 with strong forces, the Russian troops east of Kalnzem, but were repulsed by the Russian fire and counter-attack. Near Kiselin a large leather pipe was thrown from the enemy's trenches toward the Russian front. The gas cloud coming out of this pipe was dispersed by the wind and caused no damage.

In Rumania, near the Putna Valley, a fight between one Russian and two enemy aeroplanes occurred, one of these last being compelled to come down.

South of the Oitus River the enemy attacked the Russian troops, pressing upon them. The enemy's attacks against the Rumanians west of Monasterka Kazinul were repulsed. The Rumanians assuming, in their turn, the offensive in this place repulsed the enemy to the heights two kilometers to the South. The enemy's attacks northeast of Kompuril on the River Sushitza and southeast of the mouth of the Buzeu were as well repulsed.

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, Jan. 13.—The Russian offensive against Tulkum and Mitau apparently is troubling the Germans, who are attempting to paralyse the successes by taking the offensive to the northwest of Iskul, but without arriving at any tangible results.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 15.—The communiqué from the Macedonian front reads: "Bad weather has caused numerous floods, while there has been a heavy snowstorm in the region of Lake Presba.

"The Italians repulsed an enemy attack on a munition depôt, and destroyed Patures north of Armatus. The engagements with the enemy south of Lake Ochrida have been fierce, particularly at Veliterna. Here a detachment of French Indo-China troops were in action with another detachment and made slight progress beyond Svets."

The Russian official communiqué reads: "The Rumanians attacked the heights in the region of the Kasino River and by violent bayonet fighting threw the enemy back a verst to the south. A composite force of Russians and Rumanians repulsed an offensive in the same region and pressed the enemy back two versts to the south.

"We withdrew slightly northward of the Vedeni region, but repulsed the enemy, with heavy losses, in several attacks made north-east of Focsani."

MR. JOHN BUCHAN'S WEEKLY REPORT

London, Jan. 15.—The operations on the British front in France have been again confined chiefly to raids on the trenches. Several of these had conspicuously successful results. A daylight raid on a wide front southeast of Arras led to the temporary occupation of three lines of the enemy trenches. The most surprising feature was the weak enemy resistance and his hasty abandonment of his position. The destruction of machine-gun emplacements and other defences was very effectively carried out. East of Beaumont-Hamel local advances have been made on two occasions, both proving completely successful. In the first two raids, hostile posts were secured and in the second a section of an enemy trench was also captured and consolidated. One hundred and forty prisoners were taken. The latter assault was carried out by only one hundred men who besides the above capture of prisoners inflicted considerable loss on the enemy. A subsequent raid resulted in the capture of one hundred and fifty nine prisoners bringing the number since Christmas to well over five hundred.

Regarding the extension of the British section of the front in France it is not to be supposed that the British yet hold a large proportion geographically. The length measures something under one hundred miles or about one-fifth of the whole western front. But Britain's share of this theatre is much larger than is shown by the map. The British hold on their section approximately the same weight of the enemy troops as are engaged on the whole southern half namely two hundred and thirty miles from the neighbourhood of Rheims to Switzerland.

In East Africa, the German main forces, in the valley of the lower Rufiji, are being steadily hemmed in to a narrowing strip. Attacked from the northwest they have been driven with heavy loss from their entrenched position on Mgeta River and now hold little more than a delta of Rufiji, a narrow strip of unhealthy territory, running westward to a point ninety miles from the sea.

The British columns are closing in from the north, northwest and west and the movement southward is barred by the advance of a British force from Kilwa, now holding the line from Kibata westward. The only other point, where the enemy still holds out in force, is the district round Mahenge a town just over one hundred miles to the southwest of the lower Rufiji Valley. Here the British columns converge upon him from the west.

Success continues to attend the British movement on Kut-el-Amara. On the right bank of the Tigris, northeast of Kut, an attack was carried out with great dash by the Indian division and resulted in the capture of the enemy's trenches on a front of one thousand yards. The celebrated Sannaiyat position, on the other side of the river, has been heavily bombarded and its strength tested at three points by raids.

Uniform British successes in outlaying theatres have been crowned by brilliant advance in Sinai Peninsula to the borders of Palestine. General Murray carried by assault the chief enemy position covering Rafa. This had great strength comprising six lines of entrenchments and six main redoubts with a central keep. The whole position was carried after severe fighting, over 1,600 prisoners being taken. The Turkish relief force was entirely destroyed.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 9.—The "Times" understands that a fresh Note has been drafted by the Allies at Rome and despatched thence to King Constantine's Government at Athens.

It is understood that the Note demands Greece's prompt compliance with all previous demands. A time-limit of forty-eight hours has been set.

London, Jan 2.—The islands of Psara and Imbros have thrown off their allegiance to King Constantine.

Athens, Jan. 3.—The situation is one of the utmost uncertainty, the King finding much difficulty in replying to the demands of the Allies owing to the attitude of the populace.

London, Jan. 3.—The Greek League of Reservists is attempting to excite feeling against the Entente by services of thanksgiving in the provincial towns of Old Greece for the preservation of King Constantine from bombardment by the Allies' Fleet.

The Royalist papers in Athens are making very violent attacks on the Entente, especially Great Britain. An immediate declaration of war against the Entente, even, is demanded, but the immense majority of Greeks favour the Entente and M. Venizelos.—Reuter.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Athens, Jan. 11.—King Constantine's Government replied, on Wednesday evening, accepting the terms set forth in the ultimatum sent from Rome by the Entente.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 12.—The Greek reply to the allied ultimatum evades the demands for apologies to the Allied Ministers, public salutes to the Allied Flags in connection with the events of December 1. It also ignores the demand for the removal of the officer responsible for the orders given on December 1 to fire on the Allied troops. Furthermore, the release of the arrested Venizelists is not dealt with in accordance with the allied demand for their immediate liberation.

Reuter's Agency understands that the Allies consider that the Greek reply is not sufficiently precise. The Greek Government will be told that the reply, as far as it goes, gives pleasure, but a more definite acquiescence is necessary. The Allies do not intend to raise the blockade until the demands are conceded. The Allies representatives, meanwhile will remain in Athens.

BRITAIN'S NEW WAR LOAN

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 10.—Secrecy is being maintained regarding the new War Loan, but there is no doubt that there will be two distinct issues. One will be long-dated, and the other short-dated. Both will be free of income tax. The issue has been postponed until January 12.

News From All Sources

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 10.—Reuter's Agency is informed that the joint reply of the Allies to President Wilson's Peace Note will be delivered to the American Ambassador in Paris, H.E. Mr. William G. Sharpe, either to-night or to-morrow. It is a fairly long document. There is reason to believe that it will indicate generally the terms upon which the allies are prepared to discuss peace.

The contents of the Note will be published in France 48 hours after it has been received by President Wilson in Washington.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Paris, Jan. 11.—On Wednesday afternoon, M. Briand, the French Premier, on behalf of the Allies, handed to His Excellency Mr. William G. Sharpe, the American Ambassador, a Note containing the joint reply of the Allies to President Wilson. M. Briand also delivered to Mr. Sharpe a Note from the Belgian Government, expressing Belgium's determination to adhere to the reply of the Allies, and thanking the American Government for its generous services on behalf of the unfortunate Belgian people.

Washington, Jan. 12.—The Entente's reply to President Wilson's Note has arrived at the State Department.

The Note containing the joint reply of the Allies to the proposal of President Wilson of the United States was handed to the American Ambassador at Paris on the 10th inst. as expected in the name of the French Minister of Foreign Affairs. The outline of the Allies reply, as given out by the Foreign Office yesterday afternoon, is as follows:

The governments of the allied powers hereby express their respect of the lofty ideal and motive of the Note presented by the President of the United States. But the Allies do not believe that any satisfactory solution of the present war could be found at the present moment; in other words, the Allies do not expect that the restoration of the territories occupied by Germany to which the allies have a proper claim, the reparation for damage sustained by the Allies, a guarantee for the future and an assurance sufficient for placing the future of Europe on a sound basis could be secured at the present moment and under the conditions that now obtain. Under these circumstances and in view of the expressed opinion of President Wilson who sees the motive of the Allies in the same light with that of their enemy, the Allies have to explicitly put on record their protest to the proposal of the President of the United States.

The interpretation by the President of the United States is against the facts and proofs with regard to the responsibilities of the past and the guarantee for the future, and in view of the various unpardonable crimes committed by the enemy, the violation of treaties, unlawful warfare, the maltreatment of inhabitants of the occupied territories and the like, which are well known facts, there is a wide disparity in the views and principles of the Allies and their enemy, which can never find a point of agreement in any respect whatsoever.

The President of the United States requested the Allies would clearly set forth their objects in the war, but these objects are too well known to the world to be repeated here, and have been frequently declared by the Allies' Governments in the past. As to the particulars of their objects the allies will be unable to make them known in any detailed way until the opening of peace negotiations when they will frame them together with the demands for a war indemnity. The matters which the Allies want to be solved as the questions of the first importance are the restoration of Belgium, Serbia, and Montenegro with full reparation; the withdrawal of the Germans from the occupied territories in Russia, France and Rumania with full reparation; the reconstruction of Europe guaranteed by regulations based on the principle of nationality and the protection of minor nations; the guarantee of the land frontier and littoral frontier against alien invasion; the restoration of the territories occupied against the will of their inhabitants; the liberation of the Italians, Slavs and Rumanians under alien yoke; the liberation of the people suffering from the cruel administration of the Turkish government, and the expulsion of the Turkish Empire from Europe. The allied powers have no intention whatever to attempt the extermination of the German nation or the extinction of its political existence as is erroneously rumoured in some quarters of the world.

The Allies especially want to secure a peace founded on the principle of freedom and justice, and established on unflinching and everlasting sincerity relative to the observance of international responsibilities, which the Allies believe will be nothing but what the United States Government also has in view and is desirous to secure. The Allies are conscious that the furtherance of this lofty ideal and purpose, and the future of the world civilization entirely rest with, and depend upon, the successful issue of the present war, for which purpose the Allies are strongly determined to exhaust their efforts and sacrifice everything with willingness.

London, Jan. 12.—The Allied Reply to President Wilson's Note is couched in an animating spirit. The communication, after supporting the proposal to create a League of Nations to assure universal peace and justice, expresses the view that it is impossible at present to obtain a peace, which will not only secure the reparation, restitution and guarantees due through the Central Powers' guilty act of aggression, but also enable the future of European nations to be established on a sure foundation.

The Allies regret to have to disclaim responsibility for the losses and sufferings entailed on Neutrals. As they (the Allies) in no way provoked the war, they feel it their duty to challenge in the most friendly, but clearest way, the analogy drawn between the opposing belligerents, which directly conflicts with the evidence. History has clearly established one fact, namely the calculated policy of aggression, whereby Austria and Germany sought to ensure the hegemony of Europe and universal domination.

By her declaration of war and instant violation of Belgium and Luxemburg, and methods of waging war, Germany has proved systematically that she scorns every principle of humanity, and the respect due to small States.

The reply proceeds to set out the further series of enemy crimes and recalls the horrors marking the invasion of Belgium and Serbia, and the atrocious treatment they are undergoing; the massacres of hundreds of thousands of inoffensive Armenians, the barbarities in Syria, the Zeppelin raids on open towns; the submarining of liners and other ships, including those of neutrals; the cruel treatment of prisoners of war; the judicial murders of Miss Edith Cavell and Captain Fryatt, and the deportation and enslavement of civil populations etc.

Such a catalogue of crimes explains the protest of the Allies against the analogy drawn by President Wilson. The Allies find no difficulty in meeting Mr. Wilson's request to state their war aims. These can only be formulated in detail with just compensation and indemnities for losses when the moment of negotiation arrives. It is well-known, however, that they include primarily and necessarily the restoration of Belgium, Serbia and Montenegro, and the evacuation of the invaded territories in France, Russia and Rumania; the re-organisation of Europe so that it shall be the right of all people to have and to enjoy full security and free economic development. The Allies also demand that territorial agreements and international arrangements be framed to guarantee land and sea frontiers against unjust attacks.

The Reply aims at the restitution of the provinces and territories formerly torn from the Allies forcibly, or contrary to the wishes of the inhabitants, the liberation of the Italians, Slavs, Rumanians, Czechs and Slovaks from foreign domination, and the liberation of the peoples lying under the murderous tyranny of the Turks. Further, the expulsion from Europe is demanded of the Ottoman Empire, which has proved itself radically alien to western civilization. The Tsar's intentions towards Poland are shown in his Proclamation just addressed to his troops.

The Allies disclaim any intention to exterminate politically or extinguish the Teutonic race, though they wish to rescue Europe from the encroachment of Prussian militarism.

The reply concludes by stating that the Allies are determined to endure every sacrifice in order to press to a victorious close the conflict upon which depends their own safety and prosperity and the very future of civilization.

London, Jan. 11.—Mr. Lloyd-George, the Premier, in addressing a meeting at the Guildhall, to-day, declared that war was preferable to Prussian domination of Europe. The Allies, he said, had made that clear in their reply to Germany and clearer still in their answer to the United States.

London, Jan. 12.—Mr. Lloyd-George, in his speech at the Guildhall, declared that the Kaiser's order was to drag those he could not dragoon. He had told his people that the Allies had rejected the peace terms.

"We had not seen the peace terms," said the Premier, "we all wanted peace.

but it must be a real peace. The Allies' representatives now at Rome in conference were under no delusion about the magnitude of the task before them, nor were they doubtful as to the result" (cheers). "The whole situation was probed with the difficulties to be faced," continued the speaker, "and arrangements had been made to deal with them. The Allies felt that if victory was difficult, defeat was impossible" (cheers).

"It was the grim resolution of the Allies to rid the world for time everlasting of the menace of the Prussian military caste and to save Europe from unspeakable despotism.

"The Allies are more and more looking toward Great Britain, and I feel confident that their trust is not misplaced.

"Our Navy will continue to strangle the commerce of the enemy, despite his piratical devices, (cheers), while, with proper support, our gallant armies cleave the road to victory in 1917 (loud cheers).

"A successful Loan will shorten the war, will save lives, and will save the British Empire and the civilization of Europe (cheers). "The Prussian menace, as at present constituted is a running mortgage which detracts from our national security. Let us clear off the mortgage for ever, and, in future, let the nations combine to punish the first peace breaker."

Continuing, Mr. Lloyd George said:

"We made clear in our reply to Germany and still clearer in our reply to the United States that war is preferable to a peace such as a Prussian Peace.

"The British armies, to-day, in the matter of training and equipment are more formidable than ever. I do not know the nation that will dare to touch us after the war. They had forgotten what we were like in the old days, but it will take them a long time to forget this lesson. (Cheers).

"I want to see your cheques hurtling through the air to the enemy entrenchments. Every well-directed cheque, properly primed, is more formidable than a 12-incher. It clears the way through barbed wire.

"Do not let us squander money on luxuries and indulgences. Put it there and help the soldiers. The more we get, the shorter will be the war." (cheers).

[Delayed in Transmission]

New York, Jan. 12.—An Overseas News Agency despatch from Berlin says that the German Government has handed the neutral diplomats a Note concerning the reply of the Entente to the German peace proposals. The full text has so far not yet arrived. The portion so far received says:

"The form wherein Germany's adversaries clothe their communications, excludes all answer to them, but the Imperial German Government considers it important to point out to the Governments of the neutral Powers its opinion regarding the situation. The Central Powers have no reason to enter into a discussion of the origin of the verdict of history."

New York, Jan. 12.—The German Note says Germany's adversaries neither attempted to examine Germany's proposition nor made counter proposals. Instead, they declared peace to be impossible so long as the re-establishment of violated rights and liberties and the recognition of the principle of nationalities and the free existence of small States were not guaranteed.

The Note adds that the German Allies made an honest attempt to terminate the war and depended on the decision of their adversaries whether or not the road be entered upon. The hostile Governments declined to accept the road. Upon them falls full responsibility for a continuation of blood-shed. It adds that the Central Powers will "continue the struggle in quiet confidence until a peace is gained which guarantees their nations' honour, existence and liberty of development."

Germany has transmitted another note regarding peace to the neutral countries, according to a New York dispatch to the "Asahi" dated Jan. 12 which, reported in the form of gogai, is as follows:

A Berlin dispatch to New York says that Germany sent another note to the neutral countries on Jan. 11. In this note Germany announces to neutrals her receipt of the uncompromising allied reply to her peace move, and says:

"Although the reply of the Allies is couched in such terms as necessitate no answer from Germany thereto, she is under the necessity of expressing her opinion about the present situation, for the benefit of neutrals.

Germany and her allies do not see any need of debating on the cause of the present conflict and time will come when history itself proves who should be really held responsible for this war. On the Serbian outrages, at Sarajevo, the mobilization Russia made to wage war on Germany, the Russian ambition for Constantinople, the retaliatory policy of France and the unlawful British blockade, history will, we are confident, give its impartial judgment."

New York, Jan. 13.—Editorial comment in American papers is practically unanimous in describing the reply of the Entente to President Wilson's Note as a frank avowal of the purposes of the Allies. In great contrast to the response of the Central Powers, it gives abundant satisfaction to Mr. Wilson's request for specific information.

The New York "Herald" declares the document is one of the most notable in history and a "new declaration of independence on behalf of civilization." The New York "Times" asks: "Will Germany have the effrontery to say that these are not just terms and in that opinion have the judgment of the whole world against her? It is for Germany to say whether peace can come now. She may continue the war, but it will be a hopeless struggle with inevitable defeat and harder terms at the end."

The "Baltimore Sun" says: "If the Allies' statements as to the responsibility of the war, and the nature of Prussian militarism are correct, and most Americans believe so, reparation and guarantees are essential."

The "Boston Globe" thinks the terms are "extreme" and sure to be rejected. The "Springfield Republican" sees little hope in an early peace.

London, Jan. 14.—Reuter's Agency is authorized by a well-informed British source to state the following may be regarded as the view taken of the latest German and Austrian notes to the Neutral powers.

The Germans once again attempt to throw upon the Entente the responsibility for starting the war. The facts are so well known that it seems unnecessary to do more than point out that during the crisis in July, 1914, the Allies proposed a conference to Germany who rejected it. As for Russia, the Czar suggested in vain a reference to The Hague Tribunal, but Germany would have none of it. The proposal for a conference was made on July 26, 1914, and was refused by Germany on July 27 1914, while it was not until July 31 that orders were given for a general mobilization in Russia. The Germans state that the proposals of the allies as to the rights of small nationalities in Russia and the treatment of Greece are against International Law.

As for Ireland and South Africa their sons have shown on many battlefields in the present war, as the Germans know to their cost, that whatever differences may have been between those countries and Great Britain they are united with the rest of the Empire in repelling German aggression.

As for Northern Africa, at the beginning of the war, had not the Germans two great colonies in Africa? Did they not attain those Colonies by means similar to those which placed the French, Italians and British in control of Northern Africa.

As for Russia, it is strange that in a country which the Germans describe as a land of oppression of small nationalities the whole nation is absolutely united against a common foe. Regarding Greece the Allies have done no more than to exact in their capacity as protecting powers, guarantees to which they are entitled, against German intrigue, to protect the safety of their own armies.

The Germans maintain that the allies were the first to commence the violation of the laws of war at sea. What are the facts? From the very beginning of the war, the Germans sowed mines indiscriminately on the trade routes: in defiance of all International Law and in total disrespect of the rights and lives of neutrals.

The Germans further maintain that the blockade is contrary to International Law. This is entirely false. The right of cutting off the supplies of the enemy is a well recognised belligerent right practised by all nations.

The avowed purposes of the submarine measures of Germany were to cut off all supplies from these islands.

The Germans profess to regard as inhuman the employment of starvation as a weapon. Were they of the same opinion in 1870 when they starved the city of Paris?

Regarding the treatment of Belgium, the world will not readily forget the massacres at Aerschot and Louvain. The forced illegal levies on Belgian funds and the inhuman and barbarous deportations which the Germans are carrying out to this very day are fresh in the minds of all.

It is considered highly improbable that the Allies will make further comment on the German and Austrian Notes.

New York, Jan. 15.—A Washington dispatch says that the allies' reply to the note of President Wilson has been received with satisfaction by the American public in that the reply has clearly and concretely expressed the Allies' object. After submitting the reply to the meeting of the Cabinet Council on Friday President Wilson summoned Secretary Lansing and Captain House and had a long conference on the subject. What attitude the President will take hereafter is quite unknown, but there being no doubt that the President is anxious Germany should express her object in the war in the same way as the Allies the President will perhaps send another note to Germany requesting her to express explicitly her intentions and object of the war in more concrete form. According to an observation in well-informed quarters, President Wilson is well aware that the Allies will never accept the German proposal of peace and that there is no possibility of a movement for peace at an early date. The American Government will, it is thought, make a third peace proposal when an available opportunity presents itself. Still the American Government is well aware that the time for any hopeful peace proposal will not mature after several months or even another year or even more have elapsed.

It is said Dr. Wilson is most anxious America should have an important position at the peace conference, which must come sooner or later, and for the furtherance of that purpose the President considered it of great importance to America to take such measures as were recently started by him as a preparatory step for approaching that end. The measures have been well considered, because such step will by no means run counter to the wish of the President, but will contribute, in a measure, to accelerating the arrival of the opportunity available for making another peace movement. Of course the President did not expect the exchange of views so far undertaken would successfully launch the peace proposal, but there is no doubt that the American government will continue to strive for the realization of its wish for the speedy termination of the war by repeating the same diplomatic measures towards the belligerent countries hereafter.—"Asahi."

San Francisco, Jan. 15.—According to report Colonel House who had been to Europe several times by orders of President Wilson, will be again sent to Europe on a certain mission.—"Nichinichi."

San Francisco, Jan. 15.—It is feared that the tardy progress of peace negotiations coupled with the pending submarine questions and other matters may throw America into the vortex of the war. President Wilson is, therefore, reported to be striving for the advent of peace. It is said that the President will instruct the American Ambassadors and Ministers abroad to start a peace movement within two weeks or will dispatch Colonel House to Europe on a similar mission.—"Hochi."

ENEMY PLANS ENERGETIC ACTION AT MONASTIR

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Salonika, Jan. 10.—Everything indicates that the enemy intends taking energetic action near Monastir. It is reported a Bulgarian regiment has arrived already from the Dobrudja; the remainder of the Division is on its way, besides an Austrian regiment from Kalkandeli.

The principal object of the enemy will be to support King Constantine. Possibly some German reinforcements will attempt to work south, round Lake Ochrida in order to join Constantine's forces.

ALLIES REACH SOLID AGREEMENT AT ROME

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 10.—A telegram from Rome announces that complete agreement, over the question of Macedonia, was reached by the allied representatives at the Conference. The Salonika front has lost none of its importance.

London, Jan. 9.—After listening to the explanations of the Allies at the conference in Rome, the Italian Government has approved their views. The resolutions passed at the Rome conferences are kept in absolute secrecy. M. Briand, the President of the French cabinet, has announced that the conference has arrived at an agreement to push on the already settled programme of the Allies and to make concerted efforts for realizing their object with perfect harmony. —"Jiji."

MR. GERARD ASKED TO EXPLAIN

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, Jan. 9.—The State Department has cabled to Mr. James W. Gerard, United States Ambassador to Berlin, requesting him for a statement regarding his utterances at a banquet of the American Chambers of Commerce held in Berlin. At the banquet in question, he is reported in the press to have given utterance to the following statement: "Never since the beginning of the war, have relations between the United States and Germany been more cordial."

[Note.—It is quite safe to assume that Mr. Gerard never uttered the words attributed to him. The canard was evidently started by the German press for purposes that are too evident to need dilating upon.—Ed.]

ALLIES' GOLD HOLDINGS

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 9.—The Allies' holdings of gold are estimated at £557,702,000, as compared with the German holdings of £125,954,000 as recently announced by the Reichsbank. The holdings of the British Empire are £164,954,000.

FRENCH HOUSES REASSEMBLE

Paris, Jan. 9.—The French representatives M. Briand, General Lyautey and M. Albert Thomas, on their return from the conference at Rome, reached here last night.

The resolutions adopted at this conference are assumed to be the prelude to definite, united action on the part of the Entente Powers.

A personage who was present at all the meetings in Rome said to a representative of "Le Matin": "The Pact of London has worked admirably during the last few days, and has been very thoroughly endorsed. There is no longer any Quadruple Entente and no longer any Allies. We are, in presence, one policy, one army and of one determination. There is no important feature of the situation on which there is not complete agreement, or which has not been considered. We can confidently await the outcome of this 'Conference of Victory' as it has been called.

KOKUSAI-HAVAS

Paris, Jan. 10.—Both the Senate and Chamber of Deputies resumed their labours yesterday. As usual, the Chair was filled during the preliminary proceedings by one of the senior members of each body.

In the Senate, M. Latappe, who is 87 years of age, spoke warmly of the war services rendered by women, who he said were going through a processionary stage before obtaining electoral rights.

Baron Demackau, aged 84, who presided at the opening of the Chamber of Deputies, said that there were signs that the hour of eternal justice was coming. Its approach might appear slow to our ephemeral existence, but it was sure and implacable.

M. Antonin Dubost, President of the Senate, and M. Paul Deschanel, President of the Chamber of Deputies, were both re-elected by large majorities.

U.S.N. CRUISER ASHORE

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Eureka, Cal., Jan. 14.—The first class U.S.N. armoured cruiser Milwaukee, 9,700 tons has run ashore in a fog. It is feared that the vessel will become a total wreck, entailing a loss of $7,000,000.

The armoured cruiser Milwaukee, 9,700 tons, speed 25½knots, was launched at San Francisco in 1906. The vessel's complement was 664 and from the above message it is to be hoped that no lives have been lost.

Eureka, where the message came from is the port and capital of Humboldt County, California.

Eureka, Cal., Jan. 14.—The cruiser Milwaukee ran ashore here in a fog this morning, while trying to release submarine S.3 which ran aground several weeks ago. The crew of the Milwaukee were safely removed to shore by means of breeches buoys.

To the uninitiated, it may be interesting to learn that a breeches buoy is a pair of canvas breeches depending from an annular or beltlike life buoy which is usually of cork. This contrivance, enclosing the person to be rescued, is hung by short ropes from a block which runs upon the hawser stretched from the ship to the shore, and is drawn to land by hauling lines.

Eureka Cal., Jan. 14.—The cruiser Milwaukee ran aground while trying to refloat submarine S-3, which ran ashore some time ago. Neither vessel can be refloated and salvage operations have already commenced.

RUSSIAN PREMIER DROPS REINS OF GOVERNMENT

Petrograd Jan. 8.—Dark clouds hover over the political horizon in Russia in which an important development is expected at any moment, but the clouds will perhaps clear by the Russian New Year's Day (Jan. 14. It is said that the dignity and prestige which the present Russian cabinet has been able to maintain so far is all due to General Trepoff, the Premier.—"Nichinichi."

The Commander of the U-boat ordered the Captain of the Ingeborg to have the 700 bags of mail he was carrying for allied countries thrown into the sea. If the Swedish Captain refused to comply with the order, he was told that his vessel would be taken to Germany as a prize.

AMMUNITION EXPLODES AT DU PONT POWDER CO.

New York, Jan. 15.—Another ammunition explosion, last night, across the Hudson, plainly heard in New York, where windows are reported to have been broken by the shock was at the plant of the Du Pont Powder Company in Haskell, New Jersey.

Two million dollars' worth of powder being manufactured for the Allies was destroyed.

Two employés are missing and undoubtedly dead, while several more have been sent to hospital injured, two seriously so.

The Company's statement of the disaster does not attribute it to incendiarism.

New York, Jan. 15.—Unlike the case of the Du Pont explosion which the Company does not attribute to incendiarism, the Kingsland Canadian Car Foundry Company issues a statement suggesting incendiarism is possible.

The amount of the damage is much in excess of the early estimates and is placed by the Company at $16,000,000, of which $10,000,000 consisted of ammunition belonging to Russia.

FRENCH JOURNAL'S TRIBUTE TO BRITISH SOLDIERS

London, Jan. 15.—"Le Petit Parisien," in commenting on the British activity on the Ancre front, says: "It is another example of the determined offensive spirit of the British, who from Ypres to the Somme are ceaselessly harrying the enemy by countless local combats and unexpected raids in places where the enemy little expects an attack.

"The British Army, continues the journal, is establishing a continual offensive warfare along the whole front, and depriving the enemy of all response. In addition, it is wearing him out and causing him continual uneasiness."

ARREST OF SUN HUNG-YI CAUSES STIR IN PEKING

Peking, Jan. 14.—Great excitement has been caused here by the announcement of the arrest of Mr. Sun Hung-yi, former minister of the Interior. Many rumours are in circulation concerning the cause of the arrest, the most persistent being that the Government learned that a society has been organized under the auspices of Mr. Sun Hung-yi to secure the assassination of certain prominent members of the Government.

The gendermerie made an investigation and obtained evidence clearly establishing the existence of a plot. Another report says the arrest is due to the embezzlement by Sun Hung-yi during his tenure of office of funds belonging to the Metropolitan Municipality and the Yu-feng Bank, wherein the Ministry of the Interior has a large interest. The gendermerie have been closely watching a number of suspicious characters who recently arrived in Peking from the south.

Peking, Jan. 14.—The terms of the Chengchiatun settlement have not yet been disclosed but it is understood that the Chinese Government has acceded to all demands such as the reprimand of the commander of the 28th division and the punishment of the officers concerned. Peking has also agreed to the publication of an order forewarning the people against repetition of the incident. An apology will be tendered by the Tutuh of Mukden.

With regard to the establishment of police stations in Manchuria the Japanese Government will place on record their claims in that connection, also their wishes concerning the employment of Japanese military advisers and instructors.

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

Peking, Jan. 15.—The reported arrest of Mr. Sun Hung-yi is incorrect. The greatest secrecy is being maintained concerning the affair. According to the latest reports the Gendarmerie, hearing that a number of suspicious characters were staying at the residence of Mr. Sun Hung-yi, searched the house and arrested eight persons who are alleged to be conspirators.

This gave rise to the report that the former Minister of the Interior had been placed under arrest.

THE BANK OF COMMUNICATIONS

Peking, Jan. 15.—The Board of Directors of the Bank of Communications have appointed Mr. Tsao Ju-lin acting President of the Bank pending the approval by the shareholders.

The terms have not been disclosed up to the present, but Reuter is assured that the transaction is a purely business one. The reports of the amalgamation of the contracting banks are entirely false.

LLOYD-GEORGE'S FIRST SPEECH AS PREMIER

Rising in the House of Commons a few minutes after 4 o'clock on December 17 last Mr. Lloyd-George, the British Premier said:—

"I appear before the House of Commons to-day with the most terrible responsibility that can fall upon the shoulders of any living man as chief adviser of the crown in the most gigantic war in which this country was ever engaged, a war upon the events of which its destiny depends. In this the greatest war ever waged the burdens are the heaviest that have been cast upon this or any other country, and the issues the gravest that have been attached to any conflict in which humanity was ever involved.

"The responsibilities of the new Government have been suddenly accentuated by the declaration made by the German Chancellor. The statement made by him in the Reichstag has been followed by a note presented by the United States without note or comment. The answer given by this Government will be given in full accord with all our allies.

"Naturally, there has been an interchange of views, not upon the note, because it has only recently arrived, but upon the speech which impelled it, and as the note itself is practically only a reproduction or a paraphrase of the speech, the subject matter of the note itself has been discussed informally between the allies. I am glad to be able to state that we each separately and independently arrived at identical conclusions.

"I'm very glad that the first answer given to the statement of the German Chancellor was given by France and Russia. They have the unquestionable right to give the first answer to such an invitation. The enemy is still on their soil and their sacrifices have been the greater.

"The answer they have given has already appeared in the papers, and I simply stand here to give clear and definite support to the statement they have already made.

"Any man or set of men who wantonly or without sufficient cause prolonged a terrible conflict like this would have on his soul a crime that oceans could not cleanse.

"On the other hand, it is equally true that any man or set of men who, from a sense of weariness or despair, abandoned the struggle without achieving the high purposes for which we entered it, would be guilty of the costliest act of poltroonery ever perpetrated by any statesman. I should like to quote the words of Abraham Lincoln under similar conditions:

"'We accepted this war for an object, and a world object, and the war will end when the object is attained under God. I hope it will never end until that time.'

"Are we likely to achieve the object by accepting the invitation of the German Chancellor? What are the proposals? There are none.

"To enter, on the invitation of Germany proclaiming herself victorious, without any knowledge of what proposals she proposes to make, into a conference, is to put our heads into a noose with the rope end in the hands of Germany.

"This country is not altogether without experience in these matters. This is not the first time we have fought a great military despotism overshadowing Europe, and it won't be the first time we have helped to overthrow a military despotism.

"We have an uncomfortable historical memory of these things and can recall one of the greatest of these despots, whose favorite device was to appear in the garb of an angel of peace, either when he wished time to assimilate his conquests or to reorganize his forces for fresh conquests, or, secondly, when his subjects showed symptoms of fatigue and war-weariness, an appeal was always made in the name of humanity. He demanded an end to the bloodshed at which he professed himself horrified, although he himself was mainly responsible.

"Our ancestors were taken in once, and bitterly they and Europe rue it. The time was devoted to reorganizing his forces for a deadlier attack than ever upon the liberties of Europe.

"Examples of this kind cause us to regard this note with a considerable measure of reminiscent disquietude. We feel that we ought to know, before we can give favorable consideration to such an invitation, that Germany is prepared to accede to the only terms on which this possible peace can be obtained and maintained in Europe. Those terms have been repeatedly stated by all the leading statesmen of the allies. They have been stated repeatedly here and outside. To quote the leader of the House last week:

"'Reparation and guarantee against repetition, so there shall be no mistake, and it is important that there should be no mistake in a matter of life or death to millions.'

"Let me repeat—complete restitution, full reparation and effectual guarantees.

"Did the German Chancellor use a single phrase to indicate that he was prepared to accept such a peace? Was there a hint of restitution? Was there a suggestion of reparation? Was there an implication of any security for the future, that this outrage on civilization would not again be perpetrated at the first profitable opportunity?

"The very substance and style of the speech constitutes a denial of peace on the only terms on which peace is possible. He is not even conscious now that Germany has committed any offense against the rights of free nations.

"Listen to this from the note:

"'Not for an instant have they (the central powers) swerved from the conviction that respect of the rights of other nations is not in any degree incompatible with their own rights and legitimate interests.

"When did they discover this? Where was respect for the rights of other nations in Belgium and Serbia? What was self-defense, menaced, I suppose, by the overwhelming armies of Belgium. I suppose the Germans had been intimidated into invading Belgium and burning Belgian cities and villages, into massacring thousands of the inhabitants, old and young; into carrying of the survivors into bondage. Yes, and they were carrying them into slavery at the very moment when this note was being written about their unswerving conviction as to the respect due the rights of other nations.

"Are these outrages the legitimate interests of Germany? We must know. This is not a moment for peace. If excuses of this kind for palpable crimes can be put forward two and a half years after exposure by the grim facts, is there any guarantee that similar subterfuges will not be used in the future to overthrow any treaty of peace you may enter into with Prussian militarism?

"The note and speech proves that they have not yet learned the alphabet of respect for the rights of others.

"Without reparation, peace is impossible. Are all these outrages against humanity on land and sea to be liquidated by a few pious phrases about humanity? Germany leaves us to exact the damage for all future violence committed after the war. We must exact it now, so as not to leave such a grim inheritance to our children.

"Much as we all long for peace, deeply as we are horrified with war, this note and speech which heralded it do not afford us much encouragement to hope for an honourable and lasting peace.

"What hope is given in the speech that the whole root and cause of this great bitterness, the arrogant spirit of the Prussian military caste, will not be as dominant as ever, if we patch up peace now? The very speech in which these peace suggestions are made resounds to the boast of Prussian military triumph. It is a long pean over the victory of Von Hindenburg.

"We must keep a steadfast eye upon the purpose for which we entered the war. Otherwise the great sacrifices we have been making will be in vain. The German note states that it was the defences of their existence and the freedom of national development that the Central Powers were constrained to take up arms.

"Such phrases are intended to delude the German nation into supporting the designs of the Prussian military caste, who ever wished to put an end to their national existence or freedom of development. We welcomed their development so long as it was on the paths of peace.

"The allies entered this war to defend Europe against the aggression of Prussian military domination, and, having begun it, they must insist that the only end is the most complete effective guarantee against the possibility of that caste ever again disturbing the peace of Europe.

"Prussia, since she got into the hands of that caste, has been a bad neighbour, arrogant, threatening bullying shifting her boundaries at her will and taking one fair field after another from her weaker neighbours and adding them to her own dominions.

"With her belt ostentatiously full of weapons of offence and ready at a moment's notice to use them, she has always been an unpleasant, disturbing neighbour in Europe. She got thoroughly on the nerves of Europe: there was no peace near where she dwelt. It is difficult for those who are fortunate enough to live thousands of miles away to understand what it has meant to those who live near.

"Even here, with the protection of the broad seas between us, we know what a disturbing factor the Prussians were with their constant naval menace. But we can hardly realize what it meant to France and Russia. Several times there were threats directed against them, even within the lifetime of this generation, which presented the alternative of war or humiliation. There were many of us who hoped that the internal influence in Germany would be strong enough to check, and ultimately to eliminate it.

"Now that this great war has been forced by the Prussian leaders, it would be folly not to see to it that this swashbuckling through the streets of Europe and this disturbance of peaceful citizens was dealt with here and now as the most serious offense against the law of nations.

"We will wait until we hear what terms guarantees the German Government offer other than those, better than those, surer than those which she so lightly broke. And meanwhile we shall put our trust in our unbroken army rather than in broken faith.

"For the moment I do not think it would be advisable for me to add anything to this particular invitation. A formal reply will be delivered by the allies in the course of the next few days."

PLAN TO ASSASSINATE RUSSIAN EDITOR

A correspondent of the "Jiji" at Petrograd in an article under date of December 20, relates the circumstances connected with a plot to assassinate M. Milieukoff, editor of the "Reitch" and leader of the Constitutional Democrats. We translate the article as follows: I have already reported that M. Milieukoff published the astonishing statement that M. Sturmer, late Russian premier, M. Manasevitch Manuiloff, his secretary, Archbishop Mitilim, Home Minister Protopopoff and others were carrying on a movement to bring about a separate peace between Germany and Russia. This disclosure forced the late Premier to resign, after which he brought suit against M. Milieukoff for libel.

M. Milieukoff was thanked by the Minister of War, but made enemies for life of those he had accused. In fact his life was daily threatened by his political enemies.

In Petrograd an official organ named "Ruscoe Znamia" (meaning the Russian Standard) is published, which was first begun in 1905 when the Constitution was promulgated in the Russian empire. This paper is in the hands of the Russian Government and the Government party, who, as is well known, tried to make possible the conclusion of a separate peace with Germany from the outset of the present war and it naturally obtained the nickname "Pruscoe Znamia" which means the Prussian flag, after it had published an article advocating the conclusion of peace. The manager and editor of this official organ is Doublowin, a physician, who is the leader of the political clique called the "Union of the Russian people" which advocates the autocratic rule in Russia as a principle and strives to cause the unity of the Russian imperial family and the people and thus preserve the independence of the Russian Empire. The organization, moreover, stands by the principle that the Duma is invested only with the right to report on the administrative affairs to the Emperor and put interpellations to the Secretaries of State about state affairs. It may be seen, therefore, that this organization declaims any movement that tends to infringe upon autocratic sovereignty or debar bureaucratic government.

Of recent years this society has organized volunteer armies and established branch headquarters in many places over the country.

To return to Doublowin. He hired a man named Brohoji, who was on the staff of the "Ruscoe Znamia" to assassinate M. Milieukoff. I must say here that it is still doubtful whether this plot originated with Doublowin himself or with some wirepuller behind the scenes. The name Brohoji above mentioned is an assumed one, the man's real name being Gutzurullo.

This Gutzurullo, though he once avowed to Doublowin his determination to carry out the plot, changed his mind on reflection as regards the results of such a plot and finally confessed all he knew.

This confession startled the public exceedingly but the motive which actuated Doublowin will be easily explained by the facts above related with regard to the principle of the organization he is the leader of. The hired assassin, however, had already drafted a map of the residence of Milieukoff and the approaches to it, and was watching for the chance to carry out his nefarious design from the window of a tavern that stood opposite the residence of Milieukoff. Milieukoff himself owns that he received many inquiries by telephone about the security of his life and he was warned by his friends of many suspicious characters haunting the neighbourhood of his house. It went so far as to be reported sometimes that he was murdered. Now this unfruitful plot is being inquired into by the judicial authorities. As for Brohoji a domiciliary search was made in his house where some documents relating to the anticipated crime have been discovered. Doublowin and the staff of the paper he manages have been examined. Milieukoff was also consulted about this affair by the judges. In short, it may be fairly said in conclusion that there runs an undercurrent in the political circles of Russia fraught with sunken rocks which are always threatening to poke their heads up from the seeming peaceful waves that form the sea of Russian politics.

RUSSIA'S MINISTERIAL CHANGES

The "Jiji" says that the resignation of General Trepoff and the appointment of Prince Golitzyn as the Russian Premier prove that the political situation of Russia is in a troubled state. General Trepoff occupied the position of the Premiership less than seven weeks as he followed M. Sturmer on November 24th. The "Jiji" regrets that at so early a date a change was made in the Cabinet.

The cause of the downfall of the Sturmer Cabinet was the criticism that the Russian Government had not been adopting aggressive measures towards the German forces, and that the Government desired an independent peace with Germany and her allies. The same cause that brought the fate of M. Sturmer, again deprived General Trepoff of the premiership.

The "Jiji" does not believe that the Russian Government has any intention of concluding peace independently of the allies. On December 2 General Trepoff declared that Russia would not stop fighting until the final victory is won, and the determination of the Government not to conclude peace independently or otherwise has never changed. Also judging from thefirmness with which Russia refused to consider the German peace proposal, Russia and especially the Russian Government has no intention to conclude an independent peace.

The "Jiji" wonders why the Russian Government has been always accused of the intention to conclude peace independently of other allied powers. The accusation and doubt about the true wish of the Russian Government made it difficult for the allies to take joint movement, and, on the other hand, the Russian politicians always accused the Cabinet and especially the Premier on this point, and they made it impossible for the Premier to remain in his position. The "Jiji" believes that such a condition is not desirable for Russia, and hopes that such doubts regarding the intention of the Government will be soon dispersed.

While it is impossible for Russia to desire an independent peace, it is true, the "Jiji" says, that since last summer the Russian forces have been rather inactive, and failed to show the same activity as they did in the summer. Although there may be various reasons for the inactivity of the Russian forces recently, it is regrettable that when the German forces attacked Rumania, Russia was unable to send sufficient forces to support the Rumanians. If the Germans are allowed to gain the victory in Moldavia, the Russians cannot escape accusations of inactivity. Under such circumstances, although it is impossible to accuse the Russian Government for advocating independent peace, there will be many who will accuse the Government of inactivity and insincerity in the war.

However the change of the Premier at this critical moment is very promising and the "Jiji" hopes that with Prince Golitzyn at the head of the Russian Government, the policy in Rumania and other fronts will be materially changed. If Prince Golitzyn can maintain a harmony in parliament, the paper believes that he will be able to steer the government properly at this important moment.

FAILURES OF TERAUCHI CABINET

The "Yorozu" again attacks the Chinese policy of the present Cabinet and says that in diplomatic affairs, the Terauchi Cabinet has failed in every step. The Cabinet is proceeding without any definite plan, and it is similar to a runaway horse, and it is hard to tell where it will go. In Chinese affairs, the government has been shouting the necessity of friendly relations with China, but the military officers have been doing whatever they please in China, giving the Chinese an unfriendly impression.

The question of despatching a special envoy from China, was brought up by the Japanese Government at first, but it was rejected by the Southern Chinese. Several conferences were held in regard to the Chengchiatun affair, but Japan obtained no result at all by the negotiations, and the Japanese lives have been meaninglessly and unnecessarily sacrificed while the government failed to obtain any satisfaction.

Now, the "Yorozu" says that in order to cover up the failure of the Chinese policy, the present Cabinet has begun to speak about the commercial activity in China, on the ground that formerly Japan acted only for political power in China, but now it is necessary to make commercial development in China. The paper asks what opinion and plan the present Cabinet has regarding the commercial activity in China.

The "Yorozu" points out also the failure of the present Cabinet in commercial affairs of China, and says that at present England, France and Russia are unable to meet the demand of a loan from China, and as a nation of the original quadruple group, Japan should act at this minute for the entire group and consent to the flotation of the amount demanded. The paper does not know whether the Terauchi Government knew the situation and did not act, or did not know anything about such an affair, but at any rate the Terauchi Cabinet neither encouraged the flotation of such a loan nor recognizes the importance of the loan.

Politically and also financially, Count Terauchi has failed in his attitude towards China, and the "Yorozu" says that it is the most important problem to-day to regain the confidence of China, which has been lost by the mistaken policy of the Cabinet.

CABINET IS UNEASY

The "Yorozu" says that it is natural for the present Cabinet to feel uneasy about the thirty eighth session of the Diet as the Cabinet has not the confidence of the public, and if the Diet fails to destroy the Terauchi Cabinet during the present session, the public will attack and denounce the Diet. The principle of the Terauchi Cabinet is entirely different from the idea of the public, and such a Cabinet can never exist for long. The paper says that even if the Diet does not ruin the Terauchi Cabinet, the public will not stop until they have a Cabinet in which they can confide and which they can trust.

KENSEIKAI ASKED TO DEFINE POLICY

The "Tokyo Nichinichi" says that the Kenseikai should make clear its attitude towards the Cabinet, as it is beyond any doubt that when the Kenseikai signifies its policy against the Cabinet, other parties will quickly join the movement started by the Kokuminto.

When the Terauchi Cabinet was organized, the Kenseikai declared that they would attack the Cabinet when the 38th session of the Diet was opened, and at that time although the Seiyukai did not declare its attitude against the Cabinet, the party did not declare that it would support the Government. The Kokuminto was of course against the Cabinet from the beginning.

The "Nichinichi" declares that although the Kenseikai advocated the policy against the Cabinet months ago, the party is at present undecided in its policy towards the Cabinet, even after the declaration has been made by the Kokuminto. There are many members in the Kenseikai who are dissatisfied with the present Cabinet, but they are not determined to oppose the Cabinet openly.

The Kenseikai believes that the establishment of the Terauchi Cabinet is unconstitutional, and that instead of Count Terauchi, Viscount Kato should have been selected as successor to Marquis Okuma. The Kenseikai and the Terauchi Cabinet, consequently, can not exist side by side. The Kenseikai controls the majority of the Lower House, and if the declaration of lack of confidence in the present Government is openly made by the Kenseikai at the Diet, there is no other way for the Terauchi Cabinet but to resign or disperse the Diet.

However, the "Nichinichi" says that the Kenseikai is still undecided and only watching the attitude of other parties, and such an attitude by the Kenseikai is cowardice.

The Seiyukai was a powerful party once, but the paper says, at present it is so insignificant that its attitude does not matter much. The party may support the Government or may not.

Some politicians are of the opinion that the failures and mistakes of the present Cabinet should be pointed out and attacked in the Diet, but the "Nichinichi" does not believe that such an attempt will be successful. The paper says that the parties should, at the beginning, decide whether the Terauchi Cabinet should be allowed to exist or not, and little faults of the present administration are not good grounds for attack. For instance, if the Budget is attacked, the Kenseikai will find itself in a puzzling position as the Budget of the present Cabinet is nothing but a copy of the Budget made by the Okuma Cabinet, and the Kenseikai was the supporter of the Okuma Cabinet, and the Kenseikai will find itself attacking its own Budget. The diplomatic failures may be pointed out, but the former Cabinet made also made many mistakes in diplomatic affairs.

The "Nichinichi" says that such attacks on the Cabinet are useless and unnecessary and the necessary step at this moment is for the Kenseikai to make clear how it stands.

PREMIER TREPOFF'S CONSTANTINOPLE SPEECH

At one of the most stirring and momentous sittings in the history of the Duma, Premier Trepoff, whose resignation is now reported spoke as follows, one memorable day last month:

"I cannot refrain from touching upon a question which lies close to the heart of every Russian," said the Premier. "For more than a thousand years Russia has stretched out southward towards a free outlet on an open sea—the keys of the Bosphorus and Dardanelles. Oleg's shield over the gate of Constantinople—these have been the age-long dreams cherished in the hearts of the Russian people all through the different periods of its existence.

"Well, those aspirations are ready for realisation.

"From the very commencement of the war, wishing to spare human lives, and acting in accord with our Allies, we did our utmost to restrain Turkey from a mad participation in the hostilities. France, Great Britain, and Russia made no effort to get Turkey to enter the war. They only urged her that in her own interests she should remain neutral. At the same time Turkey was given formal assurances, and promises, guaranteeing her, in exchange for neutrality, the integrity of her territory and her independence, and conferring upon her certain privileges and advantages. But these efforts were in vain, and, blinded by the deceptive promises of the Germans, Turkey attacked us surreptitiously, and thus sealed her doom.

"The vital interests of Russia are as well understood by our loyal Allies as by ourselves, and that is why an agreement which we concluded in 1915 with Great Britain and France, and to which Italy has adhered, established in the most definitive fashion the right of Russia to the Straits and to Constantinople.

"The Russian people should know for what they are shedding their blood, and, in accord with our Allies, the announcement of this agreement is made to-day from this tribune. I repeat that absolute agreement on this point is firmly established among the Allies, and there is no doubt that after she has obtained sovereign possession of a free passage into the Mediterranean Russia will grant freedom of navigation for the Rumanian flag, which now, not for the first time, floats in battle side by side with the flag of Russia."

"No difficulty and no sacrifice will stop Great Russia and her brave Allies on the path of reconstruction, and of the consolidation of the bright future which will be the heritage of all the nations fighting for a just and holy cause. Our heroic troops and fleet are doing their great work without a pause.

"The first task which falls on the rest of us is to devote all our strength and every hour of our time to productive work. Russia needs the common labour of everyone, based on a regular distribution, according to individual capacity. The effect of the common effort will be to advance us nearer to our one and great aim—victory. The patriotic duty of everybody is not to undermine the country's power, but to do the utmost to strengthen it. The history of the world has never known so decisive a moment. We must organise all the power of the nation, and hurl it against the enemy. Nothing will resist that force. Remember that, however cruel the enemy's blows may be, the final victory is ours. It is surely approaching us; let us march united to meet it.

"The whole world must know once more that, whatever difficulties and whatever temporary checks are encountered, Russia—great Russia—with her valiant Allies, will mobilise the last man, and will sacrifice all her patrimony; but the war will be carried on to a decisive end, until the German yoke and German violence have for ever disappeared. The power of the enemy has been shaken, and the hour of the desired retribution approaches more and more rapidly. Nevertheless, immense efforts will be required to break definitely the resistance of the enemy, who is using all his strength against us. The resources of Russia are inexhaustible, but the harmonious and close co-operation of the whole population for the use of these resources is necessary for the accomplishment of the desired end—namely, the overthrow of our enemies.

"More than once it was announced that there would never be a premature or a separate peace. Nothing can change this resolution, which is the inflexible will of the august Russian Sovereign, who stands with the whole of his faithful people. Russia will never lay down her arms before complete victory has been attained."

"Few speeches delivered in the Duma have created a deeper impression," says the "Times" correspondent, "than that of the well-known Kursk Deputy, Purishkevitch, formerly a notorious reactionary, but now devoting all his time to work for the Army. The orator, while still avowing himself the most Right of the Right, declined to shut his eyes to the dangerous malady from which constituted authority was suffering or to the fact that the overwhelming majority of the country was on the side of the majority of the Duma, together with which it condemns the policy of the Government.

"The speech took nearly two hours in delivery, and contained many startling facts and accusations, which were all the weightier, because the good faith of their source was not open to the smallest doubt. The entire House roared when the speaker likened the members of the Cabinet to the twelve sleeping virgins. He assailed specifically and mercilessly M. Protopopoff, the food speculators, the censorship, and Germanic influence.

"'There was some malignant will,' he said, 'some strong hand pulling the strings, on behalf of Germans, despite the efforts of the Imperial Headquarters to defeat the foe.'

"M. Purishkevitch, turning to where the Ministers sat, adjured them to hasten to Imperial Headquarters, and throw themselves at the feet of the Tsar.

"'If for Ministers duty is higher than career—and I think at the present moment duty is higher than career—if you are really a united Cabinet, then go to the Tsar, and tell him it is impossible for things to go on as they are. This is not an abuse of power; this is your duty to the Emperor. If you are loyal subjects, if the glory and might of Russia, which are closely and indissolubly bound up with the august and illustrious Imperial name, are dear to you, then go to Imperial Headquarters, throw yourselves at the feet of the Tsar, and pray him to open his eyes to the terrible reality, and not to permit the destinies of the country to be guided by persons in German pay.'"

JAPAN MAY SOON HAVE THREE FANCY FLYERS

The daring feats exhibited at Aoyama by Miss Katherine Stinson, the 19 year-old American aviatrice, seem to have given greater impetus to Japanese birdmen than the exhibitions by Mr. Niles and Mr. Smith. While this young girl braves the perils of the air with amazing skill and boldness, none of Japan's aviators has ever made a flight worthy of notice, nor have any of them looped the loop. Complaints have been raised that aviation in Japan is still in a state of infancy. It is a well known fact that when Miss Katherine Stinson was in Tokyo dozens of letters poured into the Department of War every day urging that plans be made to develop aviation here.

Baron Sakatani, vice-President of the Imperial Aero Club, who was much impressed with the remarkable progress in aviation in Europe during his stay on the Continent as Japan's representatives at the Paris Economic Conference, is now encouraging the people to lend a helping hand to encourage aeronautics. The Club has started to raise more funds and collect more members, while it has instructed Mr. Yukiteru Ozaki, prominent local aviator and the eldest son of Mr. Ozaki, ex-Minister of Justice, to study looping. At Tokorozawa an aeroplane for looping purpose is now under construction and as soon as it is completed Mr. Ozaki will man the wheel. He hopes to make himself the first Japanese fancy flyer and when he masters loop flying he wishes to give demonstrations in Tokyo and then tour the provinces. Dr. Kishi's aeroplane "No. 2 Tsurugi" will be piloted by Lieut. Inouye who also wishes to learn looping. Another birdman, Mr. Ito, is now engaged in the building of a loop machine and if things go smoothly there will be at least three fancy flyers in Japan in the near future.

TO HELP DISCHARGED PRISONERS

Thanks to the discharged prisoners protection association of Tokyo under the presidency of Mr. Hara, which attains the 20th anniversary of its foundation this month, 683 released prisoners are being provided with work and treated with every kindness. It is well known that when means for the protection to discharged prisoners were scarce Mr. Hara established a shelter for the helpless and has cooperated with the authorities in seeing, as far as possible, that prisoners released do not go astray.

Since the foundation of the association Mr. Hara has received 4,610 released prisoners into his home, seventy per cent. of whom have reformed and taken up respectable callings due to his humanitarian efforts. Those prisoners released under the Imperial clemency, according to Mr. Hara have increased since 1912 but lack of sufficient provisions for such people not infrequently results in their again finding themselves in jail, before they have enjoyed freedom for any length of time. It is reported that altogether 2,017 yen was contributed towards the funds of the discharged prisoners protection association last year.

PEACE WITH DISGRACE

(The "Saturday Review.")

There is no use in measuring words over the League to Enforce Peace banquet held in the United States last week. It is better to be straight and clean in a matter of this kind, and we believe, moreover, that the best opinion in the United States will be glad to hear what men of honour and gentlemen in this country think of the affair which was graced by the presence of Mr. Hermann Ridder, of the "Staats-zeitung," Captain Hecker, of the German Army, Mr. Schiff, and other persons of that kind. The affair in question is regarded here as disgusting and offensive; and it is deplorable that Englishmen, Scotchmen, and Irishmen should have any truck whatever with it. Openly its moving spirits do not propose that the Allies shall sit down to a peace table with Germany. They are too much of the artful dodger for that. Their idea is to catch those pacifists and greenhorns here and all over the world who, though not well disposed towards Germany, and though not actually in the stop-the-war camp, are yet so intoxicated with the notion of perpetual peace that any hook baited with phrases about the brotherhood of man and the league of the nations will draw them. Once net in a considerable number of these sincere but confused, deluded people, and a step forward has been taken towards the goal which—as every intelligent man to-day knows—Germany is aiming at. Add a few benevolent statesmen—or people who at least have names recalling statesmen—and a further step, still more formidable, has been secured in the interests of the enemy. That is the game; and though there is a natural temptation to treat it as merely ridiculous or farcical, we had better be careful, for there is plenty of money behind this move and also plenty of misdirected zeal in a good many honest enough people here. Besides, behind it lie the devilish cunning and will of the most powerful nation in the world to-day—it is impossible to deny that Germany is still that though she knows well that, unless she can force some sort of draw within the next year or so, she must lose her position and ultimately go down.

We have no hesitation and no difficulty in explaining why peace banquets and their intrigues at the present time, no matter where and by whom they are held, are disgusting and impudent—i.e., shameless—from the standpoint of men of honour and gentlemen in this country and in the countries of our Allies. They are so to be felt and described because they are welcome and helpful to Germany, to the nation which broke its treaties, cast aside all rules of warfare among civilised races; robbed, ravished, murdered, and enslaved Belgians, French, and Serbs; and is even now characteristically engaged in sinking hospital ships and in starving prisoners.

That is one reason why the gorge of an honest man rises at peace banquets and the like—got up to the advantage of the enemy in the name of God! Another reason is that such intrigues are a gross insult to the glorious soldiers and sailors of the Allied Powers who have been killed or wounded in the struggle. Speaking for this country alone—though one and all our Allies will certainly take the same line—it would be an endless disgrace if we were to make any peace with Germany except the crushing and conclusive one which the Prime Minister has enunciated in noble language; for the country would thereby break its plighted word to every man who has fallen since August 1914, and to the families of each of those men. If anything the disgrace would be even more marked in the case of Great Britain than in that of France and Russia, because for more than a year and a half we recruited men largely and very loudly by means of this pledge. It was printed on hundreds of thousands of posters spread throughout the kingdom. A very large number, possibly the majority, of these men would not have joined at all under the detested so-called "voluntary system" had they not been solemnly assured that we should fight to a finish and absolutely enforce drastic terms of a conclusive peace on Germany.

But it is not only an insult to the dead to dabble in peace talk and intrigues to-day—what may be safe from an intriguing point of view, because the dead can do nothing. There are the living to be considered, too. What will the men, for example, on the Somme and Ancre—privates and officers alike—say and think if they discover that any persons of their race are entering, however vaguely, into any base peace manœuvrings with friends of the enemy? The British Army in France and elsewhere bears on the whole quite good-naturedly with our little foibles at home. True, now and again one of the soldiers, back in "blighty" for a few days' respite from mud and shells and misery, expresses mild surprise that we wear so many funny knicknacks or badges in our buttonholes. But he is not very censorious about this curious little hobby. It rather tickles him than otherwise. This, however, will not be the attitude of our friend if he finds us flirting with these hypnotised persons across the Atlantic and billing and cooing over peace proposals got up in the German interest. He may be a young man from the trenches, but we shall scarcely get over him in this matter. The soldiers will not put up with this weakness or treachery or both. They will say, if it is not stamped out and if British people are not sternly forbidden to hobnob with German peace banqueters and to lend their names: "Why should we sacrifice ourselves in the trenches if impostors at home are allowed to banquet with Germany? Why go to almost certain wounds and death and to absolutely certain misery and mud in the trenches if the end of it all is to be a base, craven peace with Germany?" And the soldiers will be perfectly justified in arguing thus. It is not good enough giving up life or limb for fellow-countrymen who are ready to traffic, however indirectly or vaguely, with the friends of the enemy over disgusting and humiliating Peace banquets.

So far as this country is concerned there must be an end absolutely and at once to anything in the nature of participation in these peace intrigues. Every British subject must cut them dead; and anyone under the allegiance of this country who plays into the enemy's hands by lending them aid, indirect or direct, should be called to stern and instant account. Peace meetings here, even when they are not, or do not seem to be, affiliated to these disgusting and impudent movements elsewhere will have to be dealt with in the same spirit. They have nothing to do with liberty; they are licentious. We would not discourage such gatherings by forbidding the Press to report their proceedings: we would discourage them by suppression pure and simple; and this should be the rule, whether they are Germanic, pro-Germanic, or cosmopolite in origin. The Secretary of State for War, in a trenchant speech this week in Parliament, declined to allow Mr. Bertrand Russell to lecture in military areas. He was absolutely right to decline. But peace gatherings are quite as mischievous to-day as Non-Conscription arguments. We have got the No-Conscriptionists under, as Germany by now must have come sadly to recognise. They roared like lions for a year and a half and scared the Thisbes of public life—though it was really only Snug the Joiner! To-day they bleat as softly as any lamb. It is time we attuned the pacifists, pro-Germans and others, to the same key.

THE FUSHUN DISASTER

Describing the terrible scene witnessed on the night of the 11th inst. at the Fushun colliery in China consequent upon an explosion of gas a special correspondent of the "Tokyo Asahi" recounts details of the disaster. On the night of the 11th, about half past 10, all the electric lights in the city of Fushun were put out when a loud explosion was heard all over the city. About half an hour later a huge column of fire was seen rising out of the Oyama mine shaft. At the time of the explosion 1,188 miners were at work under ground and as soon as they grasped the situation they scrambled toward the elevator which was available only for two journeys only, thereby saving about 100 of the panic-stricken workmen. Some 120 others found an outlet by other means, those killed reaching 1,000, it is feared. All available hands were lent to extinguish the fire but the irresistible flames were not got under control before the next afternoon. The cause of the explosion is attributed to a fire spreading from the mouth of the mine. This fact leads to the belief that the damage by fire will not prove as large as at first thought.

COUNCIL BILLS AND THE COTTON INDUSTRY OF JAPAN

(Specially written for the "Japan Times" by Prof. S. Takagi, Keio University)

The present restriction of the sale of council bills by the India Office in London to 8,000,000 rupees per week is one of the most serious economic problems Japan has had to face since the beginning of the world war. Besides this perplexing question the Russian ban on general importation through the port of Vladivostok sinks into insignificance. As is well known, British India is by far the most important source of raw material for cotton spinning in Japan and supplies this most flourishing industry of the country with more than 60 per cent. of all the raw cotton that is consumed. It is estimated that the value of this important material imported last year from India alone amounted approximately to 170,000,000 yen as against 100,000,000 yen worth of the same material bought from all other countries. But since there are other imports from India besides raw cotton and since the exports from Japan to that country are disproportionately small, the greater part of the large annual importation of raw cotton from India has had to be paid for by remittances. Now, the usual and most convenient methods of making payments in that country has been that of purchasing council bills, which the India Office in London offers for sale as a means of balancing accounts between Great Britain and her Asiatic dependency and the sale of which is so regulated as to maintain the stability of Indian exchange. Hence it naturally follows that a restriction of the sale of these bills tends to deprive the Japanese Spinners of the usual means of paying for their raw material and, therefore, to place them in a perplexing situation as to the future importation of Indian cotton. It is said that no small portion of the large orders already laid by Japanese Spinners with Indian exporters will have to be cancelled or at least cannot be expected to be filled immediately for lack of an available means of paying for it. The present stock of raw cotton in the country together with the shipments from India that have already been paid for, it is estimated, will last only about three months. Therefore, unless a decided step is at once taken to relieve the situation, the greatest organized industry of the country will be seriously affected.

As to the reason and reasons why the British Government has instituted the policy of interfering with the natural course of Indian trade and exchange, nothing definite is known. But it is possible that England desires to discourage the importation of goods and to encourage the inflow of capital from her great territory in the Orient. As a result of the war the exports from India to England have been increasing and under ordinary circumstances, the sale of Council bills should have been increased instead of restricted. But if the offer of such bills is smaller than usual, it will result either in a diminution of imports from India or in a tendency to force investments of Indian capital in the mother country. Another motive that may have impelled the British Government to take the new drastic step in connection with the Indian exchange is a solicitude on its part to provide against a dangerous inflation of currency and its attendant evils in the Asiatic dependency. Council bills sold by the India Office in London have to be cashed by the Government in India either by silver coins or by notes. But for these notes a specie reserve in gold or silver should be maintained. Consequently, the larger the amount of council bills sold, the larger must be the stock of gold or silver in the possession of the Government in India, or the shipments of these precious metals from England. But the Government stock of the necessary metals in India has been running low, while England cannot at present afford to send any of her stock of gold to India. Moreover, the quotation of silver has been rising on account of a larger demand for it in European countries so that the purchase of this metal at this time for strengthening the Indian currency system can only be done at a great loss. Under these circumstances, if there is no limit set to the sale of council bills, the circulation of notes not covered by specie reserve may continue to expand until specie payment will have to be suspended.

Whatever may be the cause or causes that have prompted the British Government to restrict the sale of council bills, a great evil threatening the cotton industry in this country should be provided against without loss of time. Several remedies have been suggested and some of them are already being acted upon. One of these suggestions is an attempt to persuade the British authorities to relax the restriction and it is said that they have been already approached and found predisposed to make a slight concession. Another is to make supreme efforts to dispatch immediately the largest possible portion of consignments of Japanese goods destined for India but at present still awaiting shipment for lack of available bottoms. Still another is try to persuade Indian exporters to accept promissory notes for their cotton. But by far the most effective, though expensive, remedy is that of shipping gold or silver or both directly from this country to India. The Yokohama Specie Bank is reported to be already undertaking such shipments and its efforts may be expected to bring about some relief. Meanwhile, if the new large issue of bonds by the Government of Great Britain proves a success, it is not at all improbable that the latter will be found more open to persuasion with respect to a sufficient relaxation of the partial ban placed on the sale of council bills.

In conclusion it may be pointed out that the new British policy in regard to the Indian exchange is not entirely an unmixed evil, for it will probably have a tendency to check the present upward trend of general prices and, therefore, also of the price of raw cotton in India, and what its Japanese importer loses in exchange may in part be offset by what he saves in its price.

THIRTY-EIGHTH SESSION OF IMPERIAL DIET RE-ASSEMBLES

Their Excellencies The Premier, Foreign And Finance Ministers Outline Government's Policy—Opposition Party Raise Interpellations in Lower House

After three weeks' recess the Imperial Diet resumed its business on Jan. 23. The House of Peers sat at 10 a.m. Owing to the speeches by Premier Count Terauchi and Viscount Motono, Foreign Minister, respectively on administrative and diplomatic policies being staged on the programme of the day the galleries were fairly well crowded. Marquis Okuma, ex-Premier, who holds a seat in the House on account of his promotion to the peerage last year, was in evidence. Viscount Ishii, ex-Foreign Minister, was also in attendance as a member. After reports had been announced by President Prince Tokugawa, Count Terauchi, the Premier, took the rostrum and delivered a speech dwelling on the Government's administrative and political policy, which is as follows:

Gentlemen:

When I received the Imperial order to form a Cabinet I was filled with fear and apprehension, but I thought that it would be against the duties of a loyal subject to decline the honour in a difficult juncture like the present, so I decided to dedicate my humble services to the public good. And it is now my great pleasure, along with my colleagues to have this opportunity of meeting you in the present session of the Diet and submitting to you a few words on the views of the Government.

True to the luminous injunctions contained in the Imperial Rescript issued on the declaration of War in August of the 3rd year of Taisho (1914), the Imperial Government is doing its best. in single-minded devotion to our common objects, to work in unreserved unison with the Allied Powers. With regard to the peace proposal made by Germany, a joint Note was forwarded to the United States Government in the name of the Allied Powers on the 30th of December last. rejecting the offer which was not inspired by any sincere desire for peace.

It is a matter for sincere gratification that our Alliance with Great Britain and its attendant understandings with Russia and France, have increasingly shown their value in connection with the present concert of action among the Allied countries. Equally satisfactory is the fact that our relations with the Treaty Powers other than our fellow participants in war are more and more cordial. The Imperial Government is paying particular attention to our relations with China, and I want to assure you, Gentlemen, that the Government has spared and will spare no pains to cultivate neighbour relations with that country. With that object in view and in consideration of the general situation in the Far East, the Government is endeavouring to sweep away all the mists and clouds that have hitherto darkened the path between the two nations and to establish between them relations of mutual trust and confidence and of mutual help and assistance.

I scarcely need remind you that armament is an indispensable means of national preservation. Care should always be taken to keep the defence of the Empire in a condition of efficiency and strength, in due response to the situation among the different Powers and in consideration of our relations with other nations and in proportion to the wealth and resources of the country. It is evident that in order to be adequately prepared against emergencies it is important that the spirit of the people as a whole should be invigorated by nursing the nationalistic idea and improving public health, and it is equally important that the national resources should be increased by promoting industries and stimulating trade and commerce.

It is a cause for profound regret that war is already in its third year and yet the sword remains unsheathed. It is, however, only a question of time that armed conflict will cease, and when that time comes we have to be prepared for the commencement of an economic war on a world-wide scale, as may easily be inferred from the result of the Economic Conference at Paris. The Imperial Government has given assent to the decisions of that Conference, and in justice to itself it has to adhere to those decisions with fidelity and due sense of responsibility. It is at the same time important to remove all causes of danger to the peace of the Far East and take all possible post-bellum measures for the protection of the prestige and interests of the Empire, with a view to the maintenance and further development of the commercial and industrial enterprises that have sprung up since the outbreak of the war and to the perpetuation of the present satisfactory condition of our foreign trade. The Imperial Government, therefore, aims at securing the development of the industries by adopting well-considered measures for the proper adjustment of finances and the regulation of the money market. It is also the Government's intention to promote education along practical lines, to nurse the spirit of the people, and encourage the beautiful habits of simplicity and frugality, with a view to the increase of the actual efficiency of national efforts. In a word, the present war is one of unprecedented magnitude and importance, and as one of the parties to it, it behoves the Japanese nation to be united, irrespective of class or politics, in order to take all important measures made necessary by the war, and decide upon policies for the lasting interests of the Empire.

In conclusion I want to state that the Government has submitted to the Diet, together with various drafts of laws, the Budget for the sixth fiscal year of Taisho, which is based on the estimates adopted by the former Cabinet with some modifications rendered necessary by the requirements of the time. All necessary explanations concerning these measures will be offered at proper times by myself and my respective colleagues. It is my earnest hope that, in consideration of the requirements of the present world situation and candid appreciation of the sincerity of the Government, you, Gentlemen, will not refuse to bestow your thoughtful attention upon these measures and give them your well-considered assent.

When the Premier's salutatory speech came to an end, Viscount Motono, Foreign Minister, made a lengthy speech dwelling on diplomatic affairs:

The translation of the speech of Viscount Motono, the Foreign Minister we render as follows:

Summoned by the confidence of His Majesty the Emperor to receive the portfolio of Foreign Affairs in the Cabinet formed by Count Terauchi, it is a great honour to be able to speak before you at the opening of the 38th session of the Diet.

I can not help, gentlemen, feeling the great responsibility that weighs upon me in accepting this appointment at the moment when grave events trouble the entire world. In spite of all the difficulties I foresaw, I realised that this great responsibility could not be refused at this moment of importance, and my duty towards our Emperor and country, made me accept the new position. I shall be very happy indeed if you will accord me your kind assistance in the discharge of my duty, considering the sentiments with which I came to occupy the present position.

The gigantic war that has now raged in Europe for two years and a half is an event unprecedented in the history of humanity. There will be undoubtedly incalculable effects upon the destiny of the nations in future. Upon the issue of the present war depends the liberty of nations. The question whether the small and large nations of the Allies will be or will not be under the German yoke, will only be solved by the result of the war.

Gentlemen, you know the cause of the present war. The unacceptable demands of Austro-Hungary upon Serbia was the apparent cause for the taking up of arms by the nations of Europe. But you cannot ignore that the German ambition for hegemony prepared for many years, was the real cause of the war. Nourishing great ambitions for the future, Germany laid her hands upon Tsingtao in 1898, with the aim to occupy the entire territory of China. This is a fact nobody can deny at present.

The great German propaganda and the minute and admirable military preparation, are not secrets to any one to-day. In the summer of 1914, Germany thought that the moment for her activity had arrived to open her campaign to dominate the entire world.

She thought that in a few months, her enemies' resistance would come to an end. But all these calculations are baffled at the end of two years and a half, and she now sees that she is forced to continue the war.

Recognizing her duty under the Anglo-Japanese Alliance, Japan did not hesitate to go to the assistance of Great Britain, at the first appeal from England. Japan has loyally accomplished her duties, and our Army and Navy have in a few months reduced the entire German forces in our quarters.

In breaking the German bases of action in China, Japan secured peace and order in the Far East. Collaborating with Great Britain to destroy the German fleet in the Pacific Ocean and the Indian Ocean, Japan has contributed greatly towards making the marine commerce of not only Japan and Great Britain, but of the Allies and neutral nations, secure and safe in the Pacific and the Indian Ocean. At the very moment when the enemies do not hesitate to take any method and means to destroy the marine commerce of the nations, the Pacific Ocean and the Indian Ocean are entirely safe. I am persuaded to believe, gentlemen, that the civilized world will justly recognize the immense service rendered by Japan for the cause of humanity.

In declaring war against Germany and joining the Declaration of London on September 5th, 1914, Japan entered the great war of Europe. Japan joined the Allies not only for the protection of the interest of Japan and the allied powers, but also in the great interest of humanity. It is the intention of Japan to make justice and right win the victory in the cruel war, and to bring true peace and happiness to the world after the conclusion of the present war.

To attain these noble ends, it is necessary that the allied powers shall win complete and decisive victory. It is not necessary to state that if this complete victory is not obtained, peace in the far east which Japan secured with sacrifices, will again be threatened.

To obtain this victory, the sacred union of all the government and people who took arms to protect the right of the people, is essentially necessary. In taking part in the present war, Japan limited her military activity, giving consideration to the particular position Japan enjoys in the Orient, and we carried out our part successfully. However, Japan is also giving assistance in every direction to the allied powers to enable them to win the final victory.

The struggle now being fought between the Allies and the enemies is not merely the fighting of the military and naval forces. It is a war of all branches of human activity. Japan should endeavour to adopt the policy to assist the fighting allies in every direction of activity, as much as possible.

It was for this purpose that Japan decided to carry out the resolutions passed at the Economic conference of the Allies held at Paris last summer. It was also for the same purpose, that the Japanese Government has taken certain administrative measures regarding the postal communications and telegraph, to protect our mutual interests. The intention of the Japanese Government to adopt several other measures to carry out the resolution passed at the Economic Conference of the allies at Paris is also for the same purpose.

It was again for the purpose of taking identical policy with the allied powers that the Imperial Government of Japan promptly consented to the signing of the replies forwarded by the French Government, representing the Allied powers, to the American Government, to the German proposal made on December 19th, and the American Note despatched on December 21st.

The reasons for which Japan refused to accept the German proposal of peace are clearly stated in the reply sent to the German Government by the allied powers through the good offices of the Government of the United States, as you are previously aware, and I will not go into details regarding these reasons. The Japanese Government considered as the governments of other allied nations did, that it was impossible to accept the terms of the peace proposal made by Germany, and also Japan believed that the time was not yet ripe for the peace conference. However regarding the Note the American Government sent and which was received by the Japanese Government on December 21st, I desire to speak a few words, on this occasion.

All the allied nations acknowledged and appreciated the noble sentiments which inspired the American Government to start a movement towards peace, but they could not accept the proposal made by the American Government regarding peace. The reasons for this decision are also fully set forth in the reply sent to the American Government by the French Government, representing the Allies, as you all well know, and I have no intention to repeat it on this occasion. However there is one point on which I desire to speak a few words to-day.

In the reply sent by the Allies to the American Government, there were indicated a certain number of conditions which were considered indispensable to be imposed upon the governments of the enemies when peace is concluded. However in the reply no allusion is made to the disposal of the German Colonies, and it is natural that the public opinion of Japan has criticized the reply on this point. This point did not escape the careful attention of the Japanese Government, but the reply sent to the American Government did not contain all the conditions of peace, and the right was reserved to present all demands by the Allies when the negotiations for peace are actually opened. This is also clearly stated in the reply sent to the American Government. On this account the actual demands to be made by the Japanese Government were not included in the reply sent to the American Government. However not to cause any misunderstanding, upon this point, when the Japanese Government signified her consent to the despatch of the reply, the Government took proper steps in this matter, and now I am pleased to state that among the allied powers there exists a satisfactory understanding on this point.

At this moment when the Allies have decided to continue the present war until the final victory of justice and right is obtained, I sincerely beg to express my hearty appreciation of the great efforts given by Great Britain, France, Russia, Italy, Belgium, Serbia, Montenegro and Rumania. Also I beg to express at the same time my admiration and respect for the brave and courageous officers and soldiers of the allied powers. And expressing my hearty sympathies for the people of various nations who have been sacrificed by the cruel deeds of the enemies, I am confident that the efforts of the allied powers will bring a bright and glorious future to the people of all such nations.

Gentlemen, it is not necessary for me to repeat that our alliance with Great Britain is the foundation of our foreign policies. The present war has proved the solidity of the alliance and also the greatness of its effect in future. The people of Japan and the people of England have been given the evidence of the necessity of this alliance for the safeguarding of the rights and interests of the two Empires. At the same time they realize that the alliance is essential to guarantee peace and order in the Far East.

It is a matter for congratulation that an agreement was signed between Russia and Japan on July 3rd, 1916, and the text of the agreement was made public at the time of the signing of the agreement, and it is not necessary to dwell upon the terms of the agreement, but I wish to say a few words regarding relations between Russia and Japan.

As soon as the Russo-Japanese war ended, the Japanese Government followed the policy of becoming friendly with Russia, and the two Governments realized the necessity of adopting a policy to seal peace between two nations, and in 1907 they concluded the first treaty. The policy was followed by the succeeding Cabinets, and the relations between the two nations became closer, and several more treaties were concluded to insure the friendly relations between Russia and Japan, and finally the convention of 1916 was successfully concluded. As the convention was concluded in the midst of the present war which will greatly affect the future of Russia, the public opinion of Russia recognized the sincerity of the Japanese intention towards friendly relations with Russia. I do not hesitate to say that the Russian Government as well as the public appreciate the assistance Japan has given Russia in the present war by giving her supplies of munitions and other articles, to enable her to open a decisive campaign in the war.

I have been in Russia more than ten studying the sentiments of the Russian public, and I have every confidence in saying that the Russian public maintain frank and sincere friendship towards the people of Japan. All the Japanese who have travelled through Russia since the outbreak of the present war will acknowledge the truth of what I have said regarding the Russian sentiment towards the Japanese.

Russia and Japan have a great interest in safeguarding the Far East. The alliance with Russia and harmonious undertakings by the two countries are necessary for the maintainance of peace and order in the Far East as much as the Anglo-Japanese alliance.

I have said enough about relations with the Allies, but before I finish I desire to speak upon the relations between Japan and the neutral countries.

During the present war in Europe, I am glad to say that our relations with the neutral countries have been most cordial and entirely satisfactory. I do not hesitate to believe that the neutral nations recognize the service the Japanese Army and Navy have done for the development and protection of their foreign trade. If the Japanese Army and Navy had not destroyed the German bases of action in China, and if the British Navy and the Japanese Navy had not driven out the German fleet from the Pacific Ocean, in what condition would the United States, Australia, China, and other neutral countries be at this moment? All nations which possess merchant vessels benefited greatly by the efforts of the British and Japanese navies which succeeded in maintaining the safety of the seas. I believe that the neutral countries recognize this fact.

Further I beg to say a word regarding the United States and China, the most friendly of the neutral nations.

As you know Japan always wished for peaceful and friendly relation with the United States, and although there have been a few incidents and problems which hurt relations, such problems have all been amicably solved by peaceful negotiations between the two Governments. There are some subjects upon which the two Governments do not agree, but in international questions there are apt to be some upon which opinions vary, and such a case even happens among allied countries. However when the two Governments earnestly desire to solve the most complicated problem with the sincere hope of an amicable settlement, there is always a way for favourable compromise.

The Governments of Japan and the United States are always taking this policy to our utmost satisfaction, and further it is pleasant that the relations between the two nations have been becoming closer and more friendly. In the question of investing capital in China, the American capitalists expressed their wish to co-operate with Japan, and it is a most pleasing tendency. At present the Japanese Government is giving careful attention and consideration to the question of joining hands with the United States in financial and commercial undertakings in China.

I believe, gentlemen, that you have been expecting the explanation of the Government regarding relations with China, and I believe that it is my duty to clearly explain the attitude of the present Cabinet towards China. I do not believe that it is necessary to mention the incidents which have happened in China of recent few years, as they must be still fresh in your memory. However these incidents caused an undesirable atmosphere between Japan and China, and such an atmosphere should be absolutely dispersed for the sake of both nations.

Considering the great interest, political and commercial, Japan has in China, Japan sincerely desire that China develop, and introduce modern civilization, and in the past Japan has been always willing to give assistance to China to enable her to progress. Japan has sent military and civil advisers to China, and together with other nations supplied China with the necessary capital to develop China, and also Japan has educated several thousands of Chinaese students. China owes much to Japan for her recent development and progress.

While Japan has been always friendly to China, China always regarded Japan with suspicion and maintained ill-feeling towards Japan. There might be many reasons for this attitude of China, but I believe that the main cause for such ill feeling on the part of the Chinese towards Japan is the attempt of some Japanese to enter politics in China.

Since the Tsing dynasty was overthrown and the Republic was established, many political parties have been organized in China, and some people in Japan have given support to one party and then other Japanese have given assistance to another party. While I firmly believe that the intention of these Japanese is sincere trying to make the political party which they favour, powerful and stronger, but the result of such activity of the Japanese in the Chinese politics has been very bad. What attitude these Japanese took when the republic was established or what was the result of the activity undertaken towards President Yuan Shi-kai? These are well known to you all, and there is no necessity for me to relate them here. However these activities made the Chinese public entertain ill-feeling towards Japan, and caused foreign countries to suspect the intention of Japan in China.

The present Cabinet decided not to take such a policy, and the Cabinet desires amicable relations with the Chinese Government. We hope that the undertakings the Japanese and Chinese Government desire to make in China, will develop China, and if China wishes, Japan will not hesitate to give her the necessary assistance.

The Japanese Government will endeavour to show the sincerity of the Japanese Government, but whether or not the Government of China will trust Japan is a matter entirely to be determined by China herself.

I beg to state here that the Japanese Government has no intention to favour one political party in China. The Imperial Government desires friendly relations with China herself, and is not contemplating forming relations with political parties. Japan desires that China will develop and progress favourably, but Japan regrets that disturbances are occurring in China constantly. It is necessary for the integrity and independence of China that China should not be divided, and Japan will prevent the division of China. This is the policy of the present Cabinet towards China.

However I beg to call your attention to the fact that Japan enjoys a special position in a certain locality of China, especially in South Manchuria and Eastern Mongolia. Japan obtained special privileges in these parts as she made many sacrifices and also because of the terms of the treaties concluded with China. It is the right and duty of Japan to protect the privileges obtained in China, and for the Chinese Government it is necessary to respect the Japanese special privileges.

If China sincerely desires friendly relations with Japan she should adopt a similar policy as that taken by the Japanese Government. Or else it will be impossible to maintain friendly relations between the two countries. I believe that when the Chinese Government learns the sincere and true intention of the Japanese Government, China will not object to the friendly policy of the Japanese Government. Nobody doubts that Japan enjoys a special position in regard to China, on account of geographical, commercial, and political relations. However other nations also have great interests in China, and this fact should not be forgotten by the Japanese. Japan should protect her own interest in China but at the same time should respect those of other nations. Japan is not wishing to take a selfish policy in China, and she is desirous to adopt a harmonious attitude with other nations interested in China. I believe that when every person proceeds with a true and sincere intention, it will be possible to adopt a policy equally beneficial for China herself and the other nations.

The present situation of the world will have a great effect upon the future of Japan, and the result of the present war in which Japan is participating will decide the future. Therefore for the protection of Japanese rights and interests the country should exert its fullest efforts. The Japanese Government desires to fulfil its important duty with the support and assistance of the members of the Diet.

In concluding this speech, I sincerely request you members of the Diet to give your sincere support to the foreign policy of the present cabinet.

At the close of Viscount Motono's speech, Viscount Ishii (ex-Foreign Minister) rose and raised an interpellation. The member was not inclined, he said, to criticise the diplomatic policy of the Ministry, but there was one point in the Foreign Minister's speech which he wanted to call the attention of the Minister as well as the nation to. The Foreign Minister, in his speech, said in effect that the former Ministry, in dealing with Chinese affairs, had given support to a section of Chinese politicians and interfered in China's internal affairs. This was a serious mistake—a grave misundertanding—which, if left uncorrected, would lead to grave consequences by creating misunderstanding of the world and causing a menace to the future of Sino-Japanese relations. The member, without waiting for the ministerial explanation, declared that the former Ministry in which he had charge of diplomatic affairs, had never taken such measures as to meddle with China's internal affairs or given any support to a political party of that country.

Viscount Motono, Foreign Minister, replied that the interpellator must have misunderstood his words, the Minister having never said that the former Ministry had interfered with China's internal affairs or given facilities to a political party of that country. The Minister added that he did not recognize the truth of that fact and wished the member not to misundertand what he stated.

After taking a recess at noon the House resat at 12.10 p.m. and took up the Order of the day. The Bill providing for the revision of the law for the control of opium, the control of the sale of firearms and gunpowder and the law pertaining to the relief funds for sufferers through natural disasters were duly explained and referred to committees.

Marquis Kuroda moved a resolution to send a message of the House to the allies' armies fighting in the front, expressing the respect and sympathy of the House for the brave officers and soldiers of the allied forces. The motion was seconded and unanimously approved. The resolution read as follows:

"Three years have elapsed since the outbreak of the war and yet the titanic struggle has not come to an end. The armies of the allied powers are doing their utmost to attain their great object, for which they have taken up arms, and expect to secure the base of a lasting peace. It is resolved that the House of Peers hereby expresses its sincere respect and profound sympathy to the strong brave determination of the allied armies who are striving for final victory with great fortitude in spite of the immense losses involved."

The House rose at 12.35 p.m.

The House of Representatives met at 1 p.m. The galleries were crowded to overflowing. Among those in evidence were Viscount Kato, the President of the Opposition, Viscount Ishii, ex-Foreign Minister (in the peers gallery), the Russian Ambassador H.E. M. Krupensky, Mr. Hioki, ex-Minister to China, Viscountess Motono, the wife of the Foreign Minister (in the diplomats' gallery), while the ministerial gallery was occupied by the Premier, other ministers, vice-ministers and secretaries.

Various reports over, President Mr. Shimada announced the reopening of the session. Mr. M. Fukuda, a Kenseikai member, motioned a change in the order of proceedings of the day and proposed to submit a resolution to send a message to the allied armies at the front expressing the sympathy and respect of the House for their bravery and fortitude shown in fighting with their common enemy, also paying tribute to their self-sacrificing martial spirit. The motion was seconded and placed on the order. Mr. Takatomi, of the Kenseikai, explained the resolution, which was subsequently passed unanimously.

Premier Count Terauchi then took the rostrum and delivered a speech on the government's administrative policy, which was to the same effect as that delivered before the Upper House in the morning. The Premier's address was hailed with laughter and insulting remarks. When the Premier's speech was finished Mr. Shoda appeared on the platform and delivered a speech (given in full on page 3) dwelling on the financial policy of the government and explaining the next year's Budget estimates. The Finance Minister was followed by Viscount Motono, Foreign Minister, who delivered the same speech as that in the Upper House in the morning. The Foreign Minister's speech was oftentimes interrupted by laughter and jeers from the opposition camp and at times the speaker was scarcely audible.

The House resumed the open meeting at 5.50 p.m. and after a few reports the House rose at 5.55 p.m.

The Government introduced in the Lower House the next year's Budget Estimates, supplementary Budget and other financial Bills.

The vote of want of confidence in the Ministry was introduced in the Lower House jointly by the Kenseikai, the Kokuminto and a section of the Koseikai members.

The House of Representatives met at the usual hour Thursday afternoon. The vote of Want of Confidence in the Government proposed by the Opposition parties was placed on the first item of the order of the day. Mr. Inukai, the leader of the Kokuminto, representing the Opposition parties, was the first to speak on the bill. Mr. Motoda, the Seiyu-kai leader, spoke against the resolution. Premier Count Terauchi then spoke in defence of the Government. Before the resolution was put to vote an Imperial Rescript ordering the dissolution of the House was issued and announced before the House, which subsequently rose at a little before three.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 16.—The French Communiqué, on Monday evening, announced: "There have been mutual bombardments upon the banks of the Somme, on the right of the Meuse and in Lorraine. After a bombardment, the Germans attacked our advanced posts between the Aisne and Argonne. They were thrown back. After a lively hand grenade struggle, we carried out several successful coups-de-main and took a quantity of material and a number of prisoners."

Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Monday evening communiqué says: "We raided the enemy lines east of Loos, inflicting many casualties. Our artillery shelled an enemy transport to the north of the Ancre."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 17.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Wednesday evening communiqué, says: "After a heavy bombardment we stormed and occupied a line of posts northward of Beaucourt-sur-Ancre. The entire objective was gained on a frontage of 600 yards with but few casualties. Our observation from this area is considerably improved. Our artillery barrage, this afternoon, broke up an enemy counter-attack with heavy loss. We are now consolidating the new position.

"In the neighbourhood of Hens, we carried out important raids with complete success. The German positions south of Cite Calouni (?) and westward of Hens were entered late on Tuesday, under cover of a heavy bombardment."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 17.—The French afternoon communiqué reads: "After a heavy bombardment for three hours, the enemy made a series of reconnaisances in the Bois des Chevaliers, the heights above the Meuse. These attempts were repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 17.—The French afternoon communiqué announces: "We repulsed small enemy attacks, east of Clery and south of Biaches and Lesparges. Our patrols penetrated the enemy's lines at several points on the heights of the Meuse and in the forest of Apremont."

Paris, Jan. 17.—The French paper "L'Intransigeant," gives an interesting account of a series of local British engagements north of the River Ancre between January 8 and January 12. The principal objective was the important rectification of the front north of Beaumont-Hamel. This was successfully carried out by capturing a salient from which the enemy had been using their machine-guns against the British outposts near Serre, and the communication trenches there.

This successful operation forms the climax to a long sequence of raids and patrol encounters, which have taken place on the British front since the end of November. It is typical of the fighting in winter. This kind of thing has been going on from Ypres to the Somme, sometimes 70 or 80 men being engaged; sometimes a couple of battalions taking part.

It amounts to a sort of fragmentary, but permanent offensive, which is extremely trying to the Germans, and is helping to wear them out. This fighting keeps up the combative spirit among the British soldiers and stimulates initiative and daring. It also helps to provide the Head-Quarters Staff with information as to the enemy's morale and plans. In short, it constitutes a system of methodical training, which will be of value when the next great offensive begins.

Petrograd, Jan. 14.—South of the Babit Lake, near Riga, the Germans en masse attacked the Russian troops, but were repulsed by the Russian fire and counter-attacks.

Rumania. East of Puna the Austrians tried to advance against the Russian troops, but were repulsed by the Russian fire. The enemy attacks north of the Slonik and south of the Oitus were also repulsed and his attacks west of the Kazin and Trotus confluent were also checked by the Russian fire. An attempt to assume the offensive was performed by the enemy east of Focsani, but he was driven back towards his trenches. About 3 regiments of the enemy attacked a Russian vanguard detachment on the river Seret 10 kilometres south-west of Brailow. Some of these attacks were repulsed, but under the pressure of outnumbering enemy forces the village Kotu Mihali was evacuated.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Jan. 15.—Rumania. The Rumanians attacked the enemy on the heights 7 kilometres south-east of Monastirsk Kasinul on the river Kazin. After a hot bayonet encounter the enemy was repulsed one kilometre to the south. The enemy having assumed the offensive in this region was not only repulsed by the Rumanians with the support of the Russian troops, but was also pressed back for 2 kilometres. 10 kilometres south-east of Galatz, the enemy troops, numbering about one regiment, attacked one Russian vanguard detachment compelling it to retreat somewhat. The enemy troops after a strong artillery preparation attacked the Russian positions 12 kilometres south-east of Focsani, but were repulsed suffering heavy losses.

OFFICIAL TO RUSSIAN EMBASSY

Petrograd, Jan. 16.—Fighting, south of the Trotus and Kazin confluent, continues with alternating success. The Russians and Rumanians advanced two kilometres, 7 kilometres south of Braila. Two enemy night attacks, south of Rekosa, were repulsed by the Rumanians. Fighting is in progress near Vadeni. Russian aviators have dropped bombs on the barges and vessels on the Danube, near Brailov, setting fire to these boats. A Russian submarine sank two steamers near the Bosphorus.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 16.—The Russian official communiqué reads: "To the south of Braila, the Russian and Rumanian composite force advanced two versts. The Rumanians beat off two night attacks south of Rekosa on the Sushitza. We bombed vessels on the Danube, in the region of Brailov. One of our submarines sank two ships near the Bosphorus."

Petrograd, Jan. 16.—The War Office announces that the Russian forces have recaptured the village of Vadeni, which is situated midway between Braila and Galatz.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 17.—The news received on Tuesday from Rumania seems to show that the force of the German drive is nearly spent. The Russians and Rumanians have received reinforcements. They are making a splendid stand on the Sereth line, and are regaining ground on their northern wing.

Hard fighting is in progress between Braila and Galatz, which Mackensen's forces are desperately striving to capture.

Fundeni, where the Germans reported a strong Russian offensive is 30 miles west of Galatz.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 17.—The Russian official communiqué reads: "The enemy attacked the Rumanians south-west of Braila. Our counter-attack drove him back. We made a night attack, and drove the Germans out of Geselesci, but an enemy counter-attack compelled us to withdraw. We stormed and captured Vadeni, a dense counter-attack by the enemy failed."

London, Jan. 17.—The "Morning Post's" Petrograd correspondent says that General Russky, commanding the Baltic province at the front, has warmly thanked General Dmitriev and his army for their admirable work during the Russian Christmas.

The operations in which General Vassiliev's Siberian corps took part was brilliantly carried out in snow, blizzard and the heaviest frosts, and in difficult marshy regions. In these unfavourable conditions which, however, probably favoured surprise, the Russians dashed through innumerable lines of entanglements and rushed the defences, blockhouses and redoubts which the enemy had spent fifteen months preparing. The correspondent says the Germans have been compelled to mass heavy reinforcements with a large force of artillery at the threatened points, but the Russians continue to hold all they have gained despite desperate counter-attacks and they also have brought up adequate artillery reinforcements.

The correspondent mentions the interesting fact that a large proportion of the Russian troops employed in the attack was composed of local levies of Letts and Esthonians whose hatred of the Germans owes its fierce intensity to the fact that these small nationalities have been for centuries ground under the heel of the local German overlords.

This thirst to avenge wrongs and their intimate knowledge of the difficult locality made them formidable and merciless foes.

A Petrograd message commenting on the successful Russian squadron's raid on the Anatolian coast, resulting in the sinking of forty Turkish sailing vessels says these were carrying various provisions to Constantinople.

The Turkish seamen probably imagined that the coast was less vigilantly watched by the Russians during the Russian Christmas and expected to slip through to the capital with their foodstuffs. In any case so large a number of Turkish ships has not been sighted in the Black Sea for a long time.

Petrograd, Jan. 17.—Western front. The enemy is developing an intense fire in the region of the railway Zboroff-Zloczoff and south of Avgustovka. South of Svistelniki, an enemy machine-gun, while firing against the Russian trenches, was destroyed by a well directed Russian shell. The fire of the enemy, south of Lamnica, was stopped by the Russian artillery.

Rumania. The enemy attack against the Russian position on the railway Bistric-Kimpolung was repulsed. The enemy attacked the Rumanians, 18 kilometres south-west of the Kazin and Trotus confluent, but was repulsed by a Russian counter-attack. The Russians succeeded by a night attack in dislodging the Germans from a village south-west of the mouth of the Rymnik, seizing 2 machine-guns, but a German counter-attack, performed with overwhelming forces compelled the Russians to evacuate this village. The German attack south-east of Gesclosci was stopped by the Russian fire. The Russian troops, after an artillery preparation, seized by assault the village Itedeni (10 kilometres south-west of Galatz). The enemy having got reinforcements, assumed the offensive, being supported by a hurricane artillery fire, but his massed troops came under the concentrated Russian fire and he was stopped, suffering heavy losses. He did not reach the Russian trenches.

[OFFICIAL TO RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Jan. 18.—Western front. South of Smorgon, Russian reconnoissance troops rushed into the enemy's trenches and after a hand to hand fight put about twenty Germans to the sword. Two subterranean galleries were in the meantime blown up by a detachment of Russian sappers. West of Semerinka, some mud huts of the enemy were destroyed by the Russian fire, the enemy firing only a few shells in reply. Near Krivska on the river Bistrica an enemy scout party of about 100 men approached a Russian vanpost, but was met at short range by the Russian fire and turned into flight, leaving arms and ammunitions. In the wood Carpathians the enemy fired about 200 shells and attacked one height 10 kilometres south of the Pneva mountain.

Rumania. The enemy's attempts in assuming the offensive on the heights, south of the Oituz River, were stopped by the Russian fire. The Rumanians repulsed a German attack south of Monastirka. On the rest of the front as far as the Danube and along the Danube front firing is in progress.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 18.—The Russian official communiqué says: "Our fire arrested the attempts of an enemy offensive south of Oituz. The Rumanians repulsed the Germans to the south of Monastirka. We surrounded a height south-west of Braila and took many prisoners."

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Jan. 21.—Western front. In the direction of Kovel, west and north-west of Velicka, the Russians launched two attacks against the enemy positions. The hostile wire entanglements were damaged by artillery barrage in many places, and several shells proved most effective, one dug-out being blown up. The enemy's heavy artillery, bombarded the Russian front north of Solshovec, on the Naraiuvka River, and did slight damage to our trenches. Near Skomorona, south of Stanslau, Russian scouts attacked an Austrian reconnaissance detachment at Zagvosd. After a hand-to-hand fight, the Austrian soldiers were some put to the sword and some captured. Firing continues on the rest of the front.

Successful reconnaissances by both Russians and Rumanians are reported from this front.

ITALIANS DEFEAT REBELS

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 18.—The Italian communiqué reads: "We completely defeated 5,000 rebels at Zoara, in Tripoli, on January 16. The enemy's losses were 1,000."

GERMANY'S WANT OF FOOD

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 18.—Letters from a neutral published here state that the writer has toured through a dozen leading German centres, and though he never heard of actual cases of starvation, the feeling is growing that Germany is faced with a prospect which will make her unable to continue the struggle unless she makes raids on Denmark and Holland for meat, corn, butter and oil. The soldiers, on returning from the front, complain most bitterly of the deterioration of the food.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 21.—An interview with Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of Blockade, has been published in France, describing the work of his Department. It concludes by saying that the scarcity in Germany is undoubtedly very grave. There is every reason to believe that the condition of her allies is worse.

A telegram from Rotterdam announces the meeting of Austrian and Hungarian statesmen in Berlin to discuss with the German leaders the question of feeding the nations. This meeting coincides with the most serious food crisis hitherto experienced in Berlin. Many of the bakeries are closed down owing to lack of supplies. Many households have been without bread for a fortnight. The failure of the potato crop is accountable for the scarcity, as potatoes are necessary for bread-making. Milk also is very scarce and very dear. A new regulation orders that sausages must contain at least 12 per cent. of bran.

GERMAN RAIDER NOW IN SOUTH ATLANTIC

New York, Jan. 18.—News Agency despatches from Buenos Ayres report that a German raider named Hineta or Vinex, operating in the South Atlantic, has sunk 19 merchantmen besides two French schooners.

Another despatch from Rio de Janeiro says that still another British vessel has been sunk with the loss of 400 lives. This later message, however, is not confirmed. The first news of the raider was brought to Pernambuco by the Hudson Maru, which conveyed to that port 237 survivors from the vessels sunk. Amongst the vessels that are reported sunk are the Georgic (10,077 tons) Voltaire (8,618 tons) Dramatist (5,415 tons) Radnorshire (4,302 tons) Samara (3,172 tons) Drina (11,483 tons) Ortega (8,075 tons) Hammershus (3,931 tons).

Pernambuco, Jan. 18.—A newspaper here prints what purports to be a statement made by the purser of the British steamer Netherby Hall to the effect that the raider sank a British steamer without warning, and it is believed that the 400 souls on board were drowned.

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 18.—It is considered here almost certain that the German raider, which has sunk over 20 vessels since December 12, is none other than the Moewe, which created such a sensation a year ago.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 19.—With regard to the new German raider, it is now recalled that a month ago the Chilean German-owned barque, Tinto, escaped from the little port of Calbuco, in Chile, after loading a considerable supply of provisions and live-stock there. It is now suspected that she was bent on privateering.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 19.—The raider has also captured a ship called the Trowdenrange, possibly the Snowdon Range. The raider is stated to be a vessel of the Moewe type. It is now known that the Saint Theodore has been converted into a commerce-raider.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Pernambuco, Jan. 20.—The German raider stopped the British vessel Dramatist December 18, bringing out the German ensign as she came alongside the English ship. Simultaneously the side of the raider dropped, revealing two guns. The Dramatist surrendered.

Armed Germans boarded the steamer and took off the crew, subsequently transferring them to the Hudson Maru, along with 237 others. The Hudson Maru followed the raider until January 12. When any vessel was sighted the crews were driven below. Water-tight doors were closed over them. The heat was stifling and the sanitation bad, say survivors who were brought here. The food was wretched, only one ounce of meat being served daily to each of the captured sailors.

Brazil, by the Hudson Maru, according to the American consul who reports the men are well.

Washington, Jan. 20.—The State Department learns from the American consul at Rio de Janeiro that the St. Theodore, captured by the German raider, has been armed with two guns and a German crew put aboard her. She is now operating as an auxiliary cruiser in the Atlantic.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 20.—The German raider which has been operating for the last month is undoubtedly the Moewe. It is believed to have left Kiel flying the Danish flag, with hay heaped over the deck to conceal the torpedo-tubes. The vessel carried a mine-laying apparatus, telescopic funnels and many supplementary plates for the purpose of changing the appearance of the deck.

When last seen the raider was painted black, although the painting was probably often changed as traces of Danish colours were noticeable on the hull beneath the last coat.

The Brazilian Minister of Marine says that the Japanese vessel Hudson Maru will not be interned at Pernambuco, but will remain there as a German prize, the Brazilian authorities considering it as a German ship.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 20.—A German official report says the British steamer Yarrowdale, 4,652 tons, was brought into harbour December 31 as a prize vessel. She was manned with a prize crew of nineteen and carried 460 members of crews from ships captured in the Atlantic. The cargoes of these ships consisted chiefly of war materials and foodstuffs.

One hundred and three neutrals among the crews are being detained as prisoners because they were employed on enemy vessels.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 21.—Berlin officially announces that the steamer Yarrowdale has been brought into the fortified sea-port of Swinemünde, at Usedom Island.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 21.—The Captain of the Radnorshire, in an interview with a pressman here to-day, stated that his vessel was chased by two commerce raiders after leaving Pernambuco on January 7. The raiders quickly overhauled him. A party of 26 Germans came on board and took charge of the vessel. He saw three vessels sunk, the Germans taking cinematograph photographs of the sinking.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, Jan. 21.—The German admiralty's statement that the neutrals among the crews of the vessels captured by the German raider "have been removed as prisoners of war," raises another issue between the United States and Germany. The British Consulate here records that three Americans from the crew of the Yarrowdale have been detained. They could not be considered prisoners of war unless the captured vessels were considered warships. The State Department has held throughout that a vessel could not be classed as a war-ship unless under naval orders, flying a Naval Flag, and manned by a naval crew.

New York, Jan. 21.—Reports from Brazil say that the German sea-raider is accompanied by three small submarines of a new type, which are apparently engaged in scout duty.

A strange craft, painted black, with four funnels was recently seen steaming rapidly off the coast of Ceara, Brazil. It may have been the raider. Survivors declare that the raider carried a number of collapsible funnels for the purpose of disguise.

The Drina has arrived in the harbour of Rio-de-Janeiro, and the Ortega is also reported safe at another port not named.

The Hudson Maru, which brought the survivors to Pernambuco had no Germans on board. It is stated that the vessel is free to leave port whenever her Commander chooses. Advices from Berlin state that the Yarrowdale reached Swinemunde, on the Baltic on December 31, with 469 survivors from the vessels sunk.

22 VESSELS SUNK IN ATLANTIC

London, Jan. 17.—The Admiralty is in receipt of information from Pernambuco, which confirms the assumption that the following ships have been sunk by a German raider. The British steamers Dramatist, 5415 tons; Radnorshire, 4302 tons; Minieh, 2,890 tons; Netherby Hall, 4,461 tons; Mount Temple, 9792 tons; King George, 3,852 tons; Voltaire, 8,618 tons; Georgic 10,077 tons. The French have lost the Nantes and Asnieres.

The Japanese steamer Hudson Maru, 3,789 tons, arrived at Pernambuco on January 15 with the masters and 237 members of the crews of some of the vessels which were sunk between December 12 and January 12. It is also announced that the Saint Theodore, 4992 tons, has been captured and a prize crew put on board. The Yarrowdale, 4,652 tons was captured and sent away with 400 men from some of the vessels sunk. There is no further news of their whereabouts.

FINISH STEAMER IS PREY OF THE PIRATES

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 19.—A telegram from Stockholm announces that the Finnish steamer Skiftet has been torpedoed and sunk by a U-boat in the Gulf of Bothnia. One hundred and 21 lives were lost and 12 persons injured as the result of the explosion. The total loss of life is 180.

ANOTHER BRITISH STEAMER SUNK

New York, Jan. 21.—The British steamer Lostwood(?) has been submarined and sunk according to a Havre despatch. The news was received by a wireless message from a French liner which cleared from here.

MR. JOHN BUCHAN'S WEEKLY SUMMARY

London, Jan. 20.—The British again carried out a series of successful raids on the Western front, the last thereof resulted in a local advance of some value. A line of the enemy posts was occupied north of Beaucourt and successfully held against an enemy counterattack. The position was carried, with few casualties, and consolidated.

Enemy trenches have been temporarily entered at various other points and much damage caused, and a number of prisoners taken. A daylight raid by the Canadian troops was particularly successful. It was carried out on a front of seven hundred yards to his second line of trenches. Heavy losses were inflicted, all the dugouts were wrecked and one hundred prisoners taken at slight cost in casualties. The British losses throughout were considerably lighter than those of the enemy. This is very evident from the fact that the British casualties were approximately equal to the number of prisoners captured.

There has at last been some improvement in conditions for fighting purposes. This applies mainly to the high ground in the Somme area, which has been hardened by the recent frosts. In Flanders the frost has not been sufficient to affect the ground appreciably.

The enemy press has constantly insisted upon differences of opinion between members of the Entente. Mischievous rumours are circulated entirely without foundation. The proceedings at the recent conferences in Rome and London clearly prove that the allied countries are in complete agreement. In their determination to obtain a settlement on the only basis that would produce real peace, they were never more united than at present.

The despatch from General Smuts, covering a period from March 21st to October 27th, 1916 records a series of military movements and actions carried out under great difficulties of climate and terrain to a uniformly successful issue. The campaign undoubtedly has been conducted with notable skill and enterprise and reflects the greatest credit on General Smuts and all serving under him. The enemy has been continually outwitted and manœuvred out of strong positions and, where he attempted a stand, he has been unable to resist the attacks pressed upon him with the sternest determination. His failure on April 9th to dislodge Colonel Van Deventer's troops from an advanced position of considerable strategical importance, marked the turning point in the campaign. For this effort the enemy had concentrated some four-thousand men and his attacks were stubbornly pressed. With defeat in this action, his last hope of successful resistance to any large portion of our force, was extinguished. Subsequently the enemy was driven from position after position by a series of successes cumulative in effect. Finally by the end of October, with the exception of the Mahenge Plateau, the Germans had lost every healthy or valuable part of their Colony. Here the report closes, but it should be noted that the operations reported since have been eminently successful.

ENEMY USES EXPLOSIVE BULLETS

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 21.—The Russian official communiqué reads. "Under cover of a concentrated artillery barrage, considerable forces of the enemy in an attack on the Maneschy front, in the vicinity of the river Rimnik, pressed back our detachments towards the Sereth. The enemy exclusively used explosive bullets southeast of Rekotiach as was the case in the Caucasus.

GERMAN SOLDIERS' DISCONTENT

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 19.—A neutral correspondent writing to the "Times" in a despatch from Cologne, dated January 12, says a demand for peace has come from the German soldiers. Marshal von Hindenburg has returned from the western front profoundly impressed. The politicians feel that they must make peace by hook or by crook.

The area of the fighting in the West, is known as the grave. Every sort of influence is used to prevent the return of particular regiments and officers thither despite the attractions of superior food and lots of amusements promised in the towns. Numerous generals on the western front have been superseded. The number of punishments among the men is simply appalling. The Germans think that submarines alone can snatch the victory from the fire. It is reported that 1,000 are being built.

MAJOR FALKENHAYN AT LARISSA

Salonika, Jan. 16.—Major Falkenhayn, formerly German Military attaché at Athens, has landed from a submarine somewhere on the Greek coast and proceeded to Larissa

A London message of the same date reads: French Headquarters (Salonika?), which report the arrival of General von Falkenhayn are confusing the name with that of Major Falkenhayn, German Military attache at Athens. The latter recently left the Greek capital, but it is notorious that he has been in communication with King Constantine by wireless. Indeed, recently he was reported to have returned to Athens.

VENEZELISTS ALL RELEASED

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 18.—All the followers of M. Venezelos, who were arrested by King Constantine's Government during the riots in Athens on December 1 and 2, have been released in compliance with the demand made in the ultimatum sent by the Allies.

News From All Sources

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 17.—In the course of his letter to the British Ambassador in Washington, in transmitting the reply of the Allies to the President of the United States Mr. Balfour said:

"There are those who think that for this disease of German militarism, international treaties and international laws may provide a sufficient cure, but such persons have ill learned the lessons so clearly taught in recent history. While other nations, notably the United States and Great Britain, were striving by treaties of arbitration to make sure that no chance of quarrel should mar the peace they desired to make perpetual, Germany stood aloof. Her philosophers preached the splendours of war. Power was proclaimed as the true end of the State. The General Staff forged with untiring industry the weapons by which at the appointed moment the power might be achieved. These facts have proved clearly enough that treaty arrangements for maintaining peace are not likely to find much favour in Berlin. They did not prove that such treaties, once made, would be utterly ineffectual. This became evident only when the war had broken out, though the demonstration when it came was overwhelming.

"So long as Germany remains the Germany which, without a shadow of justification, overran and barbarously illtreated the country she was pledged to defend, no state can regard its right as secure if they have no better protection than such a solemn treaty.

"If existing treaties are only scraps of paper, can fresh treaties help us if the violation of the most fundamental canons of international law are crowned with success?

"Will it not be in vain that the assembled nations labour to improve their code? None will profit by their rules but the criminals who break them. It is those who keep them who will suffer. Though, therefore, the people of this country share to the full the desire of the President for peace, they do not believe peace can be durable if it is not based on the success of the Allied cause, for a durable peace can hardly be expected unless three conditions are fulfilled.

"First, that the existing causes of international unrest be as far as possible removed or weakened.

"Second, that the aggressive aims and unscrupulous methods of the Central Powers fall into disrepute among their own peoples.

"Third, that behind International Law and behind all treaty arrangements for preventing or limiting hostilities some form of international sanction is devised which should give pause to the hardiest aggressor."

[OFFICIAL TO AMERICAN EMBASSY]

Washington, Jan. 22.—In his address to the United States Senate at 2 o'clock, this afternoon, the President of the United States spoke as follows:—

Gentlemen of the Senate:

On the eighteenth of December last I addressed an identical note to the Governments of the Nations now at war requesting them to state, more definitely than they had yet been stated by either group of belligerents, the terms upon which they would deem it possible to make peace. I spoke on behalf of humanity and of the rights of all neutral nations like our own; many of whose most vital interests the war puts in constant jeopardy. The Central Powers united in a reply which stated merely that they were ready to meet their antagonists in conference to discuss terms of peace. The Entente Powers have replied much more definitely and have stated, we understand, terms indeed, but with sufficient definiteness to imply details, the arrangements, guarantees, and acts of reparation which they deem to be the indispensable conditions of a satisfactory settlement. We are that much nearer a definitive discussion of the peace which will end the present war. Therefore we are that much nearer the discussion of the international concert which must thereafter hold the world at peace. In every discussion of the peace that must end this war it is taken for granted that that peace must be followed by some definite concert of Powers which will make it virtually impossible that any such catastrophe should ever overwhelm us again. Every lover of mankind, every sane and thoughtful man must take that for granted.

I have sought this opportunity to address you because I thought I owed it to you, as the council associated with me in the final determination of our international obligations, to disclose to you without reserve the thought and purpose that have been taking form in my mind in regard to the duty of our government in the days to come when it will be necessary to lay afresh and upon a new plan the foundations of peace among the nations.

It is inconceivable that the people of the United States should play no part in that great enterprise. To take part in such a service will be the opportunity for which they have sought to prepare themselves by the very principles and purposes of their polity and the approved practices of their government ever since the days when they set up a new nation in the high and honorable hope that it might in all that it was and did show mankind the way to the other nations of the world to state the conditions under which they will feel free to render it.

That service is nothing less than this: to add their authority and their power to the authority and force of other nations to guarantee peace and justice throughout the world. Such a settlement cannot be long postponed and it is right that before it be accomplished this government should frankly formulate the conditions upon which it would feel justified not any less than our people in approving its formal and solemn adherence to a league for peace. I am here to attempt to state those conditions.

The present war must first be ended; but we owe it to candor and to a just regard for the opinion of mankind to say that, so far as others participation in guarantees of future peace is concerned, it makes a great deal of difference in what way and upon what terms it is ended. The treaties and agreements which bring it to an end must embody something that will create a peace that is worth guaranteeing and preserving, a peace that will win the approval of mankind, not merely a peace to serve the several interests and immediate aims of the nations engaged. We shall have no voice in determining what those terms shall be, but we shall, I feel sure, have a voice in determining whether they shall be made lasting or not by the guarantees of a universal covenant; our judgment upon what is fundamental and essential as a condition precedent to permanency should be spoken now, not afterwards, when maybe too late.

No covenant of co-operative peace that does not include the peoples of the new world can suffice to keep the future safe against war; and yet there is only one sort of peace that the peoples of America could join in guaranteeing. The elements of that peace must be elements that engage the confidence and satisfy the principles of the American governments, elements consistent with the political faith and the practical convictions which the peoples of America have once for all embraced and undertaken to defend.

I do not mean to say that any American government would throw any obstacle in the terms of peace the governments now at war might agree upon, or seek to upset them when made, whatever they might be. I only take it for granted that mere terms of peace between the belligerents will not satisfy even the belligerents themselves. More agreements do not make peace secure. It will be absolutely necessary thencefort h that a force be created as a guarantor of the permanency of the settlement so much greater than the force of any nation now engaged or any alliance now formed or projected that no nation, no probable combination of nations could face or withstand it. If the peace presently to be made is to endure, it must be a peace made and secured by the organized major force of mankind.

The terms of the immediate peace agreed upon will determine whether it is a peace for which such a guarantee can be secured. The question upon which the whole future peace and policy of the world depends is this: Is the present war a struggle for a just and secure peace, or only for a new balance of power? If it be only a struggle for a new balance of power, who will guarantee, who can guarantee, the stable equilibrium of the new arrangement? Only a tranquil Europe can be a stable Europe. There must be, not a balance of power commenced by blurred community of power; not organized rivalries, but organized common peace.

Fortunately, we have received very explicit assurances on this point. The statement of both of the groups of nations now arrayed against one another have said, in terms that could not be misinterpreted, that it was no part of the purpose they had in mind to crush their antagonists. But the implications of these assurances may not be equally clear to all,—may not be the same on both sides of the water. I think it will be serviceable if I attempt to set forth what we understand them to be.

They imply, first of all, that it must be a peace without victory. I beg that I may be permitted to put my own interpretation upon it and that it may be understood that no other interpretation was in my thought. I am seeking only to face realities, and to face them without soft concealments. Victory would mean peace forced upon the loser—a victor's terms imposed upon the vanquished. It would be accepted in humiliation, under duress, at an intolerable sacrifice, and would leave a sting, a resentment, a bitter memory upon which terms of peace would rest, not permanently, built as upon quicksand. Only a peace between equals can last, only a peace the very principle of which is equality and a common participation in a common benefit. The right state of mind, the right feeling between nations, factors as necessary for a lasting peace as is the just settlement of vexed territory or of racial and national allegiance.

The equality of nations upon which peace must be founded if it is to last must be an equality of rights; the guarantees exchanged must neither recognize nor imply a difference between big nations and small, between those that are powerful and those that are weak. Right must be based upon the common strength, not upon the individual strength, of the nations upon whose concert peace will depend. Equality of territory or of resources there of course cannot be; nor any other sort of equality not gained in the ordinary peaceful and legitimate development of the peoples themselves. But no one asks or expects anything more than an equality of rights. Mankind is looking now for freedom of life, not for equipoises of power.

And there is a deeper thing involved than even equality of right among organized nations. No peace can last, or ought to last, which does not recognize and accept the principle that governments derive all their just powers from the consent of the governed, and that no right anywhere exists to hand peoples about from potentate to potentate as if they were property. I take it for granted, for instance, if I may venture upon a single example, that statesmen everywhere are agreed that there should be a united, independent, and autonomous Poland, and that henceforth inviolable security of life, of worship, and of industrial and social development should be guaranteed to all peoples who have lived hitherto under the power of governments devoted to a faith and purpose hostile to their own.

I speak, not because of any desire to exalt an abstract political principle which has always been held very dear by those who have sought to build up liberties in America, but for the same reason that I have spoken of the other conditions of peace which seem to me clearly indispensable,—because I wish frankly to have realities. Any peace which does not recognize and accept this principle will inevitably be upset. It will not rest upon the affections or the convictions of mankind. The ferment of spirit of whole populations will fight subtly and constantly against it, and all the world sympathize. The world can be at peace only if its life is stable, and there can be no stability where the will is in rebellion, where there is not tranquility of spirit and sense of justice, of freedom, and of right.

So far as practicable, moreover, every great people now struggling towards a full development of its resources and of its powers should be assured direct outlets to the great highways of the sea. Where this cannot be done by the cession of territory, it no doubt can be done by the neutralization of direct rights of way under the general guarantee which will assume the peace itself. With a right comity of arrangement no nation need be, should be, away from full access to the open paths of the world's commerce.

And the paths of the sea must alike in law and in fact be free. The freedom of the seas is the "sine qua non" of peace, equality, and co-operation. No doubt a somewhat radical reconsideration of many of the rules of a former practice hitherto thought to be established may be necessary in order to make the seas quite free and common in practically all circumstances for the use of mankind, but the necessity for such changes is convincing and compelling. There can be no trust or intimacy between the peoples of the world without them. The free, constant, unthreatened intercourse of nations is an essential part of the process of peace and of development. It need not be difficult either to define or to secure the freedom of the seas if the governments of the world desire it since it is a problem closely connected with the limitation of naval armaments and the co-operation of the navies of the world in keeping the seas at once free and safe. And the question of limiting naval armament opens the wider and perhaps more difficult question of the limitation of armies and of all military preparation. Difficult and delicate as these questions are, they must be faced with the utmost candor and decided in a spirit of real accommodation if peace is to come with healing in its wings, and come to stay. Peace cannot be had without concession and sacrifice. There can be no sense of safety and equality among the nations if great preponderating armaments are henceforth to be built up and maintained. The statesmen of the world must plan for peace and nations must adjust and accommodate their policy to it as they have planned for war and made ready for pitiless contest and rivalry. The question of armaments, whether on land or sea, is the most immediately and intensely practical question of the future fortunes of nations and of mankind.

I have spoken upon these great matters without reserve and with the most explicitness because I believed it seemed to me to be necessary if the world's yearning desire for peace was anywhere to find free voice and utterance. Perhaps I am the only person in right authority amongst all the peoples of the world who is at liberty to speak and hold nothing back. I am speaking as an individual, and yet am speaking also, of course, as the responsible head of a great government, and I feel confident that I have said what the people of the United States would wish me to say. May I not add that I hope and believe that I am in effect speaking for liberals and friends of humanity of this nation and of very friend of liberty? I would fain believe that I am speaking for the silent mass of mankind everywhere who have yet had no place or opportunity to speak their real hearts out concerning the death and ruin they see to have come already upon the persons and homes they hold most dear.

And in holding out the expectation that the people and governments of the United States will join the other civilized nations of the world in guaranteeing the permanence of peace upon such terms I have named I speak with the greater boldness and confidence because it is clear to every man who can think that there is in this promise no breach in either our traditions or our policy as a nation, but a fulfillment, rather of all that we have professed or striven for.

I am proposing, as it were that the nations should with one accord adopt the doctrine of President Monroe as the doctrine of the world; that no nation should seek to extend its policy over any other nation or people, but that every people should be free to determine its own polity, its own way of development, unhindered, unthreatened, unafraid, the little along with the great and powerful.

I am proposing that all nations henceforth avoid entangling alliances which would draw them into the road of power, catch them in a net of intrigue and selfish rivalry, and disturb their own affairs with influences intruded from without. There is no entangling alliance in a concert of powers. When all unite to act in the same sense and with the same thought all act in the common interest and are free to live their own lives under a common protection.

I am proposing government by the consent of the governed; that freedom of the seas which in international conference after conference representatives of the people of the United States have urged with the eloquence of those who are by conviction disciples of liberty; and that moderation of armaments which makes of armies and navies a power for order merely, not an instrument of aggression or of selfish violence.

These are American principles, American policies. We could stand for no others. They are all the principles and policies of forward looking men and women everywhere, of every modern nation, of every enlightened community. They are the principles of mankind and must prevail.

An official dispatch from Washington received here on Jan. 18 gives a summary of the editorial comment in American papers on the Allies' reply to President Wilson's Note and the Germanic second note to neutral nations, which is practically unanimous in regarding the Ailles' reply as friendly to America and also in acknowledging the reasonableness of the proposed terms. Among those may be enumerated the following journals.

The "New York World" says that such a frank and straight-forward avowal of the purposes of the Allies made in response to the President's proposal gives abundant satisfaction to the American nation, and that the allied terms may be the maximum ones in anticipation of their final victory. In view of the fact that the Allies' statements embody the alienation of enemy territories for Italy and Rumania, the European political situation may see an ideal settlement. The Allies have made no reference to the settlement of the German colonies but, the paper presumes, it is because they wish to discuss it as one of the reparation problems. The journal declares in conclusion "time has come for Germany to make a frank statement of her peace terms."

The "New York Times" admits: "The allied terms tend to reform the national constitution in Europe which has been confused ever since the Vienna conference. The war may be continued, for which however Germany should be held responsible, and her other note to neutrals concerning peace shows the failure of German foreign policy."

The New York "Herald" declares that the Allies' reply to President Wilson is a declaration of independence for humanity and civilization. The "Journal of Commerce" says that not only all the neutral nations but the German people may well agree to the reply.

The New York "Sun" says: "Germany does not make public her peace terms in response to the allied ones. If she carries on the hostilities under the present circumstances, a cry for peace will occur in Germany." The New York "Tribune" declares: "The President's efforts for the conclusion of a premature peace should be stopped at once" and adds "we believe that the U.S. Government have already perceived this by the Allies reply."

The New York "American" says that the allied peace terms are too drastic to be accepted by Germany. There is a probability of Germany stating her counter peace terms to President Wilson regarding the allied terms as their maximum ones.

BERNSTORFF'S LATEST MOVE

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 16.—With a view to cheering up Berlin at the adhesion of another neutral to President Wilson's Note, Count Bernstorff sent by wireless to Germany the text of China's reply, which ventures to declare that the war will probably affect her interests more seriously than other neutrals. China is prepared after the war to join in assuring respect for the principles of the equality of nations and in relieving them of the peril of wrongs and violence.

Chinese newspapers quoted by the "N. C. Daily News" gave the reply to President Wilson as follows:

This effect of the war on China is very great. In respect of economic and industrial affairs, China has to depend upon the assistance of friendly Powers in many ways. Our country is unable to effect anything, being somewhat handicapped by the war. Now, as your esteemed country wishes to end the war as quickly as possible, China gladly concurs and is quite willing to join and co-operate, not only owing to her own interest being involved but also because of her wonted sincere desire for peace at all times.

U.S. STOCK MARKET LEAK WIDENING IN SCOPE

Washington, Jan. 15.—Mr. Tom Lawson, the Boston broker, created quite a sensation to-day in giving evidence before the House Committee on Rules which is enquiring into the alleged leak of official information regarding the President's Peace Note.

Mr. Lawson stated in his evidence that it was Congressman Robert L. Henry, Democratic Representative from Texas, who is now conducting the leak enquiry, who was his informant. Mr. Lawson alleged that Mr. Henry was the member of Congress who had told him that a member of the Cabinet and a member of the Congress together with a certain Bank were said to have profited in the Stock Market through the leak of information. Mr. Lawson further stated that Mr. William Gibbs McAdoo Secretary of the Treasurer, was the Cabinet Member involved, according to the rumour of the alleged leak.

Mr. Lawson in a further reply to questions put by Mr. Henry said that the person he meant in his previous testimony as receiving a large amount of money for acting as a go-between was the President's Secretary, Mr. Tumulty. Mr. Lawson named many bankers as having knowledge of the leak, and also Mr. Paul N. Warburg, of the Federal Reserve Board.

Mr. Lawson then testified that Mr. Henry told him that information had come to the Committee on Rules that Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, had made a profit of over $2,000,000 by advance knowledge of the Peace Note, but he himself did not think that was true. Witness added that, late in December, Mr. Henry tried to get him to say nothing about the leak on patriotic grounds.

Mr. Henry next took the witness stand, and denied having mentioned the name of Mr. McAdoo to Mr. Lawson. "Not during our three hours' conversation did I mention the name of any Cabinet official," said Mr. Henry. He also denied that Mr. Lawson had named anybody to him.

When Mr. Lawson shook his head, Mr. Henry said he had no fear of his own reputation either in the House or in the country. "What this gentleman (meaning Lawson) says, does not disturb me," Mr. Henry concluded.

When Mr. Henry had finished his evidence, Mr. Lawson rose and, with tears welling in his eyes, called the Almighty to witness the truth of his testimony without variation.

Washington, Jan. 16.—The Stock Market leak enquiry promises to increase in its ramifications. Subpoenas have been issued for service on such well-known bankers as Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, Mr. Henry Pomeroy Davison, and his partner, Mr. Frank Arthur Vanderlip.

Mr. Lawson, to-day, continued his testimony. Under cross-examination, he declared that Mr. E. Stevens Henry told him that the Committee on Rules had details of a conversation between Mr. Lansing, Secretary of State, and Mr. Bernard Baruch in a New York Hotel, and the substance of another conversation there between them.

Mr. Lawson said he urged Mr. Henry to hold an investigation, but the latter opposed him at the time. On the ground of patriotism, Mr. Henry wanted the Stock Market investigation to be held later.

Mr. Lawson, on reconsideration, admitted that he did not learn of Mr. McAdoo's alleged connection with the leak from Mr. Henry. Mr. Archibald S. White, the banker, who met him in New York, told him that Mr. P. Fisk had boasted, late one night at the Club, of his control over Mr. McAdoo. Mr. Lawson wanted Mr. White to accompany him to the telephone, where he suggested both could call Mr. McAdoo out of his bed at Washington, and summon him to New York. Mr. White, however would not go with him.

Later on in his evidence, Mr. Lawson said that Mistress Visconti told him that a Washington correspondent, named Price, had received $500 from Mr. Tumulty, and much more from others, for acting as a go-between.

H.I.M. THE TSAR AND HIS PEOPLE

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, Jan. 21.—His Majesty the Tsar received the President of the Duma in audience yesterday. The Sovereign and Minister were closeted together for an hour.

The Emperor prescribes his Statesmen to a benevolent and frank attitude toward legislative institutions.

M. POINCARE INTERVIEWED

Paris, Jan. 20.—In the course of an interview granted by President Poincaré to Mr. Edward Marshall, an American newspaper correspondent, on President Wilson's Peace Note and the Allies' reply, the French President declared to-day:

"We are convinced that in President Wilson's mind the suggestion made to the belligerents was in accord with the traditional friendship between our two nations, but being conscious that we are fighting for mankind we find ourselves without the right to lay down our weapons before we can sign a peace that is really humane; peace that is founded upon principles which would make it workable and lasting; a peace which would be consistent with the rights of nations and would spare the world from a repetition of such a terrible catastrophe as this war.

"We are determined to continue the war until we can obtain reparations and guarantees rendered indispensable by the aggression to which we have been victims, by the sacrifices to which we have subjected ourselves and by the losses we have suffered. The answer which the allied nations have just given President Wilson is perfectly clear in this respect. For our part we have nothing to conceal. We are attacked and are defending ourselves, but are not willing to be obliged to defend ourselves perpetually against fresh attacks. Therefore, we are determined to have reparation for the past and guarantees for the future."

Mr. Marshall asked President Poincare if France felt that the return of Alsace and Lorraine, as well as the restoration of Belgium, was essential to the conclusion of satisfactory peace.

The president replied:

"During forty-four years France has struggled with pain which the old wounds caused her, but whatever may have been the burning regret which was felt for the loss of Alsace and Lorraine, France proved herself patient and resigned. But to-day when war has been declared upon her without just motives, when blood has been poured out through the fault of others how could she fail to claim a vindication founded upon right and justice?"

KAISER GIVES AID TO BRITISH LOAN

London, Jan. 17.—The "Morning Post's" financial editor points out that there is a sentence in the German Emperor's latest manifesto which has a special significance for the people of England at the moment when the subscription list of the new loan is standing open. The Kaiser's manifesto is obviously written with the impetuosity and fervour thoroughly characteristic of its author and contains those thoughts that come uppermost to his mind in a moment of wrath. "We are accustomed," says the "Morning Post," "to glowing expressions from the Kaiser regarding military and naval matters, but when he gives prominence to the fact that the Allies are waging out 'An unscrupulous economic war,' it looks as though, combined with the pressure on their naval and military forces, the support of their economic resource has played no small part in Germany's recent proposal for peace."

The correspondent, therefore, points out that this is additional encouragement given to the British public in the big money effort they have so enthusiastically entered upon.

The "Morning Post" Rome correspondent says the Italian press unanimously condemns the Austro-German reply to the allies which the "Tribuna" describes as an incredible document, proving that the German Chancellor lacks all moral sense.

The "Tribuna" asks how Germany can talk about the employment of coloured troops when she has brought Turks to Bukharest and forced the British and Italian prisoners in East Africa to perform the humblest tasks for natives.

A remarkable statement has just been issued in the industrial regions of Dusseldorf urging the population to set their teeth uncomplainingly about the food difficulties, and declaring that owing to lack of means of transport and the frost in the east, the potato supply to the industrial districts has been so small in the last few days that the five pounds of potatoes supply per head per week is no longer available for distribution, and the new rations will be three pounds of potatoes and four pounds of turnips. This substitution of turnips for potatoes where the latter are not available is more or less general throughout Prussia.

TERRIBLE EXPLOSION IN FACTORY NEAR LONDON

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 20.—An official announcement reports an explosion in a munitions factory near London Friday night. Great damage was done in the fire which followed and many lives were lost.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 21.—The Ministry of Munitions in an official statement, issued Friday evening, says:

"A fire started in a factory to the eastward of London, near the river, at which explosives were refined. A few minutes later, an explosion occurred. Many of the operatives escaped. Meanwhile all the explosives and the factory itself were completely destroyed.

Fires were caused in the neighbouring warehouses and factories, including an important flour-mill. The explosion was felt at a great distance. Three rows of houses were demolished and other property considerably damaged. The local fire-engine was destroyed and two firemen killed while playing on the fire. The chief chemist of the factory and a number of the works people were killed or buried in the débris.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 21.—The explosion in the East End on Friday evening was one of the most terrible experiences that have ever occurred in the Metropolis. The entire city to the outlying suburbs was shaken. Before the echo of the ear-splitting report had scarcely died away, an ugly scarlet glare filled the eastern sky. The wildest rumours spread, but gradually the facts filtered out. It was then found that the actual truth was dreadful enough.

Fires, caused by the falling, burning débris, broke out in the wrecked area, enveloped in addition to a flour-mill other industrial concerns and many houses. Apparently the first accident happened in a factory. Without warning a vast irruption resulted and blew up the entire establishment. There was a scene of the utmost terror; masses of burning liquid, timber and red-hot iron were projected in all directions.

Twenty-one persons died yesterday out of the injured accommodated in ten different hospitals. The death-roll as the result of the explosion is now between 50 and 60 out of 112 patients. In addition, 265 persons with lesser injuries have been treated.

London, Jan. 21.—It is stated that a huge piece of boiler weighing three to four tons was found in a field 400 yards from the scene of the disaster. Another piece weighing a ton crushed a butcher's shop, instantly killing the occupants. A heart-rending scene attended the removal of the women and girls from the blazing premises. Many were unconscious or stunned by the shock. Some were terribly burned and charred.

The fires were still burning relentlessly at midnight. Roof after roof collapsed with terrific crashes; the flames rose higher and higher, expanding into fountains of fire.

The district in the immediate neighbourhood of the explosion looks as if it had been visited by a terrible earthquake. Houses were demolished wholesale, and the roofs of others were ripped off. Some plate-glass in King's Way was blown out, while windows were broken in St. James's Park and much damage was done to glass in Brixton, Brockley and Greenwich. The shock was most severe at Lewisham and Carford.

He graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1858, was attached to the steam frigate Wabosh of the Mediterranean Squadron until 1861, then to the steam sloop Mississippi of the West Gulf Squadron. He was promoted commander-lieutenant April 19, 1861. In the smoke of the battle of Port Hudson, the Mississippi lost her bearings and ran ashore under the guns of the land batteries, and the officers and men took to the boats after setting the vessel on fire. Later Admiral Dewey served on several vessels in the North Atlantic blockading squadron, then in the European squadron and later at various stations. In January 1898 Commander Dewey, as he then was, assumed command of the Asiatic Squadron On May 1, the same year, he commanded that squadron in the Battle of Manila Bay when the Spanish Asiatic Squadron, under Admiral Montojo, was completely annihilated. VOICES OF THE PRESS

WELCOME JAPAN'S MISSION OF MERCY

The "Tokyo Asahi" welcomes the establishment of an organization to express our sympathies with the soldiers at the fronts, and give relief to the injured, sick and suffering children and women, and hopes that the entire populace of the country will support the movement and show the people of the Allies our heart-felt sympathies.

At present there are ten nations of the Allies, but eight countries have been fighting two years and a half, and sacrificed life and property. Not only have the soldiers met death and injury, but children and women have suffered, and while every able-bodied man is fighting in the trenches, women are working in factories and on farms. They are fighting and working for their nat onal existence.

Although Japan is one of the ten allied powers she is enjoying a peaceful condition, and at present she need not send even one soldier to the front. Japan played a small part in the Orient, but the fighting in the Orient was concluded long ago, and Japan now is enjoying unprecedented prosperity. With the other allied powers, already seven million soldiers have been either wounded or killed, and almost a million made orphans or widows. Suffering from hunger and cold, they are still bravely fighting for their countries.

At such a moment, the Japanese cannot stand still and watch the miseries in Europe, and the public of Japan should give to the sufferers of the other allied powers whatever they have, and extend our sincere sympathy. The "Asahi" hopes that the war-millionaires who have amassed large fortunes on account of the present war in Europe will be the first to contribute generously to the fund towards the relief mission, and the paper also wishes that every citizen of the country should give whatever he can spare for the sake of the suffering allies of Europe.

SHOULD ARM MERCHANTMEN

The "Chugai Shogyo" strongly advocates the arming of merchant vessels, and declares that recently twenty one vessels were sunk off the coast of South America, and it seems at present that German submarines intend to sink every ship of the allies as well as neutral nations. Germany is desperate and she has no discrimination, whether the ship is armed or not.

The Government consulted the Nippon Yusen Kaisha on the question of arming ships, and it is reported that the Nippon Yusen Kaisha answered the government that the company does not favour the arming of vessels, as it believes that the arming of ships will make the enemy more eager to sink Japanese ships, and they are sure to be attacked, and the crew will be made prisoners. The Nippon Yusen Kaisha believes that the arming of merchant vessels will make them more dangerous, and it is safer not to have ships armed.

However the "Chugai" declares that Germany is desperate and whether the ship is armed or not armed, the German submarines will sink her. Germany at present is like an insane man with a weapon, and she will attack anything in sight without considering what it is. Therefore, the paper believes that merchant vessels should be armed, although it is evident that mere arming of ships does not make them absolutely safe, the presence of guns on board the ships will be advantageous to the ships. The paper hopes that the Government will give thorough consideration on the subject, and study the problem from every side, and decide in favour of arming the merchant vessels.

JAPAN SHOULD THANK ALLIED SOLDIERS

The plan of extending our hearty sympathies to the soldiers of the Allies is a noble attempt, says the "Jiji" and it should be supported by the entire public of Japan. While the paper is confident that the promoters of the plan will successfully carry it out, it thinks that the present plan is to merely extend sympathies to the soldiers and give relief to the injured, sick and other sufferers. The "Jiji" declares that considering the present situation of the war, Japan should at this moment express our gratitude and thanks to the soldiers of the Allies.

At the meeting of the promoters of the relief mission, Count Terauchi stated that Japan entered the war by the virtue of the Anglo-Japanese treaty and succeeded in driving out the German ships from the South Seas and taking possession of Tsingtao. Peace in the Orient is obtained and Japan is enjoying a peaceful condition but in Europe the Allies have been fighting for two years and a half, and Japan cannot stand still and watch the miseries and difficulties of the Allies.

The "Jiji" says that the situation of Japan in the present war is exactly as stated by Count Terauchi, and Japan can only help the Allies by giving them supplies of munitions etcetera, and keep the peace in the Orient. Japan is not engaged at present in the actual war, although she is one of the ten nations of the Allies, and she is only waiting for the conclusion of the war.

However by the final victory of the allied forces in Europe, Japan will also benefit, and although the allied forces in Europe are fighting for their own countries, they are also fighting for the interest of Japan.

The "Jiji" states that it is necessary to regard the allied forces as armies fighting for the interest of Japan, and we should give them as much relief as we can, but the present plan of the relief mission is an unofficial undertaking. The "Jiji" hopes that the Japanese public in a body will officially express our gratitude and thanks to the allied forces.

To the proposal of peace made by the Kaiser and his allied states, the Allies made a strong reply that until the guarantee of permanent peace is obtained, they will not consider the peace proposal, and again to the message of President Wilson, they answered that they believe that unless Prussian militarism is destroyed there will be no peace in the world. To both replies of the Allies, Japan fixed its name as a nation joined to the Allies. It will be an excellent plan, says the "Jiji", to endorse these replies with the official expression of gratitude from the public of Japan.

The best opportunity of bringing out such plans is the re-opening of the Diet, but according to the report, the Bill against the Cabinet will be the first item to be brought out in the Diet. The "Jiji" greatly regrets that the question of sending the relief mission and expressing the gratitude of the Japanese public to the Allies, cannot be the first problem in the Diet. The present political situation necessitated the moving of a vote of lack of confidence in the present Cabinet, but the paper hopes that the subject of sending the relief mission and expressing our gratitude will not be neglected by the present session of the Diet. The "Jiji" declares that the Government and Diet should not lose the proper opportunity to express our true friendly feeling and thanks to the Allies, and hopes that the Japanese will not lack courtesy to the allied forces which are fighting for the interest of Japan as well as for their own nations.

WHEN WILL WAR END?

The "Yorozu" discusses when and how the present European war will come to an end, and says that it is evident that Germany will try to conclude peace whenever she sees a favourable opportunity to make the proposal, but on the other hand, the allied powers will not conclude peace until they have at least driven back Germany to her own territory.

Suppose, the "Yorozu" says, the Allies are firmly determined to defeat Germany and her militarism and with the full equipment of guns and munitions the allies have from now on, they keep on pressing upon the German lines, what policy will Germany take to meet the attack of the Allies? The paper believes that Germany will take the usual aggressive measure for a few months, extending her fighting lines and pushing forward, but next Germany will take a defensive step, and try to hold the attack of the Allies as long as possible. It will be the plan of Germany to tire out the allied forces and the peace conclusion will be made when both sides are too tired and exhausted to continue the war any longer.

However, one opinion says that if the Allies fail to gain victories in future as they expect, it is natural for the Allies to wish for peace, and in such a case the present year will be the critical point, and by the result of the attack of the Allies during this year, the future of the war can be plainly seen. In this argument, the "Yorozu" recognizes that the determination and courage of the allied forces are not taken into consideration, and also the question of supply of Germany and her Allies is not properly considered.

But the "Yorozu" fears that if peace is concluded when both sides are exhausted, the result will not be favourable for the allies, and declares that the Allies should in any event keep on taking the aggressive measure, and should not be exhausted before Germany is fully defeated.

MR. FUSAO OHARA MAY PROVE TO BE THE MAN

Mr. Ohara, the Japanese volunteer, on whose breast King George has consented to pin the Military medal for bravery in the field, as reported in our columns on Wednesday, seems to be Mr. Fusao Ohara aged 30, according to the "Yorodzu" which paper appears to have ample reasons for identifying him as the plucky private. Mr. Fusao Ohara, says the "Yorodzu," who was born in Toyama prefecture has been a fine-spirited fellow of ambition ever since his childhood. At the age of 13 he went to London where he earned his living as a pot-boy in a bar-room. He returned to Japan after ten years' stay in England. He was for a short time business manager of the Hibiya Hotel here and published a book entitled "Drinking at Home." Then he went to Shanghai and next to India where he made money by running a Japanese acrobatic groupe. The money he made, however, dwindled away when he travelled to Australia with the groupe in search of another chance, and coming back to India empty-handed, he obtained a position with the Maharajah of Nepal, India. He was arrested by the British authorities in connection with a certain case, but during his journey from Nepal to Calcutta under police escort, he threw himself into the Ganges and escaped.

After that he disguised himself as a Turkish woman to deceive the police and with the outbreak of the war he enlisted in a Sikh regiment in India as a volunteer under the name of a correspondent of the "Bombay Daily Mail," says the "Yorodzu." Whether or not Private Ohara of the Middlesex Regiment is Mr. Fusao Ohara remains to be seen.

The following is a short history of the Military Medal, which decoration has just been won by Private Ohara, a Japanese journalist, serving with the Middlesex Regiment.

The King, being desirous of signifying appreciation for acts of gallantry and devotion to duty performed by non-commissioned officers and men of the Army in the field, has by Royal warrant instituted a new silver medal designated the Military Medal. The medal will bear on the obverse the Royal effigy, and on the reverse the words "For Bravery in the Field," encircled by a wreath surmounted by the Royal cipher and a crown.

The medal will be worn immediately before all war medals, and shall be worn on the left breast, pendent from a ribbon of one inch and one quarter in width, in colour dark blue, having in the centre three white and two crimson stripes alternating. In cases where non-commissioned officers and men who have been awarded the Military Medal shall be recommended by a Commander-in-Chief in the field for further acts of bravery, a bar may be added to the medal already conferred.

A Royal Warrant, dated June 21, 1916, provides that the Military Medal may, in exceptional circumstances, on the special recommendation of a Commander-in-Chief in the field, be awarded to women, whether subjects or foreign persons, who have shown bravery and devotion under fire.

JAPAN'S MISSION OF MERCY TO ALLIES

The promoters of the mission to the Allied powers to convey sympathy to soldiers at the front and relefs to the injured, sick and sufferers, met Wednesday morning at the official residence of the Premier.

As chairman of the promoters, Count Terauchi, the Premier had invited leading Peers, and prominent citizens of all parts of the country to be present. He explained the nature of the mission, and asked support for the movement of the entire population of the country.

Count Terauchi said that Japan had entered the vortex of the war by the virtue of the Anglo-Japanese treaty and succeeded in conquering Tsingtao and driving away the German fleet from the South Seas. However the war has been continuing almost three years, and the Allied powers had already sacrificed many millions of life, and are still continuing fighting in Europe. Although Japan is at present in a peaceful condition, as a nation joined to the Allies, she cannot remain inactive seeing the difficulties and miseries experienced by the people of the allied powers. From the very bottom of her heart, Japan desires to express sympathy to the allied forces fighting in Europe, and give whatever relief she can to the injured, and other sufferers. Count Terauchi said that the question of despatching a mission to Europe was put to him by Baron Shibuzawa and Mr. B. Nakano, and to carry out the noble plan of sending the mission, he had requested the leading men of the country to join the movement and give the mission every possible support.

To carry out the plan, Prince I. Tokugawa, Chairman of the House of Peers, was appointed President of the Mission, and Mr. S. Shimada, Speaker of the House of Representatives, and Baron E. Shibuzawa Vice-presidents. Baron Yanagita, Mr. K. Okazaki, Mr. S. Hayakawa, Mr. S. Ohashi, Mr. T. Wada, Mr. T. Kakinuma, Mr. N. Nakano, Mr. Z. Yasuda, Mr. M. Kushida and Baron R. Kondo were selected as the Committee.

Barons Kondo and K. Okura were made Treasurers.

Following an address by Baron Shibuzawa, who earnestly sought the support of the plan, Baron Kondo said that about ten million soldiers are fighting for the Allies, and to do something for them would mean a large amount of money. To this statement, Baron Shibuzawa replied by saying that for the flood sufferers in the north-eastern part of the country, 1,800,000 yen was raised some time ago, and it would not be difficult to raise two million yen for the soldiers of the Allies.

The plan outlined in Wednesday's meeting was eagerly supported by all present. Contributions will be received until March 31st, and the persons to be despatched to the allied countries will be chosen later. The mission is entirely an unofficial undertaking, but the government will give all assistance in its power.

Among those who were present at yesterday's meeting and who signified their support of the movement were, Prince I. Tokugawa, Prince M. Mori, Prince T. Shimazu, Prince K. Tokugawa, Marquis N. Asano, Marquis N. Nabeshima, Marquis N. Kuroda, Marquis R. Tokugawa, Marquis T. Yamanouchi, Marquis T. Mayeda, Marquis Tokugawa, Marquis M. Hosokawa, Marquis K. Tokugawa, Count H. Hayashi, Viscount T. Makino, Baron T. Ozawa, Baron S. Makino, Baron S. Arichi, Viscount T. Sakai, Baron K. Iwasaki, Baron K. Okura, Baron T. Furukawa, Dr. T. Dan, Mr. K. Murai, Baron R. Kondo, Baron S. Go, Viscount Y. Mishima, Baron Y. Mitsui, Baron Shibuzawa, Baron I. Morimura, Baron Z. Konoike, Baron H. Fujita, Baron K. Sumitomo, Mr. K. Otani, Mr. K. Matsukata, other leading business men of Tokyo, Kyoto, Osaka, Yokohama, Kobe and Nagoya, Statesmen, representatives of Newspapers, magazines, and of many other callings.

M. LEO TOLSTOY IN JAPAN ON SHORT VISIT

A noteworthy visitor has arrived in Japan from Russia in the person of Count Leo Tolstoy, heir of the late Count Tolstoy, the world-famous novelist and philosopher of Yasnaya Poliana of Russia, whose immortal literary works are now decidedly popular among the rising generation of Japan. Count Leo Tolstoy, accompanied by his French secretary, Mme. Grof arrived at Tsuruga from Vladivostok by a Russian steamer on the morning of Jan. 22 and reaching Tokyo Tuesday is now registered at the Imperial Hotel.

The son of the illustrious Russian novelist who is 47 years of age is a graduate of the Moscow University and maintains a high position in the literary world in present day Russia, the work which made him famous as a novelist being "the Prelude to Shoepen" which he wrote for the "Novoe Vremya" nineteen years ago. Like his father's works a religious and ethical spirit permeates his writings of which "The School Days," "Starvation" and "For Children" are well known and have been translated into various languages.

Count Leo Tolstoy told a party of pressmen that the chief object of his long-cherished visit to this country is to study Japanese literature which he has regrettably failed so far to do. He intends to spend some time in Japan and will travel about with Tokyo as his base.

ALLEGED INFRINGEMENT

The second hearing of the suit brought by the Tokyo Electric Company which represents the General Electric Company of New York in Japan, against the Nippon Electric Bulb Company upon the infringement of its patent rights was held, yesterday morning, in the Tokyo District Court. The bulbs manufactured by the Tokyo Electric Bulb Company were produced in Court, and the plaintiffs declared that the bulb made by the defendants was similar to the Tungsten lamp manufactured and patented by the General Electric Company.

However the second hearing of the case was postponed until the Patent Bureau makes decision upon the question whether the filament used in the lamp made by the Nippon Electric bulb company is similar to the Tungsten filament patented by the General Electric Company. The decision of the Patent Bureau will be keenly watched. The plaintiff company was represented by Dr. Kishi and Mr. Iriye, and the defendants by Drs. Iwata and Hara.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LECTURE AT YOKOHAMA

Mr. W. G. Metcalf of Yokohama reports as follows of a lecture on Christian Science by Mr. Clarence W. Chadwick of Boston before a large and intensely attentive audience on Tuesday evening at Yokohama:—

"We have assembled here to-night to hear an explanation of the doctrines of Christian Science, personally my knowledge of Christian Science is limited, but the study I have given to it has shown me that it is worthy the consideration of thinking men and women.

"Christian Science was discovered by Mary Baker Eddy some 50 years ago and although it has had to stand the usual criticism and ridicule any deep subject not easily understood always has to stand, it has continued to grow, encourage, and help thousands who are its followers and anyone visiting the Churches belonging to this religion as I have done cannot help but realize that the congregations which crowd these buildings are made up of deep thinking and intelligent men and women who are earnestly seeking to find the truth.

"The Christian Scientists I have known have always had my respect for the tolerance they show to other religions, the cheerful spirit they have, and the happy life they lead, and I hope to-night that all of us, by keeping an open, unbiased mind may gain a knowledge of the truths which Christian Science must contain to enable it to have made the enormous progress it has. With these few remarks Ladies and Gentlemen it is my pleasure this evening to introduce to you the Lecture, Mr. Clarence W. Chadwick C. S. B. member of the Board of Lectureship of the Mother Church, The First Church of Christ Scientist in Boston, Massachusetts."

A resume of the lecture follows:

In the evolution of human thinking it is becoming more and more evident that we live in a thought world. Whatever confronts us must be of mental procurement, else there could be no mental or conscious recognition of it. What does the eye behold but a mental image pictured on the retina? We see thoughts because we think them. Things are thoughts and thoughts are things. Divest human existence of all thought and there would be nothing left to see, hear, touch, taste or smell. Without thought there would be nothing to think or to talk about.

It was in the year 1866 that Mrs. Eddy made the all-important discovery that "all causation was Mind, and every effect a mental phenomenon" (Retrospection and Introspection, p. 24).

By Mind she means not the carnal or mortal mind which "is enmity against God," but one infinite supreme creative governing intelligence of the universe, eternal and unchangeable.

Christian Scientists are a great deal more interested in the subject of health than in disease. They have found out that the right idea of health when intelligently presented to humanity is far more contagious than the thought of disease. They do not believe in getting sick and then having to become proficient in a knowledge of disease before learning how to be well. They have learned that health is the normal condition of man in Christian Science, and that disease is a mistake of the human mind to be corrected by a right understanding of health as an attribute of God.

Jesus did not advise us to acquire a knowledge of disease in order to heal disease. He did not counsel his followers to study medical works in order to cope intelligently with the ills of the flesh. He did not say to study what the world says about sin in order to avoid its experience. What did he say? This, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness" which is equivalent to saying, "Seek ye first the spiritual understanding of God and his right thought or ideas." Christian Science has come to open the door of consciousness to receive this understanding of God and to apply it to the correction of every human mistake.

The beneficent influence of Christian Science is far-reaching. "It blesses him who gives and him who takes." It is no respecter of persons or ailments. It appeals to all classes of people, bidding them awaken from the daydream of life in matter. Those who listen to its message of "on earth peace, good will toward men," experience moral and physical healing.

It is very plain to the student of Christian Science that the direct effects of wrong thinking upon the body, such as the indulgence of malice, anger, hatred and revenge, cannot be healed either by drug or knife. The root of the trouble is not visible in any physical manifestation, but lies hidden in the dark recesses of mortal consciousness. In this consciousness must we grapple with every mortal belief, theory, opinion and suggestion, and silence its self-assumed right to existence, before real healing can be accomplished. Only through mental surgery, in other words, do we make practical use of the ounce of prevention. Drugging the poor innocent body to correct the effects of sinful thought is little else than trying to erase a shadow on the wall without interfering with that which is responsible for the shadow.

Christian Science deals directly with the moral fault in the treatment of disease. If one is receptive to the true idea of God, ready and willing to be shown how to change his habits of thought, this idea will quickly supplant a multitude of erroneous theories and opinions and often bring immediate relief from suffering.

The greatest reform movement on earth to-day is Christian Science healing, because it means the coming of Christ to human consciousness. One who honestly approaches Christian Science, even as a remedy for some socalled physical ailment, will meet with the greatest surprise of his life.

Mrs. Eddy's vision of the Christ not only healed her of the effects of a socalled fatal accident, but enabled her to reach a purified mental height where she could spiritually discern the deep things of God and give them to the world. She named her discovery Christian Science. She was, to use her own words, "only a scribe echoing the harmonies of heaven in divine metaphysics" (The First Church of Christ, Scientist and Miscellany, p. 115), consequently she had no excuse to offer for inditing the pages of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures." The world owes a profound debt of gratitude to this noble woman for what is contained in this unique book. There are many thousands who can testify that the Bible was a sealed book before Science and Health came to them.

Mrs. Eddy as the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, fought the good fight and bravely won her laurels. Her works which have followed her have proved her one of the greatest and yet most humble of religious Leaders and Teachers.

The world is burdened with false teaching. There is much in the world concerning health and disease which is misleading in the extreme. It is the province of Christian Science to correct such teaching by turning the thought of humanity to Christ Jesus as the sole authority on all subjects essential to human progress and happiness.

Who could accuse Jesus of ever establishing a clinic? He paid little attention to disease or its symptoms, but he constantly healed the sick by the spoken word, and he bade his followers do likewise. His ideals of Life embraced no knowledge of disease as an entity or reality. His mission, as well as that of Christian Science, is to prove such knowledge unreal, a nonentity. This was not and cannot be done by human argument or reasoning. It requires spiritual understanding, and according to Scripture this understanding is a "knowledge of the holy," or holy one.

Would years of study of counterfeit money enable one to detect a spurious bill sooner than could one who is thoroughly familiar with the genuine bill?

Would the musician who advocated a systematic study of discords ever succeed in bringing out a true sense of harmony to his pupils?

Has anyone ever heard of a school of mathematics where mistakes in calculation are specialized to the exclusion of the rule of exactness which alone enables one to correct such mistakes?

Would a human parent be very liable to advise his child to make a special study of malice, envy, hatred and revenge as a preliminary to understanding the nature of everpresent divine Love?

Then why make an exception in the case of disease and insist that it alone among the errors of the human mind shall be feared, studied, investigated, classified, discussed, diagnosed and published broadcast in the attempt to find health? Christian Science makes it very clear to the world that this is a very sure method of perpetuating disease and of eradicating one's true sense of health. Since this method has been in vogue diseases and fear have multiplied and suffering has increased.

One of the first lessons of Christian Science is to reverse this barbarous habit of thinking, talking, and heralding the symptoms of disease. There is nothing more enervating and demoralizing than to magnify in thought some phase of evil which one would overcome or destroy.

In deference to the world's ignorance of Christian metaphysics we speak of treatment and practitioner in Christian Science. Students of Christian Science who have experienced healing and regeneration, who have made a thorough study of our Leader's works, and are loyal to her teachings, are in a position to prove to others their understanding of the Christ healing. Through what is known as treatment hundreds of persons throughout the world are daily being healed in Christian Science. Such treatment is not the erroneous influence of any form of mesmerism or hypnotism, of one human mind over another, but is the activity of the Word of God in human consciousness. It is the mental approach or coming of the right idea of God. It is the prayer that knows instead of believes what constitutes the kingdom of God in man.

Many who are sufficiently purified in thought and manner of living to express the right idea of treatment, and who can devote their time to such work, are known as Christian Science practitioners. Their mission is not primarily to effect physical healing, but to bring to humanity a scientific understanding of God and His "saving health." This right idea of health acts as a spiritual leaven, purging out of human consciousness every erroneous or unholy thought.

There is nothing more sacred than treatment in Christian Science, and the practitioner who lets God give the treatment is indeed a true follower of the Christ.

Along with all great subjects, Christian Science has its text-book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy. This book is indeed a spiritual key to the Bible, and as such it has proved itself to be the Bible's best friend. It has opened up the hidden spiritual or metaphysical meaning of the Scriptures, has caused thousands upon thousands of persons to reverence the "book of books" as never before, to ponder and study its sacred pages from a pure sense of love for the truth, has greatly increased its sale and circulation, in fact, has made the Bible an indispensable companion in numberless homes in all sections of the world.

Despite all opposition to what the world imagines Christian Science to be, the demand for Mrs. Eddy's book is constantly increasing, and its inspired healing message continues to bring joy and happiness into the lives of suffering humanity.

Results certainly prove that the Christian Science text-book is a scientific presentation to the world of right ideas. These brave warriors of the mental realm will continue to "fight the good fight of faith" and to "lay hold on eternal life," until "the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." (Hab. ii. 24.)

N.Y.K. DIRECTORS REACH DECISION ON ARMING

It is reported that the Nippon Yusen Kaisha at the meeting of directors held on Jan. 18 decided not to arm its ships. The N.Y.K. has been collecting informations and opinions on the question of arming merchant ships, and to make a decision upon the problem a directors' meet ng was called. The directors of the company reason that even if only one gun was placed on board a ship, it will not be sufficient to scare the enemy and protect the ship, and on the contrary the arming of the ship will hurt the feel ng of the enemies who will be more determined to sink Japanese ships and will capture the crews. They believe that the presence of a gun on board a ship will endanger the life on board and the safety of the ship, and therefore have decided not to arm their sh ps.

The company select the speediest ships for the European route, and with most careful precautions will continue the European line. The directors believe that such a method will be much better and safer than arming sh ps.

A report says that the Nippon Yusen Kaisha submitted the decision of the directors not to arm its ships to the government authorities yesterday.

The verdict of the authorit es will be awaited with especial interest, in view of German U-boat commanders' action with regard to unarmed ships in the past.

EDUCATION IN JAPAN

On the afternoon of the 18th inst. the Educational Investigations Committee of the Department of Education met at the official residence of Mr. Okada, Minister of Education when Baron D. Kikuchi, Messrs. Eitaro Komatsubara, Jigoro Kano, Senshi Egi, and others were present. Dr. Sakurai, Dean of the College of Science, of the Tokyo Imperial University delivered a speech in reference to the proposed reform in the educational system of this country, the gist of which was as follows:

"Education in this country nowadays is carried out on the basis that the students are crammed with knowledge to an excessive degree while no steps are taken to cause the students to develop their intellect of their own accord. This kind of educational method naturally evolves a tendency in the students after they have graduated from school to soon show lack of efficiency in social life. To amend such a defect it is most necessary that more care should be taken about the education of boys at home as well as at school, and especially care must be taken that the most adequate teachers are appointed in schools.

"According to the present system of education it is often the case that the knowledge afforded by the teachers at universities is too pedantic to students of non-professional minds on the one hand, and too superficial for professional-minded students on the other, so that the need for adequate institutions to accommodate the two different classes of students must instantly be met.

"So I would suggest that the Imperial Academy be more fully equipped to meet the demand of the professional-minded. For those not wishing to ob ain academic knowledge suitable schools must be furnished."

THE DISSOLUTION OF PARLIAMENT AND THE BUDGET

(Communicated.)

IT is generally believed that the logical and irresistible stand the Kokuminto party took with regard to the constitutionality of the Terauchi Cabinet forced the Kensei-kai party to fall in line and made the dissolution of the Diet inevitable. But can this widely accepted view be taken as a satisfactory explanation of the anomalous political situation, when we remember that the party under the leadership of Mr. Inukai controlled only twenty-eight seats in the Lower House, whereas Viscount Kato's followers constituted an absolute majority? The Kokuminto party could indeed afford to introduce a vote of lack of confidence in the present cabinet regardless of its consequences, for in the event of its passage and of the consequent dissolution of Parliament, they could safely expect the return of a much larger membership of their own political inclination. But this could not and can not be the case with the other party.

It is a generally admitted fact that not a few of the two hundred odd members of the Kensei-kai party in the Lower House in the last session owed their seats to the irregular practices of the Okuma Cabinet during the last general election in the Spring of 1915, and even its enthusiastic sympathizers do not claim the re-election of more than one hundred and fifty of the former members in its camp.

But if such was the case, why did Viscount Kato's party seemingly allow itself to be led by the nose by a party whose membership was less than one-seventh of its own? The answer to this query seems to lie in the uncomfortable circumstance under which the majority camp found itself at the beginning of the last session. The national budget for the fiscal year of 1917, which the Government was about to introduce formally to the Lower House for its deliberation, had been prepared by the Terauchi Cabinet in accordance, in the main, with the general plans formulated by the Okuma Cabinet before the latter resigned last autumn. Consequently, although the Kensei-kai party composed of the supporters of Marquis Okuma during his Premiership controlled the decisive vote in the House of Representatives, it could not reject the Terauchi budget in toto without incurring an ill reputation for political fair-dealing or lack of it. On the other hand, they could not permit it to pass unchallenged without appearing to surrender to their political opponents in the Upper House on a matter of vital importance from their own standpoint. In preparing the budget bill in question, the present Cabinet reversed the policies of the preceding cabinet on the national Sinking Fund and the Railway Loan. In order to be consistent, therefore, the Kensei-kai party would have had to attempt an amendment of the Budget. But whatever may be said of the merit of the new policies of the Terauchi Cabinet in this respect, the position of the Okuma Ministry and the Kensei-kai party was clearly untenable. In the inevitable debate that would have followed a motion for an amendment of the budget with respect to the Sinking Fund and Railway Loan, all the force of oratory that the majority party could display would not have been sufficient to make up for the weakness of argument that it could not conceal.

Under these circumstances, it was far more politic on the part of the Kensei-kai to accept the invitation of the Kokuminto party to join in a motion for lack of confidence in the Government and compel the latter to dissolve the Diet at the beginning of the session than to wait longer and to find itself caught hopelessly on the two horns of the dilemma. Nor is this all. By pretending to follow the lead of another party, they could escape taking direct responsibility for the dissolution, and, by posing as martyrs to the cause of constitutional government, they could count on a larger number of re-elections than would otherwise have been the case.

While politicians thrive, people suffer. The country is again left without a formally voted budget. In accordance with the provision in the Constitution, the budget for the present fiscal year will be used by the Government as the basis of the national house-keeping for the next fiscal year beginning with the 1st of April. The appropriations for all the new administration as well as financial plans which were incorporated in the 1917 budget will be grouped together into a separate bill and introduced as a subsidiary budget at the extraordinary session of the Diet, which is to be convened, by the provision of the Constitution, within five months of the dissolution of the previous Diet, or in the latter part of June next. In case, however, the Opposition again constitutes a majority in this coming extraordinary session, a vote on these appropriations will be delayed, for the Terauchi Cabinet may then be forced out of office, and political chaos such as we witnessed when the Yamamoto Cabinet fell three years ago may again reign.

GENERAL ELECTION IS TO BE HELD APRIL 20

An Imperial ordinance was issued Wednesday morning proclaiming that the general election will be held on the 20th of April next. Varying forecasts are made as to the prospective result of the coming election, but none of them is reliable or trustworthy as all suppositions or surmises are naturally not unbiassed, being more or less imbued with the influence of party interest. Mr. Okazaki, chief secretary of the House of Representatives, talking on the subject says that though the coming general election will be held under the similar circumstances to those at the last election, both being the result of the dissolution of the house, the public will commit a mistake if they are inclined to form a forecast about the issue of the coming election on the basis of the previous occasion, because the trend of the political situation greatly differs. Taking into consideration the political situation of the present time, the future trend of the tendency in political circles and public sentiments, the statistics of the elections in the past, the condition of the distribution of the influence of various political parties and other contributing circumstances, the chief secretary of the Lower House is convinced that the result of the forthcoming contest will be decidedly in favour of the Seiyukai camp, which is sure to secure more seats in the House than at the last session of the Diet.

Of course it is a matter of impossibility to attempt anything like an estimation of the possible figures of the members to be returned to the legislative by that party in the coming election. On the other hand, it is possible that the Kenseikai, the present majority party, will lose some of its present following and influence in the House, and perhaps the party will be reduced to the second place. As regards the Kokuminto the party will perhaps not lose its former influence, but on the contrary may gain some more seats in the House; to be more exact the party will secure some thirty-five or more seats but not less than that figure. There is no doubt that the coming election will see the return of more neutral or independent members than former elections, to judge from the political situation and the public sentiments obtaining. Taking it for granted that the Seiyukai will support the Ministry, as is most likely from its attitude and professed principle, there will be a very narrow margin of disparity between the influence of the Government supporters and the Opposition in the next Diet. Thus the issue of the next political campaign will be settled by the attitude of those neutral or independent members, who will thus form an important factor in the forthcoming political war. So far Mr. Okazaki's forecast about the issue of the coming election.

The date of the general election having been officially announced, the Government will start its preparatory arrangement for the coming election. It is expected that the Government contemplates further change in the posts of local governors and will shortly convene a special meeting of the gubernatorial conference as already reported together with a conference of judicial officials to give instructions regarding the general election with a view to maintaining a fair attitude, while keeping most rigorous control over the electioneering campaign to avoid any tendency of interference or corrupt practice being indulged in by partisans of hostile political parties. Seeing the necessity of making clearly known to the nation the reason for the dissolution and the political views of the Ministry, the Government will take proper steps to defend its own interest against the political canvassing of the Opposition parties who will most likely make it the main point of their strategy to attack and denounce the measures of the Ministry. It is observed that for that purpose the Ministers of the Cabinet will make a political tour throughout the Provinces to appeal to the nation for a perfect understanding of the political policy and views of the Government following the instance set by the Okuma Ministry.

POLITICAL PARTIES MEET

The Kenseikai held a mass meeting of its ex-parliamentary members on Jan. 26 at the Seiyoken, Tsukiji. The meeting was attended by Viscount Kato, President, Messrs. Ozaki, Wakatsuki, Taketomi, Adachi, Hamaguchi, Kataoka (directors), Minoura, Kono, Sengoku and Shimada (advisers) and over two hundred ex-parliamentary members and other leading partisans. Viscount Kato made a speech denouncing the unconstitutional attitude of the Government and attacking its administrative and diplomatic failure, and urged the partisans to do their best to win a great majority and not lose the ground at the coming general election. Mr. Taketomi also spoke in the same line as Viscount Kato, vehemently attacking the unconstitutional measures of the Government and exhorting the partisans to fight with untiring courage and activity for the cause of constitutional Government and strive for the overthrow of the present unconstitutional ministry. The meeting dispersed in the afternoon.

The Kokuminto also held a mass meeting of its ex-parliamentary members and other leading members on Jan. 26 at the party headquarters. Mr. Inukai gave a speech urging the ex-parliamentary members to do their utmost in the coming general election and strive to recover the ground, which the party had lost in the last election and strengthen their combination by keeping a perfect harmony in order to fight for the cause of the principle of constitutional government. After discussing and defining the measures to be taken in connection with the coming general election the meeting came to a close at 3 p.m.

The Koseikai, mostly consisting of business elements in the House of Representatives, held a meeting of its members on Jan. 26 after the dissolution on the Parliament. The meeting discussed the proposal of dissolving the party, which having originally been organized for the purpose of connecting communications among various parties in the Lower House had now lost its significance by the dissolution of the House. The proposal was unanimously passed and the members appointed a committee for the settlement of party affairs. It is believed that the business elements of the defunct party will organize a new party and run for the coming general election according to the principle of the former party, that, is to observe absolute independence and strict neutrality. It is expected some of the former partisans who supported the Opposition side in the anti-ministry campaign will join the new party.

BARON GOTO REGRETS DIET IS DISSOLVED

Baron Goto, Minister of Home Affairs, in the "Nichinichi," deeply regrets the dissolution of the House of Representatives which, the Minister says, the Terauchi Cabinet has failed to prevent. The members of the Ministry could find no way but to resort to the last measure under these circumstances but it is really the most regrettable affair. Baron Goto says that in view of the necessity of realizing the true unity of the whole Empire in this time of significance, the Terauchi Cabinet immediately after its organization asked the leaders of the three Opposition parties for their patriotic assistance to the new government and these leaders seemed to have appreciated the determination of the Terauchi Ministry. "The constitution of the empire," says the Baron, "is a constitution granted by the Emperor himself and the formation of a Cabinet is brought about only by the Imperial prerogative, so that it is not absolutely necessary that the Japanese Ministry should be based on a political party. The Opposition leaders appeared to have been of the same opinion on this point and we therefore cherished the desire to work out the task commissioned by the august Imperial command for the welfare and prosperity of the country in hearty co-operation with the opposition parties in the House of Representatives. Nevertheless the majority of the Lower House opposed the existence of a super-party Ministry but in view of our enlightened constitution the Cabinet considered the opposition parties' resistance really regrettable and was compelled to ask the Throne to order the dissolution of the House."

Baron Goto approves of the views of Mr. Inukai, the leader of the Kokuminto, which he expressed on the rostrum in the chamber prior to its dissolution, but he and the cabinet members are in entirely different positions. "The Terauchi Ministry which was formed by the order of the Emperor is determined to put its hopes and desires into practice with a view to answering the august wishes of the Throne and to aid the promotion of the welfare of the nation, and it cannot resign from office before the task it wishes to accomplish is done," continued the Baron.

"The Terauchi Ministry will strive for the sake of the Empire with firmer determination. The Cabinet is in touch with the nation despite the charge that it has nothing to do with the nation. The vote of non-confidence that was introduced in the House by the Opposition parties is not the voice of the Japanese nation, though the Opposition commands a majority in the Lower House. Whether or not this is true may be considered as problematical by some, but we want to prove with example its truth in the coming general election."

DR. SUN YAT-SEN SENDS LETTER TO PARLIAMENT

A report was received from Peking some time ago that Dr. Sun Yat-sen had made a demand on the Chinese Government for the payment of a large sum of money to pay the debts incurred by the revolutionary party. Various opinions and rumours were expressed, at the time, as to the cause of the demand, and even among the members of the Chinese parliament, there were many who severely criticized the Doctor for his action.

To clear himself from the various criticisms expressed, and to state his reasons for making the demand, Dr. Sun Yat-sen sent an open letter to the members of the Chinese Parliament. According to a recent issue of the "Nihon oyobi Nihonjin," the gist of the open letter of Sun Yat-sen is as follows:

"It is now more than twenty years ago," Sun Yat-sen says, "that Wen started the revolutionary movement to destroy absolutism, but his plan did not succeed and at Kwangchow he met with defeat, and he and his brother lost their entire fortune in starting the movement against the absolute government. The revolutionary attempts since that time have been all managed and directed by myself and the funds necessary for the movement were collected from the Chinese in foreign countries, and a large amount of money was spent in planning the movement, despatching armies, and in failures. There were some who volunteered to donate their money for the cause of the revolution, but most of the money was obtained from people with the promise that they would be paid back when the Republican Government was established. When the Republican Government was organized at Nanking, it was not in a position to repay the sums borrowed, and a further amount of money was obtained from the Chinese in Shanghai, Hongkong, Manchuria, the United States, the South Seas and other places as the government did not have sufficient money to carry out its plan.

"When the Treasury Department of the Nanking Government was tranferred to the Peking Government, the acknowledgement of the debt was issued by the Central Government, but up to to-day no payment has been made to redeem the acknowledgements. After the failure of the second revolution I saw that Yuan nursed an ambition to become the Emperor of China, and organized another revolutionary party and tried to protect the democracy of the Republic. At that time I issued a guarantee of payment to those who had contributed towards the fund of the revolutionary party, and according to my calculation, from the Chinese abroad 1,700,000 taels and 1,000,000 taels from the Japanese merchants were borrowed and guarantees given for payment. With this money, the movement against the plan of making Yuan the Emperor, was financed, and although the movement failed at first it was able to make some impression upon Yuan.

"The revolutionary parties in Yunnan, Kwantung, Szechwan and other provinces began demonstrations against the Yuan Government, and for several months the revolutionary forces were able to hold their own against Yuan's armies. Large sums of money were spent in organizing the armies, maintaining them, and finally disbanding them, but the amount was paid with the money borrowed from the Chinese and Japanese. Regarding the exact financial condition of the revolutionary party, there is made ready report in detail.

"When Yuan abandoned his attempt to become the Emperor, and matters quietened down, I made a demand upon the Government for the payment of the debt incurred by the revolutionary party. All those who lent money to the party had worked for the cause of the revolution, and to attempt to ignore them at this moment when peace has come, is entirely wrong."

For that reason, Dr. Sun Yat-sen says, he made a demand on the Government to pay the debt, and it was not to maintain his own personal reputation. If any one believes that a revolution is only a whimsical pleasure, and that if any one loses money by supporting the revolution, it is his own fault, Sun Yat-sen has a plan for reporting the whole affair to his friends in China and abroad. However the Government of China has realized the necessity of paying back these debts and has announced that when full investigation is made, the money will be promptly paid back.

However there have been many who expressed various opinions regarding Dr. Sun's demand on the Government, and in Parliament there were many who questioned the Government on the matter. Dr. Sun understands that the members are only trying to keep an eye on the Government. Still points made in parliament regarding the matter, have been entirely false and misleading.

It was said in parliament that the money given to the revolutionary party was in the form of donations, but Dr. Sun says that he can prove that the amount was borrowed, and the collaborating proofs can be found in various localities. The amount obtained from the Japanese merchants is not a secret and the Government is free to make investigations into the matter.

One opinion is that realizing the impending loan from the United States, Dr. Sun Yat-sen made the unjust demand on the Government, but those who entertain such an opinion forget that the demand was made by him in September, and at that time he had no news of the loan now being negotiated with the United States.

All he asked of the Government was to pay the debt, and the payment is to be made directly by the Government to the people who lent money and he will have no hand in the payment of the debt. A criticism says that he is planning to obtain a large amount of money by making the demand on the Government. Dr. Sun says that he has been engaged in the revolutionary movement for more than twenty years, and once occupied the high position of President of the Republic, and he will leave it to the public whether or not he has any ambition to enrich himself by making the demand. He always regards the success of the revolutionary party as being due to the efforts of many thousands of people, and he is not the only one to be praised and to gain by the success. He was once offered the highest decoration of the Republic, but he refused to accept it, because he feels that if the decoration is for the service done in the revolution, he alone should not receive it. He understands now that it was the courteous good will of the President that urged him to confer the decoration upon him, but before the money which enabled the success of the revolution is paid back to the people who nobly gave the money for the cause, he can not accept such a decoration.

When Yuan planned to become Emperor, several hundred million taels were spent on the plan and preparation, but even these expenditures, the public of China has to bear, and to oppose the plan of bearing the amount spent in opposing the plan of Yuan, is illogical, the latter amount only being one-hundredth part of the former.

He concludes his open letter by saying that as there have been many criticisms in the parliament and among the public regarding the demand made by him, he states the facts and leaves the rest to the just judgement of the members of the Parliament and the public.

BETTER TREATMENT FOR TEACHERS

The plan to give the teachers of certain classes of schools better treatment in rank and remuneration, drafted by the present Ministry of Education, has been recently sanctioned by the Emperor and was published on Sunday. A survey of the new plan shows that the principals and teachers of middle schools, girls' schools, industrial, agricultural, and commercial schools, have been assured of a better treatment than before both in rank and stipend. For instance two principals of the above-mentioned schools can be raised to the rank of "Chokunin" after 7 years' service. The new statute provides moreover that henceforward three teachers from normal schools, middle schools, commercial, industrial, and agricultural schools where the number of class-rooms is less than eight, and one additional teacher for each three class-rooms above eight will rank as "Sonin." In commercial, industrial, and agricultural schools where the number of class-rooms is less than six, only three of the school faculty will be given the same privilege. Ten instead of three Principals of elementary schools in each Prefecture will rank as "Sonin" hereafter. The principals of the schools where the supplementary knowledge on commercial, and agricultural subjects is taught will rank as "Sonin" if they are in receipt of a salary of over 50 yen per month, always provided they have over five years' service.

MR. LIANG CHI-CHAO AIRS HIS VIEWS OF PRESS

On Saturday, January 13, the Chinese Press Association gave a banquet in honour of Mr. Liang Chi-chao, the famous Southern leader. In reply to the speech of welcome, Mr. Liang (according to the "Peking Daily News") launched the following diatribe against the present day vernacular newspapers in China:

"Although I have always been engaged in political affairs, I have never for the past twenty years severed my connection with newspapers. I have always respected journalistic works, as I know that the progress of the civilization of a country is to be judged by the number of newspapers and their circulation. Twenty years ago I used to say that 'if there were ten Chinese newspaper offices in the Capital, there would be a great change in China'; but now there are about 60 newspaper offices in Peking. However, we are sorry to acknowledge that we are not at all satisfied with their works. It has always been said that the duties of newspapers are to check and direct the actions of the Government and to educate society. Have our newspapers performed these duties? Newspapers should be the picture of society which they represent; but the majority of newspapers of the country are not so.

We have always seen films on the facts of history, or other incidents, screened in moving picture theatres but everyone knows that these are not real facts of history; but the works of the imagination of the employes of the film company. I am sorry to say that a certain portion of our journalists are men who have sold their pen to unscrupulous parties, or political leaders. It must be declared that their pen does not give a right portray of society, and they are exactly like the employes of the film company which has never ceased to produce the mere works of imagination. Therefore, the less credit be given to their reports the better. In the first and second years of Min Kuo when I was in Peking, I did express much optimistic views on the political situation; but this time when I come up to the Capital again, I feel that good old time has gone. Indeed, when a comparison is made between the present and the past, I must say that at the time in the 1st and 2nd years of Min Kuo was the time of Tang and Yu Dynasties. At that time there was still some object and purpose in various journalistic works, and although the political situation was not very satisfactory there was still some systematic working in it. If we do not try to improve the condition, the future of our Country will be extremely gloomy. It is now high time for our journalists to arouse themselves to perform their duties. They should not seek their individual interests, but should fix their policy and work for the betterment of the general situation. As soon as a man seeks only his own individual interest, he will become a tool of unscrupulous ones who will turn him into a great curse to society. Therefore, unless our journalists should reform themselves and begin their works all over again, their newspapers will only be instrumental in destroying the morality and interests of our society in the 20th Century when all countries and their peoples are struggling hard for existence."

With reference to the above speech, the Kuomintang papers have since made severe counter-charges against Mr. Liang. They charge him with blackmailing the Manchus when he was proprietor and editor of the "Hsin-min" and other papers.

These young Kuomintang publicists regard the remarks of Mr. Liang as directed against them so they have now returned their compliment to this prominent politician, who, they say, has evidently forgotten his own earlier days when he was a refugee in Japan and other foreign countries.

In the attacks against Mr. Liang, the history of the monarchy movement is mentioned briefly and according to the story, the honesty and impartiality of certain foreign journalists in Peking are very questionable because they were known to be subsidized by leading monarchists.

PEKING NEWS SEEMS TO DOUBT JAPAN

The "Peking Daily News" commenting on the settlement of the Chengchiatun affair in a lengthy editorial article says that the result of the negotiations would seem to show a success of Chinese diplomacy to superficial observers, but it must be noticed that Japan retains for future negotiations the questions relating to the engagenment of military advisers and instructors and the establishment of Japanese police stations, which indicates her intention to reopen negotiations at an available opportunity in future. Japan's conciliatory attitude is nothing but the change of her policy towards China necessitated by the turn of the political situation and comes from the necessity of guarding her own interests rather than showing her friendly attitude towards China.

We, says the paper, wonder whether the speech of Viscount Motono made before the Diet can be trusted and taken as a guarantee of Japan's sincerity and professed good wishes for China. Japan, though she promises to take one and the same measures with the Powers in dealing with China very often acts contrary to her fair professions and promises. It is difficult to foresee what change will take place in her attitude and measures towards China as it may be affected by the trend of the European war. The paper concludes by stating that it fails to see in the diplomatic policy professed by the Terauchi Ministry any thing different in fundamental principles from the Chinese policy of the Okuma Cabinet, and adds that keen attention must be paid to the trend of politics in Japan now that the Diet is dissolved.

CHANGE OF GOVERNORS

A change in the Prefectural Governors was announced Monday. It is reported that the change was made by the Government to prepare for the coming general election.

GERMAN PRISONERS AS BAKERS

Two German soldiers held in the War Prisoner Detention Camp at Osaka are now working at a bakery in the city. The Maruki Bakery recently applied to the Army Department to be allowed to employ two German soldiers who are skilful bakers. The Army Department on investigation, found that among the German prisoners at Osaka there are twenty who used to work at bakeries, before the outbreak of the war.

On January 25th, permission was given by the Army Department to two of the German bakers, and on Jan. 27 they commenced work. The two are at present employed at a wage of fifty sen a day, but their employer has to call for them every morning with a motor boat at the Detention Camp, and again escort them back to the Camp when the day's work is done. As they are still war prisoners, a policeman and a Japanese soldier accompany the two to and from the bakery and also watch them while at their work. No one is allowed to interview them.

According to the proprietor of the Bakery, the bakers at first demanded two yen and a half a day, but considering the fact that an interpreter has to be employed and the cost of hiring the motor boat to carry them to and from the Detention Camp, has to be paid by him, he could only afford to pay fifty sen a day which amount was eventually agreed upon.

The two bakers now being employed at the bakery will be transferred to another Camp in a month or so, and when they leave Osaka, two of their comrades will be selected for the bakery. The two German Bakers are the first of the German prisoners at Osaka who have obtained work outside of the camp. The Kanegafuchi Weaving Company at Osaka has also applied to the Army Department for permission to employ some of the German prisoners in their factory.

FINE CHANCE FOR GRADUATES

As the time for graduation draws near, students leaving schools and colleges are on the look out for suitable berths. The Kuhara Mining Company has earned the reputation of paying high salaries to graduates. In fact salaries of 45 yen per mensem are offered to graduates fresh from the law colleges of the Imperial Universities with an additional allowance of 15 yen for house rent.

Graduates from engineering colleges of Imperial Universities can obtain 70 yen at the start, with an allowance of 20 yen for house rent. Those from higher commercial colleges are paid 35 yen and those from Keio University 30 yen if they are employed by the Kuhara Mining Company.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 26.—The French communiqué this afternoon reads: "The Germans, on Thursday evening, attacked at four points from Avocourt Wood to east of Morthomme. Our fire drove them back to their trenches. Only some of the enemy parties succeeded in penetrating our advanced trenches on a section of Hill 304. The enemy had very heavy losses and left a number of dead before our lines, especially at Avocourt Wood.

"Seven enemy aeroplanes were brought down. Our air squadrons also heavily bombarded several railway stations, huts ments and military establishments, and caused great fires at the railway station at Buielles."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 26.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his evening communiqué, says: "We made a successful raid at noon in the neighbourhood of Hulluch. Many of the enemy were killed, some prisoners taken and a dug-out destroyed. Our losses were four men slightly wounded. We drove off two raiding parties last night to the east of Fanquissant. A third party reaches to the east of Ypres, but was immediately driven out and our position re-established."

KOKUSAI-HAVAS

Paris, Jan. 27.—Eleven months and four days after opening of the great battle for Verdun, says "Le Matin," the Germans have commenced a new violent attack, which on Thursday ended in failure, as reported in the French communiqué.

The Germans, however, have made the most of their momentary success. Their communiqué of Friday stated that Westphalian regiments and tried troops from Baden, effectively supported by artillery, engineers and bombers, took by assault the French trenches on Hill 304 over a front of nearly a mile. That statement, says "Le Matin," was entirely false, and was false even before the French counter-attacks retook part of the ground lost on Thursday.

In reality the German attack which followed a bombardment of several hours, was upon a front of about four miles, and was directed upon four points. Upon three of these it was completely beaten. The Germans had very heavy losses, especially at Avocourt Wood, where they left great numbers of dead upon the ground. It was only at Hill 304 that a front line trench was lost at the beginning to the extent of 500 yards, and this lost ground has been almost entirely reconquered.

The French continue their superiority in the air. Sub-Lieutenant Guynemer, who has piled up his total of German air victims in intermittent runs, appears to be in the middle of another run after a period of comparative inactivity. Wednesday he shot down a couple of German machines, and Thursday brought a third. This brings his total up to twenty-eight.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Paris, Jan. 27.—Friday evening's communiqué says fresh reports show that the German attack on the left bank of the Meuse on Thursday evening was particularly violent and that several German regiments took part. There was hand-to-hand fighting at some points.

Friday morning the French counter-attacked and retook in the region of Hill 304 the greater portion of the elements into which the Germans had penetrated the day before.

A fairly lively artillery duel is in progress on the right bank of the Meuse, in the regions of Bezonvaux, Louvremont, the Woevre and Regneville.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Paris, Jan. 27.—The afternoon communiqué reads: "We destructively bombarded the German works in a sector of Hill 304. Five enemy aeroplanes were brought down, including Sub-Lieutenant Guynemer's thirtieth victim. Our aeroplanes dropped bombs on the railway station and military workships at Ham, causing a fire and a big explosion.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 27.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Friday evening communiqué states: "We have carried out a number of raids east of Loos and northeast of Vermelles, taking several prisoners. Several dugouts were destroyed, and the Germans suffered many casualties.

"The British have bombarded the enemy positions north of the River Somme with good results.

"The British aeroplanes have successfully bombed a number of places behind the German lines. Five German machines have been destroyed, while five more were driven down damaged. One British machine is missing."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 27.—Reuter's correspondent, at British Army Head-Quarters in France, telegraphs: "The British Army's birthday greeting to the Kaiser thundered out at dawn in a whirlwind bombardment. This was followed by long lines of troops soaring from their trenches. The enemy put up a poor fight, and sustained heavy losses. We took 250 prisoners. Our casualties were slight as our gunners were successful in keeping down the fire from the enemy machine-guns. The spirit of the troops is indomitable despite the most severe frost."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 28.—Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig in his communiqué on Saturday evening, says: "A successful operation was carried out this morning in the neighbourhood of Le Transloy, in the northern Somme sector. Our whole objectives were gained and a commanding portion of the enemy's position captured. We took 850 prisoners. We drove back, with heavy losses to the enemy, a vigorous counter-attack. Our casualties were very light.

We raided positions north-east of Neuville-St. Vaast, east of the Somme sector, took prisoners and destroyed dug-outs containing fifty Germans. We had no casualties.

Our patrol entered trenches and inflicted casualties north-east of Vermelles.

We bombarded positions in the neighbourhood of Serre, north of the Ancre, greatly damaging the enemy's defences, and, north-east of Arras, we dispersed working parties.

Our fire north of Halluch caught the enemy infantry, inflicting many casualties.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Western Front. German troops about two companies strong tried during the night before January 21 to advance on the Shara, south-east of Baranovici, but, being stopped by the Russian fire, they retreated to their trenches. In the Kovel direction the enemy developed a strong artillery fire on the front Rudka Mirenskaia-Velick, assuming afterwards, with small parties, the offensive and rushing into the Russian trenches, but on the arrival of Russian reserves the enemy was at once dislodged and the Russian front was recovered. Near Svidniki on the railway Roshistche-Kovel the Russian artillery fired intensely on the enemy's wire entanglements and shelters. The enemy retreated to his second line of trenches. South of Brody, the enemy fired at the Russian positions near Duba Batkuv and Gukalovec. A German aeroplane near Skomoroha was knocked down by a French lieutenant, the aviator Grassé.

Rumania. The enemy's attempts in advancing in the Oitus Valley were stopped by the Russian fire. Firing continues on the rest of the front.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

A German official communiqué says the Russians attacked on both sides of the River Aa and compelled the Teutons under pressure, to move nearer to the east bank of the Golden Bystritza.

The Austrian communiqué reads: "West of Oliputnow, superior enemy forces penetrated our first line. We withdrew to the next height to the rear."

"In Galicia, southwest of Potutoty, which lies south of Brzezany, we attacked with the bayonet, taking the first line of enemy trenches. We repelled some ferocious counter-attacks launched by the Turkish defenders. We exploded six mine-galleries, demolished the trenches and then withdrew. The Turks attacked us twice but were driven back."

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Jan. 29.—Western front. Nothing but firing on the Russian trenches is reported about the enemy's activity near Riga.

The Russian troops in the night before January 28 after a bayonet attack seized the first line of the enemy's trenches south of Brzezany. BRITAIN HASTENS SHIP-BUILDING

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 27.—In connection with building of standardized cargo steamers not exceeding 10,000 tons, which is now in progress at Chepstow, shipping circles urge the adoption of a policy of building a ton for every ton destroyed. They assert that it will be possible to construct 2,000,000 tons a year if urgently necessary and if no great liners are built.

It is worthy of note that a 6,000-ton vessel was recently completed in three and a half months.

MR. JOHN BUCHAN'S WEEKLY REPORT

London, Jan. 27.—In the European war theatres, the tendency lately has been towards increased inactivity. In central Europe, the winter conditions now are unusually severe and in the west only trench raids have been practicable. These and patrol encounters continue in almost all sectors of the front in France with a very decided balance of success in favour of the French and British.

In southern Europe a satisfactory incident has been the complete failure of the Bulgarian detachment in what amounted to little more than an attempted raid across the Danube. A detachment consisting approximately of one battalion effected a crossing only to suffer entire demolition. The enemy reports translate this defeat into a voluntary retirement. Judging from the number of prisoners captured the balance left to retire was almost non-existent.

Movements of some importance are reported from East Africa. The British operations proceed satisfactorily and the enemy is being forced continually into narrower territory. British troops have entered the Rufiji delta from the north and south and the column operating from Kilwa has already advanced to the Kitschi Hills. The northern section of the enemy's forces is hemmed in from the north, west and east and may attempt a junction with their southern section in the neighbourhood of Mahenge. This will prove a difficult and dangerous task for them while the southern section is itself being driven back on Mahenge by the British columns advancing from the south and southwest. The energy and skill with which this campaign is being conducted are meeting their due reward. Considering the difficulties and extent of the country events are moving with satisfactory rapidity.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 27—The official report from the Headquarters in Mesopotamia states that by a determined assault, made under cover of an intense bombardment, the British have seized and consolidated 1,100 yards of the first line of Turkish trenches on the right bank of the River Tigris southwest of Kut-el-Amara. The British also seized a considerable length of the Turkish second line. Their casualties were slight.

The Turks west of the river thereupon launched four furious counter-attacks. The first and third were broken up by the British artillery, rifle and machine-gun fire. The second and fourth assaults were momentarily successful, but the British resumed the offensive and regained much of the ground from which they had been temporarily dislodged.

The losses suffered by the Turks throughout the day's fighting were extremely heavy. The British captured seventy prisoners, and buried 580 Turkish corpses in the loop east of Kut-el-Amara. Besides these, the Turks buried 500 bodies of their own men.

NORTH SEA ENGAGEMENT WAS FIERCE

London, Jan. 24.—The Admiralty announces: "Our light forces, when patrolling the North Sea not far from the Dutch coast, on Monday night, met a division of enemy destroyers. After a short engagement, one of the enemy destroyers was sunk, the rest scattered after being considerably punished. Darkness prevented observation of the full results of the action.

"The same night also, there was a sharp engagement between enemy destroyers and our ships in the vicinity of Schouwen bank, off Zealand. One of our vessels was hit by a torpedo. The explosion killed three officers and 44 men. Our ships subsequently sank the damaged vessel. We had no other casualties."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Ymuiden, Jan. 24.—Particulars of the naval engagement indicate that the German destroyers attempted to leave Zeebrugge to avoid the ice which is very thick there. They were immediately attacked by a large British squadron. The action opened at a very short range. Early in the fight, the bridge of the German destroyer V. 69 was swept away by a direct hit which killed two officers and the commander of the flotilla who was aboard. The V. 69 fired one torpedo, and then was hit by another British shell which knocked her funnel flat on the deck. Yet another shell bored a hole in the front part of the vessel. The crew of the V. 69, which is now lying off the pier here state that seven more German vessels were sunk.

Later.

A Dutch tug-boat has brought in to port some severely wounded German sailors who were taken aboard at the request of the commander of a German torpedo boat. They came originally from the V. 69. It is believed that the British cut off another German torpedo boat which was seen proceeding at full speed northward. The V. 69 has now entered the harbour with 8 men killed on board. The vessel was apparently hit three times and either before or after the engagement collided with another vessel. The engagement happened at 4 p.m. The German officers on board the V. 69 refuse to give any information.

London, Jan. 23.—It is officially announced that during an engagement between the British light naval forces and German destroyers, in the North Sea, last night, two German destroyers were sunk and the other torpedo craft were scattered. The sinking of a British destroyer in another engagement in the vicinity of Schouwen bank, off the Dutch province of Zealand, is also announced.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 25.—Details of the North Sea fight are still confirmed by news from Dutch sources, which agree that the German fleet was surrounded, and dazzled by the British search-lights. The enemy fought bravely but the rapidity and accuracy of the British fire was irresistible. The Germans, undoubtedly were caught unawares by the British, who were in the right place at the right time, and outmanoeuvred and routed the enemy in waters, which the latter claims to control. It is estimated that the Germans have now lost between 30 and 40 torpedo boats in such actions.

San Francisco, Jan. 25.—Persistent rumours obtain in Holland that six German destroyers were sunk in the naval engagements in the North Sea.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 24.—When the V-69 arrived at Ymuiden, towed by three Dutch tugs, eight of the crew, killed in action, were found frozen to the decks. It was necessary to use axes to detach their bodies.

The destroyer's torpedo tubes were knocked sideways; her signal-tower, searchlight, bridge and one funnel were destroyed by gunfire. Her side was deeply dented by ramming. It is stated that only eighty of her crew were left. A number of the crew jumped overboard during the action and were drowned.

The whole story of the action, as told by the Germans, is one of swift, overwhelming disaster, when the British swooped down, destroying the German squadron quickly and thoroughly.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Ymuiden, Jan. 25.—The survivors on board the German destroyer V 69 say that a flotilla of eleven vessels left a German port on Monday afternoon. At 3 o'clock on Tuesday morning they discovered the British abeam. The latter opened fire at long range and the marksmanship was most accurate. The V 69 was soon hit and had a marvellous escape for she was faced by two British squadrons with four to six big ships each.

There must have been treachery, the Germans say, because every precaution had been taken to avoid an encounter. The vessels steered for the mouth of the Ems, but sighted four British destroyers off Ymuiden, so they were made to fight. The main action was fought 30 miles off Zeebrugge. The V 69 escaped owing to being the rear-guard of the flotilla. The fate of the other vessels is not known, say the survivors but they must have suffered badly.

PIRATES AGAIN FLY THE DANISH FLAG

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Copenhagen, Jan. 27.—The crew of the torpedoed Danish steamer Gerda testified in a maritime court here to-day that the Gerda, with a German prize crew aboard, sank three steamers in two days in the Bay of Biscay under cover of the Danish flag.

When the water gave out the Gerda put into the Bay of Finisterre with the submarine which captured her. Sixty-two seamen captured off sunken vessels were landed there. The Germans, with revolvers in hand, prevented the seamen from taking their clothing and belongings off the Gerda. The Danish vessel was then looted, towed out and torpedoed.

SMALL ENEMY VESSEL SHELLS COAST OF SUFFOLK

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 27.—A small, unidentified German vessel approached the Suffolk coast Thursday midnight and fired a number of shells. The attack caused no casualties and resulted in insignificant damage, says the official report. The visit of the German raider lasted three minutes.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 27.—The naval expert of the "Times," commenting on the doubt that surrounds the identity of the German vessel which bombarded the Suffolk coast on Thursday night, says that submarines have twice shelled the English coast, and a repetition of this futile proceeding has evidently been made with the idea of keeping up the belief in Germany that the command of the North Sea is still in dispute.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 28.—The Berlin official report, announcing the raid off the coast of Suffolk, says that "our light forces penetrated English coastal waters south of Lowestoft in order to attack the hostile guardships, but in spite of the search made we were unable to find the enemy. Thereupon our torpedo-boats turned their artillery on a fortified place on the coast. Several full hits were observed. Our ships returned to base safely without being observed by the enemy."

GENERAL SMUTS' SUCCESSOR

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 27.—Lieutenant-General Arthur Reginald Hoskins has been appointed to the command of the British forces in German East Africa to succeed General Jan Smuts, states an official report from East African headquarters. General Smuts has been chosen to represent South Africa at the Imperial Conference in London. General Hoskins is a veteran of the Dongola and Nile expeditions and the South African campaign.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 28.—General Jan Smuts received a magnificent welcome on his arrival here to-day from East Africa. The streets were decorated, and crowded with people from all parts of the Transvaal to welcome home the successful Commander-in-Chief of the British East African Expedition.

San Francisco, Jan. 21.—Franz Bopp, formerly Consul for Germany here, E von Schack, former Vice-Consul, and Lieutenant George Wilhelm von Brincken, military attaché at the Consulate, have been sentenced to imprisonment for two years each and to pay a fine of $10,000 each for conspiring to violate the neutrality of the United States by restraining shipments of munitions from the country. These sentences have been handed down after application for a new trial had been refused.

News From All Sources

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Paris, Jan. 23.—M. Hanotaux writing in "Le Temps" says that Germany offered Constantinople to Russia in order to obtain a separate peace.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Copenhagen, Jan. 23.—The President of the Bulgarian Sobranje has stated that Bulgaria's peace terms were the whole of the Dobrudja to the Danube, parts of Macedonia, all the territory watered by the Morava River and Monastir.

Petrograd, Jan. 23.—All papers here have published the text of the new Wilson Note. Commenting on it, the "Novoye Vremya" says: "The general principles which Mr. Wilson now considers indispensable for America slowly (surely?) coincide with the answer of the Powers of the Entente. He declares that a final peace in Europe must once for all ensure against the possibility of a repetition of a similar catastrophe. With this end in view we are bearing a heavy burden.

"President Wilson further declares that peace to gain the sympathy of the American people, should be identical with the ideals of liberty and justice which constitute the foundation of the life of the American people. In which statement again he is with us not with our enemies."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 23.—The Paris newspapers generally point out that President Wilson's high moral ideas entirely confirm the aim of the Allies, but they oppose that these aims can only be forcibly imposed on the Central Powers.

The New York "Sun" says that having failed to secure peace in Mexico, President Wilson is now lecturing the world on peace in Europe. The "Herald" expresses the opinion that Mr. Wilson favours a German peace. The "Tribune" says that the President's address does not reflect the country's opinion. The "freedom of the seas" is a meaningless expression. The seas are always free in times of peace.

The London papers while recognizing President Wilson's honesty point out, in some instances, that the principle of peace without victory was not the policy of the United States in either the Civil War or the conflict with Spain. The hope of ending the war without bitterness was destroyed by the atrocities committed by the Central Powers.

New York, Jan. 23.—Though opinion editorial or otherwise is not yet altogether crystalized on President Wilson's address, it is evident that the Teutonic diplomats and newspapers are elated. They undoubtedly believe that the address constitutes the most important development in their international drive for a Peace Conference.

The President's discussion of a League of Peace assumed importance in their eyes when he practically pre-supposes peace without victory to either side.

The most startling American response to the President's dramatic move comes from Colonel Roosevelt, who characterises as grandiloquent the promise made in an attempt to conceal the pitiful ignominy and shirking of the present American Government. The ex-President calls attention to the fact that it is worthless to make promises for the future unless one keeps those already made. Unless the United States, he says, is prepared at this moment to take an emphatic position regarding the hideous outrage of the deportation of men and women from northern France and Belgium, it is both ridiculous and insincere to moot about standing for the righteousness of a nebulous future. Moreover unless the Government brings peace or justice to Mexico, it is better not to talk about securing peace and justice throughout the world. As regards the freedom of the seas, the most important element therein is freedom from murder. Until the American Government has taken an effective stand to prevent the murder of its citizens by submarines on the high seas, it makes itself the object of derision by speaking for the freedom of the seas.

Petrograd, Jan. 24.—The second day's comments in the Press on President Wilson's Address before the Congress are unanimous in stating that no guarantee for future peace will be secure unless German militarism is first annihilated.

The "Bourse Gazette" says that it is apparent that Spring will witness a coordinated effort by the Allies which will reverse the present strategic situation. After this, it is very possible that Mr. Wilson's views may be utilised as a basis for certain circumstances, but there is not the remotest prospect of any action being taken to conform to the American President's views.

Washington, Jan. 24.—Action was again deferred on the Cummins resolution.

After Senator Cummins had urged the importance of free discussion, he said that otherwise it would be thought the President had misused the privileges of the Senate to spread abroad his peace ideas.

Senator Works went further, declaring that the President used the Senate as a megaphone.

Senator Sherman called the address a "stump speech from the Throne."

Senator Lodge referred humorously to the possibility of settling foreign wars in the future by Senate resolutions.

Generally the Republicans are disposed to sharply criticise President Wilson, who, however, is warmly defended by some democrats.

The resolution was finally disposed of by a determination to replace it on the calendar, whence it will require a vote to again bring it before the Senate.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 25.—Comments on President Wilson's speech in the Senate continue to be unfavourable in the German Press. The "Koelnische Zeitung" says "We flatly refuse a peace without victory. Moreover the President's suggestion regarding Poland is intolerable. We can only say 'hands off.'"

The Canadian press resent Mr. Wilson's request that the Allies should make a "dishonouring peace."

Washington, Jan. 30.—A resolution has been introduced in the Senate declaring that: "The House does not agree with (1) President Wilson's proposal for peace without victory; or (2) for defining terms for the United States joining a World Tribunal to enforce peace."

Another resolution is to the effect that the Senate does not propose to abolish the limitations of the Monroe Doctrine.

Both resolutions were tabled.

A summary of the comment of some leading American papers on President Wilson's recent speech before the Senate has been cabled to the enterprising "Asahi" by its New York correspondent, which we translate as follows:—

The "Tribune":—The attitude of President Wilson is really imprudent and such an attitude of the President at the present juncture is feared to result not only in forfeiting our credit with the Allies but also in losing our position when the time for real peace arrives. The peace terms suggested by the President are far from reflecting the wishes of the American nation, but are impressions he got in a moment of hilarity and the nation can never agree with the President who viewed the war objects of the Allies and the Central Powers in the same light. If Dr. Wilson in his address had just amiably expressed his desire to participate in the international task for the conclusion of hostilities and the advent of lasting peace, we would have favoured his ideas. However it is regrettable that his attitude should have been the reverse. He struck such an attitude as to instruct the belligerents to petition him for peace, an attitude so self-conceited as to try to make the belligerents think that he is in charge of the key that unlocks the door for peace. A phrase which mentions peace without victory is simply astonishing. Should the territories in Europe be readjusted according to the President's principle, Great Britain as well as Austro-Hungary will be dismembered. France will be deprived of most of her colonies, Russia will lose Finland and Siberia and Germany will be dispossessed of large territories, as the result of which Europe may be thrown into political and geographical disorder. The expansion of territories by conquest or purchase is not by any means reasonable in the eyes of those Americans with a knowledge of the true history of territory expansion and no statement can be more sophistical than an assertion that President Wilson's policies are not at variance with the Monroe Doctrine which is the traditional policy of the United States. At any rate the President address before the Senate is not diplomatic. He has become more and more clumsy and the present speech is a failure.

The "New York Sun."—Parts of the President's speech will remain as a marked comedy on the pages of the world's history for 1,000 years hence. It is surprising that the man who has even failed to secure peace in Mexico for the past four years should now turn to Europe with which he has practically no concern and arrogantly lecture it on peace terms and so forth. Dr. Wilson's views are his individual views and not the views of the American President. The American constitution which orders him to discharge the Presidential duties does not prescribe him to work as the President of humanity. The Monroe Doctrine which did not allow Japan and England to interfere in Mexican affairs is limited to North and South America and if the President sees the necessity of abandoning this doctrine he is well-advised to do it definitely and clearly.

The "New York Herald."—If America is under the necessity of joining the International League to Enforce Peace and the like, the present is still premature and she must wait until the assertion is proved to be no dream and comes near realization in a concrete form. In relinquishing our traditional policy in favour of a new policy, the President appears to have been too rash to sound the intention of the nation, and has called his new policy the expansion of principles, but in that case Japan may well call it the Asiatic Monroe doctrine to shut the open door of China.

The "New York World."—In view of the present war, President Wilson is desirous of adopting the co-operation of nations instead of these alliances, the uselessness and cumbrousness of which has been too completely proved by the war. The American nation should help the President in his advanced and high-toned endeavours. Otherwise these democratic ideals will not be materialised as a fact.

The "New York Times."—By the application of the Monroe doctrine to the world, President Wilson has boldly surmounted those difficulties which lie in the way of the materialization of various peace discussions in America of late. The ambition for territory, the aggressive spirit, the desire for the expansion of the state should be abandoned in order to make a lasting peace possible in conformity with the President's principles. This is really a free and lofty idea and the President knows well that in the way of success lie great difficulties, the greatest of which is to completely change human character so as to effect a remarkable change in national aspiration. However great it may be we must conquer any and every difficulty in order to bring happiness to humanity and the President's views represent the will and feeling of the American nation satisfactorily. His reference to a peace without victory is very delicate and no wonder that he should be racking his brains to explain this. We know that Dr. Wilson as a public man is not in a position to make the frank statement that a peace without the annihilation of Prussian militarism is a false peace and from this it may be seen that President Wilson has lodged an eloquent protest against Prussian militarism by this statement. We are of opinion that his speech to the effect that the war will be terminated in the happiest way by the suppression of Prussian militarism by the German nation is the greatest oration that Congress has ever listened to. Not only representing the opinion of America, the speech of President Wilson has also notified the world that America will have a voice in the discussion of peace.

LEAK ENQUIRY SHIFTS TO NEW YORK NOW

Washington, Jan. 21.—It is now announced that the Stock Exchange Leak Enquiry will be resumed in New York on Tuesday, under the direction of Mr. Sherman T. Whipple. New York Bankers will be the first witnesses called.

New York, Jan. 29.—The Stock Market investigation was resumed here to-day, Mr. Pliny Fisk was the first witness called. He denied the story rehearsed by Mr. Tom Lawson before the Committee in Washington on January 16, saying that he was hardly acquainted with Mr. White and that no such conversation had taken place.

He had been, he said, closely associated with Mr. McAdoo several years ago, when his own firm had acted as bankers for the construction of the Hudson Tubes in which Mr. McAdoo had been interested. He had seldom met him since he had entered the Cabinet. He admitted that the Federal Reserve Bank leased offices in a building in New York owned by his firm. This was because, so he was told by McAdoo, the building was best adapted for the purposes of a bank. He recently received a note from Mr. McAdoo suggesting that communication with the Bank should cease on his (Fisk's) part pending this investigation. He denied explicitly that he ever contemplated speculation in stocks should be opened with Mr. McAdoo or any other official. At the time the Peace Note was published, the market was in an overwrought condition and it only wanted an excuse for prices to drop.

Mr. Archibald S. White, in giving his evidence, denied the story of Mr. Tom Lawson that Mr. Fisk had boasted of his acquaintance with Mr. McAdoo. He testified that he was a friend of Count Bernstorff's and had entertained him a number of times in New York. Mr. Tom Lawson's secretary had asked him to arrange a meeting between Count Bernstorff and Mr. Lawson, but he had declined to do so.

Giving his evidence on January 16, to which reference is made above, Mr. Tom Lawson said in part:

Mr. Lawson, on reconsideration, admitted that he did not learn of Mr. McAdoo's alleged connection with the leak from Mr. Henry. Mr. Archibald S. White, the banker, who met him in New York, told him that Mr. P. Fisk had boasted, late one night at the Club, of his control over Mr. McAdoo. Mr. Lawson wanted Mr. White to accompany him to the telephone, where he suggested both could call Mr. McAdoo out of his bed at Washington, and summon him to New York. Mr. White, however, would not go with him.

New York, Jan. 30.—The "Leak" enquiry brought out the fact that the details of President Wilson's Peace Note were known at German official Head-Quarters before they were published.

Mr. Archibald White, continuing his evidence, denied that he had received intelligence on the subject from German sources.

Mr. Bernard Baruch, a prominent stock operator, was the next witness. He denied, likewise, that he had advance information of the President's Note. His attitude towards the market, he said, was due to the speeches, made by Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg and Mr. Lloyd George, which he interpreted as forecasting the peace note. One fact in this connection, he said, was generally overlooked—namely that the Japanese people, than whom there were none cleverer in the world, took steps to close the Stock Exchange immediately following the speech by the German Chancellor.

M. BRIAND OBTAINS VOTE OF CONFIDENCE IN CHAMBER

Paris, Jan. 29.—Interpellation of Government on Greek events, having occupied three secret sittings of the Chamber, was concluded on Saturday. It was followed by a public sitting in which, M. Briand, the Premier, obtained a vote of confidence in the Government included in the Order of the Day.

The resolution read: "Be it resolved that this Chamber, stigmatizing the criminal outrage in Athens on December 1, and bowing down respectfully before the graves of the victims, and considering that—if France may be justly proud of her generous attitude toward Greece, which had turned away from her duties, as compared with the odious attitude of Germany towards a Belgium faithful to hers—France at least has gone to the extreme limit of her patience in order to remain attached to her traditions and not cause the fault of its ruler to fall upon a small people; is confident that Government would obtain the indispensable reparation and take necessary measures for the security of the army at Salonika, and make all military and diplomatic decisions required by the situation."

The resolution was passed to the Order of the Day.

Paris, Jan. 28.—After continued discussions and debate behind closed doors, the Chamber of Deputies has adopted a vote of confidence in the Cabinet in connection with the Greek question by a majority of 313 to 135. The situation of the majority party shows no change as compared with that at the time of the organization of the War Cabinet on December 12, last year, whereas the minority party followers have dwindled. Many members of the minority camp were absent on the occasion of the division.—"Asahi."

THE RISING IN SUMATRA

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, Jan. 24.—The "Telegraf Wetvreden" announces that the papers in the Dutch East Indies have issued a warning against the interference in Government affairs of German missionaries. They state that this interference was partly the cause of the recent rising in the Batak region in Sumatra.

VISCOUNT MOTONO'S SPEECH

Petrograd, Jan. 26.—The Russian press comments favourably on the speech made by Viscount Motono in the Diet on Tuesday. The "Retch" lays stress "on the friendly feeling toward Russia and loyalty to the allies," which animates the speech.

The "Novoe Vremya" is particularly grateful "for the quite priceless assistance rendered by Japan, which has ensured the safety of navigation and peaceable voyages for travellers by sea in eastern waters."

KOKUSAI-HAVAS

Paris, Jan. 28.—In a leading article "Le Temps" says that Viscount Motono is fully qualified to enforce the policy of a union with Europe such as is described in the speech delivered by him in the Japanese Diet on Thursday last and cabled to Paris by the Kokusai News Agency, especially as he has been one of the principal makers of this union in the past.

When Russia became aware of the mistake of her war against Japan into which German intrigues contributed to drive her, she found in the Ambassador of the Emperor of Japan to Petrograd a statesman ready to work with her toward arriving at a new and friendly understanding.

Vicount Motono had already shown his ability in Paris, where he displayed in 1904 particular clear-sightedness in difficult circumstances. Thanks to him, friendly relations were resumed again between Tokyo and Petrograd and enabled the Russian policy to turn again westward, while the Russo-Japanese agreements were introducing Japan into European affairs.

"Le Temps" goes on to say that the Minister for Foreign Affairs in Premier Terauchi's Cabinet was the negotiator of the Russo-Japanese alliance and has remained the most determined zealot for a Russo-phile policy in Japan.

Viscount Motono, the great newspaper says, is one of those who understood best the importance of assisting Russia against the common foe and furnishing her with war materials, thus relieving France and England by enabling them to use their own material entirely on their own fronts.

With regard to Japan's good relations with other countries, such as China and America, "Le Temps" points out their importance as upon them depends the material assistance Japan may bring to Russia. Viscount Motono's speech shows these relations in a favourable light.

"Le Temps" relies upon the clear-sightedness and experience of the Japanese Minister for Foreign Affairs to further improve these relations, so that his country may bring all its resources against the common foe.

The Tokyo Government, which has made the Allies agree upon Japan's particular aims in the war, has no greater interest than to contribute to and hasten a victory. In the presence of Germany's redoubled effort, "Le Temps" concludes, Japan will doubtless still further increase her own efforts.

KOKUSAI-HAVAS

Paris, Jan. 29.—Commenting in "Le Petit Journal" on Viscount Motono's speech in the Japanese Diet, last Tuesday, M. Pichon, formerly Minister for Foreign Affairs writes: "The whole speech was that of a delivery by a statesman, who thoroughly knows Europe and especially France and Russia where he counts many friends."

M. Pichon is much impressed with the great wisdom of the step taken by Viscount Motono in making this public statement. "Coming as it does from a man of his experience, it will incite us to continue cooperation with the Japanese, and to make their assistance bring forth all the practical results it involves, even after 2½ years exhaustive struggle."

ALLIED ADMIRALTIES HOLD CONFERENCES

London, Jan. 26.—The Admiralty announces that during the last few days, important naval conferences have been held at Whitehall between the British, French and Italian Chiefs of the Admiralty to discuss the naval policy in the Mediterranean.

In the House of Commons to-day, Mr. Lloyd-George indicated that proposals which the British Government was of the opinion would tend to closer co-ordination and more effective unity of action of the allied forces in the Mediterranean had been adopted. The results, he said, were entirely satisfactory and the decisions arrived at important, as besides affecting the naval situation, they have a bearing on the use of shipping, the control of trade routes and other cognate problems.

MORE ALLIED CONFERENCES

Petrograd, Jan. 29.—The Conferences of the Allies will be continued at other capitals, and shortly one will be held here, at which the different governments will be represented by their Ambassadors and special delegates. The object of these meetings is to establish, by common agreement the most vigorous means for pursuing the war, and regulating most efficaciously the employment of all the resources of the Allies.

M. SAZANOFF TO LONDON

Petrograd, Jan. 27.—The appointment of M. Sazonoff as Ambassador to the Court of St. James is officially gazetted to-day.

In commenting on the appointment of M. Sazanoff to the post of Ambassador to Great Britain, the Russian press is unanimous in declaring that he is the right man in the right place and that no diplomat has a better right to this responsible post. Before and during the European conflict he never ceased in his efforts to consolidate the bonds of friendship between Britain and Russia, and the future of the mutual good relations of these countries is in good hands.

The "Bourse Gazette" says that the appointment of M. Sazanoff once and for all refutes the prodigious and malicious calumnies which German diplomatists have put into circulation regarding the relation of Russia and Great Britain.

THE CHENCHIATUN AFFAIR

Peking, Jan. 23.—The diplomatic notes exchanged in settlement of the Chengchiatun controversy deal only with demands arising directly out of the incident. These are the reprimand of the Commander of the 28th Division and the punishment of the officers concerned and also the publication of a warning against a repetition of the incident and an apology by the Tutu of Mukden as outlined in our despatch of the 13th inst. The demands include compensation for the Japanese civilian who was first attacked. The Chinese agrees to this.

Supplementary memoranda were also exchanged a few days ago. In these, the Japanese record the rights they claim with regard to police stations in Manchuria. These they declare will be established when and where the Japanese Government may deem necessary. The memoranda also impressed the Chinese Government with the advisability of employing Japanese military advisers and instructors. The Chinese memoranda decline to recognize the claims of rights with regard to police stations and state that the Chinese Government cannot at present agree to employ advisers and instructors.

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

Peking, Jan. 29.—Although the Senate has approved the terms of settlement of the Chengchiatun matter and has complimented Doctor Wu Ting Fang, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, upon the manner in which he conducted the negotiations, the Chinese newspapers continue to criticize the Government for yielding so much. The opinion among foreigners resident here and in diplomatic circles regards the conclusion of the negotiations rather as a truce than as a settlement.

The difficulties connected with an efficient control of Japanese immigrants to Manchuria, large numbers of whom are of the lower class, is recognized. The Japanese claim with regard to establishment of police stations, therefore, receives considerable sympathy and will do so, provided the Japanese police confine their activities to their own nationals and do not interfere with the Chinese administration.

A practical solution of the present situation, it is believed, must be found; otherwise, there will be unending friction between the Japanese and Chinese authorities.

Considerable interest is taken here in the visit to Japan of Mr. Lu Chung-yu, the former Minister from China in Tokyo. Although Mr. Lu Chung-yu stated that his trip is being taken for the benefit of his wife's health, the Chinese newspapers point out that he is a member of the Parliament and therefore they consider that his visit must have political significance, in view of the strict measures being taken to prevent the absence of members of Parliament from the sessions in order that the constitution's question may be settled, as well as other important matters.

An official statement giving a full account of the negotiations between Japan and China re Chengchiatun affair and the terms of its settlement was given out at the Foreign Office on Jan. 26. The statement consists of the official diplomatic documents exchanged between Japanese Minister, Baron Hayashi, and Dr. Wu Ting-fang, the Chinese Foreign Minister and is very lengthy one containing ten official documents exchanged between the plenipotentiaries of the two Governments between January 5 and January 22, this year. The negotiations were concluded on January 22, when both sides came to terms on the following conditions:

That the commander of the 28th army division (Chinese army) shall be reprimanded.

That the officers of the Chinese army who are responsible for the incident shall be punished according to the dictates of law; those who are directly responsible for the incident being given a severer penalty than those less responsible.

That the Chinese Government shall issue an instruction to the Chinese army and China's subjects ordering them to accord proper cordial treatment to those Japanese troops and subjects residing in the zone where they have the right of mixed residence.

That the military governor of Mukden shall manifest in proper manner an apology, which shall be made at Ryojun (Port Arthur) to the Governor General of Kwantung and the Japanese Consul-General at Mukden, the ways and means of tendering the said apology to be decided at the discretion of the Military Governor of Mukden.

That the Chinese Government shall pay a sum of 100 dollars to the Japanese merchant Yoshimoto by way of consolation for the damage sustained on account of the incident.

Respecting the question of the engagement of military advisers and the concession of police right proposed by the Japanese Government the Chinese Government refused Japan's demands on the ground that the establishment of Japanese police stations in Manchuria was prejudicial to China's suzerainty, but China declared its intention to engage more Japanese police advisers in the service of the provincial Government of Mukden in the future. As regards the question of the engagement of military advisers, the Chinese Government has flatly refused Japan's demand, stating that China has already engaged a Japanese military adviser in the office of the Military Governor of Mukden.

A Peking dispatch says that the Chinese Government, availing of the opportunity offered by the settlement of the Chengchiatun affair, has decided to dispatch a special envoy to Japan, Mr. Liu Tsung-yu, ex-Minister to Tokyo, or Mr. Wang Ta-hsieh, also a former Minister to Tokyo, will be appointed.

Information has reached the Foreign Office that the Chinese Government has decided to dispatch to Japan Mr. Liu Tsung-yu commissioned with an official mission connected with the advancement of friendly relations between Japan and China. The envoy is expected to leave Peking on the 30th inst. The information was formally transmitted to the Cabinet by the Foreign Office on Jan. 27.

It was reported some time ago that Mr. Liu Tsung-yu would come to Japan in his capacity as representative of the Communications Bank, of which he is a shareholder, with a view to negotiating with Japanese capitalists and business men interested in commercial and industrial undertakings in China, about the middle of next month. It was also reported that his visit had nothing to do with diplomatic affairs nor had it any political significance, his visit being simply to approach Japanese business men with the object of opening up closer economic relationship between Japan and China. In the light of the Peking dispatch referred to, it is surmised that the Chinese Government has decided to avail of the intended visit of Mr. Liu Tsung-yu and has commissioned him with the mission to pay its respect to the new Japanese Ministry under Premier Count Terauchi. At the same time, it is understood that the Chinese Government has decided to present a decoration to H.I.M. the Emperor through the Chinese Minister in Tokyo. Mr. Liu Tsung-yu is expected to reach here before the middle of this month.

It is generally expected that consequent upon the conclusion of the long standing problem of the Chengchiatun affair the Imperial Government will now start its new measures toward China in pursuance of its professed friendly policy. As regards China's internal affairs, the Government will not take any step to interfere, but will take the attitude of an onlooker, as declared by Viscount Motono, Foreign Minister, at the last sitting of the Diet. In future the Japanese Government will, it is believed, take steps to give as much financial aid as possible to the Chinese Government, and for the furtherance of that purpose, the Goevrnment will take measures to facilitate a speedy conclusion of the four powers' loan pending between the Chinese Government and the quintuple consortium. But as Britain, France or Russia are unable to advance any large amount to China as they are involved in the war, which circumstance interferes with their investment in purposes other than their direct and immediate requisitions, there is a necessity of relying on the financial aid of the United States to fill the gap, and already negotiations are, it is said, going on between Japan and America for the purpose of economic co-operation between the two countries toward China. It is learned that the negotiations referred to aim at establishing an arrangement between the United States and Japan for co-operating in the development of the economic resources in China by giving joint support to China, apart from the four powers' loan question to which the American capitalists will also become a party, it is expected. At any rate, the economic policy of the Terauchi Ministry towards China is expected to be gradually formulated with the progress of the negotiations going on between the Japanese and American financial representatives and the conclusion of the four power consortium conference which is to take place in London early this month.

The "Tokyo Asahi's" correspondent at New York transmits a dispatch outlining the contents of the negotiations re Americo-Japanese economic co-operation in China, now in progress between Japanese capitalists and American capitalists at New York. According to the dispatch the object of the proposed joint enterprise in China is the dredging of the great Chinese canal in Shantung Province which was contracted for some time ago between the Chinese Government and Messrs. Sims Cary Co., of the American Banking Corporation. On account of the protest of the Japanese Government, the American syndicate dropped the plan and invited Japan to make the enterprise a joint undertaking of Japanese and American capitalists on the terms that of the total capital amounting to 11,000,000 yen, required in the work, American capitalists will find 6,000,000 yen and Japanese capitalists the balance, the work of dredging to be carried out by an American syndicate. In this connection the Japanese financiers hold an opinion that the Japanese should take up the enterprise jointly with British capitalists, to which proposal the Americans have no objection. In fact they welcome the proposition. The Chinese Government, however, desires that Japanese capitalists merely supply capital, the work being taken up as an American enterprise. Negotiations are still pending on that point . The negotiations are being carried on between Mr. Eijiro Ono, vice-president of the Japan Industrial Bank, and Mr. Straity of the American Banking Corporation and other American capitalists. The scheme is mainly supported by Baron Shibusawa and Baron Sakatani, who represent the Japanese capitalists.

Baron Shibusawa, who is the chief promoter of the proposed Americo-Japanese economic co-operation, talking on the subject makes the following remarks:

To form an economic combination between Japan and America for economic enterprises in China is the first step towards realising the establishment of closer friendly relations between Japan and the United States. On the occasion of his visit to the United States the year before last the Baron persuaded many influential American financiers and publicists with that opinion, and after his return home the Baron preached this theory among the prominent officials of the Government and influential Japanese financiers. The Baron's opinion met with warm approval and support from Judge Gary, an authority in the American economic world, who took great interest in the Baron's suggestion and used his influence for the realization of the proposition. Finally, he succeeded in moving many influential American financiers and publicists, and even the American Government, which appreciated the value of the proposition and understood its practical adaptability.

But in effecting this purpose it is most necessary that the two nations hide their mutual selfish interests and try to maintain an attitude of true and sincere co-operation, but for which it is impossible to realize the end and aim of harmonious co-operation between two peoples and gain the eventual object of promoting the friendly relations between them. For realizing that purpose, says the Baron, there must be some proper objects for making investment on a joint enterprise between the two countries.

In this connection, the Baron suggests the establishment of a central bank in China and the reform of currency system of China, which are the works of foremost importance to China as well as to foreign traders interested in China, and form an object most adequate and appropriate for the purpose of joint undertaking to Japanese and American capitalists in view of their close economic relations with China. The Baron's suggestion has been recognised as ideal and practical by the authorities of the two Governments and influential Japanese and American capitalists and publicists, but as the question is one of the problems involved in the four powers' loan proposal, negotiations must be opened with the four power consortium by the capitalists of the two countries, if they want to take up the work as the object of their economic departure in China, and by frank exchange of views, the enterprise must be made a separate question from the interests of the four power consortium. The Baron doubts whether the present Ministry is ready to take such a steady and advanced policy in dealing with economic questions in China.

PANAMA CANAL AND ARMED MERCHANTMEN

Washington, Jan. 24.—In future, mercantile vessels armed solely for defence will be accorded the same treatment as other merchantmen plying in the Panama Canal.

The War Department here to-day sent a notification to the above effect to the Governor of the Canal Zone. The question cropped up recently by the application of the Japanese Government for permission for Japanese armed merchantmen to pass through the Canal.

PRINCE CHING DIES IN CHINA OVER EIGHTY

Peking, Jan. 29.—Prince Ching, who has been seriously ill for some days, died here to-day.

Prince Ching, whose death was announced yesterday in our telegraph columns, was the last of the great pillars of the late Imperial dynasty of China. Owing to the brevity of the telegraphic news nothing is known as to the cause of death, although it is known the Prince had been ill for some time past.

The late Prince Ching who was in his 81st year, did not belong to the lineage of the Princes of the Blood of the Imperial House of China, and was therefore not of the hereditary line. Born the son of Prince Ching, the 17th son of the late Emperor Chien Lung, he raised himself from a statesman to the rank of prince by his rare ability and distinguished services to the state. The direct cause of his rise and promotion was his meritorious exploits in connection with the famous Kaipin rebellion, in which he rendered distinguished services to the state by taking an active part in the subjugation of the rebel force. Soon after the pacification of the rebellion he entered the Cabinet holding a ministerial portfolio in the Central Government and came to yield great sway in the politics of China, meanwhile making rapid progress on his way to distinction, being created a Prince in recognition of his great services to the State on the occasion of the diamond jubilee of the late Empress Dowager, the mother of the late Emperor Kuang Hsu and a remarkable woman who had practically held the sceptre of the "Middle Kingdom" for years as the regent of the puppet Emperor Kuang Hsu. Towards the end of the Imperial dynasty of China he was given a special honour being accorded the treatment due to a hereditary Prince in appreciation of his invaluable services to the state since the days of the late Emperor Kuang Hsu.

After holding various high posts in the Central Government he was appointed in 1900 Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs and then appointed Minister of Keungkuei (member of the Grand Council of State) in 1902, directing all important affairs of state as the senior elder statesman with greater influence than the late Li Hung-chang and Chang Chi-tung. At the time of the Boxer trouble of 1899 the Prince negotiated with the representatives of the Powers and settled the terms of peace and again on the occasion of the Russo-Japanese war the Prince negotiated with the late Marquis Komura for the settlement of various agreements and arrangements between Japan and China. Perhaps the Prince was the only man of all the Chinese Princes who had participated in important political and diplomatic affairs of state. He rendered many meritorious services to his country by his great ability and tact; besides he commanded immense influence and popularity in the Imperial House of China and among the Chinese people.

After the demise of the late Empress Dowager and during the regency of Prince Chung his influence gradually began to wane until he completely lost his former prestige and popularity on account of his unlaudable public conduct at the time of the dethronement of the young Emperor as the result of the first revolution. With his great influence and ability Prince Ching could not maintain the dignity and prestige of the Imperial dynasty of the Ching Line, which was overthrown by the revolutionary influence after 300 years' continued prosperity. For his failure he was impeached by almost the whole of the Chinese nation, and yielding to the influence of the revolutionary elements, he abandoned his political ambitions and retired to lead a secluded life seeking his own and his family's safety in the British concession in Tientsin, quite regardless of the frequent attempts for the restoration of the Imperial dynasty promoted by the loyal and devout followers of the former Imperial Govemnment.

Since then the name and popularity of the prince have entirely gone and he was living in utter obscurity. As a diplomatist the late Prince was no friend of Japan, but was known for his anti-Japanese principles, he was the object of the hatred of the revolutionists and while Dr. Sun Yat-sen was hiding in Japan as political refugee the Prince applied to the late Prince Ito requesting the latter to expel the revolutionary leader from this country. It is reported that the Prince amassed a great fortune and was in possession of a vast tract of land in Manchuria, besides holding immense cash deposits at the Bank of England and the Russo-Chinese Bank, said to amount to twelve million yen each. His son Hsun visited this country over ten years ago as a special envoy of the former Imperial Court of China and also visited the Industrial Exhibition at Osaka several years ago.

HOW TO HELP THE ALLIES

The "Jiji" welcomes the plan of sending a relief mission to the allied forces at the fronts, and also the resolution passed at the Houses of Peers and Representatives to express our sincere sympathy and appreciation to the other powers of the Allies, but the paper says that the Japanese Government and public should realize the more important duty Japan has toward the allied powers.

There is no doubt that the final victory will be won by the Allied powers, but it is equally clear that it will take many more months to end the present war. To enable the Allies to keep on fighting until they win the final and glorious victory, the "Jiji" declares the Japanese public should be willing to make sacrifices.

There are three ways of helping the Allies, to despatch Japanese armies to the front, to give the financial backing to the allied powers, and to supply them with munitions and other necessary materials. The paper declares that it is impossible to send the Japanese Army to the front, and Japan is unable to assist the allied powers in this matter, but in the two remaining ways, Japan will be able to give encouragement and assistance to the allied countries to enable them to win the final victory as soon as possible for the interest of themselves and of Japan.

The present war is costing a great deal to all the allied powers, and even England, the richest of all belligerent nations, is meeting with difficulty in obtaining sufficient foreign credit, and an assistance given in this direction will help the allied forces far more than the despatch of a few soldiers to the front. The Japanese public should realize the importance of giving the allied powers the financial assistance at this moment, and Japan will not fulfil her duty in the present war unless she comes to the aid of the allied powers financially.

Again in the matter of the supply of munitions and other articles, Japan stands in a position to be able to assist the fighting allies. With the increase of the demand for guns and munitions, the price of all commodities has made a rapid advance, and even in England the price of general commodities went up almost 80 per cent, since the beginning of the war, and in France it is more than 90 per cent. While at present the Allies have sufficient supply of munitions, it is clear that the demand for munitions will phenomenally increase as soon as the allied nations take up aggressive measures.

In the past, Japan has given the allied countries assistance in sending munitions and giving financial aid, but the "Jiji" believes that what Japan did in the past in these directions is not yet sufficient, and the public as well as the Government of Japan, should pay more attention to our duty in the present war, and give more assistance to the Allied powers, giving them more financial aid and supplying them with more munitions and war materials.

The "Jiji" declares that it is a capital idea to despatch the relief mission to the allied forces and also to send the recent resolution passed at the Houses of Peers and Representatives, but the practical and more effective assistance Japan can give and should give to the powers, is the financial aid and war supplies. The material aid is the most essential at this moment, and the paper hopes that the Government and public of the country will realize the position of Japan in the present war, and endeavour to give the fighting allies, the best possible financial aid and send as much supplies as possible. There is no better way to show true appreciation of the efforts of the allied forces, and express our sincere sympathy towards them.

SURPRISING IGNORANCE

The "Asahi" is surprised at the ignorance of Count Terauchi and the Elder Statesmen of the political situation of today. The Kenseikai which has the majority members in the Lower House, the Kokuminto and a part of the Koseikai declared themselves against the Terauchi Cabinet, and even the Seiyukai stated that it is against the non-party Cabinet, while in the present crisis the party decided to take a neutral course. The majority of the Japanese public is against the Terauchi Cabinet. From these facts, it can be seen that the majority of the Diet after the coming general election, will be also against the Terauchi Cabinet. Instead of resigning themselves, the Cabinet members ordered the dissolution of the Diet, and intend to continue the government which is not supported by the majority of the parties and the public.

The future of the political situation is very interesting. At present the attitude of the Seiyukai is doubtful. It stated that principally it is against the non-party Cabinet, but did not join in the movement against the Cabinet, and in some quarters it is predicted that the Seiyukai will support the Cabinet in the next session of Diet. If the Seiyukai becomes the Cabinet organization and obtains assistance from the Government, the party might increase its members in Parliament in the coming general election. If such a case happens, the Cabinet will announce that it has the support of the majority of the public. The coming general election will be the testing stone of the general conception of the public regarding constitutional government.

The "Asahi" hopes that the Seiyukai will announce its policy before the General election, as its attitude will confuse the voters. The party at present is saying that it is against the non-party Cabinet and the voters might cast their vote for the Seiyukai believing that the party is against the present Cabinet. However if the Seiyukai changes its policy after election and comes to the support of the Cabinet, the voters of the country would be cheated by the Seiyukai. The paper hopes that the Seiyu-kai will not take such a low-down policy, and before the general election frankly announce its attitude towards the cabinet and let the voters know clearly its policy.

PREMIER AGAIN HAULED OVER THE COALS

The "Yorozu" declares that the dissolution of the Diet is not the proper thing to be done at this moment, and it is regrettable that Count Terauchi and his cabinet Ministers did not resign at this opportunity. The paper says that there is no proper reason for dissolving the Diet, and more-over Count Terauchi requested H.I.M. the Emperor to dissolve the Diet before the bill of want of confidence was properly discussed in the Diet.

The "Yorozu" says that recently Japan has made much material progress and also many other things show improvement, but political circles have not progressed, and since Count Terauchi became Premier, degeneration is seen in political affairs. The Count disregarded the Diet and the political parties, and even at the resolution by the majority of the members of the House of Representatives, he refused to resign and dissolved the Diet.

The dissolution of the Diet can only be made when the opinion of the public differs from that of the Government on some important question, and at present there is no important problem to warrant the dissolution. The unpopularity of the present Cabinet is recognized by the entire public, and the paper asks what the Terauchi Cabinet expects to gain by dissolving the Diet.

There is no hope for the Cabinet to win the larger support of the Diet by the special general election, says the "Yorozu", and the only result of the dissolution will be the continued existence of the Terauchi Cabinet. The paper believes that the Terauchi Cabinet intends to give the similar administration to the people of Japan, as Count Terauchi gave to the Koreans in the past.

In the history of Japanese politics, the Diet has been dissolved several times, but the paper states that never before was the Diet dissolved on such an unreasonable ground. The late Prince Ito organized many Cabinets but whenever he was opposed by the Diet, he willingly resigned.

The paper hopes that the public will elect their own candidates in the coming election and keep their own representatives in the Diet. However long Count Terauchi desires to keep his present position, when the entire public is against him, he cannot hold his ground much longer.

SEIYUKAI MAY SUPPORT CABINET

The "Jiji" says that it is likely that the Seiyukai will support the Cabinet in the general election and the next session of the Diet, and declares that if the present Cabinet recognizes the importance of the support of a political party and desires to have the support of the Seiyukai, they should do it openly and publicly announce the fact that in future the Terauchi Cabinet will be supported by the Seiyukai. But the recent indications show that they are secretly negotiating for the support of the Seiyukai, and while proudly announcing their being non-party, they are secretly asking for party support. The "Jiji" declares that if the Cabinet wants the support of the Seiyukai, they should openly join hands with the Seiyukai.

THE JAPAN SOCIETY

At the monthly meeting of the Japan Society in London last month, the Japanese Ambassador, Viscount Chinda was prevented from presiding owing to urgent diplomatic affairs, as announced by telegram at the time. Mr. S. Sawada, however, took his chief's place and read the following message from the Ambassador:—

Asking your indulgence for a short while I wish to avail myself of the present opportunity—the first one I have ever had—to express to you the sense of my high appreciation of the honour you have done me by electing me as the President of the Japan Society. I wish also to take this occasion to offer you my hearty congratulation on the continued success and prosperity of the Japan Society. My experience as an actual member of the Society is extremely limited as you all know well. But my acquaintance with it has been of much longer duration. For many years I have known the Japan Society of London, and the splendid work it has done for the encouragement of the study of Japan, contributing at the same time to the dissemination in this country of the needed knowledge about your distant ally. There is no doubt that in so doing you have indirectly, but effectually rendered valuable services in the interest of the cultivation of those feelings of friendship and goodwill which exist so happily between our two nations.

It is indeed a source of genuine gratification to all of us that there has never been any time in the whole history of our intercourse, when the bonds of fraternal feelings between us have been so close and strong as to-day; when our relations with each other have been in so perfect accord with the spirit of the Treaty of Alliance, by which our mutual international interests are bound and safeguarded so well. I am one of those, who believe in that somewhat trite but none the less true, epigram "Knowledge begets friendship." The truth of the epigram will hold good as well with nations as with individuals. We know how well this point has been proved by the past achievements of the Society. It is to be hoped with confidence that it will continue to contribute even increasingly to the same end. There is always ample room for its activities along that line. When we come to think of it, we shall really be surprised to realise how very little is known here after all concerning Japan. I venture to submit that you do not know one tenth as much about us as we do about you, let it be said without reproach. It is only too natural that such should be the case. We have so much to learn and so little to teach. We lost so many centuries by our self-imposed and self-contended seclusion that we must be up and be doing in making up the lost time, if we mean, as we most certainly do, to keep abreast with the progress of the world. If left alone to the natural tendency of things, the exchange of international knowledge, which is a pre-requisite of international friendship, will always remain too one-sided to be entirely sound and solid. Do not misunderstand me. I do not mean to contend that such exchange should be kept perfectly even between us. From the nature of the case there would be neither reason nor necessity for such a contention. What I do mean to say is only this: that the difference in this respect should be minimised as much as possible, and that more encouragement may with advantage be given in this country to the study and acquirement of information on Japan and her people. Now this is exactly what the Japan Society does. It is with this hope that I now permit myself to extend to the Japan Society my warm wishes for the fullest measures of success and prosperity.

H.I.J.M.S. HYUGA TAKES TO WATER AT NAGASAKI

The battleship Hyuga was successfully launched on Jan. 27 at the Mitsubishi Dock, Nagasaki in the presence of H.I.H. Prince Higashifushimi, and other distinguished guests.

The Hyuga is a sister ship of the battleship Ise which was launched at Kobe last November, and one of the biggest ships in the Japanese Navy. She has a displacement of 31,260 tons, and is 683 feet long and 94 feet wide. She carries twelve fourteen-inch guns, and 39 auxiliary guns. She is designed to develop a speed of twenty-three knots, and the engine will develop 45,000 h.p. at the shaft.

The work on the Hyuga was started in May, 1915. It is noteworthy that the entire materials used in the construction and equipment of the battleship were made in Japan, as it became impossible to obtain foreign material on account of the war raging in Europe. Both the Ise and Hyuga will be placed in actual service at the end of this year or early next year. With the construction of the Ise and Hyuga, the main fleet of the Japanese Navy is nearing completion.

Among the notables who attended the launching ceremony held Jan. 27 at Nagasaki, were Admiral Baron Shimamura, Admiral Tochiuchi, Admiral Nakano, and others. When the Hyuga glided into the water amid the cheers of thousands of people gathered at the Dock, the warships Hizen, Shukishima, Mikasa, Chitose and Mokagi, gave the signal to the other vessels in harbour to salute the addition to the Japanese Navy.

When the ceremony was over a banquet was held at the docks for one thousand invited guests.

A "WATER" SCHOOL FOR TOKYO

A plan is now being mooted for the establishment of a "Water" School in Tokyo by Mr. Kikuchi, Kyobashi and his suggestion has been welcomed in various quarters. It is said that those who live on the water number 40,000 in Tokyo, while the number of children who have attained the school age is 6,000 at present, most of whom, however, are hindered from attending school for either financial or geographical reasons. The contemplated "Water" School intends to give education to those unfortunate boys and girls and in view of the regrettable fact that such a large number of children of school age remain uneducated, the establishment of the school is considered to be of the most urgent necessity.

OSAKA TO HAVE MUSEUM

Osaka will soon have the biggest and finest commercial museum in Japan. The museum now under construction will be completed by March next and be thrown open to the public next year. The new commercial museum under the control of the Osaka prefectural authorities it is said will be equipped better than the government Commercial Museum attached to the Department of Agriculture and Commerce.

STANDING ROOM AT A PREMIUM AT ROSI'S

"Standing Room Only" was the sign at the box office of Rosi's Theatre on Jan. 27 long before the curtain rose on "The Magistrate" given by members of the Tokyo Amateur Dramatic Club under the very capable stage management of Mr. W. E. L. Sweet, the Secretary of the Club.

It was "American Night" and right royally did the American communities of Tokyo and Yokohama show their appreciation of the "cause" and of the efforts of the ladies and gentlemen who have given up so much of their time and their talents to the preparation and the presentation of the clever farce-comedy which has stood the test of years and survived to delight audiences when it is in as capable charge as it was last Saturday night.

The house was filled to the further line of the furthermost seats. The boxes were occupied, the orchestra stalls were packed and even the standing room usually given up to the accommodation of the loungers was taken up by an interested and much amused audience, which in common with the rest of the house enjoyed every minute of the performance.

For a first night everything went with remarkable smoothness. Taken as a whole the parts were evenly presented and well played, the scenery was adequate though not elaborate, because, it was stated, the committee of the club felt that any extraordinary expenditure would be taking away from the net profits destined for the relief of the sufferers in Serbia, Rumania and elsewhere in the Near East. But it was adequate, and in making the statement that the expenditure on scenery was limited, there is intention only to reflect credit on the executives of the Dramatic Club. The Mitsukoshi orchestra played excellently during the intermissions which were not too long under the circumstances. The costuming was good; the make-up excellent, and the acting fully up to the standard of anything the Club has done up to the present.

The surprise of the evening was the work of Mr. Norman in the role of "Cis", the precocious youth whose mother has taken five years off his age in order to reduce her own on her second marriage. Mr. Norman has played before the Tokyo Dramatic Club audiences on a number of occasions, but, not up to the present, have his abilities been put to such a test as that of last night. The part is difficult, for it requires a personality almost as varied as "Jekyl and Hyde", but from the time of his entrance in Eton jacket and shorts through the restaurant scene and up to the finale when his years are restored to him, Mr. Norman played the part with care and the technique of an old hand.

"Cis" found an excellent foil and support in "Posket" "The Magistrate" of the author, played by Mr. J. A. Rabbitt, who made a name for himself last night as a real comedy character actor. Mr. Rabbitt has been seen before, but has not up to the present been entrusted with anything like as difficult a rôle as that which he undertook last night. He showed remarkable reserve force where "Posket" must always be subject to repression if he is to bring out the best there is in the part. Probably when better used to the acoustics Mr. Rabbitt will be able to use his voice to better advantage in the various emotions through which he has to pass, but this is a criticism that might be directed against, or as a suggestion to, nearly every member of the cast in last night's performance. It is probably the fault of the house and not of the actors themselves though underpitching is the most natural fault of the amateur. Be that as it may, it is certain that Mr. Rabbitt gave earnest of ability and assurance that his second and third night performances will be about the best comedy acting yet seen here among the amateurs.

"Bullamy" the other magistrate, who consumes "jujubes" as a diet, taken by Mr. James Mason, was no disappointment. Mr. Mason has appeared in most of the plays given by the Dramatic Club and in other performances. Always he has made it known to his audiences that he was capable of bigger things and last night he proved it to complete satisfaction. It is not a long part but it is one that opens the fun of the play and Mr. Mason in this succeeded.

Only four ladies are called for in "The Magistrate", "Agatha Posket", taken by Mrs. Mason, has the lead and Mrs. Mason easily asserted her right to the position. Her whole performance was excellent. She found in Mrs. Nonweiler, taking the part of "Agatha's" sister "Charlotte", a bouncing English girl with a notably healthy appetite, a strong support as might have been expected from an amateur actress of the marked ability and experience of Mrs. Nonweiler. The two ladies partake of most of their miseries in common throughout the performance, and upon them depends largely the successful filling in of the comedy. The scene in the restaurant of The Hotel des Princes on Meek Street, London when the police make their raid, was particularly well presented with the help of the ladies.

Another lady of the cast must by no means to be regarded as taking place lower than any one of the others of either sex, for Miss Swift as "Beatie", the little music mistress, was charming in every particular. She gave the first and the last impressions and her gracefulness, the naïvete and the tout ensemble of her presentation of the part reflect the highest credit on her and give assurance of better things to come in the future of the amateur stage in Tokyo.

Mrs. Sweet is always good in whatever she undertakes and she certainly did well and made the most of the small part of Popham, the maid who reads "Bow Bells" and sees her hated rival carry off "Cis" the object of her housemaidenly affections.

Two characters loom large throughout the second act which gives the scene in the restaurant and the raid. These are "Colonel Lukyn" and "Captain Vale" taken respectively by Mr. Davies, who has done some clever acting on other occasions, but in no better presentation, and Mr. W.E.L. Sweet, who in addition to the arduous duties as stage manager so admirably carried out, undertook this most excellent part and did it well—as well as he has done in heavier rôles in the past, which is saying no little.

Of the minor parts, Mr. Reifsnider, as "Inspector Messiter" deserves the lion's share of praise and got it last night though he was run a close second in that old favourite of the Tokyo stage, Mr. A.W. Medley, who was apparently as much at home as a French waiter in a French Hotel in London as he has proved himself to be as "Shylock" or "Mathias" or indeed any one of the many big parts he has taken with so much credit to the amateur stage and pleasure to his audiences.

Other minor parts well taken were "Wyke", by Mr. Aveyard who will always be remembered for his fine work in "Beauty and the Barge", by Mr. Cahusac as "Wormington" the magistrate's clerk and by Mr. Heath who as a "Bobby" or rather as the two Bobbies of the play was welcomed when he came and regretted when he left. Mr. Kennedy made the most of his rôle as "Blond" the Maitre D'Hotel des Princes.

MIND THE RUSH

"Wanted a Man of irregular conduct having an established reputation for being a troublesome fellow and given up by his parents. Personally apply at our firm between 4 and 5 a.m."

This strange ad appeared in some of the influential Tokyo dailies recently. The man who gave this advertisement is Mr. Watanabe, a big oil merchant in Kanda. Questioned by reporters as to his real intention in giving his advertisement such eccentric wording, Mr. Watanabe keeps silence, but insists on his motive being a very serious one.

FACE SIGHT FROM ITCHING PIMPLES

Ashamed to Go Out. Could Hardly Sleep. Healed by Cuticura.

"My trouble began by large red pimples appearing on my face. It rapidly got worse and it was a sight. I was ashamed to go out, and I could hardly sleep. The pimples used to itch something terrible and matter came out, which would cause the most agonizing itching.

"A friend told me to write for a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After the first application my face began to stop itching. I bought some more Soap and Ointment and my face was healed." (Signed) Ernest Roberts, 54 Leyshon St., Craig, Pontypridd, S. Wales, July 29, 1915.

TOKYO A.F.C. DEFEAT NORMALS

With a lead of 3 goals to nothing at half-time in their match against the Normal School in the League fixture on Sunday, the Tokyo A.F.C. seemed to hold the game safe. For the first portion of the second moiety, however, the home team slackened off and the School notched two points in very quick succession. These reverses put the home forwards on their metal and the score was soon 4-2. Undaunted the School lads returned to the attack and added another point which they were unable to improve on, having to acknowledge defeat by 4-3 after a fast clean game.

The School started the ball rolling and made many vigorous onslaughts to commence with, failing however to press them home. The home team drew first blood with a capital dropping shot from the foot of Roscoe, which the goalie entirely misjudged. The Tokyo forwards kept up the pressure and Curtis soon put them 2-up. The visiting forwards now had more of the game and Hallam was kept busy for some time. Finally Allen cleared with a long kick. Wood obtained possession from Curtis and made "every post a winning one" for the opposing goal. The School centre half repeatedly charged Wood from behind, but as the whistle sounded for the foul the last-named sent in a hot shot in the left hand corner of the net and the point was allowed 3-0. We would point out here that the option lies with the referee on such occasions to allow the goal and not give the foul which of course would be a lesser penalty against the offending party and against the intention of the rules. Had Wood not scored the foul would have been given.

From now until half-time the home forwards kept up the pressure, but no further goals were scored before the interval.

As remarked above, the home team appeared to fall to pieces for some time after the resumption and the visitors notched two points in quick succession. The first was due to Hallam missing a "punch" at a bouncing ball and the second came from the foot of the centre forward who had a clear goal to shoot at. The home team now began to take matters more seriously and after continual pressure Wood added a fourth point. After some pretty passing between the insides Curtis worked his way through and was just about to shoot, when Wood dashed up from behind and put the ball well beyond the goalie's reach. Just previous to this, a confident appeal for a goal was made by the home team after a scramble in front of the School citadel. It was claimed, and corroborated by the on-lookers later, that the ball had crossed the line, but owing to the lack of linesmen to appeal to the losers were given the benefit of the doubt.

Thirteen minutes still remained and both sides made the pace hot, the School managing to reduce their lead owing to what appeared to be a misunderstanding between the home defense line when the outside left scored. However, from now until the final whistle play was chiefly round the visiting goal and the home team emerged victorious by 4-3 after a fast clean game in which only two minor fouls occurred. The entire Tokyo team played better than they have any of them done this season and the new arrangement of the forward line was a proved success.

For the losers, Okubo, Takeuchi and Abo were the pick. The teams were:

Tokyo A.F.C. Goal: J. W. Hallam; Backs: W. Haigh (Captain), L. V. Allen; Half-backs: W. J. Davies, H. E. Klingen, J. Duer; Forwards: N. K. Roscoe, E. Aveyard, A. Buckney, A. G. Curtis, A. E. Wood.

Higher Normal School: Goal: G. Tomida; Backs: K. Abo, J. Onishi; Half-backs: S. Matsuura, H. Takeuchi, K. Kawagita; Forwards: T. Watanabe, H. Sasaki, J. Okubo, M. Ishikawa, M. Nukada.

Referee. Mr. J. S. Willes.

The home team, it should be added were cheered to victory by their mascot rooter, who we fear must have shouted himself hoarse.

An unfortunate misunderstanding occurred during the game regarding substitutes so we would here point out that no substitutes are allowed by the Rules. Early in the game one of the School team had to leave the field for a short time owing to his nose bleeding. The home captain allowed another player from among the onlookers to take his place. So far so good. Later in the game, however, another visiting player left the field and sent the original substitute in his place. The referee ordered the latter off the field, which decision met with a good deal of opposition from School players, presumably through ignorance of the Rules. In baseball we believe 22 players are allowed on each side, which is possibly what led to the misunderstanding.

THE CAPTAIN OF THE NAGATA

Mr. Torata Yamamoto, formerly Captain of the Nagata Maru, which was sunk by a German submarine in the English Channel on November 30, and who after that took to the Kisakata Maru, No. 3 owned by the Yamashita Steamship Company which met the same fate as the Nagata Maru on January 19, has recently written to Mr. Nagata, owner of the Fujinagata Shipbuilding yard in Osaka, from London describing in detail the circumstances of the disaster that befell the Nagata Maru, adding at the same time that he is gratefully indebted to the English and French authorities for the very kind treatment he and his men received from them after the steamer was sunk.

He says:

"I was filled with the greatest thanks when we were kindly received by the officials of England and France after our ship was sunk by a ruthless German submarine. I am sorry that my pen fails to do justice to the prompt attention with which a Swedish steamer came to our rescue, the prudence of the French authorities who sent us a torpedo-boat to escort us ashore, flying her flag at half-mast, and the cordial treatment given us by the obliging British consuls at Brest and Macao. We were all filled with joy and thankfulness to think that our allies have shown such friendliness in our sad plight, though we were conscious that they were bound in duty to do so by virtue of the contracts of the alliance."

Quality.

With Lea & Perrins' sauce, a few drops sprinkled over the meat, fish or cheese, &c., are all that is required to impart the most delicious piquancy and flavour.

The QUALITY and concentration of its ingredients make a little of this sauce go a long way.

NEWS & NOTES

The Education Department will put forward a supplementary Budget at the next special session of the Diet providing for estimates of 800,000 yen for educational works of urgent necessity to be carried out within a few years.

The Tokyo Stock Exchange has just issued a history of the Exchange giving full details of the development of the Exchange since its establishment in 1878, and diagrams showing the scope of transactions and prices of the stocks handled at the Exchange.

The Tokyo Marine Insurance Company has decided to arm and despatch the Fukui Maru to the scene where the N.Y.K. chartered ship Kaiho Maru recently stranded and sank at a point 170 nautical miles from Hongkong. The idea is to protect the vessel being looted by pirates.

Under the same atmospheric condition that occasioned heavy snowfalls in Fukuoka and Yamaguchi prefectures during the last few days the districts near Matsuyama and Orio in Ehime prefecture, Shikoku, have been visited by a heavy snowfall which has suspended communications temporarily.

Mr. Junsaku Nakamura, a millionaire in Kobe who some time ago proposed to donate 300,000 yen for educational purposes in Nara prefecture where he was born has increased the amount of his contribution by 60,000 yen. Governor Kitagawa of Nara has decided on the establishment of a typical commercial school at Nara with the gift from the millionaire.

Rumblings of the earth are still being heard in the districts of Hakone. Dr. Omori, a famous authority on seismology has been carrying out a laborious investigation of the cause of the recent earthquakes in those districts. He has been staying at the Fujiya Hotel at Miyanoshita for the last few days. The Doctor asserts that the centre of the recent earthquakes lies in Mt. Komagatake.

According to an information received in a reliable quarter the British government has entered into a contract with the Chinese government for the employment of 200,000 Chinese coolies from Shantung province. Already 1,500 labourers have been enlisted in the province and embarked for Europe. It is stated that these Chinese are to be employed as bearers in the Balkans.

When good trains No. 9.301 bound for Fukushima was travelling at full speed on the Tohoku line on Monday evening, it was suddenly thrown off the track by impact with some obstruction. The engineer, by name Watanabe, was seriously injured. It was afterwards found that two stones each measuring about 27 kan had been placed across the rails. Traffic was suspended for several hours. The author of the dastardly act is still at large despite the search of the police.

The heaviest snowfall for 20 years has been experienced during the last few days in the district of Kokura city in Fukuoka prefecture, Kyushu. Forty-six houses were destroyed and the telephone service was disorganized in many instances. A dispatch from Yamaguchi in Yamaguchi prefecture reports a big snowfall in that district, in consequence of which telephone wires were broken and the mail service was delayed about 3 hours. Orange trees have greatly suffered.

A terrible accident took place due to a snowfall in Hyogo prefecture on February 3. A primary school at Yashiro village, Kinosaki-gori, Hyogo prefecture collapsed on Feb. 2 under the weight of six feet of accumulated snow on the roof, with the result that some 90 boys and girls who had been taking lessons were buried under the collapsed buildings. Many of the school children it is feared were crushed to death.

The Department of Home Affairs reports that during the last six months of 1916, 11,275 foreigners visited Japan, showing an increase of 3,493 over the record of the first six months of the year.

Among the visitors were 2,122 British, 2,170 Americans, 185 French, 2,937 Russians, 4,111 Chinese, 21 Italians, 4 Austrians, 93 Dutch, 19 Belgians, 19 Swiss, 29 Swedish, 43 Portuguese, 42 Danish, 1 Turk, 2 Egyptians, 2 Mexicans, 24 Persians, 7 Chilians, 3 Peruvians, 2 natives of The Argentine, 25 Greeks and 51 of other nationalities.

THE SEVERANCE OF U. S. AND GERMAN RELATIONS

Commenting upon the breaking off of diplomatic relations between Germany and the United States, Baron Y. Shibusawa said that the number of submarines Germany had recently constructed, could be roughly guessed, and as the German declaration of the adoption of merciless submarine warfare had made the Entente plan defensive measures more carefully, the activity of the German submarines could be easily stopped by the efforts of the combined naval forces of the United States, England and France. The recent declaration of the Kaiser aiming to destroy the ships of all nations without giving notice had aroused the neutral nations as it were to arise and capture the insane man. The United States was the first of the neutral countries to stand up for the sake of the neutral powers and humanity.

As the defensive power of the Entente far exceeds the aggressive power of Germany, there will not be any immediate increase of the danger on the open seas, and consequently the shipping trade of the world, and especially the Japanese trade with foreign countries will not be affected much by the activity of the German U-boats. The closing of the Yokohama Silk Exchange is a temporary phenomenon, and the silk market will soon regain its former activity. In a word, the German declaration of merciless submarine warfare and the breach of international relations between the United States and Germany will not affect the Japanese trade to any extent.

Various opinions have been expressed by prominent persons in diplomatic and military quarters here about the severance of America's relations with Germany, but they are all unanimous in their satisfaction at the decisive steps taken by President Wilson. It is unknown yet, says Admiral Kato, the Minister of the Navy, whether this will be followed by America's intervention in the war or not, but in view of the fact that German battleships are being glued to Kiel by the British naval forces alone, there will be no particularly big task for the U. S. Navy if she participates in the war. However the work of clearing the Atlantic of enemy submarines and armoured steamers that have recently wrought no small havoc will be accomplished by the American navy and it will lead to the betterment of the economic situation at large. The Admiral seems to be interested with the reported mobilization of motorboats and thinks that the U. S. authorities will arm the motorboats they have commandeered with a view to using them for patrols against submarines.

Marquis Okuma, ex-Premier, is one of those who little expected America's breach with Germany, but he is highly satisfied with the decisive measures adopted by Dr. Wilson. The Marquis opines that the Allies will greatly benefit by America's declaration of war, although she may not take any active part in the great struggle. The assistance and encouragement which America will hereafter give to those fighting with the enemy of humanity and justice will give a great impetus and strength to the Allies and Germany might perhaps be brought to her knees without further bloodshed. Marquis Okuma believes that the severance of America's relations with Germany promises to accelerate the restoration of the peace the world is longing for, but the only thing that troubles the sage of Waseda is the attitude of hyphenated Americans.

Whether or not those German-Americans who constitute nearly ten per cent. of the entire population of the U.S.A. will stand for Germany is not known, but the latest German Note announcing her unrestricted naval warfare is believed to have touched them to the heart, as the Note indicates the position of Germany as akin to desperation. It is by no means improbable that hyphenated Americans will sympathize with their mother country which is now threatened with starvation and ruin owing to the British blockade. Marquis Okuma concludes by saying that the attitude of German Americans should be carefully watched under the present circumstances.

H. E. MR. GUTHRIE INTERVIEWED

H.E. Mr. George Guthrie, the American Ambassador, interviewed by a "Jiji" reporter in connection with the diplomatic rupture between America and Austria, as reported by a Reuter telegram yesterday, is represented as saying: "The American Embassy has not yet received any official report about diplomatic rupture between its home government and Austria, but the Embassy expects to receive official information to that effect shortly." Regarding the report that the duty of protecting the interest of the German residents in Japan, hitherto in charge of the American Ambassador, has been transferred to the Spanish Minister, the American Ambassador is quoted as stating that he has received no instructions to transfer that duty to anybody. The Ambassador declares that his duty to look after the interest of Germans in Japan ceased at once on the rupture of relations between his country and Germany, and as a result of this he is not responsible for the protection of the Germans no matter what grave questions may occur. Consequently the Germans in Japan have to be controlled by and submit themselves to the dictation of Japanese laws and regulations. Otherwise, they have nowhere to appeal for protection and safety at the present moment. Apparently Germany has not yet decided on the selection of a third country to whom to entrust the protection of her subjects in Japan. The Ambassador's duty having already ended with the diplomatic rupture between his country and Germany as stated, the Ambassador has only to formally hand over the duty hitherto entrusted to him.

JAPAN MAY YET ARM HER MERCHANT SHIPS

It is believed that the question of arming merchant marines will be discussed again shortly. The British Government adopted the measure of arming merchant ships, last December, and also communicated with the Japanese Government with the intention of receiving its co-operation.

The Department of Communications, Foreign Affairs, and Navy, consulted upon the question several times, and finally asked the Nippon Yusen Kaisha to express its opinion on the matter. After carefully considering the problem, the Nippon Yusen Kaisha replied that under the circumstances it was not necessary to arm its ships, and declared that it would be much safer to have the merchant marines unarmed. Receiving this reply from the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, the matter was temporarily dropped, but as the Kaiser has declared unrestricted submarine warfare against merchant ships, and navigation will become consequently more dangerous it is reported the question of the advisability of arming Japanese ships will be again brought up. It is said that if the German submarines become as active as the announcement made by the Kaiser, the arming of merchant ships will be carried out.

PAPER FAMINE FEARED BY TOKYO PRESS

Unless it ceases to snow in the Hokkaido and other northern districts in Japan within a few days there will be no issue of many of the vernacular papers in Tokyo. The fact is that Tokyo has been practically cut off from the supply of pulp from outside. Since the importation of pulp from other countries is very scarce on account of the war, paper mills in Tokyo and elsewhere are getting the supply of home-made pulp from the Hokkaido which is by no means satisfactory. The recent snowfall, however, has greatly hampered the transportation of the materials to Tokyo and for the past ten days there has been no supply from the north. Consequently the stocks in Tokyo are rapidly dwindling in the face of a heavy demand from every direction and almost all the paper mill companies remain idle at present. It is learnt that even leading newspaper offices here which are amply stocked with paper usually are now feeling the shortage and that unless there is a supply of pulp to Tokyo paper mills within three or four days some of these papers will be compelled to suspend publication.

The "Yorodzu," one of the most popular vernacular daily and evening papers, has decided, it is said, to suspend the issue in case it can not get a sufficient supply of paper for several days. The circulation of the "Yorodzu" has increased recently by some 36,000 copies, as the paper having blown the first bugle of attack on the Terauchi Cabinet is bitterly against the Government. The "Yorodzu," though it covets new subscribers undoubtedly in an ordinary way, now wants no more of them under these circumstances and will announce "No more subscribers wanted" in a few days.

COUNT BERNSTORFF IS IN SORRY PLIGHT

It is reported in cable despatches that when Count Bernstorff, German Ambassador, received the intelligence that his passports were coming he tearfully stated he expected them and wondered how to get home. The question seems to be rather puzzling and some persons in diplomatic circles appear, though it is actually none of their concern, to try to puzzle out the question as to how the clever Bernstorff will make his way to Berlin through the cordon maintained by the Allies. A certain diplomatic official says in the "Nichinichi" that it is really an enigmatical problem to solve and wonders how the German Ambassador will manage to get home to Berlin. There has been one German diplomat as Herr Hintse, Minister to Peking, who reached his post in safety after many adventures. He experienced difficulties in his journey from Mexico to China, for he disguised himself with utmost care during his journey for fear of being taken prisoner by the Japanese authorities.

He took a junk instead of a steamer to convey him to China. Count Bernstorff however, will not be able to succeed like Herr Hintse. Since America has severed her relations with Germany the Washington Government will no longer ensure the safety of his journey and whichever way Count Bernstorff may attempt his return to Germany safety is well nigh impossible, in view of the vigilant watch of the Allies both on land and sea. The Berlin Government may possibly ask Holland or some other neutral to insure the safety of Count Bernstorff's journey, but it is clear, says the writer in the "Nichinichi," that Great Britain and France will disregard such request. However the Ambassador and his party cudgel their brains for ideas, there can be no hope of reaching Berlin in safety.

Mr. Shidewara, Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs, is reported to be one of those who take pity on the solitary and tormenting plight in which Count Bernstorff has been placed. The Vice-Minister was Minister to the Netherlands Government previous to his promotion to the present position and his sympathy with the German Ambassador is said to be due to the fact that he had no small trouble and anxiety in his journey from Holland to London.

The Takeo Tuberculosis Laboratory in Osaka has been recently completed and was opened on Feb. 1. The instruments and other medical fixtures installed in the new laboratory are all of Japanese make. The electric centrifugal precipitators in the laboratory are said to be satisfactory and capable of 4,000 revolutions per minute. The bacteria room in the laboratory is heated by electricity. The installation is the first of the kind ever used in laboratories in this country. The director of the new Laboratory is Dr. Sata who has taken great care about the fitting up of the new building.

NO FEAR OF HYPHENATES

Professor Price, lecturer at the Tokyo Imperial University, who is an American is quoted by the "Hochi" as follows in reference to the population of the German hyphenates in America:

"Congress seems to be divided in opinion on the attitude the United States should take toward Germany. It is a question whether to declare war on Germany forthwith, or to warn Germany against war ,or to appeal to force only when Germany makes active attacks on American merchantmen. I do not believe that President Wilson will go to the length of declaring war on Germany on his own initiative. Germany's position in regard to America is that of a potential enemy.

"It is far wide of the mark to predict that German-Americans in the United States will plot against the country they live in. Now the number of German-Americans in the States is about 8,000,000 out of the total population of about 100,000,000. It must be remembered that for the last thirty or forty years the immigration of Germans into America was inconsiderable owing to the Imperialism preached by Bismarck. The so-called German-Americans are all of them already Americanized and have not the least idea of playing the traitor to the United States. It may be seen from this, therefore, that all the recent disasters at American munitions factories that are believed to have been brought about by German-Americans are really the results of plots made by the German spies in America.

"What must be most carefully guarded against at this moment is the Jews numbering one million in America who have immigrated from Russia. They have in fact an intense enmity against the Russian Government and the Allies in general and constitute a vast conglomeration of German spies."

CHINA AND JAPAN WAR SAVINGS

Telegraphic advices, we learn, are to hand stating that the Finance Committee have completed arrangements for investment of the Association's income in the Straits Settlements War Loan Bonds, thus enabling the return of interest to be maintained at 6 per cent. per annum, free of Income Tax.

The Bonds bear interest at 6 per cent. per annum payable half-yearly; they are free of Stamp Duty and interest is free of Income Tax.

All proceeds of the loan will be lent to the British Government for the prosecution of the war.

The principal and interest of the Bonds are charged upon and payable out of the general Revenues and Assets of the Straits Settlements and are guaranteed by the British Government.

The Bonds are issued at par and are repayable at par on the 15th November, 1919 (i.e. three months before the date fixed for the liquidation of the Association's Funds).

From the above it will be observed that these Bonds fulfil the Association's requirements in all respects and form a most convenient channel through which its funds can be placed at the disposal of the British Government. The finance Committee is advised that owing to the stability of the exchange value of Straits currency (backed by a Gold Reserve) the possibility of any loss in exchange may be considered as negligible.

RELATIONS BETWEEN CHINA AND JAPAN

The "Chen Chung Pao," a Chinese vernacular paper published in Peking, commenting on the speech in the Diet of Viscount Motono, says that the new Chinese policy of the Terauchi Ministry, which professes no interference in China's internal affairs, is quite acceptable to China, but the journal would question whether in case China is involved in some serious domestic trouble as to threaten her downfall and ruin, Japan will still stick to her professed policy of no interference and prefer not to take the trouble of preventing China's national ruin, to which Japan is surely called upon to lend every assistance. Japan has not yet made any declaration as to her special interests and relations in South Manchuria and Eastern Mongolia, and the paper can not presume that the policy of the Terauchi Ministry is a step ahead of the policy of its predecessor. The paper urges the Chinese people to pay keen attention to that point and survey Japan's attitude with close interest.

Mr. Chang Chi, one of the influential political figures of China, who wields considerable influence in political circles in Peking, interviewed by a Japanese press correspondent, states that the recent change in Japan has produced a remarkable echo in Chinese political circles, which fact shows what close relations the mutual interests of the two countries have come to bear to each other. The Chinese politician was frank enough to say that the Japanese people, especially politicians and publicists, are possessed of very far-sighted views and opinions about the world's affairs and the situation in the Far East as a whole, but very few fully and perfectly interpret and understand China which he greatly regrets for China as well as for Japan. The speech of Viscount Motono is a great credit to the insight and ability of the Japanese Foreign Minister, but it is good and recommendable only as a theory, while it is lacking in practical use. That is, it does not show in what way and manner the coveted advancement of friendly relations between Japan and China can be realized. The principle of no interference is a good and admirable idea, but the question is whether the result of sticking to too candid and impartial an attitude might not bring about a result running counter to its desired object. To cite an instance, the accommodation of a loan to China might not result in giving assistance and support to a section of Chinese political circles. The result of the general election will surely end in a victory for the Opposition, though the Opposition may lose some of its former influence. The Cabinet under Premier Tuan may remain in existence while the Terauchi Ministry is in power. To Chinese, the political situation in Japan is a matter of graver significance than political changes in their own country.

ESPERANTO PARTY EXPECTED

At the instance of the Esperanto Association in Vladivostock, about 90 Esperantists in Petrograd, Moscow and other Russian cities will visit Japan, when the maple leaves are at their best in this country. It is interesting that a party of so many students of the international language invented by Dr. Zammenhof start on an Esperanto language pilgrimage in a foreign land and the news has taken even the Japanese Esperanto Association here by surprise. The Esperantists will travel in two parties and according to present arrangements will arrive at Tsuruga and Shimonoseki respectively. It is said that the members of the party will only speak Esperanto during their stay in Japan. In Russia, Germany and France where this artificial language is comparatively popular, an invasive trip of Esperantists is enthusiastically welcomed by associations of Esperantists in various places which look after their guests from a distant land in every way. However the Japanese Esperanto Association which is not well supported is not in a position to accord the forthcoming visitors much of a welcome and has asked the association in Vladivostock to postpone the departure of the party till April 1918.

The request may perhaps be accepted and in that case the Japanese Association intends to invite about 50 American Esperantists to this country at the same time with a view to holding a conference of Japanese, American and Russian Esperanto students. The local association is expected to solicit funds for the welcome of these visitors, if only the present trip can be postponed.

MORMONISM DOES NOT PROSPER IN JAPAN

The propagation of Mormonism was started sixteen years ago in this country but it seems to extend among Japanese at a snail's pace. The Osaka "Mainichi" reports that there are at present only 55 disciples of Joseph Smith in Japan, of which 8 are Osaka people. There are four Mormon churches or churches of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in this country now, in Tokyo, Osaka, Sapporo and Kofu, and altogether ten American propagandists of Mormonism are at work in these cities. Mr. C. R. Arnott, of the Osaka Mormon Church is quoted by the "Mainichi" as saying that the tardy progress of the propagation of this religion is due to the fact that there is no Japanese Mormon Missionary in Japan as Mormonite propagandist are not given salaries as a rule.

Polygamy which used to constitute the chief feature of this religious sect, says Mr. Arnott, has proved a great hindrance to inviting converts as it is completely at variance with Japanese morality.

LIEUT.-GENERAL AOKI LEAVING FOR PEKING

The question of the engagement of Lieutenant-General Nobusumi Aoki by China as highest adviser to the President's office, which had been pending since last autumn owing to dissensions of views between the Peking Government and the Chinese parliamentary members, is reported to have been smoothly settled, partly as the result of the recent rapprochement of views and sentiments and the growth of amity between the two nations. Lieut.-General Aoki will start for Peking to take up his new duties as adviser to President Li Yuang-hung leaving Tokyo on or about the 15th inst. after meeting Baron Hayashi, Minister to Peking, who is expected here on the 12th. As aide-de-camp and secretary to Lieut.-General Aoki, Captain Neijiro Okamura, of the General Staff Office, has been selected, and will accompany his chief.

The name of Lieut.-General Aoki is well known as one of the few high officers of great tact and ability in the Imperial Japanese army, and with the exception of General Baron Fukushima few can compare with him for profound knowledge about China and Chinese affairs. Besides his proficiency in the knowledge of military science and tactics in which he is also an undisputed genius, Lieut.-General Aoki is possessed of a rare diplomatic ability and tact and was long resident in China formerly as the military attaché on the staff of the Japanese Legation in Peking. Later he was stationed in China on a special mission as a member of the General Staff Office. As a man of true soldierly character and sober, grave and magnanimous aptitude, his appointment to the advisership to the President of China will, it is expected, greatly contribute to the advancement of friendly relationship between Japan and China in future together with the furtherance of the new Chinese policy of the present Cabinet.

Captain Okamura, who has been chosen as adjutant and secretary to Lieut.-General Aoki, is one of the many able young officers of the army, being especially well-informed about China and Chinese affairs. From the time when he was still a student in the central military preparatory school he has been ever an ardent student after knowledge about China and has mastered the Chinese language in the course of his conscientious study and researches of Chinese questions. He is also well up in the knowledge of German. After graduating from the Military Staff College, where he took the highest course of military science and tactics, he was attached to the General Staff Office and for some time was an instructor in the Military Cadet School where he had the charge of the military education and training of Chinese military students dispatched by the Chinese Government. Among high officers of the Chinese army and high officials of the Peking Government there are many former students of Captain Okumura, at whose hand they received military education and training while in Japan. In the Tsingtao campaign of 1914 Captain Okamura was sent to Tsingtao and attached to the Japanese army headquarter there, as a member of the staff of General Kamio.

MONGOLIAN BANDITS

News by mail from Mukden brings details of a conflict of considerable dimensions which took place last month between a large force of Mongolian bandits and the Chinese Government troops stationed in Inner Mongolia. The battle, which lasted for two days was fought at Khorchen and resulted in a victory for the Chinese forces. The casualties on the Mongolian side were estimated at 300 of which 100 were killed and the bodies left on the field. On the Chinese side the casualties are given as 120, 20 of which were killed.

The bandits, having been outnumbered and beaten, retreated to Alhusan, 40 miles north of the scene of the encounter where they are now. It has been ascertained that these bandits are in considerable strength and much better drilled, armed and organized than has been the case hitherto. The arms and ammunition in their possession, of which they seem to have an abundant supply, are of mixed kinds, but in the engagements in which they are used, the possession of them, together with the fact that their operations against the Chinese troops are carried out under the direction of persons with a more intimate knowledge of military tactics than could be expected from Mongolian bandits, makes the suppression work of the Chinese Military authorities much more difficult and costly than would be the case otherwise.

It has now been definitely ascertained that the bandit forces in this district consist of 11,000 men in four divisions. The first division consists of 3,000 men armed with Russian rifles used by the Russians in the Russo-Japanese war and taken from them by the Japanese. The second division consists of 5,000 men, who are armed with rifles of Japanese manufacture. The third division consists of 2,000 men with German rifles of the same pattern as those used by the Chinese troops. These are said to have been taken in raids and stolen from various Chinese Police stations. The fourth division consists of 1,000 men armed with both Russian and Japanese rifles, making a total of 11,000 men.

The Chinese troops now stationed in the disturbed district number 25,000. What is known as the Rear Territorial District provides 18,000 men in constabulary and patrolling troops, Kirin Province provides eight battalions of 500 men each, total 4,000, and Mukden furnishes 3,000 men in six battalions, total 25,000.

These forces are stationed at various points between Ssupingkai and Inner Mongolia. Although better equipped and armed and greatly outnumbering the bandits, the Chinese Government troops are doing their duty under a severe handicap. Their knowledge of the topography of the district is inferior to that of the bandits and physically they are not so well able to stand the rigour of an exceptionally severe winter, during which the thermometer has frequently stood at 32 degrees below zero.

ON THE FRENCH FRONT

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 30.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Monday communiqué, says: "We raided the enemy lines north-east of Vermelles, bombed the dug-outs and inflicted many casualties. We entered the foe's positions north-east of Armentières and reached the third line. We destroyed dug-outs with occupants, killing many Germans in the trenches and taking some prisoners."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 31.—The Belgian official communiqué reads: "On the night of January 27, the Germans, after a violent artillery preparation attacked the Belgians south of Hetsas. The British and Belgian fire prevented the enemy reaching our trenches. The attack failed completely, the enemy leaving many dead behind."

The French afternoon communiqué read: "We effectively bombarded the enemy works in the region of Eix-Abancourt on the Woeuvre. One of our detachments penetrated the first and second lines of the German trenches, south of Leintrey, in Lorraine. We out-manœuvred the enemy defenders and brought back some prisoners. We carried out a coup-de-main against an enemy post in the region of Moncal. Here and also in the Vosges there were numerous encounters between patrols. An enemy aeroplane was brought down."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 30.—The latest news from Rumania indicates that the line between the Trotus Valley and the Sereth, held by the Russo-Rumanian forces, is so strong that the enemy is unable to strike another blow.

Realizing this, the enemy has decided to withdraw part of their forces. Only 4 to 5 German Divisions now remain there, having been replaced by Turks and Austrians.

The French Press anticipates a blow at Alsace, where the German troops from Rumania are reported to be concentrating.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 31.—The Russian official communiqué reads: "After a bombardment with chemical shells, the enemy made a strong attack along the Kalnzen to Schlok high road and also north-east of the former place. They pressed us back two-thirds of a mile and occupied a small sector of our trenches east of Kalnzen."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 31.—The Russian official communiqué announces that on the Bukovina front "we advanced in snow waist-high and captured, at the point of the bayonet, the heights east of Jacobeny, taking a number of prisoners and some booty."

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, Feb. 1.—On the Riga front, east of Kalnzem, the German advance has been entirely repulsed, after very heavy fighting during the severe frost of the last few days. Thus the Russian situation has been completely re-established.

On the Rumanian front, in the course of a combat on January 30, the Russian troops captured eleven officers, over 1,000 men and ten machine-guns.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Feb. 1.—Western front. In the evening of January 30 a Zeppelin passed Haynash (on the Riga Gulf) in a northeastern direction searching this region by a projector. The attack of the enemy on the eastern extremity of the Tirul marsh and along the left bank of the Aa were stopped by the Russian fire. After a 4 hours' artillery preparation, performed mostly by chemical shells, the Germans attacked with strong forces along the Kalnzem-Shlok roadway. Also this attack was repulsed, only on a sector adjoining this roadway the Russians retreated for one kilometre in a northern direction. Energetic German attacks, supported by fire of chemical shells, followed, but they were all repulsed by the Russian fire and counter-attacks, the enemy succeeding merely in keeping hold of a small part of the Russian trenches immediately east of the Kalnzem roadway. The Russians took during their counter-attacks many prisoners and machine-guns. The commander of one Russian regiment Colonel Pimenoff was killed. East of Kiselin, the enemy tried twice to approach the Russian trenches, but was both times repulsed.

Rumania. The Russian troops, having under the strong fire of the enemy overcome his wire entanglements, advanced in the snow up to the chest on the steep hills and slopes and seized by a well directed bayonet attack the fortifications of the enemy on the heights two kilometres east of Jacobeny. The number of prisoners and booty taken has not yet been established.

Petrograd, Feb. 2.—Western front. After a strong artillery fire on the Russian trenches west of Slaventin (20 kilometres south-west of Brzezany) numerous enemy's parties clad in white garments rushed into the first Russian trench line, but by a counter-attack supported by artillery the Germans were driven back into their trenches.

Rumania. Firing and reconnoissances are in progress.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Feb. 1.—Western front. The Russian troops, assuming a counter-attack, after a stubborn fight dislodged the Germans from the trenches, which they had occupied east of the Kalnzeem roadway. A lull, interrupted from time to time by artillery fire, followed. The rush of the Germans has thus been entirely stopped and the Russian troops have recaptured their trenches in spite of the strong frost and the asphyxiating gases. Bombs were dropped from Russian aeroplanes 20 kilometres north-west of Illuxt and a fight occurred in the same region between a Russian and an enemy aeroplane, this last being compelled to come down. German aviators bombarded the village Toplyia north-east of Postava.

Rumania. The enemy during the night before January 31 made three attacks against the Russian troops on the heights east of Jacobeny, but was repulsed with heavy losses for him. January 30 the Russians took east of Jacobeny 11 officers and 1,000 soldiers, also one gun, bomb and mine-bomb throwers.

Caucasus front. Snowstorms continue on the whole front. The Russian men-of-war on the Black Sea seized five schooners, three of them being provided with motors.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Feb. 3.—Western front. A bomb was dropped from a German aeroplane near Kemmern (west of Riga) killing 10 soldiers. After a strong artillery fire the Germans attacked the Russian troops east of the Kalnzem roadway. Their first rush was checked by the Russian fire, only one company on the right wing being pressed back, but the Germans were by a counterattack repelled and the front recovered. Two further attacks of the enemy were also repulsed, cuirassed motorcars proving to be very effective on this occasion. Bombs were dropped from a German aeroplane near Kreuzburg on a fast train, but caused no damage.

Firing continues on the Rumanian front.

Eighteen schooners were sunk by the Russian vessels on the Black Sea near the Anatolian coast.

[OFFICIAL TO RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Feb. 4.—Western front. After a strong bombardment on the Russian trenches, the Germans assumed the offensive along the eastern border of the Tirul marsh, but were scattered. After an artillery preparation, their attacks were repeated, but all of them were speedily checked by the Russian fire. The Germans assumed the offensive east of the Kalnzem roadway, but were stopped by the Russian fire. By their repeated attacks, performed with strong forces the Germans succeeded in rushing into the Russian trenches, but by the counter-attacks of the Russian troops the position was recovered. The Russian troops afterwards attacked the enemy, who had gathered east of Kalnzem and dispersed the Germans, the Russians returning to their trenches. Bombs were dropped from a German aeroplane north-east of Riga, but caused no damage.

Firing continues on the Rumanian front.

Reconnoissances are going on on the Caucasus front. The snowstorm continues.

[OFFICIAL TO RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Feb. 5.—Western front. Enemy columns in compact formation having assumed the offensive north-east of Kalnzem were driven back to their trenches. German troops assumed the offensive north-west of Friedrichstadt, but were scattered by the Russian fire. A German aeroplane, coming under the Russian fire descended hurriedly north-west of Postava.

Reconnoissances and firing continues on the Rumanian front.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 30.—The official report from Mesopotamia reads: "We now hold the Turkish first and second lines south-west of Kut-el-Amara on a front of 4,300 yards and the third and fourth lines on a frontage of 600 yards.

Turkish dead to the number of 950 have been collected and buried and there are more bodies not yet counted. We captured 127 prisoners, one heavy gun, three trench-mortars and one Maxim."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 5.—The official report from Mesopotamia reads: "On Friday night, the cavalry reached a point on the right bank of the Tigris, 25 miles west of Kut-el-el-Amara. On Saturday, west of the Hai Tigris junction the British captured three successive lines of trenches on a 650 yards front and to a depth of 400 yards, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy. We now control the mouth of the Hai river opposite to Kut-el-Amara.

"As a result of Saturday's success, the enemy evacuated the whole south bank of the Tigris eastward of its junction with the River Hai, which we now occupy. To the west of the Hai, the enemy evacuated their trenches as far as a line westward of the Liquorice Factory, to the northwest of the junction of the Hai and Tigris.

"We have already counted 600 enemy dead as the result of Saturday's fighting."

FRENCH TRANSPORT SUNK

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Paris, Feb. 3.—The Ministry of Marine announces that the transport Amiral Magon, a vessel of 5,566 tons, built in 1904, was torpedoed and sunk while conveying 900 troops to Salonika January 25. Eight hundred lives were saved.

DETAILS OF NEW MINE FIELD LAID BY BRITISH

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 31.—The State Department at Washington publishes details of the new British mine field as communicated to neutrals. Its greatest extent from south west to north-east is about 23 miles. The length from north to south is 70 miles. It blocks the approach to the North Sea coast of Germany except through neutral territorial waters. It extends four miles south-west of Rengkjobing on the west coast of Jutland, north of Horn Reef, to a point south of Famborough Head: thence it turns southeastwards to within seven miles of Terschelling, one of the chain of islands north of Holland.

In a speech at Nottingham, to-day Lord Robert Cecil said that the blockade of Germany was very nearly complete. He believed it would absolutely destroy the enemy's overseas exports and practically destroy her overseas imports. Evidences from many sources all showed that the Central Powers were suffering from food riots, a shortage of copper, absence of rubber. It seemed beyond question that the Germans had little wool, less cotton. Lord Robert concluded by warning his audience that the blockade alone would not end the war and bring victory. That must be obtained upon the field of battle.

MR. JOHN BUCHAN'S WEEKLY SUMMARY

London, Feb. 3.—On the British front in France, there was some increase of activity during the past week. The most extensive operation was an attack on a section of the enemy trenches near Le Transloy, which was completely successful. The whole objective was secured and 369 prisoners taken at a total cost to the attackers of 60 casualties.

Apart from this, the trench raids have been numerous and successful. A daylight-raid to the northeast of Neuville and Saint Vaast resulted in much damage to the enemy and the capture of a number of prisoners was actually effected without loss, as was another raid near Festubert. A similar undertaking by daylight near Hulluch was carried out at negligible cost.

Such results in casualties are eloquent of the skilful organization and the spirit of vigour on the part of the assaulting troops.

Owing to improved aerial conditions, there has been much air fighting in the British and French sectors. A considerable number of German aeroplanes have been destroyed, providing clearer proof than ever of the notable superiority of the British and French aviators over the enemy.

Elsewhere, operations have been unimportant, excepting Mesopotamia, where considerable success was achieved in the offensive against Kut. The operations began on December 13th and have progressed steadily and satisfactorily. The British, despite a most obstinate defense, continue to close in on the Turkish stronghold. The latest fighting has led to the capture of two lines of enemy trenches on a front of between two and three miles. The capture of the enemy's third and fourth lines, on a 600 yard front, has also been effected.

The value set by the Turks on the positions taken has been proved by the number and determination of their counter attacks, which have been repelled with heavy slaughter and the trenches strongly organized.

AMERICAN STEAMER SUNK

New York, Feb. 3.—A cable from London tells that the American steamer Housatonic has been sunk by a German submarine near the Scilly Islands. The steamer, of 3,143 tons, was built in 1891.

The Housatonic, on its previous voyage, had left Las Palmas in the Canary Islands, off the coast of northwest Africa, on December 9 and arrived in Galveston, Texas, the chief cotton export port of the United States, on December 31. The boat probably left Galveston about the middle of January.

PLAN MURDER PREMIER AND ARTHUR HENDERSON

Derby, Jan. 31.—Three women and a man were arrested yesterday and arraigned before the Bench, charged with conspiring to murder Mr. Lloyd-George, the Premier, and Mr. Arthur Henderson, Minister without portfolio.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 31.—Three suffragettes Mrs. Alice Wheeldon, her daughter Harriett, Winnie Mason, a school-mistress and Mrs. Wheeldon's son-in-law Alfred George Mason, a chemist, a conscientious objector, were charged at Derby Police Court to-day with conspiring to murder Mr. Lloyd-George and Mr. Arthur Henderson.

Only evidence of arrest was given and the prisoners were remanded. No details are published. Alice Wheeldon in Court declared "it is a trumped up charge because my lad is a conscientious objector." The Wheeldons are well-known suffragettes. It is stated others may be involved. The "Daily Sketch" says it is understood prisoners are accused of conspiring to poison Mr. Lloyd-George.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 3.—An extraordinary story was told to-day by Sir F. E. Smith, the Attorney-General, who prosecuted on behalf of the Crown, when the trial was resumed at Derby of Mrs. Alice Wheeldon, her daughter Harriet; Miss Winnie Mason, a school-mistress; and Alfred George Mason, Mrs. Wheeldon's son-in-law all of whom are charged with attempting to murder Mr. Lloyd-George and Mr. Arthur Henderson by means of poison.

The Attorney-General said phials of poison were sent from Southampton to Derby and handed by Mrs. Wheeldon to a Government Agent, who obtained her confidence. It was proposed to shoot poisoned darts at Mr. Lloyd-George when he appeared to speak at Walton Heath.

THE LAURENTIC DISASTER

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Belfast, Jan. 31.—The Laurentic was mined on Friday morning off the north coast of Ireland. The vessel was manned by 475 naval ratings. About 260 men perished. The explosion blew a terrific hole in the vessel's side. Many of the stokers were killed outright. The injured were placed in boats as the ship was sinking. The time she took to go down is variously estimated from 5 to 45 minutes. The sea was dotted with men struggling for their lives. Many were taken on board the already crowded boats which were half-swamped by the sea, the men being half-clad in the bitterest cold hours of the morning before they were rescued by fishing smacks. Already 100 frozen bodies have been washed up.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Jan. 31.—The Admiralty announces that the auxiliary cruiser Laurentic was the victim of a floating mine and not a submarine.

PIRATES' LATEST DECLARATION STIRS NEUTRALS TO TAKE ACTION

No Alarm Is Shown Though Gravity Of Situation Is Well-Recognized—Smaller Nations Look For Lead From United States

New York, Feb. 1.—The Associated Press correspondent at Berlin telegraphs that the German Government has despatched a Note to the United States Government, declaring that she is openly determined on unrestricted naval warfare.

The Note, which is a lengthy one, declares that the attempt of the Central Powers to bring about peace has failed on account of the lust of conquest of their adversaries. The effort of the Central Powers to establish an understanding has been answered by an announcement of intensified warfare. "The Imperial Government," the message continues, "must now continue the war for existence forced upon it by using us as weapons. The Imperial Government, therefore, is obliged to do away with the restrictions up to this time imposed on the use of its fighting force upon the sea."

The Note concludes by asking the United States to co-operate, in order to avoid sacrifice of life, by warning American ships against entering certain "barred zones," described in the accompanying document.

Germany's unreserved naval warfare became effective on February 1.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

New York, Feb. 1.—The New York "World" characterizes the German Note as a declaration of war against the United States. It says that President Wilson must carry out the terms of his ultimatum so swiftly that Berlin will have no excuse for a misunderstanding of the purpose and policy of the United States.

After this, says the "World," the United States must adopt measures necessary to protect the lives and property of its citizens on the high seas.

'If this means war with Germany, so be it,' concludes the "World."

The New York cotton market in the opening experienced an unprecedented break, but recovered later. The stock markets were similarly affected. The selling was the wildest since the outbreak of the war.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

The Dutch press dwells on the risks that Germany's latest threat will cut off Holland's imports and will cause an entire paralysis of Holland's industries.

The Handelsblad associates the recent rumors of German troop concentrations on Holland's eastern frontier with the new German measure. This journal deduces from this that Germany is convinced that Holland will be forced to take up arms.

A dispatch from Madrid states that after the Spanish Cabinet had discussed the German Note, the Minister of the Interior conferred with the editor of all newspapers, and appealed to their patriotism to observe a discreet composure. He gave as his reason for this request the fear that when the purport of the Note, which meant the interruption of all Spain's foreign trade and grave internal dislocation, became known, disorders might occur. He said that the Note also made it necessary to prevent all unnecessary consumption of commodities.

A dispatch from Madrid quotes the newspapers there as declaring that the knell of submarine warfare threatens Spain with hunger and ruin. One paper significantly remarks it is waiting to see what the United States will do.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

New York, Feb. 1.—The harbour here was closed on Wednesday evening. All departures were forbidden. A torpedo-boat is stopping all arrivals at Quarantine Island. It is believed that the interned German merchantmen are preparing to dash out to sea. The police are guarding the docks, where five Hamburg-Amerika liners are interned.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, Feb. 1.—President Wilson and Secretary of State Lansing to-day conferred an hour on the new situation raised by Germany's submarine declaration. After this conference it became known that the United States Government has already begun to formulate definite steps in regard to the submarine campaign.

The situation raised by the German declaration is regarded as extremely grave. It is intimated that some kind of action has already been taken, but the nature of this action is not indicated.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 1.—A New York despatch from Berlin says that a German Note based on President Wilson's Address to the Senate has been communicated to neutrals. The Note declares that the rejection of her peace offer forces Germany to disregard the restrictions placed upon naval warfare from February 1, and asks the United States to co-operate to prevent sacrifice of life by warning American ships not to enter barred zones.

A message from Madrid reads: The German Note which has been handed to the Spanish Government says that Germany and Austria absolutely forbid commerce between Neutrals and the Allies and will torpedo all ships without respecting flags or cargo. The Central Powers give all ships five days to return to neutral ports.

A message from Washington says that the preliminary consideration of the German Note occasioned expression of opinions giving the impression that the situation was viewed with extreme gravity. Prompt action is expected.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 1.—The Foreign Office to-day issued the following statement: "The German Government claim to have conclusive proof that enemy hospital ships have been misused to transport munitions and troops. It also claims to have submitted proofs to the French and British Governments, at the same time declaring that the traffic of hospitalships within a line drawn from Flamborough Head, Tershelling, Ushant to Land's End will no longer be tolerated.

"His Britannic Majesty's Government has received no communication and denies the allegation, adding that Germany has the right to search hospital-ships, which she has never used.

"As it is evidently Germany's intention to add other more unspeakable crimes to the long list disgracing her record, His Majesty's Government has decided that if the threat is carried out, reprisals will be immediately taken."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 1.—A message from Amsterdam says: "Competent circles regard Germany's announcement of ruthless submarining with grave anxiety."

A message from New York reads: The newspapers here consider Germany's announcement of a ruthless submarine warfare as the gravest issue of the war. Many papers urge the immediate severance of diplomatic relations and several, notably the "New York World," are in favour of handing Count Bernstorff his passports at once.

Mr. Asquith, in a speech at Ladybank, to-day, said that the victory of the Allies was inevitable. The notion that the struggle was about to end in a stale-mate was a mere dream. He urged all to subscribe, to the utmost, to the War Loan. He denounced the new German submarine plans. He admitted that the situation was grave, but said that the allied Navies and measures such as the arming of merchantmen, the acceleration of construction, and the allocation of tonnage to the resources of the Allies were all being used in order to counter the campaign.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, Feb. 1.—Speaking in the Reichstag, the Imperial German Chancellor, in announcing the Government's decision in favour of unrestricted submarinism, stated to-day that Germany's submarines had been very considerably increased since last Spring. It was hoped to render the difficulties of the Entente, owing to the world's bad corn harvest, unbearable; and make the coal question for Italy and France more critical to cut off Great Britain's supplies of ore for munitions and of timber for coal-mines.

It was opined, the speaker said, that the dangers to Germany of unrestricted submarinism, had greatly decreased. He quoted the opinion of Field-Marshal von Hindenburg to the effect that the military situation permitted Germany to accept all consequences.

A telegram from The Hague received in official quarters says that the German Chancellor, speaking in the Reichstag, declared that Germany would maintain a merciless submarine warfare. At the same time, the German Government has sent a circular Note to the neutral states declaring the blockade of the eastern part of the Mediterranean. In the Note sent to the United States Government, Germany has declared the cancellation of the restriction she agreed to on the use of arms in naval warfare.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, Feb. 1.—The memorandum accompanying the German Note prohibits traffic in the waters around Britain, France, Italy and certain areas of the Mediterranean Sea. The exceptions to this rule are routes from America to Falmouth and from Flushing to Southwold.

The Note permits an American passenger service with Falmouth once a week, defining the route such ships must follow and elaborate signs which such ships must carry.

The American Government must guarantee that such ships do not carry contraband.

Germany has notified Holland that she is willing to make special provisions in respect to a mail and passengers service from Flushing to Southwold.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

New York, Feb. 2.—The whole country was aflame with anger to-day upon the receipt of the German announcement of ruthless submarine warfare. Feeling rose to a pitch far above that reached at the time of the Lusitania disaster.

The newspapers, with hardly an exception, demanded that Germany's insult be thrown back in her face. Even the mildest pacifist organs only deprecated rashness. The possibility of war became a universal topic.

The temporary closure of New York harbour followed the Germans' attempts to scuttle interned liners, preventing their seizure.

New York, Feb. 2.—The Stock Exchange opened to-day with losses ranging from one to twenty points, followed by a demoralization extending to all classes of stocks.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

New York, Feb. 2.—American papers continue to comment on Germany's latest Note to the United States.

The "Louisville Courier and Journal" says:—Surely the President has been awakened from his dream of a millienium by Germany's latest Note, which is a direct challenge to war. That challenge should be accepted within twenty-four hours. A war thus entered on by America should not end until the Imperial despotism of Germany, which had dared to plunge the world into such a war, is completely and eternally crushed.

The "Providence Journal" says:—The world notes at last what Germany really means when she speaks of the freedom of the seas. This brutal and insolent pronouncement is only an added proof that the besotted and blood-stained policy of Prussia does not change.

The "Journal" concludes by advising the immediate severance of diplomatic relations with the German Government.

Colonel Roosevelt commented as follows on the Note:—

"If the President has a proper sense of the respect due to this nation he will pay no more attention to this Note than a householder would pay to the warning of a burglar against interference by another burglar when making off with his silver.

"The Note outlined a policy of murder of non-combatants, including women and children, as the national policy of Germany on the high seas. On the first occasion when the threats contained in the German Note are carried into effect as regards American citizens or ships every German vessel interned in American ports should be seized by our Government and trade with Germany interdicted."

Washington, Feb. 2.—Mr. Lansing, the Secretary of State, received the Press correspondents and told them he had nothing to communicate, neither would he answer any questions. Mr. Lansing added that this official attitude held good for the remainder of the day.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 2.—The British Press does not conceal its belief that the German threat implies a real formidable peril demanding all the nation's endurance. It opines that this frightfulness has long been anticipated. Confidence is expressed that preparation will be made to meet it. The greatest difficulty will be submarine minelayers.

A message from Madrid says that the Minister of Marine has telegraphed to all Spanish Port Authorities temporarily prohibiting sailings.

The Dutch Government has suggested that ships should not sail at present unless the Government is first consulted.

A message from New York states that Friday morning's papers are almost unanimous in declaring that a break with Germany is only a matter of a few hours. This opinion is based on unofficial conjectures. It is learned from Washington that there has been no official statement.

The mark has fallen in New York to 66¾, the lowest point on record.

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, Feb. 2.—The Press here regards the declaration of a blockade by Germany as an extreme measure adopted through lack of food and supplies. Also, it is attributed in part to the failure of the German peace proposals. Its object, say the papers, is to impress neutrals of the necessity of admitting the lawfulness of the German submarine policy.

The "Novoe Vremya" is of opinion that the only result likely to be achieved by the German piracy will be a diminution in the safety of travellers, an increase in the sinkage of ships and serious complications with neutrals.

The "Bourse Gazette" says the blockade is principally directed against neutrals. The paper awaits, with deep interest, the attitude of America.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, Feb. 2.—Dutch shipping is forbidden to leave territorial waters.

Christiania, Feb. 2.—The mails and goods traffic with England has been suspended.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Copenhagen, Feb. 2.—At a secret sitting of the Rigsday to-day, the Minister of Foreign Affairs announced that it was the Government's intention to endeavour to ensure the maintenance of trade with other countries. All parties approved the speech. The sitting closed with the Speaker appealing to the members to meet the new situation with dignity and tranquillity.

Madrid, Feb. 2.—Excitement resulting from the German Note is most intense. There have been continued conferences of Ministers with the military and naval authorities. The Foreign Minister conferred with the American Ambassador from midnight until 2 a.m. The Premier announced in the Cortes that the situation was undeniably grave, but deprecated any discussion of the reply Spain would make to Germany.

New York, Feb. 3.—Less than an hour after the news was received, the banks and business houses began unfurling American flags. Crowds rushed to newspaper bulletin boards and purchased eagerly extra editions of newspapers. An enthusiastic approval of the government's course is voiced on all sides.

In Montreal, the publication of extras announcing that the United States had severed relations with Germany created intense excitement and the crowds cheered Wilson.

In Washington, the news of the President's decision came like a thunderclap, and everywhere there were expressions of approbation.

New York, Feb. 3.—The Associated Press correspondent at Washington sends the following message:—While official information was withheld, there were indications in official quarters to-day that a communication is about to be sent to Germany, the nature of which is a warning against her unrestricted submarine warfare, placing the severance of relations as the next step if Germany persists in breaking her pledge to the United States.

New York Feb. 3.—A dispatch from Washington says that an attache of the State Department this afternoon delivered to the German Embassy passports for Ambassador Bernstorff, his wife, staff and suite, comprising more than one hundred persons. A note believed to be substantially the same as the President's address was included with the passport and it stated that Spain would take over American interests in Berlin.

When Bernstorff had been given the intelligence that the passports were coming, he tearfully said he expected it and that there was nothing else the United States could do. He wondered how to get home. A feverish activity became noticeable at the German Embassy, whence the attaches were beginning to remove their personal effects. It was announced that the Swiss Legation would assume the German diplomatic interests in the United States.

New York, Feb. 3.—A dispatch from Washington states that diplomatic relations with Germany have been severed. A diplomatic break with Austria-Hungary is expected, but it is not clear whether the United States has yet received formal notification from Austria endorsing Germany's stand.

The United States has also formally demanded of Germany that she immediately release the Americans taken prisoners by the South Atlantic raider.

New York, Feb. 3.—Advices from Washington state that the German auxiliary cruisers Kronprinz Wilhelm and Prinz Eitel Friedrich, interned at the navy yard in Philadelphia, have been seized by order of the Navy Department, and the crews have been imprisoned.

In Boston the United States Marshal seized the liner Kronprinzessin Cecilie, which had been nominally in his possession since the institution of a suit by a bank for the nondelivery of a large amount of gold at the outbreak of the war, when the liner returned to the United States to avoid capture.

Upon urgent orders of the Government, extraordinary precautions have been taken against German plots and conspiracies, particularly anything done to the interned German ships in American ports.

Washington, Feb. 3.—Diplomatic relations between the United States and Germany have been severed.

Washington, Feb. 3.—President Wilson announced the severance of diplomatic relations with Germany in an address this afternoon before a joint session of the Houses of Congress.

The Senators and Representatives listened with rapt attention as the President described the unsuccessful attempts of the American Government to dissuade Germany from employing a policy of ruthlessness on the high seas. He recalled the note to Germany on April 8, 1916, following the sinking of the Sussex, which contained the words:

"Unless the Imperial Government immediately declare and effect an abandonment of the present methods of submarine warfare against passenger and freight carrying vessels the Government of the United States will have no choice but to sever diplomatic relations with the German Empire altogether."

The President quoted the assurance given by Germany in reply: "The Imperial Government will do its utmost to confine the operations of the war for the rest of its duration to the fighting forces of the belligerents."

President Wilson also gave the language of the order issued by the German Admiralty to the submarine commanders both within and without the areas of declared naval war zones, that merchant vessels should not be sunk without warning or without saving the lives of the persons aboard, unless the vessels made an attempt to escape or offer resistance.

The President also quoted from the same note the reservation made by Germany against keeping her promises if her enemies were permitted to apply at will methods of warfare "violating international law," and the American Government's response refusing to entertain, much less discuss, the suggestion that respect for the rights of citizens of the United States was in the slightest degree contingent upon the conduct of any other Government.

The President then quoted from Germany's note of last Wednesday, revoking the pledges thus given "on the ground that brutal methods of warfare had been adopted by their enemies, who proposed the destruction of the Central Powers."

President Wilson continued: "I think you will agree with me that in view of this declaration, which suddenly and without prior intimation of any kind withdraws the Imperial Government's note of May 4, 1916, this Government has no alternative consistent with the honour and the dignity of the United States but to take the course which in our note of April 18, 1916, we announced that we would take in the event that the German Government did not declare and effect an abandonment of the submarine warfare which it was then employing, and to which it now proposed to resort."

The President said that he had directed the Secretary of State to announce to the German Ambassador that all relations between the United States and Germany would be withdrawn.

"Notwithstanding this unexpected action on the part of the German Government," the President continued, "this sudden and deeply deplorable renunciation of its assurances given to this Government at one of the most critical moments of tension in the relations of the two Governments, I refuse to believe that it is the intention of the German authorities to do in fact what they have warned us that they will feel at liberty to do. I cannot bring myself to believe that they will indeed pay no regard to the ancient friendship between their people and our own or the solemn obligations exchanged between us, and destroy American ships or take the lives of American citizens in the wilful prosecution of the ruthless naval programme they have announced. Only actual, overt acts on their part can make me believe it even now."

President Wilson then declared solemnly that if his inveterate confidence in the sobriety and prudent foresight of their purposes should prove unfounded, and that American ships and lives were sacrificed by Germany's naval commanders, he would take the liberty of coming again before Congress and would ask that authority be given him to "use any means necessary for the protection of our seamen and our people in the prosecution of peaceful and legitimate errands on the high seas. I can do nothing less. I take it for granted that all neutral governments will take the same course."

The President reiterated his refusal to believe that Germany would do anything actually hostile until he was obliged to believe it and stated that the purpose of the United States was nothing more than the defense of the undoubted rights of the American people.

"We wish to serve no selfish ends," he continued. "We seek merely to stand true alike in thought and action to the immemorial principles of our people which I sought to express in my address to the Senate a fortnight ago—we seek merely to vindicate our right to liberty, justice and an unmolested life.

"These are the bases of peace—not war. God grant that we may not be challenged to defend them by acts of wilful injustice on the part of the government of Germany."

The President read his address slowly. He was frequently interrupted with loud applause. When he concluded the members of Congress arose and cheered. They remained standing while he left the chamber.

Washington, Feb. 3.—In Congress, an amendment to the revenue bill was introduced to-day, proposing the issuance of 500 million dollars' worth of non-interest bearing Treasury notes to put the nation in a state of complete military and naval preparedness. Prominent leaders in both political parties unqualifiedly expressed approval of Wilson's course.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, Feb. 3.—Upon his recall by President Wilson, Ambassador Gerard was instructed to close all the United States consulates in Germany, completely interrupting relations. Spain will take charge of American interests.

The President reached his decision to recall Mr. Gerard and hand Count Bernstorff his passports after a conference with the Cabinet members and leading Senators which convinced him that the country was solid in favour of a rupture.

America has demanded that Germany immediately release the Americans captured by the Atlantic raider.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 3.—A Washington message states that at the conclusion of a two and one-half hours' Cabinet meeting, President Wilson hurried to the Capitol to discuss the situation with Chairman Stone of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate. At the conclusion of a two hours' conference between the President and the Senators, one of the latter said that a diplomatic rupture with Germany was practically certain.

After the Cabinet meeting, a member of the Cabinet told a newspaper representative that the last chance for a peaceful solution of the situation was not yet gone, as Germany had not yet carried out her purpose as far as he knew. It was ascertained that the Cabinet agreed in refusing to countenance German interference with American rights.

London, Feb. 3.—Official circles in Washington are convinced that a break with Germany is only a matter of time.

Fifteen Senators discussed with President Wilson three possibilities: first, an immediate break; second, a delay until an overt act should be committed; third, send a final warning. The majority expressed the opinion that any other course than the first would be regarded by the world as cowardice. Indications are however, that the second course will be adopted.

KOKUSAI-HAVAS

Paris, Feb. 3.—In the course of a discussion in the Chamber of Deputies, on Thursday on the defense measures to be used against German submarines, Baron des Tournelles de Constant counselled an increase in the number of patrolling ships, assisted by sea-planes, and the arming of merchantmen. According to statistics, said the speaker, out of 78 armed merchantmen attacked by submarines 72 had escaped, whereas out of 100 unarmed vessels only seven had escaped.

Admiral Lacaze, Minister of Marine, after assuring the Chamber that Germany's latest threats of frightfulness would leave everyone in France unmoved, said: "We are arming, and shall continue to arm our merchantmen for purely defensive purposes, not allowing ourselves to be intimidated in this action by German protests to neutrals." The Admiral added that, during the last eleven months, out of 51,000,000 tons of merchandise consigned to French ports 273,000 tons only had been sent to the bottom by submarines. He did not attempt to conceal the fact, however, that this proportion might become somewhat greater, but that would in no way decrease the national determination to win the war. The country would simply bear certain indispensable privations the more readily.

New York, Feb. 4.—The Banks and offices were beflagged to-day. Crowds rushed by, with papers in their hands, and fought to approach the bulletin boards.

In a historic sitting of Congress, on Saturday afternoon President Wilson explained the reasons for his decision. His utterances were loudly cheered, especially when he declared that he would ask Congress to provide means to safeguard American lives and property. The President said he took it for granted that all neutrals would follow the example of the United States in severing diplomatic relations with Germany.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, Feb. 4.—The step taken by President Wilson fell like a thunderclap. A Bill was promptly introduced into the House of Representatives for the issue of $500,000,000 in Treasury Notes to complete the military preparations. Precautions are being taken to stamp out any possible pro-German rioting.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, Feb. 4.—There was an unusual attendance of diplomats in Congress, to-day, to hear President Wilson, including practically all the South American representatives. The gravity of the occasion was emphasized by the presence of the Justices of the Supreme Court, members of the Cabinet and other high officials. President Wilson's entry was cheered and applauded by much clapping of hands. Tense silence reigned when President Wilson, with face set and no suggestion of a smile, began to read his address very slowly. A burst of applause greeted the announcement of the severance of relations with Germany, which was renewed when the President declared that it was now no longer possible but to believe that Germany would disregard her obligation not to destroy American ships and lives. Congress rose and cheered at the conclusion of the address and remained standing while the President left the Chamber.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 4.—News of the German-American rupture, which Reuter announced in London on Saturday afternoon, caused the deepest impression of any event since the outset of the war. Little excitement, however, was manifested as the public is now hardened to sensations.

It is the general opinion that America will inevitably be forced into the war. There is much speculation as to what part she will play and how her entrance will affect the supply of munitions.

The prospect of the German steamers interned in America, reinforcing the mercantile traffic has strengthened the composure wherewith the British public growingly regards the new frightfulness. Already there are indications that neutrals were recovering from the preliminary panic even before it was learned that President Wilson had appealed to them to imitate the United States.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Paris, Feb. 4.—The United States Government has broken off diplomatic relations with Austria-Hungary.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, Feb. 4.—A number of Dutch owners have asked for, and been granted permission for their vessels to proceed to sea at their own risk.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

New York, Feb. 5.—The definite breach of relations with Germany has been followed by a wave of patriotism, which is sweeping over the country from end to end. All political differences have disappeared. Expressions of loyalty and support are now pouring in. American newspapers unanimously applaud President Wilson for bringing America into line with the Allies and upholding the dignity of America. Germany they say has now put down her last stake and has already lost. The Kaiser has challenged America by the sword and by the sword he shall be punished.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, Feb. 5.—It is announced that the British interests in Germany have been transferred to the Dutch, and the Japanese and Serbian affairs will be looked after by Spain. It is expected that Germany will withdraw all her Consuls from the United States.

If it is proved that the Housatanic was torpedoed without warning, it will be difficult for America to avoid active hostility.

A battalion of militia has arrived here to protect the public buildings and monuments. The battleships of the Atlantic Fleet stationed at Guantanamo, Cuba, have been ordered to be ready for any eventuality. Orders have been sent to guard the Panama Canal against dynamiting.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, Feb. 5.—The Federal Government has asked for the co-operation of all State authorities to meet the German plots. Special guards have been placed on Government buildings and precautions have been redoubled at the White House and at all allied Embassies. It is estimated that at least 10,000 agents of the Central Powers are under surveillance. In New York alone there are at least 5,000. It is officially known that spies of the Central Powers have been instructed to act in the event of a rupture with Germany. A number of outrages have already been committed.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, Feb. 5.—The State Department has received a dispatch from the American Consul at Plymouth, Mr. Joseph G. Stephens, stating that the crew of the Housatanic were given full warning and opportunity for safety before the vessel was sunk.

It is stated here that the Government has no intention, at present, of seizing the German merchantmen held up in U.S. ports. This action would be an act of war. It is explained that the Kron Prinz Wilhelm, Prinz Eitel Friedrich, the Appam and the Kron Prinzessin Cecilie were already in the custody of the United States. The action of the Panama authorities in taking charge of the four Hamburg-Amerika liners was only a temporary measure to prevent the crews blowing up the vessels and endangering the Canal.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, Feb. 5.—American representatives abroad have been instructed to inform neutrals that President Wilson believes it will make for peace if they follow the American example.

Newspapers in Paris suggest that President Wilson's action may have created formidable political difficulties in Germany which will compel the German leaders to effect a withdrawal amounting to a defeat, which may possibly lead to disastrous consequence.

Philadelphia, Feb. 5.—As the U.S.N. destroyed Jacob Jones was being towed into dock here to-day, she began to sink. The crew were ordered to close the sea-cocks and the vessel was saved. A member of the crew has been arrested and will be charged with sabotage.

London, Feb. 5.—While telegrams are pouring in from all parts of the world, Berlin still maintains a sullen silence. There has been no news from there for 24 hours. There is a suggestion that the Government members at Berlin are so surprised at the extent of the feeling against Germany that they are busy concocting a characteristic statement to save face, or are staying their hand in the hopes of being able to supply some good submarine news as an offset to the bitter pill President Wilson has given them.

Twelve British ships left Rotterdam on Sunday morning and a British trawler arrived at Ymuiden to sell fish in the usual way.

The newspapers on Monday morning warmly welcome President Wilson's action, and speculate on the possibilities of America declaring war. They point out that even with military and naval passivity, America's help is most valuable. For, leaving out all considerations of moral support, America's financial and natural resources are practically inexhaustible, and all will freely be at the disposal of the Allies. Moreover, 200 German ships are at present in American harbours, valued at 50 million sterling including the Vaterland the largest vessel in the world.

London, Feb. 5.—The Scandinavian States are believed to be protesting to Germany against her unrestricted naval warfare, says a dispatch from Stockholm. It is reported from Copenhagen that Gustavus V., King of Sweden arrived there on board a Swedish warship to pay a visit to King Christian X of Denmark. A dispatch from Amsterdam states that the severance of the Americo-German diplomatic relations has caused the deepest impression and gravest anxiety of any event since the outbreak of the war in Holland and this is quite natural now that the country is well nigh on the edge of starvation. Germany professes to be sympathetic with her and is giving some guarantee.—"Asahi."

Petrograd, Feb. 5.—The rupture of diplomatic relations between the United States and Germany is creating great interest with the Russian public. The "Bourse Gazette" considers that German diplomacy made a huge mistake in thinking that her submarine policy would terrorize neutrals, especially America, into coercing the Allies to conclude a war that is proving so disastrous to Germany.

The "Russkovolia" expresses the opinion that the present crisis between America and Germany is not equivalent to a declaration of war, judging by the tenour of President Wilson's speech to Congress, in which he expressed himself as not having lost hope that the Germans will cease their submarine menace and thus prevent America having resort to active measures.

M. Sazanoff, the newly appointed Ambassador to Great Britain is quoted as declaring that the position of Germany is both pathetic and tragic; possibly she has become frightened crazy. There is reason to believe she will herself repudiate her policy.

Count Kokovtzeff says Germany is on the horns of a dilemma, she must accept the challenge or agree to concessions. "In my opinion, the German Government will give way." In any case, the conviction in Germany of the absolute and constant neutrality of America has now been frustrated.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, Feb. 5.—Up to now, no telegrams from Germany on the German-American crisis have reached here. The censor has stopped all German newspapers at the frontier.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Rio de Janeiro, Feb. 5.—The Government is convinced that the time has come to abandon neutrality if the new German submarine warfare directly injures the vital interests of Brazil.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 6.—Germany seems anxious to avoid a rupture with neutrals in Europe, and they are equally anxious to avoid war with such a close threatened neighbour. Germany has already made some slight professions of faith to Holland and is throwing out hints to others.

There, however, is but little appearance of her yielding to America and she seems fully prepared to face the risk of hostilities with the United States and South American neutrals. Already there is talk of the formation of a coalition Cabinet in America on British lines. The Democrat and Republican leaders are conferring at Washington. A noteworthy innovation in American press methods, is that they have ceased the publication of naval movements.

The Press Bureau publishes a Berlin wireless message to the following effect:—Dr. Zimmermann, the German Secretary of State in an interview stated that he regretted President Wilson's action which was against all tradition of International Law. "We appreciate and reciprocate President Wilson's desire to avoid hostile conflict. While we understand to a certain extent President Wilson's attitude, we expect him to recognize the reasons prompting our decision."

Shanghai, Feb. 6.—Reuter's reports from America which are practically the sole source of information of the German-American situation, have caused considerable excitement here. It is understood the German community is making bitter criticisms of its own government.

Preparations are being made by the U.S. Naval authorities for the withdrawal of the gunboats Samar from Nanking, Quirol and Villalobos from Hankow. The gunboat Polos which is at Chungking will probably be interned if war is declared. The cruiser Cincinnatti and the gunboats Helena and Wilmington, at present in port here, are undergoing extensive repairs. Considerable interest attaches to the question of what warships will replace these, should the American ships be withdrawn.

A report received in certain quarters from Shanghai yesterday states an American warship which is now lying at anchor at Huangho-po is busily loading coal and provisions. The crew of the warship have been forbidden to go ashore. The American consulate in Shanghai prohibited German residents there from visiting the Consulate after Feb. 5 and this announcement caused no small consternation in German quarters in Shanghai.

Shanghai, Feb. 6.—The Peking "Daily News" reports that H.E. Mr. Paul S. Reinsch, American Minister, visited General Tuan Chi-jui, the Premier on Sunday evening and informed him of the attitude of the United States Government toward Germany and of the steps that were being taken. He laid emphasis on America's abhorrence of Germany's threatened action and invited China to take corresponding steps as a protest against the inhumanity and unrighteousness of German methods. The Premier replied that he would communicate with his colleagues.

New York, Feb. 7.—A report from London says that one American sailor was killed on board the British steamer Eavestone which was sunk by the German submarine, and when it is known that the steamer did not try to escape when she was attacked by the German diver, the death of the American sailor will bring a declaration of war by the United States against Germany.—"Nichinichi."

Washington, Feb. 7.—President Wilson to-day held a long conference with Senator Stone, chairman of Committee on Foreign Relations. The International Steamship Company inquired of Secretary Lansing whether their steamer St. Louis could sail, and Secretary Lansing replied that the steamer should not leave New York. It is believed in Washington that the relations between the United States and Germany are at breaking point.—"Nichinichi."

San Francisco, Feb. 7.—Mr. Bryan is reported to have stated that under whatever circumstances the United States should not join the Entente. Prof. Taft, however, said that in the event of war, the United States should not hesitate to join the Entente. However, the newspapers of the country with one voice, say that the declaration of war is inevitable.—"Nichinichi."

"LEAK ENQUIRY"

[DELAYED IN TRANSMISSION]

New York, Jan. 30.—Mr. E. F. Hutton, head of the New York brokerage firm, with which the F. A. Connelly Company, of Washington, are correspondents, was the next witness in the Stock Exchange "Leak" Inquiry The President's brother-in-law is a member of the Connelly firm.

Mr. Hutton testified he received information from the firm's Chicago correspondent that the State Department was contemplating the issue of a statement on peace. This was on the day before the peace-note was issued. Later, the same day, his correspondents informed him generally that a Presidential note was about to be issued. The witness was of the opinion that the information came from Mr. Connelly who had picked it up as gossip in the capital. Mr. Connelly is on his way to testify.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

New York, Jan. 31.—The enquiry was resumed to-day when Mr. Hutton testified that Mr. G. A. Ellis a junior member of his firm had sent out a despatch to 45 correspondents throughout the United States at 1.15 on the afternoon of December 20 announcing that an important message to all belligerents would be issued from Washington. In the messages he wrote "interpreted not as pressure of belligerents on behalf of peace, but as an opportunity to put American demands on record to be considered if there was peace, and as a warning that neutral rights must not be encroached upon further."

Mr. Hutton testified that this message was based on information from Connelly & Co. at Washington, of which firm Mr. Wilson's brother-in-law R. W. Bolling was a member. Mr. Ellis is ill near Havannah, but the Committee decided, nevertheless, to subpoena him forthwith and ask him how he was able to describe the President's Note 24 hours before it was issued.

New York, Feb. 1.—Mr. Connelly in his evidence before the "Leak" Enquiry Commission, declared emphatically that all his advance information of the Peace Note was derived from gossip current in the capital. He stated he could not remember the names of his informants.

New York, Feb. 2.—Owing to the seriousness of the international situation, the "Leak Enquiry" has been adjourned, and proceedings will be continued at Washington, where the members of the investigating Committee will be enabled to occupy their seats in the House should their presence be desired.

The following excerpt from the New York "Times" of January 7 throws considerable light upon Mr. Tom Lawson's insinuations against certain personages in high official positions as being connected with the alleged "leak" to Wall Street on President Wilson's note to the belligerent powers. We read.

Washington, Jan. 7.—The "leak" inquiry by the House Rules Committee will be resumed to-morrow with men of prominence called to testify regarding the President's peace note to the belligerent powers. In spite of the declaration by Thomas W. Lawson of Boston that he would be uncommunicative if the committee attempted "to use police court methods," indications were to-day that Mr. Lawson would be put through a severe examination. His broad charges that Congressmen feared an inquiry and that "there would not be a quorum in either the Senate or House" if a real investigation were started has made members of the Rules Committee exceedingly anxious to question him.

It was intimated by a member of the committee that from the very outset Mr. Lawson would be directed to substantiate his charges of a "leak" and the alleged participation of public men in the "bear raid," and that his experience before the committee would not be pleasant if he failed to produce anything more than rumours.

Chairman Henry announced to-day that he had received from Allan Curtis of Boston and New York a telegram saying Mr. Curtis would reach Washington Tuesday. He said he knew nothing of the "leak" or the letter from New York received by Congressman Wood of Indiana, signed "A. Curtis." It was this Curtis letter which brought in the names of Joseph P. Tumulty, Secretary to the President, and Bernard M. Baruch of New York. Allan Curtis is the only "A. Curtis" known to the financial world of New York, and he promptly issued a statement denying that he had written to Mr. Wood, or any one else, in regard to the matter.

A good deal of indignation has been expressed here over the mention of the names of Mr. Tumulty and R. W. Bolling, Mrs. Wilson's brother, in connection with the alleged leak. The basis of the insinuation that they had given or taken advantage of advance information that President Wilson was about to make a peace move was the letter to Congressman Wood signed "A. Curtis," whose identity was not known to the Congressman and who did not even write on paper with a personal or business letterhead.

Mr. Lawson and Mr. Baruch have advised the committee that they will be on hand for the Monday morning session. Other witnesses scheduled for the hearing to-morrow include Secretary Tumulty, who has denied that he held a conference with Baruch or had any advance knowledge of the peace note; Secretary Lansing, who made the note public; W. M. K. Olcott, a New York attorney, who appears at the request of Congressman Gardner of Massachusetts with a copy of Stock Exchange fluctuations and ticker service news of Dec. 20, and seven newspaper men connected with financial publications and ticker news services.

It is expected that some of these newspaper men will testify that the Secretary of State announced in confidence to the press on the morning of Dec. 20 that an important statement would be given out at the department that afternoon and that this information was sent in confidence to some of the news services represented. Several strangers who were waiting to see the Secretary of State in the Diplomatic Reception Room, where he received the newspaper men, are said to have overheard the announcement.

DUTCH ANXIOUS AS HUNS MASS AT OVER YSSEL

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, Jan. 30.—Some anxiety is felt here owing to the reports of continued German concentration of troops on the Dutch frontier, north-east of the province of Yssel. Forty thousand troops have newly arrived at two border towns, accompanied by numerous parks of artillery. It is even stated that the German farmers in the neighbourhood have been ordered to evacuate their homes and go further from the frontier.

Note:—The Dutch province of Overyssel lies east of the Zuider Zee, and is separated from Guelderland, on the south, by the river Yssel. It has an area of 1300 square miles; population 400,000. The chief cities are Zwolle, Deventer, and Kampen.

London, Jan. 30.—Reuter's representative at French Head-quarters describes the tremendous activity proceeding behind the French lines in preparation for the forthcoming offensive. The enemy is unable to gain a clue whence the next blow will be delivered. The correspondent states that if the Germans do strike through Switzerland, they will find the French thoroughly prepared there.

PAPERS OF CAPITAL APPROVE WILSON'S ACTION AGAINST GERMAN MENACE

The news of the declaration of President Wilson of the United States severing relations with Germany, has been welcomed by the metropolitan papers which all regard the American action as most proper and timely. All newspapers in Tokyo favour the action of the United States and hope that the further attitude of the United States against Germany will hasten the end of the present war.

The "Yorozu" says that the merciless and bold declaration of the Kaiser to sink any and all steamers, finally aroused the Government of the United States to break with Germany. The United States is a peace loving nation, and she has endured in the past many insults from Germany, but the German action became at last too much for her noble endurance. When Germany made the declaration of merciless submarine warfare, the paper thought that even the good-natured United States would be forced to rise for the sake of the humanity and the peace of the world, and if the United States had still remained inactive at this moment, she would be laughed at by the entire world.

The declaration of President Wilson to sever relations with Germany has opened a new epoch in the present war, and the future development of the war will depend upon the steps the United States takes.

The United States of America up to Saturday was the only first class power which had not entered the vortex of the present war, but now she has declared herself against the German Government, and it is probable that all other neutral nations will follow the example of the United States. In that case, Germany has to fight against the entire world, and she will become in future the enemies of the whole world.

Recently on account of the successful blockade by the British fleets, Germany has greatly suffered, and she finally became desperate and came to adopt the merciless policy of destroying ships of all nations without giving any notice. Her desperate action, the "Yorozu" says, spread the net for her own capture. The paper believes that unless Germany declares herself defeated at this moment, she will be wiped off the map of Europe.

The direct effect of the American declaration of the break with Germany will be the confiscation of over three hundred German ships in the ports of the United States and her territories, and the German wireless stations established in American territory. Communication between Germany and the United States will be stopped. The Germans in the United States might make various attempts against the United States, but their activities will not trouble the United States so much as the breach of the international relations between Germany and the United States will effect Germany and Austria.

It is not likely that the American army will be sent to the European front, but the American Navy will open activities against Germany. Furthermore the supplies of munitions and other commodities from the United States to the Entente powers will be made more promptly and smoothly, and the presentation of the bill authorizing the use of five hundred million dollars for the military expenditure, proves the determination of the Government of the United States in breaking off relations with Germany.

The United States finally, says the "Yorozu," has awaken from indecision, and her breach with Germany is to bring the downfall of German militarism, and the Entente powers should work together with the United States to destroy Germany and her allies as soon as possible. It is true that the end of the war is nearer in sight, but the Entente powers and neutral countries should be more firmly determined and should endeavour more eagerly to destroy the enemies. The "Yorozu" welcomes the breach of the relations between Germany and United States, and believes the American action will support the Entente and will enable them to sooner win the victory for the sake of humanity and the world's peace.

ADMIRAL TOGO AND THE MISSION TO EUROPE

The "Chugai Shogyo" is of the opinion that the relief mission to the allied forces in Europe, started by Prince Tokugawa and Baron Shibuzawa, should be more spiritual in nature. It is reported that the committee is planning to collect three million yen, but the paper says that there are ten countries among the Allies, and ten million soldiers are participating in the present war, and when three million yen is distributed to ten million soldiers, each will have only fifty sen. Moreover, the paper believes that it will not be an easy task to collect three million yen for the relief mission.

The "Chugai Shogyo" consequently declares that if one thinks that by the relief mission, material relief and assistance can be given to the fighting soldiers of the Allies, he will be greatly mistaken. Materially, they will not receive much from the Japanese public, and the mission should be carried on in a spiritual way, to express the true feeling and sentiment of the Japanese public in the present war.

The most important item in despatching the relief mission, the paper says, is the selection of the proper man to convey the good will and sympathies of the Japanese to the allied soldiers. A man who is admired by not only the Japanese but the people of the whole world, should be selected for this important mission. The "Chugai Shogyo" believes that Admiral Count Togo is the ideal man for the job. Admiral Togo is known in every part of the world, and he is respected and admired as the Nelson of the Orient, and his noble personality commands respect from every one.

The paper says that if Admiral Count Togo is despatched at the head of the mission, the whole of Europe will be glad to welcome him, and when Admiral Togo visits the trenches and hospitals and expresses the sympathies of the Japanese public to the soldiers at the front and in hospitals, he will deeply impress the soldiers of the allied powers.

While, the "Chugai Shogyo" hopes for the success of the mission, it asks the committee and Government to select a suitable man to head the mission. Further the paper says that the expense of the mission should be borne by the Government.

PREDICT WAVE OF PROSPERITY FOR JAPAN IF AMERICA FIGHTS

While it is believed by many that although President Wilson has severed relations with Germany, he has no intention of declaring war against Germany, the "Kokumin" declares that the declaration of war is certain to follow. The breach of relations and the declaration of war are inseparable, and while in some case the breach of relations precedes the declaration of war, in others, the declaration of war causes the breach of relations.

If at this moment, the United States says that it is not necessary to declare war against Germany, it will prove that the military preparation and power of the United States is not sufficient, and such a step will invite more aggressive and merciless measures from Germany. As the United States has severed her relations with Germany, the paper says, she cannot at present remain inactive, and she has to declare war against Germany.

The United States has kept a neutral position since the outbreak of the war, and not only has she stood neutral, but even attempted to bring peace among the belligerent nations. Now the United States is also joining the war, and it is believed that Spain will also follow the example of the United States, and open war against Germany and Austria. The neutral nations in Europe, will be therefore, Sweden, Holland, Denmark, Norway, and Switzerland.

The "Kokumin" however believes that the end of the war will not be seen shortly, and the severance of the relations between the United States and Germany will prolong the war.

GUBERNATORIAL CONFERENCE

The Conference of the Prefectural Governors will be held from February 8th, and it is reported that Count Terauchi will address the meeting explaining the reason of the dissolution of the Diet, and that Baron Goto, the Home Minister will give instructions regarding the coming general election.

The "Chugai Shogyo" does not think that Count Terauchi will give any new explanation of the dissolution of the Diet, and his address will be nothing but the repetition of his address before the Diet.

Baron Goto is expected to speak on the general election, and following the usual custom, the Baron will advise the Governors to be impartial and just in dealing with the election. Every Cabinet in the past gave similar advice and instruction, says the "Chugai", but it is regrettable that the result has been usually contrary.

Governors of Prefectures have been regarded as political campaigners of the Cabinet, and Governors are changed with the change of Cabinet, and before every election a change in Governors is made to make preparation for the election. The paper hopes that Governors will actually consider the benefit and welfare of the people, and not to be guided by partial and unjust instructions from the Cabinet.

ALLIES' REPLY TO PRESIDENT WILSON DISTURBS GENERAL

An anonymous army officer writes in the February issue of the "Taiyo" under the heading of "The Reply of the Entente to President Wilson, and the Peace of the Far East." No clue is given as to the identity of the writer, except that he is a General, and in his article which is very interestingly written, he regrets that the peace of the Far East was not considered in the reply sent by the Entente to the peace proposal of President Wilson.

In the reply sent by the Entente to the peace proposal made by the President of the United States, the following eight conditions are given as the fundamental conditions for peace, says the writer.

1. —The restoration of Belgium, Serbia and Montenegro with full reparation.

2.—The withdrawal of the Germans from the occupied territories in Russia, France and Rumania with full reparation.

3.—The reconstruction of Europe guaranteed by regulations based upon the principle of nationality and the protection of minor nations.

4.—The guarantee of land and littoral frontiers against alien invasion.

5.—The restoration of the territories occupied against the will of the inhabitants.

6.—The liberation of the Italians, Slavs and Rumanians under alien yoke.

7.—The liberation of the people suffering from the cruel administration of the Turkish Government.

8.—The expulsion of the Turkish Empire from Europe.

In looking over the eight conditions, the writer wonders why there is not a clause relating to the peace of the Far East. The present war is not at present restricted to Europe, and it is a well known fact that Japan is also participating in the war, and it is impossible to end the war when peace is restored only in Europe. At the same time, peace must be restored in the Far East to conclude the war.

This understanding is not his own idea, says the writer, and the declaration of the war made by H.I.M. the Emperor of Japan against Germany clearly explains the point. The writer cannot understand why the peace of the Far East is not discussed in the reply sent by the Entente to the United States.

One opinion says that the main scene of the present war is Europe and consequently the conclusion of the war in Europe will end problems in other parts, and although the peace of the Far East is not mentioned in the reply to the United States, it is included, and there is no necessity of mentioning it in the reply.

The situation may be explained in that manner, but if it is so, the service done by the Japanese army in Tsingtao, the war expenditure collected from the earnings of the public, and the material and other assistance Japan gave to the other allied powers, will become nothing but an useless appendix to the forces of the other allied countries.

The Entente reply to President Wilson from the beginning to the end, only considers the peace in Europe, and the conditions mentioned are for the peace of Europe, and no mention is made of the peace in the Far East. The meaning of the reply can be understood that as long as the peace of Europe is insured, they do not care what happens in the Far East. If in restoring peace in Europe, the Far Eastern problem becomes an obstacle, they will dare to sacrifice the Far East, as they can not sacrifice the peace of Europe for the sake of the peace in the Far East. This way of thinking might be a wrong interpretation of the reply, says the writer, but judging from the absence of any clause relative to the Far East, it is probable that such a development may come.

It may be a groundless fear, but it is regrettable that the peace of the Far East was not included in the reply. The Europeans speak of peace, love and humanity, but it can not be denied that their peace, love and humanity are for Europeans only, and they dare to do warlike, hateful and inhuman things to those who are not Europeans.

When the peace conference is held to end the present war, suppose that the Far Eastern problems in which Japan is interested prove to be obstacles for the progress of the conference. In such a case, the writer doubts whether the allies will consider the interests of Japan.

Japan has several important problems which can only be satisfactorily solved at the coming peace conference, and among such subjects are the disposal of Tsingtao and the South Sea Islands.

If it happens that these problems cannot be smoothly solved at the peace conference, and it comes to effect the peace of Europe, it will be a question whether the European nations will sacrifice their peace and support Japan, with arms if necessary, or not. The writer does not believe that the European nations will neglect the Japanese interest in such a case, but it is likely that they may ask Japan to endure the disadvantageous circumstances saying that if Japan presses her demand, the peace of Europe will not be restored, and the European nations will have to take up arms again and become the enemies of humanity. They might ask Japan to become temporarily blind and to sacrifice the interest for the sake of the peace of Europe.

Again the United States might say that the demand of Japan is proper but in the reply to her government on the peace offer, there was no clause relative to the problem, and if such a matter was brought up at the conference all nations will suffer. The President of the United States might ask Japan to withdraw her demand temporarily for the sake of European peace. The writer has full confidence in President Wilson and there will be no danger that he will propose such a thing, but the absence of the clause regarding the peace in the Far East may cause such a troublesome situation.

The writer does not like to pick small defects in the reply to the United States, but he says that many international problems have been caused by such small and insignificant causes. Moreover, the writer believes that as the present war is unprecedented in its magnitude the peace conference to end it will not proceed so smoothly, and there will rise many differences and troubles, and for that reason he regrets exceedingly that no mention was made about the peace of the Far East in the Entente reply.

Some state that the reply of the Entente is not so important a document and the reply is only the rough statement of the conditions desired by the Entente to restore peace in Europe, but the reply of the Entente is the first public announcement of their desire concerning peace, and it must be considered as a very important document. It is proper, therefore, to have the fact that the present war is not restricted to Europe alone and even Japan is participating in the war, clearly stated in the reply.

A friend told the writer that there is no cause for such anxiety as among the diplomats of the Entente powers there is a full understanding about such problems. It is lucky for Japan if such understanding exists. If there is any understanding on the subject among the diplomats of the allied powers, the Japanese public should learn of its nature. This subject is more important than the Chengchiatun affair of which so much has been written in newspapers.

Another point; the writer is not satisfied with the Entente reply regarding the clause which asks the expulsion of the Turkish Empire from Europe. The Balkans have been the cause of many disturbances in Europe, and in one corner of the peninsula is situated the Turkish Empire, where the Turks, whose civilization, religion, customs and manners are entirely different from Europans, are living. The desire of the European nations to drive out the Turkish Empire from Europe in order to guarantee peace in Europe is natural and proper. But the writer declares that such an attempt on the part of the European nations which preach justice, love and humanity, to expell the Turkish Empire on the ground that she is an obstacle to European peace, is not proper. However much the Turkish Empire may be an obstacle for the peace of Europe, such a heartless attempt at expulsion, can not be allowed by the justice, love and humanity for which the European nations have been standing.

The Turkish people are the Asiatics, and it can be understood that the European nations believe that the Asiatic people should not co-exist with the Europeans. It is evident that the anti-yellow race sentiment is prevailing all over Europe. The Kaiser once painted a picture entitled the Yellow Peril, and General Kuropatkin said in his book that the white race should join together to hold their ground against the yellow race. The anti-yellow race sentiment has been always in the thoughts of Europeans, and many believe

EXPLOSION IN YOKOHAMA CAUSES BIG SCARE

At 3.20 Friday afternoon, Feb. 2, the entire district of Yokohama was shaken by a terrific explosion which occurred at the godown of the Yokohama Commercial Warehouse Company near Bankokubashi. The explosion took place at No 3 godown of the company, in which was stored naphtha, sulphuric acid, sulphur and other chemicals. Fortunately no lives were lost. Those injured number 100. The instant the explosion occurred the building caught fire. The flames after consuming the building spread to the adjacent two godowns and set alight godowns on the opposite side of the small canal in front of the southern godowns where the explosion originated. After destroying Nos. 2, 3 and 4 godowns on the southern bank and 8 godowns on the western bank of the canal the flames were brought under control at about 6 o'clock in the evening.

About twenty houses in the close vicinity of the godown where the explosion occurred were partially destroyed or damaged, the house of Chosaburo Kawanishi, which was situated close to the godown, being completely destroyed. The Yokohama District Court was severely damaged, the floor of the second story collapsing from the shock. The window panes of the Court and the Horaiya Inn, were smashed to atoms and splinters of the broken glass flew in all directions, inflicting injuries on many people who rushed into the streets on hearing the explosion. A hearing was going on at the District Court at the moment of the accident, and several court officials and barristers as well as some of the audience were cut by the broken pieces of glass, which came into the courtyard from the inn next door. Over a hundred persons were more or less injured. The wounded were taken to hospitals where they were given first aid. The family of Kawanishi suffered the worst, almost all members of the family being badly hurt. The registry office in the compound of the District Court completely collapsed and among the houses damaged in the vicinity the premises occupied by Sakuzo Yamanishi, Kenro Utsumi, Nagatsuka Company, the Nanyo Trading Company and Suzuki Forwarding Agency were comparatively severely damaged.

As soon as the explosion occurred, the whole firebrigade force of the city was detailed and made strenuous efforts to extinguish the flames, which thanks to them were checked from spreading to other godowns and neighbouring houses. The prisoners who were detained in the subterranean chamber of the District Court awaiting trial were removed to the Yokohama jail. The local branch of the Japan Red Cross Society dispatched medical corps with nurses and opened a temporary hospital on the premises of the District Court and soon began patching up the injured. The municipal authorities also opened the Juzen Hospital for the accommodation of the sufferers. In the close neighbourhood were the buildings of the Yokohama branch of the First Bank, the Yokohama Specie Bank, the Habutae Conditioning House, the Yokohama Primary School, the Hon-cho Primary School and other large buildings, which however escaped damage.

The origin of the explosion is under investigation and nothing definite is known as yet. It is, however, supposed that the disaster might have been caused by a fault of an employe of the godown company who was soldering a tin of oil in the godown at the time of the explosion.

The origin of the explosion it was said late last night, was due to the accidental outbreak of fire in a corner of the godown. The fire set alight some sulphur which was just being taken out of the godown for shipment and led to the disastrous explosion. The loss of the cargo mostly consisting of sulphur, machinery oil, bean oil, rape seed oil, and others amounted to something like 7-800,000 yen. The value of the godowns consumed is estimated at about 80,000 yen and that of the residential houses in the neighbourhood gutted or damaged being close on some 1,000,000 yen. The exact number of casualties are still in doubt, but it is estimated that no less than a hundred were in some way injured. The embers were still burning at the time of going to press. Taking advantage of the confusion caused by the accident, eight prisoners detained in the District Court decamped and were still missing late last night. Among them was one man charged with armed robbery.

MUCH DAMAGE DONE BY FIRE MONDAY

Shortly after three o'clock Monday afternoon a fire broke out on the premises of a hemp factory at Minami Yoshida-machi, Yokohama. Under the influence of a brisk southerly wind prevailing at the time of the outbreak, the flames soon spread and 190 houses, including those totally destroyed, were damaged. The fire was brought under control at half past four. The district is for the most part poor quarters.

Monday afternoon, another fire occurred at Yose, Tsukui district, Kanagawa prefecture. The outbreak occurred in the close vicinity of the railway station and spread with rapidity destroying altogether 24 houses. The station had a narrow escape.

Another fire took place Monday morning at a celluloid factory in Amagasaki, Hyogo prefecture. The fire broke out in the drying room of the factory and a quantity of celluloid was consumed, the loss amounting to about 10,000 yen. An employé was burnt to death and two others badly injured by the accident.

MOSHI MOSHI GIRLS IN TOKYO TO BE INCREASED

The telephone service was inaugurated in Japan in 1890 and at first the general public little appreciated this convenient medium of communication. Strange to say, there prevailed at that time a queer superstition among people that a man who should have a telephone installed would fall a victim to an epidemic, and despite the efforts of the authorities to invite subscribers, it is on record how only 155 persons applied for telephone connections. Time has changed all this, for the number of installed telephones totals some 43,000 now, and the number of applications for connection is far in excess of the number of installations that the authorities can undertake. There are nine exchanges in Tokyo at present where about 2,600 telephone girls are at work, and the number of conversations on the telephone in Tokyo averages some 1,100,000 per day.

In this connection it is said that geisha houses make the best use of telephones of all subscribers of the different professions. It is understood that the Department of Communications proposes to start soon the training of telephone operatives at the rate of 230 girls every month for the ensuing year, as the result of which the number of telephone girls in Tokyo exchanges will be increased to 3,000 within this year. The authorities also plan to considerably increase the number of instruments at work to meet the increasing requirements and altogether 180,000 yen will be spent for the improvement of the telephone system.

that the yellow race is inferior and should be under the control of the white race, but never before in the world's history, has such an insult and open attack on the yellow race been made in a public document.

The writer was greatly shocked to find such a clause in the Entente reply and as one of the yellow race, he felt very indignant. He asks what interpretation, the Government officials of Japan will make of this clause. For the Japanese such an insult and attack on the yellow race is a grave problem, and the matter should not be left without giving it proper attention.

The writer formerly believed that the conflict between the white and yellow race was only a mere groundless fear, but now he is led to think that it may actually happen some day.

INTERESTING BILL AT IMPERIAL

The Tokyo theatre-goers welcomed the return of the actresses of the Imperial Theatre to their own stage in the February bill. The actresses of the Imperial played at the theatre last October, and they have not been seen on the stage since.

A pleasing and new feature in the February bill is the addition among the players of Mr. T. Togi. He is a well known actor of ability of the new school of acting, but he has never played at the Imperial before, and his joining the actresses at the Imperial came as a surprise to the play-lovers of the metropolis.

He shines in his rôles of Uhei the farmer in the tragedy, "Yononaka" and of Nisuke, hunting guide in the comedy "Hunter." As Uhei he impersonifies the old fashioned farmer of conventional ideas, who is opposed to selling his land for the railway on the ground that the railway will bring bad influence from the city to the village, and he impresses the audience with the stubbornness and the severe morality which he preaches to his daughters. However everything goes wrong with him, and the government takes up his land for the railway, and his daughters disappoint him by concluding marriages with rich men. In this part Mr. Togi shows his ability.

Also as Nisuke, the hunting guide, he takes the character of the innocent and ignorant country bumpkin.

Koshiro, the leading actor of the Imperial, acts both in the modern plays and the classic drama. In the classic piece, "Yukino seki noto" he plays the part of Sekibei, and delights the audience with his excelent performance of a difficult part. In the Comedy "Hunter," he plays the part of Mr. Kunino, the millionaire hunter who finds himself in complex circumstances. He keeps the audience laughing with his grave, but comical acting in playing the part. He has surprised the theatre-goers with his ability both as a tragedy and comic actor.

Among the actresses of the Imperial, Ritsuko and Namiko carried themselves exceedingly well, and the two are the main stays of the actresses of the theatre. Without these two leading actresses, the bill of this month at the Imperial would have been a failure.

In the Comedy "Hunter" all the actresses appear on the stage and it makes a lively and interesting scene. Among them are seen several who have bright futures if only they will give more attention to stage technique.

The February bill at the Imperial is interesting as it is so different from the bills played at the theatre for the last three months.

MISS STINSON OFFERS HER SERVICES TO U. S.

Miss Katherine Stinson, the young American aviatrice, who won such popularity here by her daring flights a few months back, will proceed to the battle-fields in Europe to take an active part in aerial warfare against the Germans should her country declare war against Germany, according to Osaka despatches. Miss Stinson has been staying in Osaka for some time now preparatory to her departure for Shanghai and Manila. Contracts for her flights have been concluded in Shanghai and Manila where her Manager, Mr. Friedman, is now busy making arrangements, but she has cancelled all of these contracts.

She will not proceed to Shanghai nor to Manila, but intends to return to the States as soon as official permission for her application for military service is secured. According to the Osaka "Asahi," Miss Stinson has sent to the New York Aviation Club a lengthy cable applying to be attached to the aviation corps in case of war being declared. The message is said to have been sent immediately after the severance of America's relations with Germany was reported in the form of a gogai. "I have anticipated America's breach with Germany as a matter of fact," said Miss Stinson when interviewed by press representatives in Osaka, "it is my cherished hope to punish the Huns for the sake of liberty and justice and the measures taken by President Wilson are highly satisfactory. I am confident that I shall not be beaten by German aviators, though I am a girl."

If war be declared and official permission be obtained, Miss Stinson will lose no time in sailing for home and then start for Europe with her eleven machines. She has brought here two aeroplanes but in Jackson, her native town, she said she has ten more biplanes which can be used for military purposes.

OLYMPIAD TO BE HELD SHIBAURA GROUND

Athletes to represent Japan at the Far Eastern Olympic Games to be held at Tokyo in May, have been selected, but their number is still insufficient and the committee is hoping that more promising young men will appear and fill up the vacancies.

The track will be laid in the Shiba Reclaimed ground, and according to the Committee, the track will be in perfect condition by May next. It was the first plan of the committee to have a permanent track laid in the compounds of the Meiji Shrine now under construction, but it can not be finished in time. It is reported that the permanent track will be ready in time for Olympiad to be held in Tokyo in 1919, as the competitions will be held in Tokyo every other year from now on. The cost of the permanent track will be about a half million yen, and it is expected that an ideal track will be made.

The number of athletes to represent Japan at the coming contests, announced recently is given below. The majority of those chosen are students at Universities, Colleges, Higher Schools and other institutions, but there are also several railway employees and others.

100 yards race, six; 220 yards race, eleven; 440 yards race, eleven; 880 yards race, ten; one mile race, seven; ten miles race, eight; twenty-five miles marathon, six; low hurdles, seven; high hurdles, ten; running broad jump, seven; running high jump, four; discus throw, five; putting the shot, six; hammer throw, three; 50 yards swimming race, six; 100 yards swimming race, six; 220 yards swimming race, seven; 220 yards breast stroke race, six; 100 yards breast stroke race, four; 440 yards swimming race, six; and one mile swimming race, five.

The Imperial Life Saving Association reports that during December, the Association saved twenty-nine ships and ninety three persons.

The Kyoto Prefectural authorities are busy trying to recruit policemen in Hokkaido as the local article is not available owing to more lucrative employment appealing to the young men of the district. In view of the coming election, reports say, many more police are considered necessary than the different forces can supply.

H. E. the British Ambassador has asked the "Japan Mail" to make public the following announcement:

In view of the increased danger from submarines, H. B. M. Consular Officers in Japan have been instructed to refrain from issuing or endorsing passports for women or children to travel to the United Kingdom, except for very urgent reasons.

The Foreign Office was in receipt of a formal notification Friday from the Swiss Minister in Tokyo to the effect that the interests of Germany in Japan, which had hitherto been attended to by the American Embassy, will be looked after by the Swiss Legation hereafter as the result of the rupture of diplomatic relations between America and Germany.

Russians and foreigners in Vladivostock are still prohibited by the Russian authorities, from sailing for other countries as the result of which many Japanese who wish to return home on urgent business are being put to great inconveniences. A dispatch from Vladivostok to the Osaka "Mainichi" says that there is no knowing why the Russian authorities have issued such orders though rumours as to the cause are many.

In view of recent despatches, the probability is that the Russian authorities need all their means of transport for the conveyance of impedimenta.

Count Leo Tolstoy who is registered at the Imperial Hotel is now busily preparing material for a series of lectures to be given in Tokyo and other cities shortly. It is interesting to learn in this connection that under the auspices of the Tolstoy-kai, a literary society in Tokyo started last year for the exclusive study of Tolstoy, arrangements are now being made to stage "Power of Darkness," one of the late Tolstoy's famous dramas, at the Shintomi theatre here on March 10 and 11. The play will be staged by actors and actresses of the Art Theatre, a theatrical group of the new school led by Mr. Shimamura, a prominent man of letters. The Tolstoy society will invite Count Tolstoy to witness the play.

It is reported that the Japanese Navy Department is preparing to suppress the unrestricted submarine warfare of Germany, and the principal officers of the Department have been consulting upon the measures to be taken against the German activity. It is not yet known when the Japanese Navy will begin activity, but it is believed that as soon as any sign of the German merciless outrages is seen, the Japanese Navy will start to cope with the German submarines.

Whether or not the activity of the Japanese Navy will be restricted to the Pacific Ocean and Indian Sea, is not known. But indications are that unless the merchant ships in the Pacific Ocean and Indian Sea are molested, the Japanese fleet will not open attack on the German fleet of submarines.

The history of the lawlessness of German submarines on the sea needs no repetition here. Since August of 1914 till December last year, according to investigations made by the Nippon Yusen Kaisha with regard to the loss of merchantmen incurred by various countries by the attack of enemy submarines the total number of merchantmen sunk stands at 2,147, with an aggregate tonnage of 3,987,541. The following list shows in detail the loss of merchantmen incurred by the various countries during the time specified above:

Countries.	Number of merchantmen sunk.	Tonnage
England	1,089	2,360,148
France	125	256,829
Italy	21	211,727
America	10	24,558

BARON GOTO'S ADDRESS TO PREFECTURAL HEADS

The second meeting of the Prefectural Governors' conference was held at the Home Office Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. Besides the Governors of Karafuto, Hokkaido, Tokyo, Kyoto and Osaka and all other Prefectures, there were also present Premier Count Terauchi, Viscount Motono, Foreign Minister, Mr. Mizuno, Vice-Minister of Home Affairs, many prominent officials of the Home Department, Mr. Okada, Chief of the Metropolitan Police Board, and others. Baron Goto, Minister of Home Affairs, could not attend the meeting owing to illness, and Mr. Mizuno, Vice-Minister, read an instruction on behalf of the Minister. Mr. Watanabe and Mr. Nagata, directors of the bureaux of local affairs and police affairs respectively, explained the matters under the control of the respective bureaux which had been submitted to the conference. After holding conferences on the subjects submitted by the Government, the meeting dispersed at 4 p.m. In the evening the Governors were invited to a dinner given by Baron Goto at his official residence, at which Mr. Mizuno represented Baron Goto.

The address of the Home Minister to the prefectural governors is outlined as follows:

The European war has had a far-reaching baneful and disturbing effect on the situation of the world and threatens to affect the destiny of this empire. The present is no time for Japanese people to indulge in trifling strife or trouble with their fellow countrymen at the expense of the welfare and happiness of the nation. From this motive, the present ministry has since its foundation striven to smoothly operate the machinery of state and work out the destiny of the empire, co-operating with all political parties, respecting and listening to public opinion. The ministry has endeavoured to avoid a collision with the legislative and did everything to avoid resorting to such measures as to dissolve the Diet. Nevertheless many far-sighted people among the nation were cognizant and anticipated from the very beginning the inavoidability of the dissolution of the Diet, because of the impossibility of keeping the balance between the majority party, unnaturally swelling in influence, and the small party which had lost its influence likewise through unnatural causes. Under such circumstances, it was thought quite impossible by many intelligent people that with such a situation the Diet could do anything to contribute to the perfect operation of constitutional government, and naturally many enlightened people were rather longing for the dissolution of the Diet which was quite unavoidable, in the expectation of seeking new light in future. The ministry, under such difficult and delicate political circumstances, was determined to tide over the situation with sound political principles by sticking to the policy of sincerity and fairness, but a certain section of politicians made every effort to prejudice and incite the nation against the government by circulating uncalled for statements to the effect that the ministry had not the interests or welfare of the nation in its view, or the ministry was a super-party cabinet, or it was not based on the principle of constitutional government and other similar statements. Theirs was practically an attitude contrary to the spirit of constitutional government and against the great spirit of the Constitution granted by the august Emperor.

The Kenseikai thus acted against the principle and declaration of its forerunner, the Doshikai, founded by the late Prince Katsura, and quite unaware of its misguided action and doings, was eager to push its mistaken policy, thus acting contrariwise to the principle declared and advocated by its founder. Quite contrary to this attitude of the Kenseikai, the Seiyukai behaved itself in the most admirable manner, ever sticking to the principle and spirit of the declaration announced at the time of its inception by the late Prince Ito, the founder of the party. While other political parties were going astray from their professed principle and attitude, that party alone faithfully followed the orbit of its political movement, never changing its principle but maintaining its candid and upright attitude all through. This attitude of the Seiyukai, compared with that of its rival, makes a very admirable showing viewed from the standpoint of the principle of constitutional government. The majority party, the Kenseikai, was addicted to ignoble action and political manoeuvres to incite the public mind with uncalled for criticisms against the ministry and left nothing undone for trying to prejudice the nation against the ministry. There was a time at the early stage of civilization when such ignominious movement answered the purpose of inciting the public mind against the Government, but the political thoughts and the power of judgment of the nation have since greatly and remarkably advanced and progressed and nowadays the Japanese people are not such a nation as to be deceived and illusioned by such a simple and old fashioned theory that a Cabinet not supported by a political party is no constitutional government, or that a Cabinet having no member of a political party among its ministers is against the spirit of constitutional government. There is a wide gulf between the spirit of the Imperial Constitution and that of the constitution of the Western Countries, which is well known to and is clearly understood by the nation. The conception of the nation about the spirit and principle of the Imperial constitution is sound and clear, and no attempt aiming at deceiving the nation with such an unreasonable and old fashioned theory can ever realize its object.

After stating the circumstances attending the organization of the present Ministry and detailing the true aspects of the situation at the time of its coming into existence almost along the same lines as Premier Count Terauchi in his speech before the Prefectural Governors' conference on Monday, Baron Goto wished the Governors present to clearly understand the true aspect of the situation and strive to guide the local people in paving the way for the promotion of national welfare and advancing the cause of true constitutional Government, and also to contribute to solidifying the status of the nation and placing the foundation of the country on a stronger basis, financially and politically by exerting themselves for the fulfilment of their duties.

The Minister then dwelt upon the situation in the last session of the Imperial Diet and explained the reason why the Government had resorted, though reluctantly, to the dissolution of the Lower House, much in the same strain as the speech of Premier Count Terauchi. Among other things, Baron Goto stated that the decision of the Ministers on resorting to the dissolution of the House was arrived at in view of purifying the political atmosphere in the House from the necessity of carrying out sound political policy in harmonious co-operation with the nation, in view of the grave situation in which the country finds itself consequent upon the great war in Europe which

WHAT SHOULD CHINA DO PUZZLES MANY HEADS

In connection with the proposal of President Wilson to China urging her to follow the suit of America towards Germany a Peking dispatch says that the Chinese Government has decided to advise Germany, prior to replying to American proposal, to cancel her declaration threatening the peaceful communications between the Allies and neutral states, and to decide her attitude according to the reply of Germany to her advice.

Another Peking dispatch says that the report that the Chinese Government will follow the step of America toward Germany in accord with the proposal of the American President, from the view of accelerating the termination of the war and the successful conclusion of peace, has created heated discussion in Chinese political circles. The political situation in Peking shows unusual animation on account of this problem, with the daily conference of the national assembly on the one hand and the active movements of the diplomatic corps. The attention of the public and foreign community is centred on what attitude China will take. The "Peking Daily News" of Thursday publishes the opinions of five nationals, American, Chinese, Japanese, British and German, on the subject, and besides, has published an editorial article touching the question. The "Kung Yen Pao," a native paper, urges that China take the decisive step and join the Allies at this opportunity, thereby to save herself from her isolated present position. The government, which had hesitated to make up its mind, is now understood to have decided to take the step to advise Germany to cancel her declaration before taking any decisive action. Meanwhile, the National Assembly has commenced activity in connection with the question, which is now the centre of the political questions of China and forms the most important topic of political dissertations. While on one hand the British elements, with a certain British adviser to the Chinese Government as the central figure, are doing their utmost to induce China to join the Allies and are trying to persuade President Li Yuan-hung and Premier Tuan Chi-jui to listen to their advice, on the other hand the German Minister and other influential German elements are energetically engaged in a movement to check China's being induced by the Allies or America to follow their lead. The chaotic situation in Chinese political circles defies any attempt at predicting a final decision, but from the situation obtaining it is not difficult to presume that China will after all send advice to Germany and according to the attitude of Germany will frame her action.

According to a Shanghai dispatch the opinions of the official circles in Peking as to the attitude of China towards the situation are divided, one favouring China's participation with the Allies and the other being against the proposal. To the former category belong the Premier, General Tuan Chi-jui, General Hsu Shi-chang, Hsiung Hsi-ling, Fuan Yuan-lien, Liang Chi-chao and Admiral Cheng Pi-kuang, all followers of Premier Tuan forming the so-called militarist elements. Among the latter category are found the names of Dr. Wu Ting-fang, Dr. Sun Wen, and other radical elements of progressive spirit, who favour China's following the example of the American Government. In this connection, it is reported that President Li Yuan-hung has asked the opinion of the Vice-President, Mr. Feng Kuo-chang.

General Hsiung Hsi-ling is of the opinion that China should co-operate with the Allies, but he believes that China will actually follow the steps of America. He entertains a great fear as to the financial standing of China in future and doubts whether the Allies would continue to give financial support to China, if China takes any steps against their interests.

The "Chia Yin Jipao" of Thursday has published the views of General Chang Chi, the famous revolutionary leader and one of the leading political figures, who strongly holds that China should side with the Allies from the view that if China maintains her present attitude she will find herself placed in a very disadvantageous position on the occasion of the coming peace conference. He firmly believes that Germany will be crushed after all, and even granting that Germany may come out victorious in the war she will never gain her former influence in the Orient, where she will be driven out by the Allies combined. Now that America has severed her relations with Germany, Tsingtao is securely in the hands of Japan, opines the ex-revolutionary leader, and the recent turn of the situation will induce Japan to agree to China's participation in the allied group; not to mention the recent growth of friendly relationship between Japan and China.

JAPAN CONSENTS TO CHINA JOINING ALLIES

As previously reported the Chinese Government, agreeing to America's inducement to follow her lead in severing relations with Germany in connection with the German declaration of unrestricted submarine warfare sent to Germany a strong Note of protest on the afternoon of the 9th. The purport of the Chinese Note to Germany, as published already, was to the effect that the unlawful declaration of Germany was a violation of International Law and was liable to threaten with danger the lives and property of Chinese people and destroy the peaceful and rightful commercial interests of neutral states. China said that should Germany obstinately stick to her declared principle and carry out her lawless declaration China would be compelled to take a drastic step for safeguarding her own interests.

At the same time, the Chinese Government sent a reply to the Note of President Wilson intimating its agreement to the measures suggested by the President and informing him of the steps taken towards Germany, adding that in case Germany did not listen to her protest she would take the same steps as America to cut off diplomatic connection with Germany. Prior to this, the allies representatives, the British and French Ministers, in Peking revived their old movement to induce China to take the side of the Allies against Germany and Austria, the movement that was mooted by the Allies in the autumn of 1915 but was dropped on account of Japan's objection to the proposal. The Allies' Ministers in Peking approached the Chinese Government with the proposal and made efforts to persuade China to listen to their overtures. The Chinese Government was anxious to accept the proposal and take the attitude suggested by the allies in the hope to thereby secure the right of speech in the coming peace conference and was accordingly inclined to listen to their proposition. China, however, was apprehensive of Japan's opinion and intention about the matter, and on that account was rather indecisive and hesitated to make up her mind. The proposal of President Wilson came in time and China was encouraged by that proposition to make up her mind. Peking instructed Mr. Lu Chang-hsiang, Minister in Tokyo, to sound the views and opinion of the Japanese Government about China's siding with the Allies against the common enemy. On Saturday afternoon, the Chinese Minister interviewed Viscount Motono, Foreign Minister, at his official residence and intimating the intention of his home government asked the opinion of the Imperial Government.

The Imperial Government has, as the result of deliberate conference on the subject, given a reply to the Chinese Minister in favour of China's proposition and further given an encouraging promise to give all possible support to China in case of necessity, if such necessity arises as the result of China's severing her relations with Germany, provided China as well as the allied powers recognize Japan's special rights and interests in the Far East. It is learned that the allies have expressed their recognition of Japan's special rights and interests in the Far East through their Ambassador in Tokyo, China of course doing the same, and hence the Japanese Government has confirmed her approval to China about the latter's siding with the Allies as stated, together with a promise that Japan will aid in the maintenance of good order in China and in other affairs.

In this connection, the Ambassadors of Britain and Russia interviewed Viscount Motono, on last Sunday, and had conference with him. As the result of the establishment of the understanding with the Japanese Government China has formed her decision, it is learned, to stand against Germany as a party to the allies and to participate in the common action with the Allies against Germany, though she will not directly participate in the armed hostilities with Germany. The recent Note sent to the German Government in protestation against the German declaration of submarine warfare may thus be taken as a prelude to her eventual participation in the war.

TOKYO GOVERNMENT IS NOT WORRIED FOR CHINA

Much attention is being paid to what attitude China will take in connection with the proposal of America who is alleged to be trying to induce China to follow her action towards Germany, because of its grave bearings upon the interests of Japan. In some quarters it is opined that should China join America in her dealings with Germany, that is, if China severs her relations with Germany, the situation will bring about no insignificant change in the international political situation in the Far East, and Japan must consider what turn such attitude on China's part will cause in Far Eastern affairs and especially to Japan's interests and position in Oriental affairs. Some say that China's joining the American movement will bring about a very favourable result to the commercial interests of this country in China as such will go a long way in driving German influence and interests out of China and other parts of the Far East, thereby enhancing Japan's commercial interests especially in Chinese market. On the other hand some are inclined to think that in case China either joins the American movement takes the side of the Allies, China will come to secure the right of speech in the coming peace conference and gain a chance to secure a very advantageous position in Far Eastern questions, at Japan's expense.

But the Japanese Government apparently does not attach any importance to the matter and is not inclined to take the matter seriously, perhaps because the question merely pertains to the mutual interests between America and China, and has nothing to do with the interests of the Allies. As to the alleged movement of the Allies to induce China to take their side it is believed in well informed circles that such movement, which cannot be denied as absolutely impossible, will not be materialized in view of the declaration made by Britain to the Japanese Government at the time of the rumours of a similar agitation started by the Allies in Peking about November, 1915, against which movement the Japanese Government protested.

threatens to work a great change in the international situation after its eventual termination. The Baron admitted the dissertation that the existence of a political party or political parties under constitutional form of Government is an outcome of necessity, but he pointed out that the present majority party which commanded the greatest influence in the Lower House and had the most powerful utterance in the weighty and important administrative affairs of state, was a party merely boasting of the greatest number of its members holding seats in the House, while the party of sound political principle was rather in an inferior position in its influence in the legislative. Such an unnatural state of things needed a change and reformation for the welfare of the state and nation as well as for the promotion of the spirit of constitutional government.

CHINA'S ATTITUDE ON AMERICO-GERMAN CRUX

Dispatches from Peking report that since the rupture of diplomatic relations between America and Germany the American and German Ministers in Peking have started activities with a view to induce China to side with their respective countries in connection with the war. The American Minister has frequently interviewed Premier Tuan Chi-jui and urged him to make China join the move of America, stating that the present question is not only the concern of the United States, but it has grave bearings on the interests of all neutral states and if China joins the departure started by the United States the result will be a speedy conclusion of the war for the good and happiness of the world. The American Minister is also trying to imbue many influential men in official and private circles in Peking with the same opinion. According to an authority of the Peking Government, says a dispatch from Peking, the Chinese Government will issue an advisory note to the German Government and will decide its attitude according to the reply of the German Government. At the same time, the Chinese Government has asked the representatives of the other Powers for their opinions and advice about the matter, also taking into consideration the views and opinions of influential foreign residents. The opinions of the foreign diplomatic officials and influential residents, are, except Germans and Austrians, generally in favour of China's joining the move of the American Government, while some Japanese advance the opinion that China should frankly express its opinion to Japan and consult with Japan about the attitude to be taken by China at the present juncture. Meanwhile the allies are striving to induce China to side with them and become a party to the allied powers. The movement is mainly carried on by the French and strongly supported by other members of the Entente powers, who are desirous of driving the Germans from China by inducing China to join the Entente group. The agitators of this movement are somewhat anxious about the attitude of Japan towards the matter, says a Peking dispatch.

According to the "North China Daily News," the Chinese Government has not yet made up her mind whether or not to take the same step as America towards Germany. The report that the allied Ministers in Peking have jointly advised China to take the side of the allies is not true, according to that paper. The paper surmises that after all China will maintain her attitude of strict neutrality till the time when America declares war on Germany, and takes up arms against Germany as a member of the belligerent countries.

Latest Peking messages have it that the members of the Chinese National Assembly have been discussing about the settlement of China's attitude in connection with the Americo-German situation. As the result of the conference they have decided to present a representation to the Government. The representation was expected to be introduced in the assembly at yesterday's meeting.

WRITER DISCUSSES PEACE

A lengthy article from the pen of Dr. Shigeo Suyehiro dealing with the peace problem and the future situation of the war has been appearing for the last few days in the "Tokyo Asahi."

Dr. Suyehiro touches first of all upon the German proposition of peace, going next to President Wilson's Notes consequent upon the German move and the reply from the Allies to President Wilson. He says that the Note sent by President Wilson to the Entente Powers on January 18 is peculiarly characteristic of the American methods of diplomatic dealings. The principal reason why President Wilson expressed his desire to acquaint himself with the terms of peace which the Allies are willing to offer, says the Doctor, is found in the wish on the part of the United States to formulate her future actions by consulting these peace terms.

"I would say that the Allies were sadly careless about their dignity in condescending to disclose the terms of peace they are prepared to accept," argues Dr. Suyehiro.

The present time is not ripe for starting peace negotiations, and Germany obviously wanted to make the refusal of the Allies to accept the German peace proposal a weapon to attack the Entente Allies with charges of disregarding humanity and justice, while making it appear as if Germany had an earnest wish to conclude peace in consideration of this weighty cause. The Allies, however, says the writer, in anticipation of this German fraud, were apparently forced to publish the peace terms demanded notwithstanding their wish not to do so. Dr. Suyehiro reads in the reply sent by the Allies in response to the last Wilson note the Allies' claim for racial independence. For instance the Allies seem to claim the restoration of Alsace and Lorraine to France, and the liberation of the Slavs n Austria-Hungary. Dr. Suyehiro gives many instances under this head in his article besides those above referred to. But, says the Doctor, the liberation of the Slavs in Austria-Hungary would mean a break-up of the Monarchy and the authorities of the Monarchy will not tolerate it. And this kind of drastic measure, reasonable only in argument, but impossible and absurd in reality, can not be executed unless the Allies are in a position to dictate terms. Therefore the Allies will most likely endeavour to achieve this end in the present war. But the turn of luck in the war has not been on the whole favourable to the Allies in the past. After the above rambling argument, it is comforting to learn from the Doctor that there is still one favourable chance open to the Allies in the future war situation. The writer presumably refers to "Father Time" being on the side of the Allies.

FEARS U-BOATS MAY HARRY SHIPPING IN THE PACIFIC

A certain Staff Officer of the naval board of command viewing the situation between America and Germany says that if America finally takes up arms against Germany, the latter will decidedly carry out her avowed submarine warfare without any restriction more openly than before, the result being a great menace to the shipping in all quarters of the world. Besides trade raiders, Germany has 30 submarines in the Mediterranean, about the same number in the Atlantic, and some submarines besides commerce raiders in South American waters. Moreover, Germany is building more submarines at the Kiel naval port and other places to augment the strength of her submarine flotilla. The crew of those submarines are making the Baltic Sea the base of their training at present. Under the circumstances, the activity of the German submarine warfare is likely to increase hereafter with the development of the gloomy situation of Americo-German relations. In such eventuality, the situation in the Pacific admits of no optimism and the shipping in these parts of the world's marine route will be disturbed by the raid of German submarines.

It is an interesting question what measures the American Government will take in disposing of the German and Austrian steamers at present detained in various American ports. The Teuton steamers detained in American ports amount in tonnage to upward of 600,000 tons and the question of their disposal has far from insignificant bearings upon Japanese shipping interests. The measures to be taken by the American authorities will be either to seize them, or to order them to leave the ports, or to requisition them or to detain them as at present. Of these measures the first measure, namely their seizure, leaves much room for comment and discussions from the viewpoint of the theory of International Law, while the second measure, that of ordering them to leave the ports, is liable to their being arrested by the Allies' ships immediately on their leaving the 3-mile limit. In these circumstances, perhaps the American Government will resort to their requisition as the only measure left for their disposal, thinks another officer of the navy well informed in the theory of international law. Still in view of the fact that the two countries are not yet in a state of war it will be impossible for America to take such a strong step as to requisition German and Austrian vessels.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 6.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Tuesday evening communiqué, says: "We advanced our line in the neighbourhood of Grandcourt where we occupied 1000 yards of trenches without meeting any opposition."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 8.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Wednesday evening communiqué, says: "As a result of our continuous pressure on both banks of the River Ancre, the enemy has been forced to evacuate Grandcourt, which is now entirely in our possession with the defensive works adjoining. We took some prisoners.

"During the last few days, the enemy has suffered heavy losses. A hostile attempt, to raid Gueudecourt at night-time, broke down before our barrage.

"We raided the German lines, southwest of La Bassée last night, killed a number of the enemy, destroyed their dugouts and brought back a number of prisoners."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 9.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Thursday evening communiqué, says: "We attacked, on Thursday morning, an important position at the highest point of Sailly-Saillisel. We held this and gained all our objectives, taking 78 prisoners. We followed up the capture of Grandcourt by vigorous attacks on both sides of the Ancre and made considerable further progress.

"In a night sortie, we captured Baillescourt Farm on the Beaucourt to Miraumont road and also a trench between Grandcourt and our old front line, taking 82 more prisoners. Our gains since the New Year represent an advance of an average of three-quarters of a mile on a three mile front."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 11.—In his Sunday evening communiqué Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig reports: The British have captured a strong system of enemy trenches at the southern foot of Serre Hill, above the River Ancre. This trench system extended along a front of three-quarters of a mile. The British captured 215 prisoners, which exceeded their total of casualties.

The British have driven back an enemy attempt south of Sailly-Saillisel. They have entered the German trenches in the neighbourhood of Pys, La Bassée, Neuve Chappelle and Fauquissart, inflicting casualties and taking prisoners.

KOKUSAI-HAVAS

Paris, Feb. 11.—Last night's communiqué reports that Lieutenant Guynemer shot down his thirty-first German aeroplane. His victory was gained in a night battle over the Somme front.

On Friday night French aviators covered about 340 kilometres in 3 hours, 20 minutes and dropped bombs on Karlsruhe.

Speaking of this raid, one recalls to mind that the two most important raids over Karlsruhe were made on June 15, 1915 and June 22, 1916 as reprisals for the bombardment of French and British open towns by German aviators and Zeppelins.

Twenty-three machines took part in the first, when, in broad daylight, despite the terrific anti-aircraft fire, 130 bombs were rained on the city. Enormous damage was done, notably to the Palace, the arms factory and railway station.

In the raid, last June, 40 bombs were hurled on the city from nine aeroplanes, extensive damage again being done.

OFFICIAL TO RUSSIAN EMBASSY

Petrograd, Feb. 7.—On the river Beresina, the enemy after a concentrated artillery fire in the region of the village Zaberezina, attacked the Russian positions, and occupied part of a trench and an island. By a counter-attack the Germans were repulsed and the lost ground recaptured.

Rumanian Front. The Russian advanced detachments stormed the enemy positions south of the river Aloniku. All the counter-attacks were repulsed. During the night two enemy detachments, crossing the frozen river Seret near Surai (south-east of Fokshany) attacked the Russians, but were thrown back behind the river.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Feb. 11.—Firing and reconnoissances continue on the western front. Nothing of importance occurred on the Rumanian front.

No change on the Caucasus front.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Feb. 12.—Western front. A German detachment, about two companies in strength, clad in white garments, attacked after a strong artillery preparation the Russian position north of Stanislavov and rushed into the Russian trenches, but were dislodged by a counterattack of the Russian reserve troops.

On the Rumanian front firing continues.

Caucasus front. Reconnoissances are being performed. The snowstorm continues at different places. Three schooners laden with grain were sunk by the Russian men of war off the Anatolian coast.

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, Feb. 13.—The majority of the prisoners captured of late on the Russian south-western front are men of education, who, prior to the war, occupied prominent social positions. All bear witness that they were several times called to the Colours, time and again released, and eventually received billets in the rear of the armies.

When operations commenced against Rumania, they were sent to the front, their posts in the rear being taken by women. The prisoners say that belief in a speedy conclusion of the war is rife in the German army, where there is an unanimous desire to return home in time for the commencement of harvest work. If this is not achieved, they say, Germany and Austria will be menaced by famine.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 11.—An official report from headquarters in Mesopotamia states that the British have assaulted and taken possession of a liquorice factory and 500 yards of trenches on the River Tigris below Kut-el-Amara. General Townshend held this factory throughout the siege of Kut.

As a result of these operations the British have occupied a new line on a front of 6,000 yards and pushed the enemy back to a depth varying from 800 to 1,200 yards.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 13.—The official report from Mesopotamia reads. "A direct hit from our artillery sank a bridge which the enemy were holding at Shumram and some shipping near by. We resumed our advance on Sunday on the right bank of the Tigris and drove back the enemy's last line of trenches at the Dahra bend, to the west of Kut-el-Amara. We established our line, in the evening, across the bend from bank to bank on a frontage of 5,500 yards, completely hemming in the enemy."

KING GEORGE OPENS BRITISH PARLIAMENT

London, Feb. 7.—His Majesty King George opened Parliament to-day. In his speech from the Throne, King George said "The threats of further outrages upon public order and the common rights of humanity will only serve to steel Our determination, and that of My people throughout the Empire, and our faithful and heroic Allies to remain steadfastly and unanimously resolved to secure our just demands for reparation and restitution, respecting past guarantees, and for the future. Demands which we regard as essential to the progress of civilization."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 7.—The opening of the British Parliament to-day was shorn of its customary splendour, but was animated by a stern, practical spirit appropriate to these critical times.

There were present a large number of peers clad in khaki and navy blue; peeresses in walking dress, and ambassadors in mufti. King George wore an admiral's uniform, while Queen Mary made a stately figure clad in black robes and wearing pearls and a big diamond plaque.

The King read his speech in a strong, penetrating voice. He emphasized especially that the Allies remain steadfastly and unanimously resolved to secure their just demands for reparation and restitution for the past and guarantees for the future. "Further outrages upon the public law and the common rights of humanity will but serve to steel our determination," King George declared.

The King laid special emphasis on the importance of the forthcoming war conference of representatives of the Dominions.

URBANA-CHAMPAIGN

MR. JOHN BUCHAN'S WEEKLY REVIEW

London, Feb. 11.—Western Front. The British operations on the western front have been conducted during the last few weeks with increasing success. Throughout the difficult weather of January these operations were almost entirely trench raids but of such number and vigour that the German prisoners taken during the month amounted to one-thousand two-hundred and twenty-eight including twenty-seven officers. A hard frost made increased activity possible hence the operations in February have been on a somewhat larger scale which have been uniformally successful, small but useful advances have been recorded at several points on the Somme front.

The British positions east of Beaumont-hamel have been improved while east of Beaucourt the line has been advanced to a depth of five-hundred yards on a front of three quarters of a mile. These successes rendered untenable the entire strongly fortified village of Grandecourt, on the south bank of the Ancre, and on the 6th of February the enemy evacuated it.

The evacuated ground has been occupied and the whole new position strongly consolidated.

Slightly south, in the neighbourhood of Grandecourt and Le Transloy, satisfactory progress has been made at two points. At one of these, five-hundred yards of enemy trenches were captured and seventy prisoners taken. The total of prisoners approaches three hundred in this fighting, besides those captured in the trench raids on other parts of the line.

Mesopotamia. In Mesopotamia, the British successes have continued. The fighting recently has been on both sides of the River Hai which enters the Tigris immediately south of Kut. The Turkish positions on both sides have now been captured up to the confluence of the river. The enemy suffered heavy losses in the successive advances leading to this result and many prisoners have been taken. Meanwhile, on the British left flank, the cavalry has reached the southern bank of the Tigris, twenty-five miles west of Kut, from which point the Turkish advanced base, on the north bank, was shelled with good effect.

AUSTRIA SHORT OF FOOD

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, Feb. 6.—The Austrian Food Dictator, in an interview in Vienna, stated that Austria has now finished the supplies of the last harvest. Germany, he said, has promised Austria supplies from Rumania.

HUNGER DEMONSTRATION AT AIX

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, Feb. 7.—The newspaper Les Nouvelles states that German troops at Aix-la-Chappelle, on January 23, charged on 12,000 persons who were taking part in a great hunger demonstration. Many persons were injured.

LATEST NEWS OF PIRACY DECLARATION BY GERMANY

Strong Action Taken By Neutrals Led By The United States In Protest

New York, Feb. 5.—A wave of patriotism is sweeping over the United States, following the break with Germany. From every part of the nation, expressions of loyalty and determination are pouring in, quite irrespective of party.

The newspapers generally express their satisfaction that the United States is now aligned with the cause for which the Allies are contending. The "Herald" says that, in severing diplomatic relations, the President has done the one thing that Washington, Lincoln or any other American President would have done. He has upheld, with righteous dignity, the honour of the American people.

The New York "Times" says "If Germany contemplates surrender, her hour has struck for a declaration to that effect. She has put down her last stake, and already it is lost."

The "World" says: "Americans have one duty, and that is to stand unflinchingly in support of their government. If hostilities come, let us thank God that we shall enter the war on the right side. We shall be fighting the fight of Democracy battling for the principles of human liberty."

The "Pittsburg Gazette" says that the first gun pointed at an American ship on the high seas should be followed by a declaration of war by the United States.

The "Baltimore American" points out: "The Kaiser has called for judgment of the sword and by the sword shall he be punished."

The "Chicago Tribune" declares that all Americans stand to-day at the President's side in patriotic union and unflinching devotion.

A Washington message to-day says that every government agency has been set in motion to prevent further outrages of German sympathizers, following a number of depredations in the last 24 hours. It now appears that the machinery of the Kron Prinzessin Cecilie, which was seized yesterday at Boston, had previously been seriously deranged. There are also reports that other German interned ships have been damaged. It is known that plots to damage the Panama Canal and other harbour fortifications have been uncovered.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 6.—It is announced that the Note which the Spanish Government has sent to the Central Empires in regard to their declaration of an unrestricted submarine campaign is even more emphatic than that sent by the Washington Government.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, Feb. 7.—President Wilson has been in consultation with the Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary for War to-day. They have practically determined the military programme in the event of war with Germany. American assistance to the Allies will firstly be naval—namely the U. S. Fleets will patrol the north and south Atlantic, thus releasing the British and French cruisers.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, Feb. 7.—The naval authorities at Manila have taken charge of seven teen German merchantmen interned at the port, and have removed the crews.

Military guards have surrounded the German merchantmen Odenswald and Dresden interned at Porto Rica, and the crews are confined to their ships.

Nine German vessels at Honolulu have been disabled, their boilers having been wrecked.

The crews have been arrested, and the vessels are under guards.

Nearly every State Legislature throughout the country has passed resolutions supporting President Wilson's policy in regard to Germany.

According to information received in a reliable quarter the Swiss Government has refused the request of the American Government to take the same step towards Germany in connection with the German declaration of unrestricted submarine warfare. It is believed that Spain will also follow the suit of the Swiss Government, on the ground of maintaining strict neutrality. The attitude of other neutral states is unknown so far, but it is generally observed that only a few of them will agree to the proposal of President Wilson judging from the present situation.

A message from Montevideo, the capital of Uruguay, announces that President Wilson's action is approved by both the press and the public. The Government of Uruguay is urged to join the other neutrals against Germany.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

Rio de Janerio, Feb. 7.—It is officially announced that the Brazilian reply to the German declaration, of unrestricted submarine warfare, has been despatched to Berlin. The Brazilian Note protests against the violation of International Law involved in the submarine blockade, pointing out that if it is effective, it could close the entire high seas. This is a situation which could not be permitted. The Note protests by anticipation against any hostile act from which any Brazilian merchantship may suffer and holds Germany responsible for such acts.

The transfer to the Immigration Station of the crews of German and Austrian ships tied up in harbour has begun. Nineteen men have been transferred from one ship in Hoboken.

Peking, Feb. 8.—The most intense interest is being taken in the question of China's attitude toward the invitation of the United States to follow their example and break off relations with Germany. Up to the present, no reply has been made by the Peking Government to the American Note.

The Chinese who have been educated in the West almost unanimously favour a break of relations, but the old-school Conservatives, who mainly control the Government, do not show a similar enthusiasm.

There are indications that, before deciding definitely on her course of action, China will address a Note to Germany deprecating ruthless submarining and advising Germany to withdraw her declaration.

Other matters such as an agreement to China's participation in the Peace Conference, a revision of existing Treaties and financial considerations, including the cancellation of the German share in the Boxer Indemnity with other material benefits, will undoubtedly influence the final decision in Peking.

The views of the Japanese Government and Press are awaited with considerable interest.

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

Peking, Feb. 9.—The Chinese Government has handed a note to the German Minister here to be conveyed to his Government. The Note protests against the recent German submarine order and asserts that China will be obliged to sever diplomatic relations if the order is carried out.

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

Peking, Feb. 9.—Following is the text of the note from the Chinese Government to Germany:—

"The representative of the Republic of China in Berlin in a communication transmits the German note issued February 1st making known the measures for blockade newly adopted by Germany. These measures will from that day endanger neutral merchant vessels navigating in certain prescribed zones.

"The new measure for submarine warfare inaugurated by Germany, which imperils the lives and property of Chinese citizens to a greater extent even than the measures previously taken and which already have cost China so many human lives, constitute a violation of the principles of International Law at present in force.

"Any tolerance of the application of these measures would result in the introduction into International Law of arbitrary principles incompatible with commercial intercourse between neutrals and belligerents.

"The Chinese Government sincerely hopes that with a view to respecting the rights of neutrals and maintaining the friendly relations of the two countries, the measures proclaimed by Germany on February 1st will not be carried out. If, on the contrary, its expectations and its protest are ineffectual the Chinese Government will be constrained, to its profound regret to sever the diplomatic relations at present existing between the two countries. It is unnecessary to add that the attitude of the Chinese Government is dictated purely by a desire to further the cause of a world's peace and the maintenance and the sanctity of International Law."

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

Peking, Feb. 9.—The Government of China, acknowledging the American Note, says that the Chinese Government, like the President of the United States, is reluctant to believe the German Government will actually carry into execution measures which imperil the lives and property of citizens of Neutral States, jeopardise commerce, even the legitimate commercial intercourse between Neutrals, or between neutrals and belligerents, and which would tend, if allowed to be enforced, to introduce a new principle into International Law.

The Chinese Government, the Note goes on, being in accord with the principles set forth in the American Note, and firmly associating itself with the Government of the United States, has taken similar action by protesting energetically against the new measures for blockade.

"The Chinese Government, the note concludes, also proposes to take such action in future as it deems necessary for the maintenance of the principles of International Law."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Madrid, Feb. 9.—The Spanish reply to the German proclamation of unrestricted submarine warfare, says that if the threat is carried out, it will create a most painful impression. The Spanish Government tranquilly, but firmly protests against the unprecedented warfare as contrary to the principles observed by all nations, even in their most violent moments. It refuses to admit the legitimacy of such warfare, and has no doubt Germany will find some means of satisfying the demands of Spain, who is bound to protect the lives of her subjects and maintain the integrity of her sovereignty.

Washington, Feb. 9.—During the Senate discussion of the resolution endorsing the break with Germany, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Republican, declared that it was no time for party divisions.

Peking, Feb. 12.—With the exception of a small number of people who have been trained by Germans or educated in Germany, all circles approve the action of the Government in notifying Germany of China's intentions should Germany persist in carrying out her ferocious submarine order.

The national parliament is almost unanimous in support of the Government's position. It is most noteworthy that the two great opposing political parties, the Chinputang and the Kuomintang show an absolute unanimity on this question.

It is generally felt that the Government's action will raise the diplomatic status of China and begin a new era in the history of her foreign relations.

London, Feb. 12.—Mr. Gerard, the American Ambassador to Berlin, was practically detained as a hostage by Germany until after the safe departure for home of Count Bernstorff, the German Ambassador to Washington. Many American residents in Germany are still detained by Germany on the pretext that considerable time is required for preparing passports. It is understood that the German Government intends to detain them until it knows what sort of treatment the American government is going to give the Germans in America.—"Jiji."

London, Feb. 12.—According to the reports emanating from Germany through neutral states, Germany is firmly determined to pursue her avowed unrestricted submarine policy by all means. Consequently a strong conviction prevails in Berlin that war between Germany and the United States is absolutely inevitable. Both the German Government and the nation are expecting the momentary declaration of war by the United States on Germany.—"Jiji."

KOKUSAI-HAVAS

Paris, Feb. 13.—All papers to-day print despatches referring to China's answer to Germany and to China's Note to the United States, the high interest of which they dwell on in their editorial columns.

"Le Figaro" praises the strength of these documents as showing that not a single neutral would speak otherwise, if exclusively moved by the sentiment of right and equity.

M. Herve, writing in "La Victoire" applauds China for showing its high old civilization by making a protest against German unrestricted submarine warfare.

It is unavoidable, he adds that the interest of China is evidently to share in the action of Powers to claim, as well as President Wilson, respect for the institution of nations, society and international justice.

"L'Echo de Paris" observes that Germany hoped to find in China an immens Colony to be improved. The really important and opportune answer from the Chinese Government makes these hopes tumble to the ground.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, Feb. 13.—It is now confirmed that on February 11, Germany offered to negotiate with the United States regarding submarine warfare provided "the commercial blockade against England was not interfered with."

Mr. Lansing, United States Secretary of State, has replied that the Washington Government will gladly discuss the matter provided Germany withdraws her proclamation of January 31 regarding unrestricted submarine warfare. At the same time, the sinking by submarine of neutral ships cannot be discussed uutil Germany renews her assurance of May 4 last year, given after the torpedoing of the Sussex.

London, Feb. 13.—According to the statement of Mr. Gerard, the American Ambassador, who has arrived in Switzerland, the German nation generally hold pessimistic view of the future situation and the populace, already suffering from the scarcity of provision and food stuffs, are anxious to have the war terminated as soon as possible. New York, Feb. 9.—The American Line has indefinitely postponed the sailings of their steamers from St. Paul, as the State Department has refused to advise the Company whether ships can enter the German war zones. KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

London, Feb. 13.—The "Daily Telegraph" publishes the following article from a correspondent. "Whether the German submarine campaign can be more reckless or more ruthless than it has been in the past or not, the exigencies of war require that all ships available for the service of ourselves and our allies should be used for the transport of food and other necessities and that space should not be wasted on unnecessary luxuries.

"It is possible that considerable extension may be given in future to the restriction of imports. The need of reserving all tonnage possible for what is necessary is so obvious that it calls for little argument. When we know that our need for wheat and other food stuffs, munitions and the other apparatus of war must be supplied, it is absurd to waste tonnage on luxuries. That such an extension of the restriction of imports will affect the interests of the allies and neutrals is certain. The interests of the allies are one. There is a common cause for which all fight and suffer. We must prosecute the war with all our strength; we must do everything contributing to victory, and avoid doing anything hindering or weakening our effort to that end. The measures which may be necessary to restrict our imports would not be selfish. The tonnage released from the carriage of luxuries would be freed to the advantage of our allies as well as ourselves. Neutrals will suffer loss if their manufactures are no longer exported to this country. Our justification is complete. We and not the neutrals must judge of our own necessities and interests in the war that we are waging. We cannot be expected, for the sake of neutrals, to provide shipping to convey the manufactures of other articles of luxury which it is against our interest to import, and neutrals have an interest in our shipping which contributes to their needs. But if neutrals complain of our restriction what do they think of Germany which declared war on the world."

In an editorial article commenting on the above, the "Daily Telegraph" says: "If any restrictions do our allies or friendly neutrals an injury it would be regrettable, but in cases of urgent necessity there is sometimes no alternative, and in all essential articles food will as in the case of raw material, be necessary for our exports. We are anxious to import as freely as possible."

London, Feb. 14.—A Washington dispatch says that the concensus of the public opinion there is that though the German submarine policy is apparently doomed to end in a fiasco, Germany will not cancel that policy until after serious trouble arises between Germany and America through the unlawful sinking of an American ship by German submarines.—"Asahi."

San Francisco, Feb. 14.—It is informally reported in Washington that Germany is going to send a Note to the American Government proposing to open negotiations between the two Governments with a view to finding means to avoid a war and restore diplomatic relations between them.—"Asahi."

A Shanghai telegram received in official quarters says that the captains of 2 German steamers, which are detained in the port of Shanghai where they took refuge soon after the outbreak of war the year before last, attempted to get their vessels away late in the night of the 12th. The two steamers, the names of which are not given out for obvious causes, were sighted steaming at top speed towards the entrance of the port late that night under cover of pitch darkness through the line of merchantmen of the allies and other countries, moored in the harbour.

A certain Japanese warship which happened to be cruising near the mouth of the port espied the mysterious ships and at once gave chase. Aware of detection, the German ships turned on their course and retraced their steps to the base where they were mooring. They returned to their former position and apparently the commanders gave up the idea of escaping seeing the impossibility of successfully carrying out their scheme, still the allied warships are maintaining a vigilant watch over their movement lest they should make another attempt.

The warships of the British and Japanese navies, besides some Chinese gunboats, are detailed near Shanghai and are constantly cruising outside the port to check the German ships detained in the port making an attempt to escape and it is almost impossible to attempt to escape outside the port and elude the strong cordon of allied warships. In view of this fact, which must be well and fully understood by the German officers it is surmised by the authorities concerned that the intention may have been to go to the entrance of the river and sink the vessels there, with a view to blocking the passage of allied merchantmen in and out of the port for the sinister purpose of hampering trade with Shanghai. Upward of ten steamers of various nationalities are sunk near the entrance of the port of Shanghai and if the two German ships founder at the entrance it is possible that the passage of steamers will be practically blocked to the great embarrassment of the Allies as well as China's marine trade interests, as already the free way has been considerably narrowed on account of the many sunken vessels.

This supposition is not altogether improbable in consideration of the recent attempt of the men on German steamers detained at Honolulu and Manila to blow up the ships and founder them in the ports. At any rate, this is what is believed by the authorities of the Imperial navy, who think it a matter for congratulation that their attempt has been fortunately checked in time by the alert attitude of the warships, because should the entrance of the port be blocked though for a short period it would mean a serious menace and loss to Japanese trade interests with China.

There are no less than 1,500 Germans residing in Shanghai and their activities in devising various intrigues against the interests of Japan and the allies are too well-known to need recapitulation.

Mrs. Visconti now wrote on a piece of paper for the information of the Committee the name of her informant.

It later developed, through the examination of the next witness, a newspaper correspondent named Price, that Mrs. Visconti's informant was a child, who overheard the remarks of Mr. Price's children. Mr. Price testified that he made no money through his advance knowledge of the Peace Note. He told his family that he could have made some money if he had money to risk at the time.

The Committee decided to continue the hearing in New York next week.

London, Feb. 12.—The Board of Trade figures for imports of foreign and colonial corn into the United Kingdom last week are particularly interesting. They are 2,766.200 cwt. of wheat and 1,069,300 cwt. maize. The figures for the corresponding week last year were 1,111,800 and 495,800 respectively.

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

London, Feb. 13.—The Post-Master General Sir Albert Illingsworth, in a speech yesterday said: "Our financial resources and all other resources are infinitely greater than those of the enemy. Our financial resources are greater than those of our allies who are unable to provide the money to pay for munitions and other necessities.

"Of munitions we are now sending to our Allies an amount equal to the value of three-quarters of a million pounds sterling every day."

Vice-Admiral Sir Reginald Bacon, commanding the Channel patrol service, in a message to the Chairman of a meeting on the War Loan said:

"Do not worry too much about submarines. You are not going to be starved. If you do your duty ashore by increasing the Loan as well as we are doing ours on the sea by sinking the submarines, the Loan will give the enemy the knock-out blow."

TIMES AT TUPPENCE

London, Feb. 13.—The price of the London "Times" will be two pence per copy on and after next Monday.—"Nichinichi."

CHANGES IN RUMANIAN COMMAND

Petrograd, Feb. 13.—The Rumanian Army has been recently reformed, as the result of which 14 generals including several commanders of divisions and high officers who were leaders of military affairs of Rumania, and one rear-admiral have been placed on the reserve. A certain Rumanian paper, commenting on the reform, remarked that this opens room for officers of prominence and the nation will thank General Presan, Chief of the Rumanian General Staff, for his measures. Other papers say that recently promoted generals will be ordered to command the army in the offensives assumed by Rumania in future.—Nichinichi."

CURZON OUTLINES PURPORT OF IMPERIAL COUNCIL

Speaking in the House of Lords on February 7, Lord Curzon, Minister without portfolio, outlined the scope of the British Imperial Council. The Foreign Office here has issued the following digest:

"The Imperial Council which has been summoned is not called merely because of a desire to show respect for the Dominions. The objects of the council are, first, consultation about the immediate prosecution of the war; second, the terms on which the Empire is willing to make peace. The representatives of the Dominions will be consulted not merely about the disposal of the conquered German Colonies but also about the entire territorial readjustment that will follow the war. Canada, which has participated in the defence of Belgium and France, will have a voice in the terms of the restoration of Belgium and northern France, while Australia and New Zealand, which have given many men to the campaign in Gallipoli, will have a voice in the disposal of Turkish territories.

"Finally, the Dominions will be asked to discuss various military, commercial and general economic matters. The representatives in the Imperial Council will occupy more important places than did the members of the old Imperial Conference. Under a new Imperial Constitution they will participate in the executive functions of an Empire at war; they will be members of the temporary governing body of the British Empire. The step taken by the Government in calling this conference is a great step in the development of a truly Imperial constitution for the Mother Country, her Dominions and her Colonies.

"In my opinion the Imperial Council may be considered an extension of the present War Cabinet of Five, in as far as its objects are concerned. The invitation extended to India was rather for the purpose of clearing up misunderstandings about the status of that Empire than a recognition of the services of India in the war."

"Germany has cast aside all the laws of God and man and is perpetrating new, practical outrages. President Wilson, a man of noble patience and self-restraint, has at length been obliged to break relations with Germany. The step taken by the United States may be regarded as a moral declaration issued for the whole world against Germany.

"In Germany the lack of food supplies is becoming more and more acute. It is clear that the German people will not be able to hold out much longer. The new submarine policy doubtless was partly due to this fact. But even though it was an act of desperation, it is madness deliberately planned, and is welcomed by the people of Germany. We cannot regard it lightly."

Lord Curzon then dealt with the measures to be taken by Great Britain against the new submarine menace. The first of these he said is to the arming of all merchantmen. This, the speaker said, has already made such progress that the results are more than satisfactory, but he was unable to disclose the figures showing this. Other measures against the submarine menace, he continued will be the improvement of the engines employed to catch and destroy submarines, the creation of safety routes through the blockaded zones, and the building of more ships as rapidly as the shipbuilding facilities of the country will permit. Lord Curzon continued:

"In addition to these measures, and with a view to increasing the shipping facilities of the Empire to a degree beyond any so far attempted, the Government will ask the consent of the representatives of the people of the nation, to further limitations on the importation of other than those that are absolutely necessary for the life of our people and for the conduct of our war.

"In a word the world war is now at its zenith. Our enemies are prepared to attack us with resources and ferocity which as yet they have not employed and we must be determined and prepared to meet the new and difficult situation with all the courage and resources our Empire can muster."

MR. BONAR LAW ASKS VOTE OF CREDIT IN COMMONS

London, Feb 13.—Bonar, Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer in ntroducing a vote of credit in the House of Commons for £550,000,000 to cover war expenditures until May 31 this year, said that the total votes of credit current for the financial year woule be £1,950,000. The expenditures od the Army and Navy and on munications had increased by one million sterling daily compared with the first "sixty-three days of the financial year." This was due to the increased expenditure on munitions and food.

Mr. Bonar Law estimated the advances to the Allies and Dominions, to March, 31, would total £890.000,000. He was most confident of the future. He went on to say that while he did not know whether the new War Loan would prove a success, he would point out that applications would certainly be more numerous and he believed the amount applied for would be greater than ever before.

THE DUKE OF NORFOLK DIES AT AGE OF 69

London, Feb. 14.—Lord Norfolk is dead. —"Asahi."

The Duke of Norfolk was the Premier Duke and Earl, Knight of the Garter, Hereditary Earl-Marshal, and Chief Butler of England, was the eldest son of the 14th Duke, by his wife Augusta Mary Minna Catharine, second daughter of Edmund, 1st Lord Lyons. He was born in Carlton Terrace, London, Dec. 27, 1847, and succeeded to the peerage on the death of his father, Nov. 25, 1860. His Grace, who was a Roman Catholic, took great interest in all matters relating to his Church. He was President of the Catholic Union of Great Britain. It was to the Duke of Norfolk that Dr. Newman addressed in 1875 his reply to Mr. Gladstone's "Political Expostulation." The Duke of Norfolk took a prominent part, about the time of the general election of 1886, in the Unionist opposition to Mr. Gladstone's Home Rule measure, thus bringing himself into collision with the Irish hierarchy. In 1887 the Duke was Her Majesty's Special Envoy with presents and congratulations to the Pope on his jubilee, and in 1893 he headed a special band of English pilgrims, who were present at the state celebration at St. Peter's. From 1892 to 1895 he represented the City of London on the London County Council. In 1895 he was appointed Postmaster-General, and organised the Imperial Penny Postage in the face of many difficulties. From 1895 to 1897 he was Mayor of Sheffield, and from the Jubilee (1897) onwards has been first Lord Mayor of Sheffield. He took great interest in the Volunteer movement, and since 1864 has been Hon. Colonel of the 4th West Riding (Yorks.) Volunteers, and since 1891 Major, with the rank of Lieut.-Colonel, in the 2nd Volunteer Batt. of the Royal Sussex Regiment. He married, at the Oratory, Brompton, on Nov. 21, 1877, Lady Flora Hastings, eldest daughter of Charles Frederick Abney Hastings, 1st Lord Donnington, of Donnington Park, Leicestershire, and the late Countess of Loudon. Her Grace died on April 11, 1887. Their son, Philip, the Earl of Arundel and Surrey, was born in 1879.

New York, Feb. 15.—The Government of Cuba announces that revolutionary uprisings have broken out at three places in Cuba and a large number of citizens and soldiers have been arrested. The government has proclaimed martial law.—"Nichinichi."

POSTAL SYSTEM NOW IS PAYING IN CHINA

Peking, Feb. 3.—After operating for twenty years the Chinese Postal Department is paying its way. In 1915 there was a tiny surplus, and for 1916 there is a profit of $1,000,000. Considering that pioneer work is constantly proceeding, and that countless new offices cannot yet be paying expenses, the result is highly gratifying. The Chinese Posts have already received international recognition by admission to the Postal Union. Those who use the Chinese post know that it deserves the position that it has won. The service is efficient, progressive and enterprising, and bids fair to become one of the biggest institutions of the kind in the world. The success which has been attained is due to two main causes—foreign organizing powers, and the faithfulness with which the Chinese employees have fulfilled duties assigned to them. In the circumstances, it might be imagined that the Chinese Government would let well alone, and leave those directing the destinies of the Department to pursue the policy which has proved so successful.

Not so. The Government want to reduce the number of foreign employees and to lower the status of the foreign Associate Director-General, if not even to abolish the appointment. In fact, they are credibly believed to entertain the desire to remove the foreign control which has been so largely responsible for the success of the Department. It is not supposed that they wish to dismiss every foreigner or to dispense altogether with foreign advice. But they do want to put the executive powers in the hands of their own countrymen. The belief that Monsieur Piry, the Associate Director-General, is about to resign, and the fact that many of the foreign employees have left to go to the war, has suggested to the Minister of Communications that M. Piry need have no successor, and that the foreign appointments may be filled up with Chinese.

How the French Government would take the abolition of an appointment which has hitherto always been held by a Frenchman is a matter between France and China. But it is permissible to say what foreigners in general would think if there was any alteration in the arrangements under which, in effect, the management of postal affairs is in foreign hands. The Postoffice is trusted universally because we all know that it is efficiently conducted. Remove the foreign control, and foreign trust would immediately vanish. The Chinese may think, and nobody will blame them for it, that they are just as competent to conduct such a business as the foreigners. But whilst nepotism and venality are known adjuncts of Chinese officialdom, no foreigner will believe that they are competent, or that a Chinese-managed Postoffice can do other than lapse into the unhappy ways of other Chinese departments.

MR. AIMARO SATO SPEAKS ON FRIENDLY ACCORD

New York, Feb. 7.—"Friendly accord between nations would mean little if it existed only between Governments and not peoples," said H. E. Mr. Aimaro Sato, Japanese Ambassador, in an address here today at the dinner of the Silk Association of America.

"When trade prospers, there is generated international good-will. The recent signal expansion of your and our commerce, though mainly due to the great war, contains, nevertheless, many durable elements and augurs well for the still closer friendship of the two peoples."

Dr. Toyokichi Iyenaga, chief of the East and West News Agency, referring to the stirring events in Europe, expressed the opinion that Japan has a just claim to a voice in the terms on which peace should be framed to defeat forever the ambition of Germany to dominate the world by force.

One of the ambitions of Young China is to secure the closure of all foreign postoffices in China. Because China has been admitted to the Postal Union, and is now on an equal footing with other countries in postal matters, they very properly argue that there is no further use for foreign postoffices, as the Chinese postoffice has already proved itself competent.

But Young China forgets, or omits to remember, that the Chinese Postoffice is efficient, and has received international recognition, because of its foreign direction. Remove the foreign control and foreigners throughout China, and very many Chinese, would immediately find it necessary to patronize foreign postoffices. Many new foreign postoffices would be opened, and the position of China, as a member of the Postal Union, would be jeopardized. By reducing the executive powers of foreigners in the postoffice, the very end which it is desired to achieve, namely, the withdrawal of foreign postoffices, would inevitably be defeated.

That is so self-evident that only a schemer like the Minister of Communications could affect not to see it. Hsu Shih-ying, who, in his own estimation, is competent to take over the control of the Universe from Providence, has his own ends to pursue. He wants the patronage of the Postoffice in his hands, and he also proposes to offer the surplus revenues of the Postoffice as part security for his ridiculous domestic loan of $200,000,000. He has already done much to lower the efficiency of the Board of Communications by foolish and shameless nepotism and favouritism. To maintain his position he must be able to give appointments right and left to those who would otherwise be his political opponents. He is now, under cover of regaining independence of the foreigner, trying to do something which would wreck one of the few really efficient departments of the Government.

"JIJI" URGES ALLIES TO PRESS GERMANY HARD

Since the United States severed diplomatic relations with Germany, several other neutral countries have followed the example, and at the present writing, says the "Jiji", Spain, Brazil, The Argentine, Uruguay and China have already protested against the German plan of the unrestricted submarine warfare. Sweden, Norway and Holland are still undecided, although some reports say that they are contemplating joining the United States. At this moment, says the paper, it is very interesting to find China inclined to join the allies.

Under these circumstances, the "Jiji" declares that when the United States declares war against Germany or takes some aggressive step to protect her own ships and interests, it will be interesting to watch these neutral nations. However it does not seem that the United States will take an aggressive step immediately, and there seem to be various problems to be considered before she will decide upon the further step towards Germany.

The "Jiji" says, however, that at this moment it is impossible to predict what the United States and other neutral countries will do . The attitude of China concerns Japan a great deal, but China only protested against the unrestricted submarine outrage, and it is doubtful whether she will sever diplomatic relations with Germany, or join the Entente.

Even if China joins the Entente, it will not cause much effect upon the peace or order of the Far East.

The recent declaration of unrestricted submarine warfare only concerns neutral nations, as the Entente powers have already expected such a desperate step to be taken by Germany, and they are not surprised at the German declaration. The discussion of the recent German declaration is to be left to the neutral countries, and the Entente powers should engage themselves in destroying the German submarines,. and finally in defeating the German main forces on land.

It is not yet known what was the subject discussed at the Allied conference recently held at Petrograd, and one report says that the representatives of the Entente adopted a plan to end the war by the end of the coming autumn. If such a plan was actually adopted, it is pleasant news to the whole world. However the "Jiji" fears that the proper and sufficient preparation has not yet been made to realize such a quick ending of the war. It was said last fall that from the very beginning of this year, the Entente powers will take aggressive steps, but nothing has been done as yet by the Entente to justify their declarations made during the last two or three months of 1916.

The situation in Europe has not changed recently, and the "Jiji" doubts whether any important change will be made shortly, but hopes that the Entente powers will make the proper preparation for a decisive battle and press upon the German lines as hard as possible. In the meanwhile the people of the Entente powers should not busy themselves with the problem of unrestricted submarine activity, which is only a problem to the neutral countries, but they should pay their attention to the main stage of the war.

SITUATION OF HOLLAND

With the severance of diplomatic relations between the United States and Germany, the situation of Holland has become very dangerous. President Wilson has asked other neutral nations to follow the example of the United States and to sever relations with Germany.

Germany is now, says the "Chugai Shogyo" eagerly waiting for the breach of diplomatic relations with Holland, and she has already massed a large number of German forces along the Dutch borders. To firmly establish the pan-Germanism of the Kaiser, Germany has to conquer Holland, and up to the present Germany has been watching for an opportunity to strike Holland. Now the Kaiser is keenly watching Holland, and as soon as the Dutch government breaks off with Germany, he will send his military forces into Holland and conquer her.

Germany desired to obtain the privilege of making the mouth of the river Scheldt, Holland, a base for her submarines, and she tried many ways to induce Holland to allow Germany to lease the coast land in the neighbourhood of the river Scheldt, but the Dutch Government has refused the request. If Holland announces the severance of diplomatic relations with Germany, the Kaiser will welcome the news and conquer Holland. [Holland will have a voice in this matter we would remind the "Chugai." Ed. J.T.]

But on the other hand, if Holland were to join Germany to save herself, it will be a great assistance to Germany and her allies. It cannot, however, be forgotten, that as soon as Holland joins Germany, the Dutch Colonies will be all conquered by the Entente.

The position of Holland has become indeed very difficult, and the step to be taken by the Dutch Government will greatly affect the future of the war. If Germany obtains a base for her submarines on the Dutch coast, it will be a great disadvantage to the Entente. The "Chugai" says that Holland cannot consider her own interest alone at this critical moment, and she has to consider the future development of the war, and the consequent outcomes.

It is advisable that England should try to keep Holland from joining Germany, and also the United States should advise Holland to realize the importance of her position. Germany is threatening Holland from every direction, and the Entente powers and the United States, should not let Holland be scared by the German threats, and make her adopt her own policy, well considering the interest of all other nations as well as her own.

FINANCIAL CHANGES

Caused by the effect of the present war, the financial world has experienced a strange and unique situation. One of them is the disagreement between capitalists and labour. During last year, many strikes were carried out in the United States, and since the beginning of this year many strikes have occurred in Japan.

In the past one month, 550 workmen of the Ikegai Steel Works, 380 men of the Mitatsuchi Rubber Company, and 90 men of the Matsuda manufacturing plant, went out on strike, and there have been many other minor strikes throughout the country. The cause of all these strikes in Japan, says the "Hochi", was the rejection of the demand for the increase of wages.

The capitalists and manufacturers have been harvesting large profits ever since the beginning of the war, but such profits were all divided among themselves, stockholders and officials, and the workmen did not receive any part of the profit. Some factories gave a bonus to the workmen, but the amount has been merely normal.

The workmen of Japan have been improving, and they will never be satisfied with the treatment given them at present by the present capitalists and employers. The cost of living is daily going up, and however the employers may endeavour to prevent the strike by force, it cannot be stopped, unless the employers realize the position of the workmen and give them proper treatment.

If the factories and other plants keep on treating their workmen as they have been, says the "Hochi," there will without any doubt occur many strikes in Japan. The factory owners should realize that it is much safer and more profitable to give better treatment to the workmen than to suffer from strikes. The paper regrets that among the Japanese factory owners and employers there are but a very few who are willing to share their profits with the workmen.

BARON GOTO'S SPEECH

Commenting upon the speech of Baron Goto read before the Conference of the Prefectural Governors, the "Jiji" says that the speech is not worth the trouble of reading it through, and the paper sympathizes with the Governors who had to listen to the speech. The "Jiji" says that the speech is a declaration of war against the Opposition party, and in the determination of Baron Goto to destroy and ruin every party that opposes the Government is clearly seen. The "Jiji" fears that some of the Governors and minor officials may carry the instruction of Baron Goto too far and cause troubles.

THE AMERICAN PEACE SOCIETY OF JAPAN

The Annual Meeting of the American Peace Society of Japan was held at the Tokyo Statistical Society's Building, Tokyo, from 4.15 p.m., Monday, February 12. The following were among the thirty-seven Americans present, many of whom took part in the business and discussions: Bishop Harris, Dr. Doremus Scudder, Dr. Clay MacCauley, Prof. E. W. Clement, Dr. H. B. Benninghoff, Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Pettee, Rev. H. M. Landis, Dr. A. K. Reischauer, Mr. G. M. Fisher, Miss Stewart, Miss Ewing, Rev. George Wallace, Dr. A. W. Cooke, Mr. H. E. Coleman, Mr. and Mrs. J. McD. Gardiner, Mr. J. R. Geary, Mr. E. W. Frazar, Rev. C. P. Garman, Mr. J. H. Vogel and Dr. S. H. Wainright

The President, Mr. J. McD. Gardiner, in opening the meeting, spoke as follows:

"As we meet to-day, on the anniversary of the birthday of our Martyr-President Lincoln and review the progress of the cause of Universal Peace which he had so much at heart, we may feel that his spirit is with us in rejoicing that the cause has, although by ways and because of events we must deplore, taken many steps forward and that we are nearer our goal to-day than we were a year ago. It is becoming plainer and plainer, as the months roll by, that Humanity is more and more rising against the barbarous idea that mere Might can ever establish the Right, and is determined to establish on the firm foundation of Reason and Justice the opposite doctrine that Right is Might, and must prevail. It is with profound regret that we are compelled to recognize the fact that, in the present state of human civilization whether in international or in personal relations, the dominion of Natural Law is not universally recognized, and at times force of some kind is necessary to compel obedience to it on the part of the unruly or self-willed, with their mistaken notions of Liberty and Freedom, ignore or defy the law and their sacred oaths as well as their consciences and the precepts of Humanity and demand that others yield to them exclusively the rights that belong to all.

"On the other hand it is with peculiar pleasure that we, as Americans, can look back over the past two years and discern clearly the patience with which our noble President has dealt with most trying situations confronting him, greater and weightier than any of his predecessors since Lincoln's day have faced, and that it was only an act which defies all humanity that has driven him at last to break our neutrality and to take the final step of severing diplomatic relations with the offender. This may or may not mean that we must now resort to an appeal to arms in the defense not alone of our property or our persons, but of what is above these—our American ideals.

"We are under the most solemn obligations, knowing that these ideals are right, and are to a degree, at least, incorporated in what we call International Law, to lend our aid, not alone our moral support, but our mental and material powers as well, to those who are struggling to maintain the supremacy of this Law in International relations.

"Hence, though members of a Peace Society, we as individuals can do nothing less than give our whole-souled support to any measures our Government may feel compelled, under the circumstances, to take.

"We are ready to sacrifice our properties and persons rather than our ideals, but we may be permitted to have our hopes still that such sacrifices may not be necessary, and that Reason and Conscience may yet provide a way by which the crisis may be passed without resorting to the usual barbarities of war.

"Having said so much, not in approval of war as a means of settling international disputes, which we utterly disavow, but in extenuation of what we recognize as, under the circumstances, the only course left open to our Government, it may be well for us to restate here the objects and purposes of this Society, inasmuch as these have been and are certainly and seriously misunderstood by more than one or two of our fellow-Americans in Japan.

"In the first place and primarily, the objects are, as clearly stated in Art. 11 of our Constitution, the promotion of International Peace and Good-will; and its purposes are in general to further this cause in any rational and legitimate way by co-operating as far as possible with similar organizations here or elsewhere in the circulation of literature bearing on the question, in utilizing the Press and holding meetings for the purpose of giving facts and creating sentiments supporting the movement for Worldwide Peace, and more specifically, as a natural corollary of the above, to maintain an outlook on the trend of Public Opinion here and in our own country, to prevent, as far as lies in our power, the spread of false rumours or interpretations that lead to serious misunderstandings between our homeland and the country of our residence, and again and further in addition to this work of a negative character, to undertake any work of positive kind, educational or otherwise, that will lead to a more intelligent conception and understanding of each of our peoples and their ideas and purposes on the part of the other.

"Such a programme, calling simply for the furtherance of the cause of Righteousness, Justice and Truth among the peoples of the entire Earth, should appeal to every American who truly appreciates the ideals upon which our Country was and is established, and every true lover of these ideals should not stand aside but should join our ranks. No member is required to take an oath of allegiance even to the principles upon which the Society is founded, nor is he required to state that he is or is not an anti-militarist, or pacifist; a member may be either one or the other without affecting his status or membership. The sole requirement is his tacit approval of the cause of Peace, and while he may differ from other members as to methods of bringing this to pass, he can be at one with them in their leading purpose, and his constructive criticism of such methods may be just the one thing needed to make the Society's actions effective, and so he would be more than heartily welcomed by those to whom the Society entrusts the conduct of its affairs. Let my last appeal then from this chair, which I now resign to a worthier successor, be to my fellow Americans who are not yet members to rally to its support in the enlarged work that now opens out before it, in which I wish it abundant and increasing success.

"To the officers and members of the Executive Committee I beg to express my sincerest thanks for the loyal support they have given me and particularly to our most efficient Secretary to whom all credit is due for whatever the Society has done."

The following resolution, introduced by Dr. A. Oltmans and seconded by Bishop Harris, was unanimously adopted.

The American Committee of Fifteen, appointed by the American Peace Committee in Japan to co-operate with a similar Committee of Japanese for the purpose of assisting, as far as possible, in maintaining and strengthening mutually just and beneficial relations between Japan and the United States of America, being assembled in regular meeting, adopt the following resolution.

1. That we hereby express our great pleasure and satisfaction with the work of the Rev. Sidney L. Gulick, D.D., as Secretary of the Commission of Peace and Arbitration under the auspices of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

2. That we pledge our warmest sympathy and co-operation, to the full extent of our ability, to Dr. Gulick in his great task, and express the strong hope that the objects for which he so indefatigably labours will be realized in the not distant future.

3. That a copy of these resolutions, signed by the Chairman and Secretary of this Committee, be forwarded to Dr. Gulick with the Committee's fraternal greetings.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be handed to the Japanese section of the Joint Committee on Japan-American Relations.

The following resolution introduced by Dr. S. H. Wainright and seconded by Dr. G. F. Draper was unanimously adopted.

As a member of the Promoting Committee which organized the American Peace Society of Japan and as one of the most valuable working members of the Society for the past six years, and also as a member of the Board of Directors of the Yokohama Branch of the Japan Peace Society, as well as a generous and efficient worker in connection with other movements of an international character, Dr. John L. Dearing made a large contribution to the cause of a better understanding between the East and the West. At the time of his return to the United States last year, Dr. Dearing was an interested and efficient member of the Joint Committee on American and Japanese Relations, as representative of the American Peace Society of Japan and of the Japan Peace Society. Dr. Dearing deeply regretted that he was unable to attend the Lake Mohonk Arbitration Conference last May, to which he had an invitation. In September he took an active part in the New York Conference of representative American Christian Workers resident in the United States and in China and Japan, called for discussion and action respecting the relation of the United States to Japan and China. His call from our midst presents a strong appeal for a new dedication to the cause of peace.

The Secretary's report, presented by Mr. Gilbert Bowles, covered a summary of the year's work and the Treasurer's Report, audited by Dr. Clay MacCauley, was presented by Mr. E. W. Frazar, were next dealt with.

Accepting the report of the Nominating Committee, consisting of Mr. E. W. Frazar, Mr. J. R. Geary, and Mr. D. H. Blake (unable to be present at the meeting), the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Dr. Clay MacCauley, Tokyo. Vice-Presidents, D. H. Blake, Esq., Yokohama, J. McD. Gardiner, Esq., Tokyo, Dr. S. L. Gulick, Kyoto, Bishop M. C. Harris, Tokyo, O. H. Hereford, Esq., Kobe, Rev. W. de L. Kingsbury, Nagoya, Dr. D. B. Schneder, Sendai, Dr. S. H. Wainright, Tokyo and Rev. W. R. Weakley, Osaka. Treasurer, E. W. Frazar, Esq., Tokyo. Secretary, Mr. Gilbert Bowles, Tokyo.

Dr. MacCauley was called to the chair and Mr. Gardiner gave a report as Chairman of the American section of the Joint Committee on the Investigation of Americo-Japanese Relations. The whole Committee has had but four meetings since its organization, but sub-committees have been busy. A meeting was held last Friday at which Baron Sakatani gave a report of observations in Europe and the Publicity Bureau was discussed among other matters. The Committee was asked to continue its work.

Prof. Clement proposed several changes to be made on the Constitution including one which would make the Vice-Presidents in Tokyo and Yokohama regular members of the Executive Committee. These were all passed, but one in regard to lowering the membership fee was referred to the incoming Executive Committee with power to act.

After a short introduction in which he cordially thanked the American Peace Society of Japan for its co-operation with the Japan Peace Society, Baron Sakatani, Executive Vice-President of the latter organization, gave a message of hope for the future.

Baron Sakatani told how he was followed and "attacked" by aeroplanes, bombs, zeppelins and submarines in his recent trip through Europe. He was impressed with the dreadful and atrocious reality of the war and with the fact that this very awfulness is making the people long for a peace that will last. From the humanitarian as well as the economic point of view, war must cease. It is up to all the members of the American Peace Society and others to help in making better relations between nations and a permanent peace.

Mr. Geary moved a warm vote of thanks be given to Baron Sakatani for his address, which was heartily passed.

Dr. Scudder gave an inspiring address on the possibilities of peace coming out of the present conflict and on the better relations between Japan and America. He said the real problem always boils down to the single question of naturalization of Oriental who go to America to live. The Labour problem does not trouble as long as the United States is not insulting. But the recent Oregon and Idaho legislation shows that the question is only dormant and will continue to come up. Some well worked out scheme like Dr. Gulick's for proportionate immigration might settle the question, but Congressional action is slow. Gains and reforms come but at a time. The possibility of the United States entering the present war and thus becoming an Ally of Japan might help in passing a measure that would satisfactorily settle the question.

But, Hawaii is the one thing that can prove to the United States that Japanese can become good American citizens. We in the Orient should do all we can to show the people at home that Asiatics do have the qualities that would make them loyal Americans.

Dr. Clay MacCauley, the new President, was called upon by Mr. Gardiner, and thanking the Society for conferring the honour on him he gave an impromtu speech, along the lines of Dr. Scudder's address, emphasizing the fact that not racial but economic difference was the radical trouble and that those who enter our land to take up permanent residence should have the right of naturalization.

The meeting then adjourned.

LACK OF MEDICINE MATERIALS

Since the outbreak of the war the shortage of materials for medicine has been keenly felt in this country. This regrettable tendency, however, has been much remedied by the supply of medicinal herbs, the cultivation of which has been greatly encouraged by the Home Department. An exhibition of medicinal herbs and the finished products is going to be held at the Sankaido building at Tameike, Akasaka-ku, Tokyo, shortly under the auspices of the Dai Nippon Medicinal Herbs Cultivation Encouragement Association at Sugamocho, Tokyo and others interested.

It is planned that the public may easily understand what kinds of medicinal herbs and other natural products are exported from Japan, together with their sale prices, their markets, and the value of their export, by visiting the exhibition. Those interested are invited to display any number of articles included in this line of industry.

DR. GORDON MUNRO WILL GIVE THREE LECTURES

The Council of the Asiatic Society of Japan has arranged for a notable series of three lectures to be given during February and March by Dr. N. Gordon Munro, of Yokohama, on the general topic: "Japanese Origins." In the preparation of the material for these lectures Dr. Munro has travelled extensively in the Hokkaido and in the Loochoo Islands, and has prepared some 200 lantern slides. Two of them will be given in Tokyo and one in Yokohama.

The lectures have been arranged as follows:

(1) "European and Ainu, their similarity in Prehistoric Culture and Racial Features," at the Library of Keio University, Tokyo, 4 p.m., February 21.

(2) "The Yamato Stone Age, a study in the South," at the Gaiety Theatre, Yokohama, 4 p.m., March 7.

(3) "The Yamato Dolmen Age," at the Library of Keio University, Tokyo, 4 p.m., March 21.

Dr. Munro is well known as a lecturer and research scholar in Japanese Archaeology, and the value of these lectures are sure to be appreciated. The general public is cordially invited by the Society.

The first lecture, Wednesday, February 21, will deal with the remarkable resemblance between the implements and weapons of prehistoric man in Europe and in Japan. Some of these features have been touched upon in previous discourses, but much new material will be exhibited. The art of the ancient and modern Ainu will be compared with that of prehistoric Europe, and various customs such as cave-dwelling will be treated. Lastly, the racial affinities of the Ainu to the prehistoric European will be considered and some conclusions will be presented, particularly with regard to their origin and the antiquity of their habitat in Japan. The lecture will be amply illustrated by lantern slides.

THE KIGENSETSU CELEBRATED

In memory of the 2577th anniversary of the accession to the throne of Emperor Jimmu, founder of the Japanese Empire, a solemn religious service was performed at the Ancestral Hall in the Chiyoda Palace at 9.30 last Sunday morning where Princes and Princesses of the Blood, Count Terauchi, Premier and other State Ministers, Fleet-Admiral Togo, Prince Tokugawa, President of the Upper House and many other notables and dignitaries numbering some 1,000 were present. H.I.M. the Emperor garbed in ancient court costume appeared at 10 a.m. and paid tribute to the spirits of Emperor Jimmu. After the ceremony the Emperor held an Imperial banquet in celebration of the "Kigensetsu" at the Homeiden Hall, inviting many high officials and representatives of foreign countries. The Emperor proceeded to the banquet hall at noon to the strains of the national anthem and read a rescript in appreciation of the congratulations and respect paid to his ancestor. Count Terauchi, Premier, replied to the throne in the name of the nation, while Sir Conyngham Greene, British Ambassador, spoke on behalf of the Diplomatic corps. The banquet came to a close at 1 p.m.

The occasion was celebrated with appropriate ceremonies through the length and breadth of the country on Sunday.

MANCHU PRINCES ARE HERE FOR EDUCATION

Princes Hsien-kuei, Hsien-pang and Hsien-yuan, three sons of Prince Hsiu of the former Manchu court in China, Mr. Han Shao-yo, and Mr. Han Shoa-hsin, two sons of General Buptchaff, commander of an independent troop in Mongolia, and Mr. Han Ching-hung, nephew of General Buptchaff, arrived at Tokyo Monday morning to receive education in Japan.

The visitors are all students of the High School at Port Arthur, and speak Japanese fluently. Prince Hsien-kuei, twenty two years old, is the oldest of the party, and his two brothers are nineteen and seventeen years old, the sons of General Buptchaff being twenty and fourteen years old, and his nephew eighteen. They are to receive their military education under the guidance of General Baron Fukushima, who was formerly military governor of Kwantung.

Upon their arrival at Tokyo, Prince Hsien-kuei, acted as the spokesman of the party and told the press representatives that he had been studying the Japanese language for about five years. Prince Hsien-kuei, commanded a troop under General Buptchaff in Mongolia last year. Relating his experience in Mongolia, he said that knowing that his father would not permit him to go to Mongolia, he secretly escaped to join the army of General Buptchaff who welcomed him most cordially and made him a commander of six thousand men. The Prince fought against the Chinese army, but on account of the inferior arms the Mongolian soldiers have, they did not succeed, although they fought most valiantly against the Chinese forces. Finally the forces of General Buptchaff were defeated, and the General planned for another battle waiting for an opportune moment, which however did not come. The Prince then returned to Port Arthur. He stated that General Buptchaff is still alive and planning for another opportunity, although there had been several rumours that the General had died.

Prince Hsien-Kuei said that he and his friends came to Japan to be educated as Japanese "Samurai" and receive the necessary trainings under the guidance of General Fukushima.

ARMY FLIGHTS PLANNED

Flights by army officers have been arranged for to-day and to-morrow from Tokorozawa, past Hachioji in the suburbs of Tokyo, over Obosatsutoge (a mountain 2,000 metres above the sea-level) and Mt. Enzan to the city of Kofu, in Yamanashi prefecture. Thence to Lake Suwa in Nagano prefecture. Two Morris-Farman aeroplanes will be used. The chosen pilots are Lieuts. Makabe and Takikawa. They will start from Tokorozawa at 8.30 this morning for Kofu, where they will make a stop at the parade-ground of the Kofu regiment. After an hour's rest the two flight officers plan to set out for Suwa in Nagano prefecture. On the next day they are expected to fly above the frozen surface of Lake Suwa.

On the return journey, it has been arranged that Lieuts. Nagasawa and Nakada will relieve their comrades and attempt a non-stop flight to Tokorozawa.

The As-Af-Eur-Am-Alian Society held its 47th meeting on Saturday night at the Y.M.C.A. Building, Kanda. The meeting was held in celebration of the Kigensetsu and the programme chiefly consisted of national and patriotic songs. Over one hundred members and their friends gathered in the small room of the Y.M.C.A.

Mr. B. D. Bhagat, President of the Society, made an address and explained the nature of the society, as he said, the society had been misrepresented in some of the Japanese newspapers. The Society was organized in 1910 with the aim of bringing the people of different races and nationalities together and creating good fellowship by becoming acquainted with one another.

Prof. E. T. Iglehart, delivered an address upon the development of national songs, and spoke of the origin of the American, British, French, and Australian national songs.

The members of the society sang various national songs, Mr. J. C. Brand sang several catching Scotch songs, Mr. R. A. Davy "Song of Australia" and Mr. Luz sang a Filipino song. Indian and Korean songs were also sung. Prof. R. Sawada entertained the meeting with two piano solos, and Prof. T. Nihei also rendered Gounod's "Serenade."

Statistics for the last year show that the amount of mineral products last year was 280,000,000 yen in value, an increase of 60,000,000 yen over the previous year and 100,000,000 yen over 1914. As the result of investigation by the authorities of the Yokohama District Court the origin of the recent fire which started on the premises of the Merchandise Warehouses, Yokohama, and caused an extensive damage, has been ascertained as due to the spontaneous combustion of the chemicals stored in a part of the southern section of the warehouses. An inspection of the site of the explosion revealed the fact that among the cargo stored in the warehouse were quantities of sulphur and saltpetre of soda, which by spontaneous chemical action had exploded causing the disastrous fire. Hajime Miura, an employe of the Warehousing Company who is in charge of the warehouses, has been prosecuted by the public procurator of the district court, for negligence of his duty.

GERMANY'S CONFESSION

THAT Germany overshot the mark when at the end of last month she sent a thrill of intense indignation throughout the whole civilized world by proclaiming her new submarinism, which in its utter fiendishness surpasses even her erstwhile policy of frightfulness, has become unmistakably clear by her latest proposal to the United States. Speaking in the Reichstag on that declaration, the Imperial Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg hoped to render the difficulties of the Entente, owing to the world's bad corn harvest unbearable and make the coal question for Italy and France more critical; to cut off Great Britain's supplies of ore for munitions and of timber for coal mines. He gave it as a prevailing opinion that the marinism had greatly decreased. Further he quoted the opinion of Field-Marshal von Hindenburg that the military situation permitted Germany to accept all consequences. Despite this bold, trenchent announcement defying the whole neutral world, with promises of increasing distresses to the Entente Powers, Germany is now reported to have approached the United States on Sunday to negotiate on the submarine question. It is evident that the mark aimed at by Germany by her ferocious declaration was not so much to spread dismay among her enemies as to frighten neutrals into attempting frenzied peace intervention. But the plan did not work as Germany had calculated. It unexpectedly—unexpectedly at least to Germany—called forth President Wilson's protest, this time, in the form of the severance of diplomatic relations. It has brought on Germany hails of strong protests from other neutrals, of the ultimate outcome of which, if unheeded, there can be no mistaking. Germany now confesses her miscalculation by proposing negotiations with America—confessing that Hindenburg's statement was a mere brag. If the "military situation permitted Germany to accept all consequences," why should she now come to America with a bowed head? The Allies' reply, she had said, angered her to be more firmly determined than ever to prosecute the war to the bitterest end and she declared she had in the ruthless submarinism a sure weapon to win the conflict with. She now owns she is not equal "to accept all consequences."

Mr. Lansing, United States Secretary of State, it is said, has replied that the Washington Government will gladly discuss the matter provided Germany withdraws her proclamation of January 31 regarding unrestricted submarine warfare. He has intimated, at the same time that the sinking by submarine of neutral ships cannot be discussed until Germany renews her assurance of May 4 last year, given after the torpedoing of the Sussex. There is, of course, something tantalising in this reply of Secretary Lansing. But calmly and impartially considered from the American point of view, it is perhaps all that could be expected from him, as long as the desire of the Republic under President Wilson to avoid coming to blows remains unchanged. The only question is whether Washington would again be willing to be humbugged and bamboozled by Germany. Remember Germany is said to have made virtual prisoners of Americans in the Kaiser's land. While trying with one hand to play with American credulity and pacific disposition, with the other Germany metes out toward the Republic measures that actual outbreak of hostilities alone would justify. Bowing the head she raises hands in threat and intimidation. Is the world again to witness another tussle between American patience and Kaizerish bull dozing? One thing is plain, however, as we have said, that Germany has confessed to her inability "to accept all consequences." In that fact alone—the drawing forth from Germany of that confession—the United States has rendered a great service to the Allies, who may redouble their energy, with a very encouraging assurance to bring the war to an end on their own terms.

CHINA'S LEADERS MAKE PLANS RE GERMANY

Dispatches from Peking report that the Chinese Government held a meeting of the Cabinet Council on Feb. 13 and discussed pending diplomatic questions. As the result of the conferences, it was decided that in case Germany does not send a satisfactory reply to China's Note of protestation against the German declaration of unrestricted submarine warfare within five or six days China will break off relations. It is learned that China will, however, adopt as generous measures as possible regarding the control over the residents in China.

Premier Tuan Chi-jui is quoted as having told one of his intimate acquaintances, says a Peking dispatch, that in case Germany fails to send a satisfactory reply to China's protest China will side with the Allies indifferent to the attitude of the United States, but if, on the contrary, Germany cancels her declaration China will observe strict neutrality as in such eventuality she would see no reason for cutting diplomatic relations with Germany.

A Peking dispatch dated the 12th says that the Russian authorities in Peking have announced that the diplomatic principle to be followed by the Allies towards China hereafter will be settled mainly by the conferences of the allied representatives in Tokyo, while the ways and means of their execution will be carried out by the allied Diplomatic Corps in Peking. Consequently Japan's attitude will be of very important significance in connection with the development of the situation relative to China's future movement.

Another conference of the allied Ministers in Peking was held on the 10th at the French Legation, when the representatives exchanged views on questions which will naturally crop up consequent upon the arrival of the German reply to China's Note as well as her reply to the American proposal. Mr. Yoshizawa, the Japanese Chargé d'Affaires, called on the Chinese Foreign Minister at the Waichaopu in connection with the matters settled at the conference and returning to the conference reported the result of his interview.

Further dispatches from Peking state that according to a report received by the Minister of a certain country from his Ambassador in Tokyo Viscount Motono, the Japanese Foreign Minister, recently held a conference with the Ambassadors of Great Britain, Russia and France in Tokyo concerning the decision of Japan's policy towards China in connection with the present situation. Viscount Motono submitted to the Ambassadors the principle of Japan's new policy towards China, to which the Ambassadors expressed their approval at once transmitting the news to their home Governments. As the allied Governments have no objection to Japan's decision it is expected that an agreement will be reached between the Allies and Japan and some new movement will be taken up by the Allies shortly.

A Peking dispatch of the 13th reports that Mr. Yoshizawa, the Japanese Chargé d'Affaires, interviewed Premier Tuan Chi-jui that day and advised the Chinese Premier to take similar steps to the United States towards Germany and further stated that Japan regretted that the Chinese Government had failed to consult with Japan about the matter before deciding its attitude. A later report has it that the Japanese Chargé d'Affaires, in his interview with Premier Tuan, transmitted the approval of the Japanese Government of China's protest to the German Note and, at the same time, advised the Chinese Government to take further stronger and more drastic steps towards Germany.

CO-OPERATION WITH CHINA

The "Chugai Shogyo" sincerely hopes that the Japanese public will more earnestly and honestly consider the problem of commercial co-operation with the Chinese. The friendly relations with China and economic co-operation have been subjects of discussions in Japan, and while such things should be encouraged and wished for, the paper regrets that the public are only discussing the problems, and they have not actually considered the matter with the intention of actually carrying out co-operation.

In commercial co-operation with China, the paper believes that there is one group of Japanese entertaining an entirely erroneous opinion of China and her development. These people consider China as primitive as she was several hundred years ago, and they believe that the only way to handle the Chinese is by an oppressive and high-handed manner, and the economic plan of these Japanese is only to gain a temporary income, and they do not consider the true development of the Chinese resources. It is on account of these Japanese that the Chinese regards the Japanese as enemies and call a Japanese "Eastern Devil."

Such an attitude towards China and the Chinese should be at once dropped, if the Japanese really desire to develop China and co-operate with the Chinese in the efforts to develop the unlimited natural resources of the country for the benefit of both the Japanese and the Chinese.

Mere preaching of friendly relations will not bring any effect, says the paper, until the Japanese public is actually interested in the development of China, and the paper hopes that the Japanese capitalists and business men will consider the interest of the Chinese as well as their own when they undertake anything in China.

CHINA TENTATIVELY APPROACHES ALLIES

Dispatches from China report that the Chinese Government expressed to the Allies, including Japan, its wishes for the revision of the Chinese customs tariff, and grace for the payment of the balance of the Boxer indemnity, as the conditions of her participation in the war on the side of the Allies in accordance with the Allies' invitation. Although the question has not yet been formally submitted to the allied Governments in the form of diplomatic negotiations, these wishes of the Chinese Government have been repeatedly informally expressed to the allied representatives in Peking in connection with the settlement of China's attitude towards Germany subsequent to the American proposal to China. The allied representatives in Peking are considering the subject informally proposed by China, but the question has made no progress since then and so far the matter has not yet been taken up as a diplomatic question by either side. The proposal has been urged chiefly by Mr. Hsiung Hsi-ling, Mr. Liang Chi-chao, Mr. Liu Cheng-hsiang and others. Hsiung and Liu are making efforts to prevail upon Japan and Russia respectively to entertain China's wishes in view of the fact that the two countries have greater interests in the matter than any other of the Allies.

The reason why China wants the revision of her customs tariff is that should China sever her relations with Germany she has to postpone the disbandment of her troops from the necessity of providing against the intrigues of the German agents in China and consequently the Government will incur an enormous expenditure for the maintenance of the troops and other incidental outlays such as the expenses required for keeping surveillance over the movement of German ships in the Chinese ports and for the maintenance of order in China. In order to provide for these requirements China must raise the current import tariff to a 5 per cent. standard as a means to augment her financial capacity from revenue and at the same time would have the payment of the outstanding indemnity postponed for a certain definite period, thus to reduce her financial burden in view of the pressing need. Such is said to be the reason for the present proposal. At the same time, it is understood, China has pressed for the speedy conclusion of the pending loan negotiations.

Nothing is so far known as to the intention of the Allies with regard to the matter. In 1914, when the same question was taken up, the British Government agreed to the proposal in principle, while France gave her consent conditionally. Japan and Russia, however, strongly opposed the proposal and the question was dropped. The Japanese Government voiced strong opposition on account of the unanimous objection raised by the cotton spinning concerns. It is presumed that Great Britain and France will consent to China's wish other things being equal, while Russia also seems to be inclined to give her consent. Japan, of course, will not block the scheme as on the previous occasion, it is said, but may be induced to entertain China's wish provides she finds means to compensate her for the loss and disadvantages to be caused by the revision of the Chinese custom tariff, which is calculated to involve an enormous loss of several millions a year to the Japanese traders interested in the export trade with China. Not only that, but it will also accelerate the growth of the spinning industry in the interior of China and consequently deal a severe blow to the interests of the Japanese spinning industry. In these circumstances the Tokyo Government is expected to devise some plan whereby she can help the Allies while safe-guarding the interests of her nationals.

DR. HIRANUMA SPEAKS ON POLICE DUTIES

At the second meeting of the conference of the chiefs of the police departments of all prefectures throughout the country held at the Home Department on February 16 Dr. Hiranuma, the Public Procurator-General, gave an instruction relative to the principle, attitude and measures to be taken by the local police authorities in connection with the prosecution of criminals charged with violation of the laws and regulations in the coming general election of parliamentary members. Laying stress on the necessity of keeping strict control over the electioneering campaign, and taking severe measures for the prosecution of cases of infringement of the regulations and laws relative to the election, the Public-Procurator pointed out that such cases had been increasing at a remarkable rate at every election in the past. He said this state of things was a very regrettable tendency and wanted to be put an end to by resorting to stricter and more rigorous measures in punishing offenders without any discrimination on the part of the police authorities.

The recent increase of offences committed by those engaged in election campaigns is accounted for by the growth of political strife and the keen competition and rivalry among political parties, said the Procurator, and unless this undesirable evil tendency is nipped in the bud at the present moment it will become deep-rooted and impossible to correct, finally bringing about serious consequences in injuring the moral sense of the nation and leading to national moral degeneration.

To stop such undesirable tendency in time and check the gradual but steady increase of crimes, the Government at the coming election expects to strictly enforce the penal regulations dispensing with the lenient and generous attitude followed by the former administration. The Public Procurator-General declared that the competent authorities were required to strictly adhere to the spirit of the law and enforce the application of the penal regulations in cases of infringement of the law, to the fullest advantage, leaving no stone unturned in the prosecution of offenders.

For the furtherance of that purpose aimed at the purifying and cleansing of the political atmosphere and rooting out the source of evil injurious to the sound moral sense of the public, the Procurator-General stated, more strenuous efforts shall be made for stopping the bad practice of "selling" the votes by the franchise-holders. Hitherto in such cases the franchise-holders alone were subject to severe punishment, but in future the candidates or the elected shall be equally punished without discrimination between franchise-holders and the elected. Such, declared the Procurator-General, was the most effective measures for stopping bad practices so prevalent in the case of every election. The offering and distribution of bribes among those connected with the election campaign by way of rewards for labour and assistance for the good of those candidates who came out successful in the election, which constitutes the crime of bribery, shall be likewise strictly prosecuted and severely punished. Cases of presenting money to those electors or election canvassers who have been punished on the charge of violation of laws and regulations in connection with any election campaign also will be dealt with in an equally severe manner.

The Procurator-General further dwelt upon cases of the Government officials directly connected with the charge of controlling election affairs sometimes interfering in the election itself and thus acting in violation of the laws and regulations relating to their official duties, which he said also shall be punished with rigorous measures. He reminded the authorities concerned to keep in mind their grave responsibility for strictly maintaining an attitude of impartiality and upright candidness and always mind to preserve the sacredness and dignity of the election. Emphasising the importance of standing aloof from all party strifes and the influence of superior authorities, the Procurator-General energetically recommended that there should be no highest power or party influence in the eyes of the judicial and police authorities in dealing with the campaign and election; that the authorities concerned shall maintain a most candid and most upright attitude and take measures in the execution of their duties; that they shall never be influenced by the power of whatever influential official personages nor of whatever great political party in taking severe or lenient measure in the discharge of their duties according to the difference of the social stations in life of the offenders, nor shall they be influenced by the power of their superiors, but shall stick to and act according to the dictation of their duties in whatever case and under whatever circumstances, ever keeping in mind to maintain and elevate the dignity of the judicial and police administration.

DISASTROUS FIRE WEDNESDAY

On Wednesday morning about 11 o'clock a fire broke out at Kawagoye-mura, Miye prefecture. Owing to the high wind prevailing at the time the flames soon spread and destroyed about sixty houses in the village. The fire crossed over a small stream and developed into the village on the opposite side of the river, where about fifty houses were also reduced to ashes. Some five hundred persons were made homeless and are housed at a Buddhist temple in the neighbouring village.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Paris, Feb. 14.—Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig declared in an interview to-day that the west front was the decisive front of the war. The war will be decided on the battlefield, he said, and peace may be declared in 1917.

"But if Germany cannot be entirely beaten this year," he continued, "the Allies will not hesitate to carry on the war. There can be no lasting peace without a complete victory. The British troops are indomitably resolved to fight to the end."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 16.—The French afternoon communiqué reads: "The enemy bombarded our lines on the Butte-de-Mesnil and Maison-de-Champagne fronts most intensely. By the aid of exploding several mines, they succeeded in penetrating the salient west of the latter place and north of the road to Butte-de-Mesnil. Our barrage and flanking fire, from the district north of Main-de-Massiges, caused the enemy heavy losses. A violent artillery struggle is proceeding in this region. There is great patrol activity along the Woevre."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 17.—The German official report states that the Crown Prince has attacked on the Champagne front south of Ripont. The Berlin communique states that the attack was entirely successful, and that the Germans stormed four lines of trenches on a front of 2,600 metres, advancing to a depth of 500 metres. The Germans captured 858 prisoners.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 17.—The scene of the fighting in Champagne, 30 miles east of Rheims, is the biggest infantry action on ths front by Germany since 1916 It is difficult to see what strategical gain the Germans are now expecting to make.

May-be it is a preliminary move for the German campaign of 1917. It is more probable, however, that it is a defensive action designed to protect important communications. Especially may it be intended to guard the Challerange to Bezancourt railway, the loss of which at any point would paralyse the whole German position.

New York, Feb. 17.—The German official communique to-day claims that violent Allied attacks north of the River Ancre have been repulsed.

The Berlin report states that the Germans, in Rumania have captured the Russian positions near Mesticanesci, with 1,200 prisoners.—"Nichinichi."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 18.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his evening communiqué on Saturday, reports: "We carried out successful operations on both sides of the River Ancre, this morning, and made considerable progress.

"We attacked southward of the river and captured hostile positions on a front of 1½ miles opposite the villages of Miraumont and Petit Miraumont. We penetrated over 1,000 yards and advanced our line to within a few hundred yards of Petit Miraumont. Northward of the river, we captured an important position on the upper slopes of the spur northwards of Baillescourt Farm on a thousand-yard front and successfully repulsed all hostile counter-attacks. The enemy's losses were heavy; we took 268 prisoners."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 18.—In his Sunday evening communiqué, Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig says: "We captured on the Ancre on Saturday 774 prisoners. This morning, three waves of German infantry attacked our new positions at Baillescourt Farm. They came under our concentrated artillery fire and never reached our lines, being driven back with heavy losses."

"We entered the enemy positions south-west and north-west of Arras, south of Fanquissart and north of Ypres in a night attack. We inflicted many casualties and took 19 prisoners. We repulsed raiders south of Ypres."

ON THE RUSSIAN FRENTS

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Feb. 13.—Western front. North-east of Smorgony the Russian scouts, having pierced the enemy's wire entanglements, attacked his vanpost and seized one machine-gun. The enemy, about one battalion strong, 10 kilometres north of Kiselin attacked a sector which was occupied by two Russian companies. On the right flank the attack was repulsed, but on the left the enemy succeeded in rushing into the Russian trenches, but was afterwards also repulsed and the position was re-established. South of Galitch, the enemy, four companies strong, crossed the Dniester and attacked the Russian vanposts. In spite of the strong fire of these vanposts and the Russian artillery the enemy succeeded in pressing upon the Russian vanposts, but was repulsed by a counter-attack, the vanposts again occupying their former positions. Snowstorms are raging in the Carpathians at different places.

Nothing of importance is reported from the Rumanian front.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Feb. 15.—Western front. After a most intensive artillery fire of chemical shells, the Germans, about two battalions strong, attacked the Russian troops south of Drisviaty and rushed into the Russian trenches, but were dislodged by a counterattack and the front was re-established. South of the Vishnevsky Lake, the Germans released poisonous gas. Reports about losses have not been yet received. In the evening of January 12, the Germans attacked the Russian front north of Kiselin, but were repulsed. North-west of Alexinc the Russians after a stubborn fight seized the border of a tunnel, which was formed on the place, where a mining gallery had been blown up by the Russians.

Rumanian front. The Germans attacked after a strong artillery preparation the Russian positions on both sides of the roadway Jacobeni-Kimpolung, seizing, after repeated attacks, a height 9 kilometres east of Jacobeni. The attacks on the rest of the front were all repulsed,and a counterattack was assumed by the Russian troops in the night before January 13. After a fierce fight, lasting all the night, the Germans were dislodged from the height, which they had seized and the position was recovered, 7 officers and 156 soldiers being taken prisoner. On January 13, the enemy again assumed with outnumbering forces the offensive on both sides of the Jacobeni-Kimpolung roadway. After a fight, which lasted for the whole day, the enemy seized two heights, 4 kilometres east of Jacobeni. The Russians retreated for one kilometre and seized one height 5 kilometres east of Jacobeni, fortifying themselves. On the rest of the Rumanian front, firing and reconnaissances continue.

Later. Western front. 25 kilometers south-east of Zolochoff the enemy assumed, after 2 hours' artillery preparation, the offensive against the Russian troops. A fierce battle is raging in this region. The snowstorm in the Carpathians continues.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Feb. 16.—Western front. The enemy's attack south-east of Zolochoff, mentioned in the previous report, has been repulsed by the Russians. Snowstorms continue in the Carpathians.

Firing is in progress on the Rumanian front.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Feb. 19.—Western front. After a strong artillery preparation the Germans, about two companies strong, clad in white garments, attacked the Russian position south-west of Svransk. A part of the Germans succeeded in rushing into the advanced Russian trenches, but were soon dislodged.

Rumanian front. The Russian troops by a sudden attack without firing a single shot seized a strongly fortified strategical point 13 kilometres south-west of Okna. The counterattacks have been repulsed, prisoners being taken.

Later. Western front. In the night before February 18 the enemy released 4 gasclouds on the position between Semenka and Dubatovka south of the Vishnevsky Lake.

Firing and reconnoissances continue on the Rumanian and on the Caucasus front.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Feb. 20.—An enemy force, about a battalion strong, attacked the Russian position north-west of Podgaishi. The concentrated fire of the Russian forces was turned against the invaders, who were forced to retreat to their trenches.

On the Rumanian and Caucasus fronts, heavy firing and reconnaisance work is reported.

In the Black Sea, a large steamer and eight schooners have been sunk by a Russian submarine.

In the Smorgny region, Russian and German aeroplanes have been in conflict.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 17.—The British official communiqué from Mesopotamia reads: "Our troops continued the offensive on Thursday at the Dahra bend on the right bank of the Tigris. We secured the whole Dahra bend, and captured 89 officers and 1906 men.

"Our booty includes 5 machine-guns, 2,500 rifles and large quantities of ammunition and stores. On Friday, the British advanced 1,200 yards southward of Shumran loop. We are now holding the southwest corner of this bend.

"Two Turkish communiqués have been issued in which they admit retirement on the Tigris River, following the British attacks.

New York, Feb. 20.—According to the announcement made by the American War Department, the British forces in Mesopotamia have gained an important success and captured 2,000 prisoners.—"Nichi-nichi."

BUCHAN'S WEEKLY SUMMARY

[OFFICIAL TO BRITISH EMBASSY THROUGH KOKUSAI]

London, Feb. 17.—The British success on the western front continues almost without interruption. Though the operations are on a small scale, the cumulative effect is considerable.

The raids are of two kinds, trench raids designed to damage the enemy and weaken the morale, and the occupation of sections of his trenches for tactical purposes. The increasing success of both proves that the morale of the enemy is weakening daily. In fact the British have brought home to him that his trenches can be entered at almost any point and the attacks are so numerous and spread so variably down the line that he never knows where the next blow may fall. The strain inflicted by this is difficult to bear. The chief result of the occupation of the enemy trenches has been the notable tactical improvement of the positions held by the British in the Ancre valley and north of this, and in the neighbourhood of Sailly-Saillisel.

The British losses throughout have been proportionately light. The total casualties are usually less than the number of prisoners taken. In the first six weeks of 1917, the total of prisoners captured was approximately two-thousand while the progress in the Somme area represents an aggregate advance on a front of nine-thousand yards to a depth of fifteen hundred to two-thousand yards.

Strong Action Taken By Neutrals Led By The United States In Protest

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, Feb. 13.—It is now confirmed that, on February 11, Germany offered to negotiate with the United States regarding submarine warfare provided "the commercial blockade against England was not interfered with."

Mr. Lansing, United States Secretary of State, has replied that the Washington Government will gladly discuss the matter provided Germany withdraws her proclamation of January 31 regarding unrestricted submarine warfare. At the same time, the sinking by submarine of neutral ships cannot be discussed until Germany renews her assurance of May 4 last year, given after the torpedoing of the Sussex.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, Feb. 14.—In reply to the German proposal for the opening of negotiations looking to the safety of American shipping, provided the commercial blockade against Great Britain is not interfered with, the United States Government has informed Mr. Ritter, the Swiss Minister through whom the overtures came, that the nation could not enter upon negotiations under present circumstances. If, however, Germany first restored the pledges she made at the time of the sinking of the Sussex, and withdrew her proclamation of unrestricted submarine warfare, the matter would be different. Until then, no negotiations could be entered upon.

An official dispatch from Washington reports that Mr. Ritter, the Swiss Minister in Washington, verbally informed the American Secretary of State on behalf of Germany that Germany wished to reopen negotiations with the American Government re the submarine problem provided America does not obstruct the German commercial blockade against Great Britain. The Swiss Minister repeated the same German intimation the following day sending a written Note to the State Department this time. The American Government, on the 13th, sent a reply to the Swiss Mininter, according to the official statement of the State Department, to the effect that should Germany withdraw her declaration of January 31 America would be glad to discuss and enter upon any negotiations with Germany on whatever questions, but until Germany revives her pledge of May 4, 1916, and acts in conformity with the spirit of that pledge of assurance America was not in a position to enter upon any negotiations whatever with Germany in connection with the submarine war are declared against neutral countries.

It is reported that on the eve of the departure from Berlin of Mr. Gerard, the American Ambassador to Germany, the German Government requested him for the renewal of the clauses pertaining to the protection of American and German subjects and vessels after the outbreak of war, as provided in the clauses of the American-Prussian treaties of 1799 and 1828. With regard to these the American Government some time ago applied to Germany for the cancellation of the treaty stipulations relative to the enforcement of the new American Seamen's Law. Mr. Gerard having refused to entertain the request of the German Government, the German government has applied direct to the American Government to discuss the matter through the Swiss Minister together with its new proposal re submarine warfare.

New York, Feb. 14.—Officials at Washington are inclined to regard the alleged offer of Germany to discuss means for preventing war between herself and the United States, which is reported to have been presented through the Swiss Minister on Saturday, only as an effort to cast upon the United States, the appearance of being the belligerent.

The attitude seems to be that the United States and Germany can have no diplomatic dealings until Germany gives up her programme of unrestricted submarine warfare. Any other advances meanwhile will serve only to becloud the issue of American rights.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Copenhagen, Feb. 14.—The joint Scandinavian protest against the German submarine policy points out that the submarine warfare is contrary to International Law, especially as it apparently applies even to ships traveling between neutral ports. The protest makes all reservations regarding loss of life and damage resulting from unrestricted U-boat warfare.

New York, Feb. 15.—Germany is making preparations to send submarines to the Panama Canal for the commencement of operations in that zone, says a dispatch from Berne.—"Asahi."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 15.—A message from Rome reports that the American steamer Lyman M. Law, 2,500 tons, carrying tools, was sunk by a submarine off Sardinia. The crew were landed.

A later message from Washington says that the Lyman M. Law was a schooner and not a steamer. The vessel was bound from Palermo with lumber. She was set on fire by a bomb from an Austrian submarine which was showing no flag.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, Feb. 15.—A Berlin official communiqué reads:—"There is an unfounded idea abroad that our campaign of submarinism will be weakened out of regard for America or for some other reason. Unrestricted war against all sea traffic in the zones, barred by Germany, is now in full swing and will not be restricted under any circumstances."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, Feb. 15.—An official communiqué from Berlin announces that the secret period of grace for neutral steamers and enemy passenger ships, on which neutrals might be travelling, expired on February 6 in the North Sea, February 10 in the Mediterranean and February 12 in the Atlantic and English Channel. Henceforth, the communiqué says, there will be no more individual warnings.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 18.—The "Manchester Guardian" points out that the casualties to merchant shipping for the third week since Germany's declaration of unrestricted piracy, show the losses to be below the December level.

Digitized by INTERNET ARCHIVE ON BEHALF OF AT URBANA-CHAMPAIGN

The journal goes on to say: "The danger can be met by constant alteration of routes and the creation of lines of safety by means of mines.

Besides, the danger can be overcome by the destruction of submarines. We must destroy three a week to keep pace with the German boast of the rate of building; but if rumour is trustworthy, we are doing better than that."

New York, Feb. 18.—It is reported from Washington that the American Government has sent an interpellation to the German Government demanding explanation why the departure of the members of the American Consulates and private American subjects from Germany is subject to delay.—"Asahi."

Washington, Feb. 18.—Dr. Paul Ritter, the Swiss Minister, on behalf of Germany presented to the State Department to-day a protocol supplementary to the agreement amplifying the U.S. Treaty with Prussia of 1799. This document now presented would place Germans in the United States and Americans in Germany on the same footing in time of war between the two countries as neutrals or nationals of either country.

They may remain ever as long as they please instead of only for 9 months after the outbreak of hostilities as provided in the old Treaty. The merchant ships of neither nation may be driven to sea unless under safe conduct, nor may the captains or crews of such ships be imprisoned.

Officials here are showing but little interest in the German proposal.

Peking, Feb. 19.—At the conference held at the French Legation on the 17th, the Entente Ministers took up, continuing the discussion of the previous day, the Chinese proposal that the Powers agree to a revision of the customs tariff and the postponement of the payment of the Boxer Indemnity, in order that China may find funds for army and navy preparations, which she considers necessary to undertake in the event of her diplomatic rupture with Germany. The Ministers agreed in the view that there was no reason why the Entente Powers should enter into these obligations merely in consequence of China's diplomatic break with Germany, but that they might reconsider the matter if China entered the war on the Allies' side. They have wired to their Governments for instructions.—"Asahi."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 20.—The American Ambassador at Vienna has requested of the Austrian Government a clear and final statement as to Austria's standpoint on the submarine warfare question. She is asked to state definitely whether the assurances given by her on the occasion of the Persia and Ancona incidents are changed or withdrawn.

The situation in China is still chaotic, the execution of the decision to take drastic steps towards Germany still being in abeyance. A Peking dispatch says that the German Minister in Berlin has sent a message about the presentation of the Chinese Note to Germany against its declaration of submarine warfare. The Minister's message reached the Peking Government on Monday night. It appears the Chinese Minister in Berlin handed the Note of the Chinese Government to the German Foreign Minister on the 15th. The German authorities stated in reply that the German Government would send a formal reply to China's Note, but meanwhile the German Government wished the maintenance of friendly relationship between Germany and China. The Chinese Government, now it has received the Minister's report, attaches a good deal of hope to the report and is expecting a reply of a peaceful nature from Germany. The German residents in China take, however, pessimistic views of the situation and generally observe that the German Government will never heed China's protest but will take steps to reject it in the formal reply, and accordingly diplomatic rupture between China and Germany is absolutely inevitable.

Keen attention is being paid towards the attitude of Mr. Liang Chi-chao, who has recently been holding interviews with the German Minister. Mr. Liang interviewed Vice-President Feng Kuo-chang a few days ago and discussed the question of the moment. He warmly expostulated with the Vice-President pointing out the inadvisability of taking hostile attitude against Germany, which would, he said, only result in bringing about disadvantages to China and lead to China's being placed under the influence of a certain country in future. In such circumstances it is thought difficult for China to take any further decisive step towards Germany especially in view of the weak constitution of the present ministry, which is lacking in men of strong will and determination.

According to another Peking message Mr. Chang Chi is a strong advocate of China's participation in the war on the side of the Allies, holding quite the contrary view to Mr. Liang Chi-chao. He opines that unless China joins the Allies through Japan and with her support, China will be eventually placed in an isolated position in future. On Monday afternoon, he interviewed President Li Yuan-hung and expressed his opinion about the pending question, minutely detailing the world's situation and urging the necessity of China's taking side with the Allies and relying upon Japan's support. It is believed that his warm expostulation has moved the President who approved his opinion.

A Peking dispatch to the "Asahi" reports that Dr. Morrison, Dr. Ariga and Dr. Willoughby have presented a joint memorial in reply to the query of President Li Yuan-hung about the situation. The three foreign advisers referring to the extremely difficult position of China maintaining strict neutrality and standing aloof from the war as a third party in view of the recent situation pointed out that if China continues to maintain the present attitude as a neutral state she will be finally placed in an isolated position and find herself in a miserable plight. Further expressing the necessity and advantages of China's participating in the war on the side of the Allies, the advisers pointed out the folly and uselessness of fearing about the result of China's severing relationship with Germany. In the concluding part of their representation, the advisers minutely dwelt on the reason of the belligerent powers for having waged war upon Germany and her ally and stated that if China would join the Allies, it would not only bring about many advantages to China directly and indirectly, but above all it would give China the right of speech in the coming peace conference. It is reported that the views of the foreign advisers have been submitted to the Cabinet Council.

New York, Feb. 18.—The identity of the German raider which as announced on January 17, sank many allied vessels in the South Atlantic, has now been established. The vessel was the Vineta according to eleven sailors from the sunken British vessel St. Theodore who arrived here to-day.

The say they witnessed, from the deck of the pirate ship, the sinking of two French and five British vessels. They were put on board the Hudson Maru, on January (2) after that vessel had been relieved of her chart and most of her food. During the slow voyage to Pernambuco those on board the Hudson Maru subsisted mainly on rice.

San Francisco, Feb. 19.—The British steamers Queen Anne and Queenswood have been sunk by a German submarine. Eleven of Queen Anne's crew are missing. "Asahi."

San Francisco, Feb. 19.—The crew of the French cargo boat Guame which entered the port of New York to-day say that they saw a wrecked German submarine outside the harbour of Bordeaux.—"Asahi."

Mail advices show that word was received in New York on January 23 from Bermuda by the crew of the steamship Bermudian that two big British submarines had arrived there from Halifax and were going south to join the other British and French warships in the search for the German raider or raiders. They were built in Canada, and are 200 feet long, carry two three-inch guns on the forward deck in addition to a supply of torpedoes, and have a cruising radius of 6,000 miles.

In addition to the submarines, five light cruisers of the Arethusa type, which carry four six-inch guns and a number of smaller quick firers, have called at Bermuda during the past week, and proceeded to sea after spending a few hours at the naval station. Their next base for fuel is St. Lucia. These cruisers have a speed of 30 to 35 knots and have very little armour. Two Italian cruisers with a speed of 25 knots, and four French war vessels with high speed also stopped at Bermuda for a few hours last Friday (Jan. 15), and then continued their voyage south. Some of the warships steered toward the West African coast to look out for the raider in case she should try to creep up along the shore.

The British armoured cruiser Leviathan, which has been on patrol duty in the waters around Bermuda for some months, took on coal and provisions at Hamilton on Friday, it was said, and left the harbour on Saturday morning on secret orders. She is heavily armoured and carries two nine-inch guns in addition to two eighteen-inch submerged torpedo tubes, and has a speed of 23 knots.

Buenos Aires, Jan. 22.—Unverified reports were received to-day in maritime circles at Montevideo, Uruguay, that the German cruiser Vineta, [said to be the commerce raider,] had been sighted at sea off Bahia Blanca, Argentina.

La Prena publishes a dispatch from Rio Janeiro saying that, according to a cablegram received at Pernambuco, the British cruiser Glasgow has sunk a German commerce raider 130 miles off Para. No details are given.

Rio Janeiro, Jan. 22.—The Minister of Marine said to-day that he had received no confirmation of the report that the British cruiser Glasgow had sunk a German commerce raider, and that he did not credit it.

The Minister said he had reason to believe that the two merchant vessels and two auxiliaries reported as having been sighted off the northern coast of Brazil were British vessels who are operating outside territorial waters. Earlier press reports were to the effect that these vessels, some of which were said to be flying the American flag, were German raiders. The Marine Ministry has ordered the establishment of a patrol by cruisers off the coast between Pernambuco and Maranhao, and has detailed another warship to assist in this work.

Referring to a rumour that the crew of the German gunboat Eber had made its escape, the Marine Minister said he regarded it as untrue.

London, Jan. 22.—German rejoicing over the exploits of the commerce raider in the South Atlantic is unbounded, according to an Amsterdam dispatch to "The Times."

Captain Persius, the German naval critic, writing in the "Tageblatt," recalls that when German destroyers "carried out attacks in the English Channel and at the mouth of the Thames in October and November," Arthur Balfour, then First Lord of the Admiralty, assured the House of Commons that the British guard service "would be so careful in the future that the Germans would never venture to undertake such dangerous expeditions again."

Captain Persius says that Sir Edward Carson has been unable to justify Mr. Balfour's assertion, and maintains that "German light forces have made several attacks in British waters, and the Moewe the Second, a big above-water ship, successfully passed the British advance guards and reached the Atlantic."

"Our thought during the next month and weeks," concludes Captain Persius, "will accompany the Moewe the Second, and our hopes are with its brave crew."

The "Times" correspondent says that the chief of the German Admiralty Staff when congratulating Lieutenant Badewitz, the prize commander of the Yarrowdale, asked whether it did not seem a ticklish job to take charge of 469 prisoners with such a small crew. Lieutenant Badewitz said that he had let his prisoners move about freely and considered the situation quite safe as long as "one had a pistol." He also said that feeding the prisoners was quite easy, considering the circumstances.

BRITAIN'S BIG LOAN GIGANTIC SUCCESS

London, Feb. 10.—Yesterday was "war loan day" and a hundred thousand meetings were held throughout the country, including demonstrations at the Royal Exchange and Trafalgar Square, where, besides a gigantic loan advertisement, eight captured German guns were exhibited. The takings at the cinemas for three days next week will be assigned to the loan. Sixty-two million war savings certificates have been sold this year.

Mr. A Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, speaking at Leeds yesterday, said that it is not yet possible to state the extent of the success of the war loan, but he could say to-day that it would not be a failure.—Reuter.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 17.—The consensus of opinion here is that the British war loan, which closed yesterday, was the greatest financial triumph in the history of the world.

Estimates of the total subscriptions vary between £600,000,000 and £1,000,000,000 of new money. The smallest estimate, however, is far in excess of the anticipations of financiers, who, five weeks ago, did not expect that more than two or three hundred million pounds would be procurable by public subscriptions, especially as the loan was handicapped by conversion operations.

The big loan of 1915 included £200,000,000 subscribed by the banks, which did not participate in the present loan, although it is not secret that they arranged with Mr. Bonar Law, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, that money should be forthcoming from them no matter what the result of the loan might be.

The overwhelming response of the public to this loan leaves the banks free to assist the Government in any further war finance.

The number of subscribers to the loan of 1915 was half a million. There are indications that the subscribers to the present loan will number 5,000,000.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 17.—It is unofficially estimated that £12,000,000,000 new money has been subscribed to the War Loan.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 17.—Extraordinary scenes were witnessed in London to-day, the last day of the war loan. The city was invaded by thousands of subscribers, and the banks and post-offices were besieged by long queues, marshalled by police commissionaires.

Similar unprecedented scenes were witnessed in the big provincial towns of the United Kingdom, especially in Glasgow.

London, Feb. 17.—The subscription to the new war loan bonds was closed at midnight. No exact amount of the subscription is officially announced as yet, but according to the bankers' estimate the total subscription is believed to have reached £1,000,000,000, which if right, proves it a great success, a success greater than expected. Half of that figure will suffice for claiming success for the new flotation. According to press reports the Japanese Government has assisted in the successful flotation of the new loan by purchasing Japanese national bonds with the national debt redemption funds. By offering tempting prices, holders of Japanese bonds, wishing to subscribe to the new British bonds could sell and transfer their money. The amount of Japanese bonds purchased in the London market by Japan since the beginning of this year has reached £2,840,000 making a total of £9,615,888 redeemed since the outbreak of the war. —"Jiji."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 18—A feature of the War Loan subscriptions was the unearthing of extraordinary hoards of gold. In addition, numerous gifts of money, ranging from half-a-crown to ten pounds were sent, often accompanied by pathetic letters breathing patriotism in spite of poverty. There were huge subscriptions from Municipalities. For instance, Luton average ten pounds per capita.

London, Feb. 18.—Mr. A. Bonar Law, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced in the House of Commons to-day that the subscriptions to the new War Loan would be at least £700,000,000 exclusive of contributions from banks.

London, Feb. 18.—It is learned on good authority that the subscription to the new British war loan was closed at midnight of the 17th with an astonishingly successful result, which attests to the patriotic enthusiasm of the British nation and their conviction of final victory. The Chancellor of the Exchequer will announce the result of the subscription to-morrow.—"Asahi."

London, Feb. 20.—Mr. Bonar Law in the House of Commons answering a question regarding the amount subscribed to the war-loan replied as follows:

"The number of applications that were received on the last day has been so large that though the officials have been working day and night there are still between two or five hundred thousand applications not yet dealt with and more applications are coming in from all over the country. It is, therefore, impossible to give detailed figures until the beginning of next week. I am, however, in a position to say the loan has succeeded to a greater extent not only than I anticipated but than I hoped.

"I hope, what I have just said will not encourage exaggerated and indeed impossible estimates, which might create danger of what I consider the amazing financial effort of this country being minimized when the actual figures are known.

"To keep a sense of proportion it will be well to remember what was expected when the loan was issued. When I met the financial representatives of the city I was asked what amount of new money I should consider necessary to make the loan a success. I stated a figure which was much higher than I anticipated though no higher than I hoped. That figure was six-hundred millions. That amount without direct contribution from the banks, which it is desirable to avoid, has already been exceeded and though it is impossible to estimate the excess even by twenty or perhaps fifty millions, that excess certainly amounts to one-hundred millions."

STEPS BEING TAKEN BY BRITAIN RE SHIPPING

London, Feb. 14.—Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, speaking in the House of Lords, stated that since the outbreak of the war Germany has sunk 230 allied and neutral steamers totalling 4 million tons, and interpellated the government whether Britain has built 3 million tons of shipping to replace her loss or not. To this Lord Curzon replied that: In July, 1914, Britain possessed 3,890 steamers exceeding 1,600 tons displacement with an aggregate tonnage of 16,850,000 tons, while in January this year she had 3,540 merchantmen, totalling 16,000,000 tons, so that Britain has practically lost only 5½ per cent. of her shipping on account of the war.

The new Ministry, he went on, has armed 45 per cent. of Britain's shipping and 75 per cent. of these armed steamers are being chartered by the Navy and Army Lord Curzon then disclosed that the government is bent on the building of newly standardized vessels of 4,000 tons or 5,000 as rapidly as the shipbuilding facilities of the country permit and said that in view of the fact that allied steamers are now under construction in dockyards in America and Japan, the Allies will get another 500,000 tons of shipping.

Lord Curzon told of the special protection Britain is according neutral shipping and the divisional shipbuilding system she is adopting to effect the speedy building of steamers.—"Nichinichi."

Lord Curzon, Minister without portfolio and a member of the War Council, speaking in the House of Lords on the 13th in reply to an interpellation concerning the counter measures against German submarine warfare, outlined the principle and measures decided on by the British Government to the following effect, according to an official dispatch from London received yesterday.

It is a patent fact that unarmed merchant vessels fall easier victims to submarines than those adequately armed, the ratio of victims in the past being 1 to 3. Since the organization of the present ministry, in the latter part of last year, the number of armed British merchantmen has increased by between 4 and 5 per cent., compared with the figure in the past.

The British government is considering measures for assuring the safety of neutral vessels, an increase of the freight rates, a special marine insurance and the offer of special premiums to the crew of these merchantmen, and beside, has an intention to purchase neutral vessels in case of necessity and possibility.

The government is making efforts for the expansion of the shipbuilding industry on a gigantic scale, and is also making efforts for increasing the strength of the merchant marine fleet by making an arrangement for that purpose with the oversea dominions, Britain's allies and neutral states, especially with such principal shipbuilding countries as the United States and Japan. In addition to these measures, the British government expects to be able to make an addition of 500,000 tons to the present capacity by defining uniform type of merchant vessel to be newly constructed and another addition of 500,000 tons by permitting such steamers to carry cargo on decks. Furthermore, the government is contemplating measures to increase the capacity of the shipbuilding industry indirectly by adopting proper measures contributing to the encouragement of the development of shipbuilding.

While taking all possible measures aiming at the repletion of the mercantile marine fleet as stated, the govenrment is at the same time considering the question of carrying out further restriction and limitation on the importation and to extend the sphere of prohibition on the importation of unnecessary goods with a view to regulating and economizing space and increasing the available margin of carrying capacity. The question is, however, a very troublesome and complicated one, and will probably call forth numerous complaints and protestations from the oversea dominions, the allies and other countries, especially the carrying out of the plan will deal a fresh serious blow to Russian commercial and industrial interests, but the British Government is compelled to take such step, though reluctantly, in view of the grave situation in which the country is placed and which does not allow of her taking into consideration such trifling matters. No doubt, the allies and other friendly countries will appreciate and realize the inevitableness of the measures decided on by the British government from sheer necessity, for which there is no alternative.

Lord Curzon further mentioned that Britain's mercantile marine fleet, which in July of 1914 consisted of 3,890 vessels excluding those not exceeding 1,600 tons, with an aggregate tonnage of 16,850,000 tons, has declined to 3,540 vessels with an aggregate tonnage of 16,000,000 tons, thus showing a decrease of between 5 and 6 per cent. in the total tonnage during the last thirty months. He also stated that 75 per cent. of the British merchantmen was employed for military purposes by Britain and her allies, the remaining 25 per cent. being engaged in the transportation of provisions and other necessary goods to England from foreign lands, which reserve fleet will, however, be also requisitioned and put on military service gradually.

that the first results of the War Loan are a veritable triumph.

They contrast the achievement with the proof of Germany's exhaustion, as evidenced in the renewed appeal for gold ornaments. They add that it is a splendid testimony of British financial stability which enabled the country to raise the largest loan in history, besides a revenue of £500,000,000. Mr. Bonar Law's figure is likely to be largely exceeded as hundreds of thousands of applications are still outstanding.

An Amsterdam message says that the Imperial Bank of Germany publishes a demand for all classes to contribute gold ornaments and jewelry as part of the national equipment and effort.

A CHILDISH HUN LIE

London, Feb. 18.—The "Frankfurter Zeitung" editorially says that Japan cannot be pleased with America's intervention in the war, because the expansion of armaments in America at the present juncture foreshadows future peril for Japan. The chancellor's organ insinuates that it is the wisest way for America to grasp an opportunity to arm herself on the pretext of war with Germany. It is a patent fact that the true object of America lies in providing against her day of trouble with Japan, who however cannot publicly protest against America however much she may suffer.

GERMAN DEFENCE DOOMED

Paris, Feb. 14.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, interviewed, stated that the western front was the decisive front. He had no doubt that the Allies would break the German west front. The war would be decided on the battle-field and peace might be declared in 1917, but if Germany could not be entirely beaten this year the Allies would not hesitate to carry on the war. There could be no lasting peace without complete victory and the British troops were indomitably resolved to fight to the end.

Sir Douglas Haig continued: "What we have done is enormous but there is still much to do. Already we have reached the munitions output we wanted. We now want more guns and railways. We cannot have too many guns owing to the continuous wastage."

Regarding railways Sir Douglas Haig stated that the disproportion between the tonnage landed at our bases and the tonnage the railways were capable of carrying hampered operations. "The directors of the English railways investigated our requirements and have given us more than we asked. Indeed they even stripped their own railways of ballast, of which we were in want.

"We are also supplying material of all sorts to the Allies, especially Russia, Italy and Rumania. We cannot escape this obligation owing to the necessity for maintaining a united solid front."

"Don't forget the western front is and will remain the principal front and the one on which, I am convinced, the decision of the war will take place. Hence our policy of making the western front, defensively and offensively, the best."

Reuter's correspondent asked whether the decision would be secured by the breaking down of the German front?

Sir Douglas Haig replied: "That's how I imagine the decision will take place. Trench warfare must give way to a war of movement, which alone will procure the advantages we count upon."

He emphasized that an incomplete or halting peace would leave Germany able to take a terrible revenge in the near future. After having attacked England she would be again on the French frontiers, greedier than ever for blood and conquest. "Let us beware of the suspicious manœuvres of the enemy, who feeling himself lost talks of peace and seeks to divide us."—Reuter.

GERMAN CAPTAIN OWNS LINER WAS DAMAGED

[Delayed in Transmission]

Boston, Feb. 18.—Captain Pollack of the Kronprinzessin Cecilie, which was seized by the United States Marshal on February 3, as the vessel had been nominally in his possession since the institution of a suit by a bank for the non-delivery of a large amount of gold at the outbreak of the war, when the liner returned to the United States to avoid capture, appeared in the Federal Court to-day.

In giving evidence from the witness-stand, Captain Pollack admitted that he caused the machinery of the liner to be disabled. He said he had acted under the direction of a man officially connected with the German Embassy.

He refused to give the man's name on the ground that it might cause himself (witness) to be tried for treason should he return to Germany.

The directions for crippling the vessel, said the witness, were given in the presence of the New York Superintendent of the Nord-deutcher German Lloyd Co.

As the result of Captain Pollack's testimony, a bond of $200,000 was required to be furnished by the Steamship Line that repairs might be made, and as a guarantee that no further damage would be done to the ship.

BERLIN WAR LORD IN VIENNA

New York, Feb. 18.—Herr Hans Müller, an Austrian journalist was for the first time since the war received in audience by the Kaiser in Vienna where the German Emperor recently arrived to confer with Emperor Charles, says a dispatch from Berlin. In his interview with the Austrian jounalist the Kaiser remarked that the fact that neutral countries on the Continent have all opposed England is worthy of notice. The blockade of the Continent (the policy of isolating England) once dreamt of by Napoleon is now being realized and Great Britain finds herself in a predicament she has never faced before. To this Herr Müller replied, "The world knows well who should assume the responsibility for the horrible miseries and desolations arising from the further continuation of the war made inevitable by the Allies' refusal of the German peace offers." He also told the Kaiser of the spirit of sacrifice soaring high among the Austrian people. The Kaiser said that he was glad to learn that and that the time for the attainment of their great object was hourly arriving.—"Asahi."

IDAHO'S ALIEN LAND BILL CAUSES STIR

New York, Feb. 18.—A Washington dispatch states that the Idaho anti-Japanese bill has been revived. The State Department authorities declare in this connection that the attitude of the State Department towards the anti-Japanese legislation is unchanged and it desires the withdrawal of the bill. Mr. Borah, the Senator for Idaho, has not withdrawn his opposition to the Bill and declares that he will wait and watch the development of the situation.—"Asahi."

San Francisco, Feb. 18.—The members of the Idaho State Legislative are going to introduce another anti-Japanese land law Bill. The State Department declares that the Government does not like to see any new departure liable to cause fresh complication with Japan and will oppose such measure.—"Asahi."

San Francisco, Feb. 19.—Inner particulars concerning the effort made to check the passage of the Alien Land Law Bill in Idaho having become public, the State Senate has issued summonses to several men mixed up in the affair. A lawyer named Booth is said to have been paid $10,000 by the Japanese Society of Idaho.—"Asahi."

Seattle, Feb. 19.—The Idaho Senate summoned lawyer Booth of Twin Falls on the 18th and requested him to tell what he knew about the Land Law Bill. This step was taken owing to the fact that he had sent to the State Department at Washington a deposition in which he states that the defeat of the Idaho Bill was the result of his having approached the Japanese Embassy through a Washington lawyer. Further it is said that on February 3, Booth told one Craig and four others that the Japanese protest had not originated in any instruction from the Tokyo Government, but it was the result of the pressure he himself brought to bear on the Japanese Embassy and the State Department. He also told them that a man he had sent to Washington with his instructions was paid $10,000 by the Japanese Society of Idaho. The men referred to are said to have all made statements to the above effect before the State Senate.

A certain well informed party says that it has become customary for the Japanese Society to kill anti-Japanese Bills by paying for them every time they appear in the local Legislatures of Pacific Coast States. In consequence, it has come to pass that, in order to line their own pockets, second rate lawyers often instigate members of State Legislatures to introduce Bills of this nature. It is not improbable that the Idaho Bill in question was one of these trap-settings. Whether this was or was not actually the case, the result amounts to the same thing in the light of the present disgraceful disclosure. However, the Japanese Society of Idaho is a very small institution, and it is hardly believable that it paid out $10,000.—"Asahi."

Seattle, Feb. 19.—It is not clear how the alleged deposition of Booth to the State Department was made. However it is said that in it, he states that he pressed the Japanese Embassy and the State Department into making a protest, although neither had had the intention to take the step until he moved in the matter by accepting the request of the Japanese Society. The disclosure was made in the Boyce "Daily Statesman" on February 16, as a Washington special, and on the 17th the Idaho State Legislature ordered enquiries, followed by the summons to Booth.

Senator Borah from Idaho, who has read the report of the enquiries, holds the view that the State Department should not have interfered with the Bill, but have left it to take its own course. The public looks upon the affair as a case of international corruption and is paying keen attention to its development.—"Asahi."

SUDDEN DEATH CLAIMS GENERAL FUNSTON

San Antonio, Feb. 20.—General Frederick Funston died suddenly of heart disease to-day.

General Funston was born at New Carlise, O., on November 9, 1865. He was educated at the University of Kansas from 1885—1888. After working as a reporter in Kansas City, he was appointed botanist to the U.S. Death Valley Expedition in 1891. Two years later we find him as Commission to explore Alaska and report on its flora. He spent the winter of 1893-1894 in a camp on the Klondike, and floated down the Yukon, alone, in a canoe.

From 1896-7 he served 18 months with the Cuban Insurgent Army, rising to the rank of lieutenant-colonel, being wounded in action. On his return to the States, he was appointed on May 13, 1898 to the command of the 20th Kansas Infantry.

Colonel Funston, as he then was, fought with distinction in many battles in the Philippines.

For crossing the Rio Grand River at Calumpit on a small bamboo raft in face of a heavy fire and establishing a rope ferry by means of which the U.S. troops were enabled to cross and win the battle, he was promoted to brigadier-general U.S.V. May 2, 1899 and awarded the Medal of Honour, Feb. 14, 1900.

General Funston organized and led the expedition resulting in the capture of Aguinaldo, the head of the Filipino insurrection. On April, 1901, he was appointed a Brigadier-General in the U.S.A.

THE ARMING OF MERCHANTMEN

The question of arming the merchantmen was recently discussed by government authorities and steamship owners, but on the ground that the arming of the vessels would not insure their safety, the plan was abandoned. However the "Hochi" says that as Germany has openly declared unrestricted submarine warfare against ships of all nations, armed or not, the question has again attracted the attention of the steamship owners. The paper believes that as the German divers will attack any vessel without warning, merchant vessels should be armed for their own protection. If the arms on board steamships are able to sink some of the German divers, the arming of the vessels will be beneficial to the whole world.

There are some who believe that the arming of merchant vessels is impractical, saying that an enormous expense will be required for the installation of arms, and there may not be sufficient arms and munitions to fit out all the merchantmen of Japan. Doubt is also entertained as to the ability for armed ships to pass through the Panama Canal.

The "Hochi" says that the question of expense cannot be discussed when the cargo are at stake, and as to the passing safety and protection of passengers and through the Panama Canal, the United States which has severed diplomatic relations with the German Government will not object to the passing of armed merchantmen through the Panama Canal. (Sanction, we understand, has already been given. Ed. J.T.)

It is certain that the steamship companies may not be able to obtain sufficient arms and the necessary gunners, but the "Hochi" believes that the Department of the Navy can come to their assistance, not only supplying arms, but trained gunners. There seems to be some objection on the part of the Naval Department to supply the merchantmen with gunners, but the "Hochi" is of the opinion that the Naval Department is organized and maintained for the purpose of protecting the nation's commerce and trade as well as for the defence of the nation, and the authorities of the Naval Department should willingly supply ships with gunners.

The "Hochi" hopes that the authorities will come to an understanding as early as possible and adopt the policy of fitting out all merchantmen with guns and gunners supplied by the Naval Department. The co-operation of various parts of the Government is most desired on such an important occasion.

ACTION OF NEUTRALS

The "Kokumin" says that several days have passed since the United States severed diplomatic relations with Germany, but there seems to be no indication that the United States is going to declare war against Germany, and on the other hand the neutral countries which received the advice of the United States Government to follow her example, have only protested against the German announcement of unrestricted submarine warfare, but have not yet severed diplomatic relations with Germany.

The "Kokumin" believes that if the neutral countries thus remain inactive and the United States is slow in taking up arms against Germany, it can not be hoped that the severance of diplomatic relations between the United States and Germany, and the protests made by the neutral countries will hasten the end of the present war.

FRIENDSHIP WITH CHINA DISCUSSED

The "Yorozu" says that there is not a single Japanese who does not wish friendly relations with China, but there is a certain group of Chinese who misunderstands the intention of the Japanese in China and spreads anti-Japanese sentiment throughout China, and even in Europe there are many who desire to oppress the Japanese in China. The paper says that this tendency is inevitable, and the Japanese public hopes that the Government will diplomatically solve such misunderstandings, however it can not agree with the plan of withdrawing the proper and necessary demands Japan should make upon China, in order to cultivate friendly relations with the Chinese.

The paper points out that about ten years ago, when Marquis Saionji was Premier, the demand of the Japanese Government greatly angered the Chinese, and again when Korea was annexed and Count Terauchi oppressed the Koreans, the Chinese feared the oppression of Japan and began to show anti-Japanese sentiments. Also during the revolution in China, many Japanese assisted the southern party and consequently, the northern Chinese had ill-feeling against the Japanese, and while Baron Goto was the President of the South Manchurian Railway, he tried to strengthen his influence and power in Manchuria, and made the Chinese fear the oppression of the Japanese.

The paper says that it is strange that recently Count Terauchi and Baron Goto have begun to speak of friendly relations with China. If those who caused anti-Japanese feeling in China should be mentioned, they are Count Terauchi, Baron Goto, Mr. Inukai and Mr. Hara. Count Terauchi scared the Chinese by his arbitrary oppressive administration in Chosen, and Baron Goto angered the Chinese by oppressing the Chinese in South Manchuria, and Mr. Inukai and Mr. Hara, helped the Southern party in the Chinese revolution, and they are hated in northern China. Now the "Yorozu" says that at present all the principle men in the Japanese Government and politics are those who caused anti-Japanese sentiments in China, but these men are now preaching friendly relations and commercial co-operation with China.

The paper declares that the peace and order of the Far East is the main problem to be considered by Japan, and while friendly relations with China are to be desired, the Japanese authorities should not be influenced by the desire to be friendly with China in planning the future policy of the country. If the Japanese Government only tried to be friendly with China and forgets her own standing and the peace of the Far East, Japan will be ridiculed by all the European nations as well as by China herself, and the "Yorozu" hopes that the Government will not misunderstand the important and fundamental question in trying to be friendly with China.

PROFIT AND DANGER COMBINED

Although Japan is one of the allied nations, being so far from the actual sight of war, her financial condition has been similar to that of a neutral country, and Japan has been able to send munitions and other supplies to the European nations. But Japan did not merely attempt to gain profit taking advantage of her position in the present war, and she has been eager to give assistance to the warring nations of Europe, and while there was profit in the transaction, there has been also much danger, says the "Kokumin."

Among the Entente countries, and the people of the neighbouring nation, there are some who have been criticising Japan in this regard, saying that while Japan is declaring herself as one of the Entente, she in harvesting a large war profit, without any suffering. The "Kokumin" says that it is true that from the eye of those who are actually fighting on the battlefield among the shells, the attitude of Japan might seem inactive and selfish. While the Japanese are with the Entente, their position is quite different from those of their brothers in France or England, and while the Japanese have not actually taken part in the fighting, they have done their utmost to fulfil their obligations as the public of a nation of the Entente.

The paper says that while others accuse Japan for harvesting a large profit, it is still difficult to say whether or not Japan profited, until the true effect of the war, and the after-war competitions and their effects on the nation's finance and industries, are well considered. Japan has supplied Russia with munitions and other supplies, and it is reported that we gained profit by selling them to the Russian Government, but the "Kokumin" says that the Japanese public several times supplied Russia with war funds, and those Japanese who supplied Russia with munitions and funds are equally sharing the danger and loss of the war. The "Kokumin" believes that it is not proper for any allied nation or neutral country to state that Japan profited from the war without doing anything for the assistance of the fighting men in Europe.

AN IGNORANT CABINET

The present government of Japan is against the national tendency and against the current of civilization, says the "Yorozu." The administration given by the Terauchi Cabinet up to the present has shown that the Cabinet has no political idea, and the Cabinet is even ignorant of the first principle of politics. It seems, says the "Yorozu," that the present Cabinet considers that the defeat of the Opposition party is the sole aim and object of the Cabinet. The Terauchi Cabinet has not the character which is so essential to all politicians.

In the coming general election, the Cabinet wishes to treat the voters and candidates as if they were prisoners, and while preaching that the free will of the public is to be respected, the fact proves that the Cabinet is not respecting the will of the public. The Government officials believe that the entire public are as backward as themselves in the ideas and conception of politics. The future of Japanese politics will be a fight between the progressive public and the old fashioned and retiring Cabinet.

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS AT URBANA-CHAMPAIGN

AN OPEN CONFESSION

The "Yorozu" says that both Count Terauchi and Baron Goto, confessed before the Conference of the Prefectural Governors that the present Cabinet has no definite plan of its own. In the speech before the Conference Count Terauchi said that as it was only a few months ago that the present Cabinet was organized, he was unable to speak of any special work done by the Cabinet. The paper says it is almost four months since the Terauchi Cabinet was organized and it has done nothing in four months, and Count Terauchi can not escape from the accusation that he has not attempted to do anything since he became the Premier.

Baron Goto said to the Governors, says the paper, that first the Cabinet had to wipe out the black marks before adopting a new policy, and the "Yorozu" declares that he only picked on the faults and mistakes of the former Cabinet, and attributed the inactivity of the present Cabinet to the faults of the Okuma Cabinet.

At this important and critical moment when the whole world is in the vortex of the great war, such a slow and undecided policy will bring no benefit to Japan and the Japanese. There have been many Cabinets in the history of modern Japan, but the paper says there was never a Cabinet that did not possess its own policy, nor one so long undecided as to its attitude to important foreign and state affairs.

Reading the speech of Count Terauchi, the paper thought that he might be confused in the bran, but listening to the address of Baron Goto, it can not help believing that this statesman was mentally wrong. Both addresses proved that they do not realize the importance and duty of their positions, and the patriotic citizens of the country will not bear the existence of such a Cabinet.

TROUBLE FEARED IN MUKDEN

The Mukden correspondent of the "Tokyo Asahi," in a recent article, gives details of the quarrels going on in high official circles of the Mukden Military Government of China. He says: Chang Tso-lin, Military Governor of Mukden taking warning from the recent Chengchiatun affair appointed Wang Yung-Chiang Superintendent of Police of the Mukden Province in the hopes of reforming the police administration. Mr. Wang did his best to contribute to the betterment of the police administration in Mukden by punishing soldiers found gambling. The first man arraigned was Tsung Lo-feng, a regimental commander. This action greatly enraged Brigadier-General Tang Wang-lin, of the 53rd brigade, who is a relative of Tsung. General Tang went so far as to try to force Mr. Wang to resign, but failed. Mr. Wang accused General Tang of making too free with juridical and police rights. General Tang, in conjunction with Commander Feng Tai-ko, of the 28th army division, then tried to make the position of Governor Chang Tso-lin, unsupportable by accusing him of betraying them, his former associates in the days when they were together in adversity, and General Tang entertained the ambition to usurp the position of commander of the 27th army division which Mr. Chang now occupies, besides his military governorship. Mr. Wang left Mukden and is now staying at his home. A number of military officers have tried to mediate between Governor Chang and General Tang. Their kind offices were refused. General Feng Lin-ko, who is in alliance with General Tang took offence at this. It is generally believed that General Feng feels no dissatisfaction at the punishment meted out to the men under him in connection with the Chengchiatun affair. He is, however, taking every possible measure to cripple the power of Governor Chang, and it is expected that the quarrels between the two factions will culminate in trouble in Mukden sooner or later.

SCARCITY OF POLICE RECRUITS IN JAPAN

The want of police constables is now being felt in various cities in Japan and the authorities are quite anxious to remedy it in view of the forthcoming parliamentary election. It is stated that Kanagawa prefecture is in need of 200 new policemen at present, while the Kyoto police falls short of the required number of constables by about 80. Each succeeding year is said to have recently shown a tendency towards the decrease of applicants for policemen. In Tokyo, for instance, the number of applicants last year was 3,400 against 5,500 the year before last, and the tendency is said to be partly attributed to the prevailing economic prosperity in Japan due to the European war which makes people ambitious for money. The lot of the guardians of the public peace is undoubtedly a hard one with a pittance of 18 yen per month, including allowances, and all agree that they deserve better treatment in every respect. The ever-growing decrease of application is a source of anxiety for the authorities and yet they find consolation in the fact that applicants of recent years are growing serious in their purpose, as most of them intend to devote themselves to the police for life.

It is said that the age of police constables averages 25 or 26, and few policemen are on the wrong side of thirty nowa-days, though there was a time when many of them were beyond thirty or thirty-five. The resignation of policemen takes place more frequently in provincial districts than in towns as constables in the country are apt to be made important figures among innocent folks, the result being that they often become men of self-importance and throw up the service when they see a fair offer to obtain a post of more importance. Applicants to join the force are usually deficient in Kyoto, Osaka, Yokohama, Kobe and Tokyo. The full strength required by the Metropolitan Police board is 5,532. About 70 recruits join the force every month.

CHINA'S PROTEST

The Chinese Government protested against the German announcement of unrestricted submarine warfare, but the "Tokyo Nichinichi" believes that as Germany has not paid any attention to the Chinese protests, it will not be possible for China to join the Entente.

The United States Government advised China to follow her example and sever diplomatic relations with Germany, and the Chinese government followed the example of the United States half way, but at present the United States has not decided whether to declare war against Germany or to resume a neutral position again. The "Nichinichi" says that the severance of diplomatic relations was the announcement of the declaration of war, but the United States made a new interpretation, and has not yet declared war. The United States, does not want to fight, but on the other hand does not want to be friendly, and this example has been followed by the Chinese and she has not yet even severed diplomatic relations with Germany.

The paper says that the reason England, France, Italy, Russia and Japan wished that China would join the Entente is not because of the assistance China can give to the allied forces, but simply because they desired that German influence in China should be driven out. There are at present 3,817 Germans, and 276 German firms in China, and the total German investment in China is said to be 256,760,000 dollars. The paper hopes that the Germans will be entirely driven out of China, but China must sever the diplomatic relations with Germany first.

The "Nichinichi" regrets that the Chinese Government followed the advice of the United States Government and did not pay any attention to the advice given by Japan. She followed the United States in her policy towards China, and she is now neither a friend nor an enemy of Germany, but her undecided policy will not be welcomed by either Germany or the Entente. Japan and some of the Entente powers advised China to join the Entente, but she did not pay any attention to the question.

The paper regrets that the Japanese policy towards China has been a failure and Japan was not able to bring China to the side of Japan and the Entente, but allowed her to follow the United States.

AVIATION PESSIMISM

The Tokyo "Asahi" regrets that the two aeroplanes of the Tokorozawa Aviation Corps took six days to fly to the Lake Suwa, and although the weather was disagreeable, it is evident that the aviation of Japan is far behind that of European nations. Not only are Army aviators not skilful in handling aeroplanes, but the military aeroplanes are all of the old style and model. The Government sent several Army pilots to France to study the art of flying, but not knowing the French language, these officers tried to learn the difficult art without understanding French. The paper says the Government and the public should become more interested in aviation, and give proper and substantial encouragement to aviators, military or otherwise.

DR. SOYEDA TO HEAD CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

It has been decided that Dr. Juichi Soyeda will succeed to Mr. Buyei Nakano, President of the Tokyo Chamber of Commerce, who has recently announced his resolution to retire. Baron Sakatani was expected as most likely to succeed Mr. Nakano, but it is said that he would not accept the offer. The selection of Mr. Nakano's successor has been under consideration by Baron Shibusawa and Mr. Nakano. The two business magnates have secured the consent of Dr. Soyeda, so that they announced his selection before Messrs. Fujiyama and Sugiwara, Vice-Presidents of the Chamber, and others at the Tokyo Chamber of Commerce yesterday morning. The selection met with unanimous approval. The formal election of the President and other official took place on Wednesday.

Dr. Soyeda is the proprietor of the "Hochi," one of Tokyo's greatest papers and a special member of the Tokyo Chamber of Commerce. He was the President of the Imperial Government Railways in the Okuma Ministry and was also once the President of the Industrial Bank of Japan. The name of Dr. Soyeda is well-known both at home and abroad, especially in America where he visited as the representative of the Japanese Union of Chambers of Commerce. Dr. Soyeda in an interview with the press yesterday said:—

"I am at bottom a journalist. In the Okuma Ministry I was appointed president of the Imperial Government Railways and in view of the coronation I accepted the post to render my humble service to the State. On the fall of the Okuma Cabinet, however, I resigned and returned to journalism. Baron Shibusawa and Mr. Nakano have earnestly urged me to assume the presidency of the Tokyo Chamber of Commerce, but I was anxious to recommend Baron Sakatani. The offer has again come to me and I am naturally at a loss what to do, in view of the heavy responsibility that will devolve on my shoulders when I become the president of the chamber even nursed as it is by Baron Shibusawa and Mr. Nakano. I am contented with my lot in the fourth estate and even though I succeed to Mr. Nakano I shall never turn away from journalism."

PRICE OF DRINKS GOES HIGHER IN JAPAN

Consequent upon the general advance in the prices of various commodities the brewers in Tokyo have decided as the result of their recent conference to raise the prices of beer and other non-alcoholic beverages such as cider, citron, Hirano water etc. by 25 per cent. on and after Feb. 27. This was announced on Saturday to the public and it is not expected that customers will grudge this increase. The demand for home-made beer is very heavy at present and is apparently becoming heavier monthly, so that the increase of the price of beer has been anticipated as inevitable among well-informed quarters. The prevailing economic prosperity in Japan is said to have made the general demand for beer heavy and it is said that the total volume of Japanese beer brewed during last year was five times as big as that in normal years.

Such a great activity in Japan's brewing industry, however, is partly due to the increase in the exportation of Japanese beer to foreign countries. The total volume of bottled beer exported during last year was 100,000 cases, which is about ten per cent. of the entire volume brewed in Japan. Japan is one of the greatest sellers of beer to China, the Straits Settlements etc. and it is interesting to learn that there is a constant shipment of Japanese beer to Salonika now. The "Yomiuri" says that during last year about 40,000 cases of beer (each one contains 4 dozen bottles) were sent to the allied fronts in Salonika from Japan. It is gratifying to note concludes the "Yomiuri" that the gallant soldiers and officers of the Allies fighting for the sake of humanity and justice against the Hun forces can invigorate and refresh themselves with a bottle of Japanese beer in their trenches after an engagement with the enemy.

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL

Two goals each was the result of a hotly contested soccer game, on last Saturday, at Ikebukuro. The teams were the Tokyo A.F.C. and the boys of the Toshima Shihan Gakko. The first half of the game was a disappointing one to watch as the ball was up in the air such a lot, and neither side seemed able to settle down. Of the actual chances missed, the visitors must be found guilty on three occasions, the worst offender being Roscoe. The School though having more of the game than their opponents never gave Duer much anxiety in the first half and half-time arrived with the score love all.

After the usual interval, the game restarted in sensational fashion, the School forwards attacking in earnest, and soon registering a goal from the foot of Onodo, the inside left, after Duer had stopped the first shot.

The home team continued to have matters all their own way for some time, and Allen and Haigh were frequently badly bustled. Eventually, however, a good centre by Roscoe enabled Curtis to make matters level with a clever shot from a volley. For some time both sides battled hard for the lead and within 12 minutes of time the school got it. An individual run by the Captain, Ando, in which he beat both the backs and the goal-keeper called forth loud applause. It certainly was the finest episode of the game and deserved to win the match. The fates, however, were against it, as within half a minute of time, Wood kept up his average by netting from a pass from Curtis, and the game ended in a draw.

The teams were School: Goal, Shimidzu; Backs, Kitzumedzaka, Uchida; Half-backs Ito, Asaka, Hozeno; Forwards Yamazaka, Hayashi, Ando, Onoda, Tsurumaki.

Tokyo A.F.C.:—Goal W. Y. Duer, Backs, W. Haigh (Captain) L. V. Allen; Half-backs, W. J. Davies, W. H. Elwin, H. C. Spackman; Forwards, N. K. Roscoe, S. Heaslett, A. Buckney, A. E. Wood, A. G. Curtis.

TOKYO L. & M. SOCIETY

Two dramatic sketches "The Perfect Wife" and "Back to the Land," given by their author Mrs. J. W. Robertson Scott, were the principal features of the February meeting of the Tokyo Literary and Musical Society held on Monday night at the Seimei Hoken Kyokai Building.

While a large circle of people in Tokyo and Yokohama are aware of the reputation and fame of Mrs. Robertson Scott as a student of social problems and also as a talented theatrical performer, her friends in Tokyo have not had many opportunities to admire her performances. However, last evening at the Seimei Hoken Kyokai Building, the members of the Tokyo Literary and Musical Society and their friends were charmed with the excellent impersonification of the various characters in the two sketches, without the aid of costumes and properties.

Mrs. Robertson Scott has wonderful control of facial expressions. In a second she becomes, a young girl, old woman and even a man, and her action is truly realistic in every small detail. In "The Perfect Wife" she kept the audience laughing with the comical incidents of the family, and especially at the well impersonified servant. In this piece she impersonates George, the husband and a Town Councillor, his wife, Janey and Margaret, the old Scots servant.

The second sketch, "Back to the Land" was equally excellent, and in this piece, Mrs. Robertson Scott, impersonified thirteen different persons so perfectly that the audience had no difficulty in identifying each one.

Besides the sketches by Mrs. Robertson Scott, two songs each by Mr. I. L. Gimson "The Longshoreman" and "The Drum Major," and by Mrs. W. D. Cameron's and Miss Struthers' playing added much to the pleasure of the evening.

AMERICAN RED CROSS BAZAAR WAS SUCCESS

Tokyo, Feb. 19.—While the full returns of the American Red Cross Bazaar are not yet at hand, enough is now known to make it certain that a total well over 10,000.00 yen will be the reward of those who so indefatigably and so unselfishly worked for this splendid addition to the Red Cross Funds in England and France.

In this achievement the members of the General Committee of the Bazaar, but more particularly the ladies whose names appear as heads of the various sub-committees, feel that a very large, if not indeed the very largest share of the credit belongs to the Japanese ladies who co-operated. It is conceded that without their aid no such result could possibly have been hoped, for "The Beauty Booth," with Mrs. Moss at the head, assisted by Mrs. Irons, Mrs. Kadono, and Mrs. Komoro was undoubtedly one of the great successes of the whole fair, and here as elsewhere, the Japanese were responsible largely for the results.

Similarly the presence of Mrs. S. Matsukata on the "Doll Booth' with Mrs. Nishimura and Miss Yamata; Mrs. Shiohara and Mrs. Fujikura, who assisted Mrs. Takamine at the wonderful White Elephant Booth; Mrs. Nagai, Mrs. Imanishi and Miss Nitobe on "The Vanity Fair" booth added largely to the receipts. In the cases of these ladies, as in that of Mrs. Akaboshi and Miss Matsukata, in the tea garden candy booth, their own countrymen and their friends of all nationalities liberally flocked to their support. More particularly remarkable however, was the lavish expenditure of money at this Bazaar by Japanese men of all classes and especially the male relatives of the Japanese ladies concerned and interested.

The Kokusai News Agency has been asked to express the gratitude of a number of the committees to the Japanese newspapers of Tokyo, which gave liberally of their valuable space and certainly helped largely in the results. Those who desire to make this acknowledgment feel that this Bazaar has done something more than add to the finances of the Red Cross. It has increased the mutual good understanding, of all peoples of all nationalities resident here and has given to the Americans, more especially, an increased sense of the loyalty of the Japanese to their allies and their friends.

The Committee of the American Bag Bazaar wished that the ball room of the Imperial Hotel were twice larger, as it was found to be too small to accommodate the immense crowd that visited the Bazaar last Saturday. Late in the afternoon and early evening, there was not even room to move and it was an impossibility to approach some of the booths. If popularity and the large number of attendants are any signs of success, there is no doubt that the Bazaar accomplished it.

It being Saturday, and the weather warm and pleasant, all through the morning and afternoon, the room was filled with eager people. Some of them struggled for over one hour to approach the Doll Booth and purchase one or two tiny dolls.

In the afternoon, a large number of Japanese school girls and ladies began to arrive, and for some time they filled most of the available space. Unfortunately there was little left to interest them as most of the articles offered for sale were of European and American makes. One of the ladies assisting at the Bazaar expressed her regret that there were not more articles to interest the Japanese public.

As soon as the Tea Garden was opened at three o'clock, the pressure on the ball room was relieved. As on the first day, the tea room was a good source of revenue, and until the room was closed at 6 o'clock all the tables were kept occupied.

The special features of the afternoon were the two concerts. The first concert was opened by the singing of the prologue to "Pagliacci" by Mr. Funabashi at three o'clock, and he was followed by Miss Angus who rendered a charming recitation. A violin solo by Miss Trotzig, a duet by Miss Mollison and Mr. Roberts, a song by Mr. Martyr, two songs by Miss Hanashima, a dance by Madame Pamies, an Irish song by Mr. Brady, and another song by Mr. Roberts followed. The Irish song "The Tipperary Christening" by Mr. Brady was especially well received.

At the beginning of the second concert which started at 5.30, Mrs. Schaffner sang three interesting songs. After Miss Mollison and Mr. Roberts had sung another duet, the two sketches written by Mrs. Robertson Scott were given. "A Perfect Wife" and "Back to the Land" both held the audience spell-bound with interest. Madame Pamies danced daintily, and Mr. Brady once again sang "The Tipperary Christening," the entertainment ending with a ballet by Miss Wooten and Miss Mollison.

The fortune-teller's booth, was well patronized last Saturday. The sale of potted flowers and other articles in the Children's Garden was also large.

The climax of success was reached when the Ball was opened at nine o'clock. The American Ambassador and Mrs. Guthrie formally opened the ball. The entire diplomatic community, leaders in Tokyo Society and many visitors from Yokohama were present. It was the largest ball held in Tokyo for some time as was generally acclaimed a great success.

When Mrs. Ollie James suggested the idea of the Bag Bazaar, she probably never dreamed that it would meet with such a success, even though it was carried out on a much larger scale than the original plan made by Mrs. James.

Late in the night it was not known to what extent the American Red Cross funds would be swelled by the success of the Bag Bazaar, but it is certain that the amount obtained far exceeded that anticipated by the committee. Much praise is due to the committee and ladies of Tokyo and Yokohama who has assisted at the Bazaar and made it such a wonderful success. Not only has the Bazaar collected a large amount of money for the American Red Cross in France and England, but the affair brought the people of all nations together with the same aim of helping the fighters on the European front. Thus many Japanese ladies and girls had their first opportunity of showing their sentiments towards the soldiers of the Allies fighting for their homes as well as for the interest of Japan.

Rodin was lying critically ill is now completely confuted by a report to hand that at the very time the report reached Japan the famous sculptor who is 76 years old, was exulting in the possession of a newly-acquired bride, many years his junior.

The city electric bureau of Tokyo has recently decided to more rigorously enforce the regulations relating to the use of electric lamps by the citizens in order to prevent use of electricity without payment of proper charges.

It is a well-known fact that in the past the city electric authorities have been apt to overlook the cases in which the citizens have used more powerful lamps than they pay for. But from now onward the abuses of this kind will, it is hoped, prove impossible.

As the result of negotiations between the Governments of Japan and China, the Peking Government will send 13 military officers to this country shortly. These Chinese officers are below the rank of major and will enter the Military college, the Artillery school and the cavalry academy in Tokyo.

Consequent upon the advance in prices of various necessaries, the cost of stationery goods is also on the steady increase to the grievance of school children. Pencils, writing brushes, pens and so forth have been doubled in price compared with before the war. Pencil erasers which was quoted at one sen a piece are now sold for upwards of 3 sen.

We are courteously informed by the Manager of the Chartered Bank's branch at Yokohama that he received on Saturday last telegraphic advice from the Head Office in London that the Chartered Bank of India Australia & China including constituents and staff have subscribed £4,885,000 to the new War Loan, of which £2,370,000 is new money.

The Osaka prefectural authorities will shortly issue an order prohibiting the use of water in the rivers located in the cholera-infected districts in the prefecture. The rivers which are to be put under the ban are the Aji, Kizu, and Shirinashi. To relieve the inconvenience felt in consequence of this measure twenty-one stations for supplying water will be established.

The committee which has been appointed to inquire into the cause of the explosion of the battle-cruiser Tsukuba is making investigations, but the result of the inquiry has not yet been given out. The possibility of refloating the sunken battle-cruiser however has been settled and as decided at the Cabinet conference the other day work will soon be started. The estimated outlay is 40,000 yen.

The Osaka mint has already minted 1,200,000 five sen copper coins of the new type with a hole in the centre. On Feb. 23 the mint authorities delivered coinage valued at 15,000 yen to the Osaka branch of the Bank of Japan. It is reported that each month hereafter the new coins to the amount of 15,000 yen will be handed out to the bank in Osaka which will distribute to the public as the occasion requires

A two weeks' exhibition of agricultural products representative of the Tokyo prefecture, including the Idzu islands, will be held at Takenodai, Uyeno at the beginning of October, under the auspices of the Tokyo Agricultural Society, supported by the Tokyo prefectural authorities. The Idzu islands will contribute camelia oil, bananas, vegetables, oxen, horses, pigs, sheep and fowls.

Prince Hsiu, of the former Manchu court of China, who has been reported to intend coming over to Japan where his three sons and one daughter are receiving education, is said to have abandoned his proposed trip. It is said that he has suspended his plan in order to avoid any misunderstanding at this time when the question of restoring the Manchu dynasty is being discussed in certain quarters.

The remains of two guns, which are supposed to have been once placed in position on the ramparts in Yokohama by the Shogunate government at the time when the port was first opened for commercial intercourse, have been dug out recently at Nos. 59 and 68 in Yamate-cho, Yokohama. These historic remains are now kept in the Motomachi elementary school in the neighbourhood and will shortly be formally installed in the school if permission is given by the city authorities.

Mr. Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labour, who has abandoned his proposed trip to Japan on account of America's severance of relations with Germany, sent a lengthy cable to Mr. Sudzuki, President of the Yuaikai, the Japanese Labour Union, on last Sunday. In his telegram Mr. Gompers strongly encouraged the members of the Yuaikai to do their best to maintain the cordial friendship between America and Japan and to effect the satisfactory solution of all the outstanding problems between the two countries.

It has been discovered that serious damage has been done to the Imperial villa at Odawara by white ants, which have also wrought havoc in the Nijo Detached Palace in Kyoto and the Imperial villa at Kamakura recently. The damage is said to be so serious that the entire bulk of the foundation of the Imperial villa has been eroded by ants to the extent of necessitating immediate repairs, and the Bureau of Construction in the Imperial Household Department is reported to have decided to start shortly repair work on a big scale and commence the extermination of the pests.

It is reported that Dr. Sun Yat-sen will establish a bank with a capital of three million yen, and Mr. Kuhara, mine magnate of Osaka has been consulted by Dr. Sun upon the new enterprise. Dr. Sun is counting upon the payment of 2,700,000 yen which he demanded of the Chinese Government as expenses spent in the third revolution, and it is believed that Mr. Kuhara will also invest in the new bank of Dr. Sun.

The plan of the new Bank is to establish branch offices throughout Japan as well as in China.

A plan is now being mooted to establish a reformatory in Seoul for the education of depraved Korean youngsters. The scheme has been launched at the instance of Mr. Miyadate, chief of the police station in Seoul, and others and he is now in Osaka to inspect the reform work of refractory children there. It is said that there can be found now no reformatory in Korea where each year shows a tendency towards the increase of depraved children, and it is a matter of urgent necessity to establish such institutions in Korea. There will be accommodation for about 100 boys and girls at the Seoul reformatory, which is to be established with generous donations from Japanese and Koreans.

CORRESPONDENCE

THE REV. MCCALEB AND FLAGS

[To the Editor of the "Japan Times"]

Sir:—In reference to the recent disturbance at Zoshigaya Gakuin will you kindly allow me to say in the first place that, in as much as there is no law demanding that the flags be hoisted on national holidays, it has not been our custom to hoist them on all occasions, but mainly on New Year's Day and His Imperial Majesty's birthday. On the latter occasion I not infrequently read such scripture portions as Rom. 13: 1—7 regarding the Christian's duty to the "powers that be."

No friction has ever risen over the above custom till now. Many of my neighbors do not hoist the flags on national holidays. My reason for not doing so except on the two occasions mentioned, was because they seemed to contain an element of ancestor worship, a point on which the Japanese themselves are divided. When requested by the students to raise the flags on Kigensetsu I suggested that it was an act of worship. On this the students were divided, some admitting that it was, while others said it was only a memorial. One young man went so far as to say it was not only worship but that Jimmu Tenno was greater than Christ. As a Christian this put me in a very embarrassing position. Without my consent however the students went ahead and hoisted the flags on their own responsibility and they remained out all day with no objection from me.

On Monday morning following I went to two of my neighbors, former students of Zoshigaya Gakuin, for consultation. They succeeded in convincing me that there was no element of worship in Kigensetsu and on my behalf went to the students with my apology and sought a reconciliation, but without effect.

With me it was not a question of respecting the flag of my adopted country, for this I have ever held to be a Christian duty: but the only question was, Should I be required to worship the Japanese ancestors?

I even went beyond what I considered fair in the hope of reconciling the young men, but, though assisted by many friends, our efforts were unavailing. It was impossible to accept their counter proposals. As a result, having given us all a bad name, they went out. But, "being reviled we bless; being persecuted we endure; being defamed we entreat." For, "when he was reviled he reviled not again; when he suffered he threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously."

Such are the follies of misguided youth. It is to be hoped that with the coming of the years will come greater wisdom.

Most Sincerely Yours,
(Sd.) J. M. McCaleb.

Zoshigaya Gakuin,
Feb. 26, 1917.

ENGLAND EXPECTS A DECISION AT SEA

London, Jan. 28.—Confidence in the Lloyd George Ministry was stimulated last week by the getting together of the allied navies, which in the past had lacked co-ordination; and there are signs of intense, if unadvertised, activity at the Admiralty that fit into the generally accepted theory of an impending trial of strength between Britain and Germany that will test the comparative resources of the two countries on, and particularly under, the sea. Visibility of preparations is not needed to give warning of the conflict that may prove the last phase of the war. The deadliest sea attack ever offered by one great country and the most resolute defense ever made by another seem staged for a future so near that it may be only to-morrow.

Two Western nations are resorting desperately to the oriental method of stangulation—Britain by blockade, and Germany by submarine. While the Asquith Government waited Germany got ready her undersea fleet, whose numbers are estimated by some as high as 800, most of them submarine cruisers built to operate far from their base. Opposed to this attack is the traditional blue water policy of Britain, which has produced the greatest fleet ever assembled under one flag, manned by a personnel in which every sailor and officer is true to type, and commanded by a combination of brains, skill, and dash. Carson, Jellicoe, and Beatty, with such resources, ought to prove themselves unbeatable.

The unknown quantity is whether the enemy has stolen a march on the old Government, which delayed while every shipyard in Germany worked ceaselessly. At the present rate the U-boats are wearing down merchant tonnage faster than it is being replaced. The new Department of Shipping, under Sir Joseph Maclay, is applying itself strenuously to organizing shipbuilding. All facilities are to be used for building small cargo boats in large numbers and turning them out quickly. Parts are to be standardized and widely scattered facilities assembled at convenient centres, thus tearing another leaf from Germany's book.

The Government is not taking the public into its confidence regarding the arming of merchantmen, which might prove a vital element in the submarine defense programme. Here England comes up against America, as Germany does in respect to sinking at sight. If England can arm forward and abeam as well as aft, she can in time enable each merchantman to meet the attacking submarine on equal fighting terms, thus giving her a strength of four to one, counting her merchant fleet at 4,000 and conceding the German maximum of 1,000 submarines.

Similarly if Germany could turn loose her undersea fleet without bothering about sea law as interpreted by the United States, and with the bare purpose of sinking every ship bound for an English port, she might reduce England by starvation.

The British public is slow to take alarm, but it is in the air that the last desperate stroke is about to fail. Aside from the effect on the war and the consequences to the human stomach, both of which might be serious, there is a dramatic interest in the challenge to the Briton in his own particular aqueous element, and it is worthy of remark that in the third year of the war it is on sea rather than on land that Germany is putting forth her offensive.

The Government stood its first test last week, when the Labour Party, in convention at Manchester, proclaimed its adhesion by an overwhelming vote. Mr. Asquith was supposed to have a sort of proprietorship in this field; but a year ago his Government was indorsed by a vote of five to one, whereas Lloyd George had six to one last week.

The action of the convention was significant in view of the prophecies of labour's insubordination. Much credit is due to the representatives of labour in the Cabinet—Henderson, Wardle, and Hodge—who have thus vindicated the Prime Minister's judgment of men. These three made an open and bold fight before the convention at Manchester, with the result that the opposition, led by Philip Snowden and Ramsay Macdonald, was snowed under. With labour formally committed and undoubtedly sympathetic, the present Government has surmounted the first menace to the stability from within. While the labour people were not modest in claiming what they wanted during and after the war, the Manchester Convention recommended its self-seeking by its breadth of view as well as its patriotism, and has left a comparatively good impression.

URGES VIGOROUS BRITISH PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN IN U. S.

The following letter by Henry Arthur Jones, the playwright, appears in the London "Times": "The letter which you published from C. F. Campbell, urging the necessity for a vigorous British publicity campaign in America, needs to be acted upon without delay. Perhaps no greater calamity could now befall civilization than an active estrangement of America and Great Britain.

"There seems a danger that America will lend her support to bring about a hasty and impotent conclusion of the conflict. The successive notes of President Wilson have given Englishmen the impression that he is not merely neutral between the Allies and Germany, but neutral between right and wrong, between the foulest and bloodiest tyranny that ever tried to bestride the earth and the hard-set peoples who are agonizing to overthrow it.

"I don't say that his private attitude may not be quite different from his public attitude as stamped upon his public utterances, but President Wilson's public utterances undoubtedly command, in large measure, the approval of his countrymen. A great body of American people apparently acquiesce in the statement that represents the war as a terrible European squabble where no great forces of right and wrong are grappling with each other, where no ideals of civilization are at stake, where the future of humanity and all the sanctities of life are no more imperilled by the victory of one side than of the other.

"Therefore, says this large body of American opinion: 'Let us get it over as soon as possible.' It is to be feared that this feeling in America of indifference to the moral issues and impatience at the continuance of the war has very largely increased.

"I was in America during the first nine months of the war. I was glad to watch the gradual crystallizing of all that is best and soundest in American opinion in favour of our cause, due not to anything that was said from the British side, for nothing was said, but to unanswerable arguments by such Americans as Joseph H. Choate, James M. Beck, Elihu Root, Theodore Roosevelt and others, and also to the martyrdom of Belgium.

"I met with instances of unscrupulous German misrepresentation and journalistic forgery of fact. When I proposed to contradict them I was dissuaded by American friends. 'Let them alone,' I was advised. 'Von Bernstorff and Dernburg are your best friends. The American people will judge between you and Germany.'

"How are the American people judging between us and Germany to-day? I was in New York when the news of the sinking of the Lusitania came. I witnessed the great and magnanimous outburst of anger, horror and detestation that followed. I can not think it is the same nation that now seems inclined to bid us halt and shake hands with the hand that has done murder, rape, every abominable cruelty and crime and patch up a niggling, precarious peace that will betray our common civilization.

"What is the reason for this gradual change of feeling among the great part of the American people? The best of them are still with us, more devoted than ever to our common cause. The best minds in America know surely that we are fighting their battles as we are fighting our own. Many thousands of heroic Americans are now fighting our battles and dying in our ranks, winning renown that all nations will be proud, some day, to share, but why are the great masses of Americans so cold and indifferent?

"The German press campaign in America has been constantly and unscrupulously pursued, aided by every device of chicanery and misrepresentation. It has succeeded in blinding and befogging many Americans in Central and Western America who are remote from the war and not directly concerned.

"We have no need of lies and misrepresentations. We have only to rehearse the plain facts to bring them vividly home to Americans. I am persuaded we shall gain their verdict upon these two main counts:

"First, the Allies are fighting for the cause of fundamental European and American civilization.

"Second, there can be no compromise with crime, and there are no peace without victory.

"In the interest of good understanding between America and Great Britain, during the anxious months to come, let us see the plain facts in our case laid before all Americans without delay."

TIGHTENING BRITISH BLOCKADE

An official dispatch from London received at the Foreign Office says that the British government has issued a Privy Council ordinance under date of February 16 relative to trading with the enemy by shipping, with a view to making more effective Britain's blockade as a means to compete with the recent German declaration of submarine warfare. The purport of the ordinance is as follows:

Those vessels which are sailing to and from the ports of neutral countries closely situated to the enemy countries without calling at British ports or the ports of the allies shall be regarded as carrying cargo for the enemy or cargo produced in enemy countries, unless they can show counter-proofs, and such vessels shall be brought before prize courts for examination or trial.

The vessels carrying such cargo shall be seized or confiscated for the reason of their carrying such cargo. Those vessels which are on their way to certain designated British ports or other allied ports to receive inspection of their cargo shall not be seized or confiscated simply on the ground of having carried such cargo, nor shall they be treated under such supposition as stated in the first part of the foregoing clause.

Those goods which have been recognised as cargo for the enemy or produced in enemy countries as the result of examination shall be confiscated.

According to the explanation of the Minister of Blockade, most of the vessels plying between the Netherlands and Scandinavia on the one side and the United States on the other have hitherto been in the habit of calling in British ports in order to avoid being subjected to inspection or search on the high seas, but recently as the result of the unrestricted submarine warfare decided on by Germany some of those vessels have come to dispense with calling at British ports or other allied ports. This state of things has necessitated the promulgation of the present ordinance on the part of the British Government. In the case of those vessels being found not engaged trading with the enemy they may receive inspection or examination at the ports other than those in England, such as Halifax, Nova Scotia and other ports, for which steps the British Government is considering proper measures.

PLUCKY JAPANESE WOMAN OF THIRTY-FOUR

Mrs. Sada Nagai is perhaps the oldest primary school pupil in Japan, as she is 34 years old. Mrs. Nagai is in the fifth year class of the so-called "special" school at Shin-ami-cho, Shiba, which place is one of the slums in Tokyo. Born in a village in Aomori prefecture, Sada San married a farmer there, but she was ill-starred enough to soon be left a widow with a small baby. Fortune began to frown upon this unlucky widow, but adversity after adversity at last served to stir her to the resolution to make her way in the world in spite of misfortune.

Sada San with this firm resolution and ambition left her paternal roof in the North, boarding out her baby with a relative and came up to Tokyo four years ago as many of her country sisters do in search of a livelihood. She is however blessed with a strong will power and has never gone astray. At first she became a maid-servant at the house of Viscount Imashiro at Sendagaya and saved up as much money as she could. Viscount Imashiro's family parted with the faithful maid with regret a year ago, but Sada San was then resolved to become an expert midwife. She is now learning to become an accoucheuse. In her childhood she did not receive any school education. She was literally uneducated until a few months ago, so that she has entered the said school to commence her education from the very beginning. She has made remarkable progress up to date and she will soon complete the course of the primary school. Every night she goes to school and learns her lessons with the children of the very poor.

MYSTERY OF TWO SHIPS LOST OFF COLOMBO

A Kure dispatch says that the cause of the sinking of the two British steamers off Colombo some time ago has been ascertained as the result of the investigation made by the naval authorities. No details, however, can be given as the publication of the news has been suppressed by the naval authorities. It is only learned that the disaster was due to some special origin, which cannot, however, be stated for the reason just mentioned, and it was by a mere accident contrary to the supposition that ascribed the accident to the appearance of an enemy submarine or converted cruiser. The naval authorities declare that there is no danger to shipping in the Indian ocean and neighbourhood.

The "Asahi" publishes a telephone message from Kobe, which says that according to a report received in a certain quarter there from a reliable source, the sinking of the British steamers has been ascertained as the result of their having come in contact with mechanical mines, by which they were blown up and foundered. At the same time the discovery of a floating mechanical mine on the sea off the western coast of India has been reported to the authorities by the captain of a Japanese steamer. It is supposed that mines were perhaps thrown into the sea in the direction of Arabia by Germans with a view to menacing the Allies' shipping in the Indian Ocean, or they might have come from the direction of Cape Town and been carried by the current.

The names of the British steamers, which are believed to have sunk off Colombo, are reported as the Worcestershire and the Perseus according to the telegram received at the Nippon Yusen Kaisha. Their names, however, lack confirmation, especially is the nationality of the former in doubt. As to the Perseus, it is believed to be the Holt liner Perseus (6,728 tons) for which Butterfield & Swire Company, are agents. The company is engaged in investigations as to the fate of the steamer. According to Mr. Cumming, the manager of the company, the Perseus arrived at Yokohama on September 27, last year, from Liverpool, and left the port on October 2 taking in machinery, glass, fertilizer and other goods. The vessel carried a crew of 73 under Captain R. Hunson. The company has received no information about the sinking, but judging from the date of the disaster and other circumstances they are inclined to think that the news is correct.

It should be noted in this connection that Lloyds have already announced the loss of the Perseus.

ONE MORE PHANTOM SHIP IS ABROAD AGAIN

A week ago, the Navy Department was in receipt of a dispatch reporting the appearance of an enemy vessel off Colombo, which had attacked and sunk a British steamer on the 17th. The navy authorities at once issued orders to the Japanese warships detailed in those waters to ascertain details and take necessary steps. Another telegram was received on Feb. 23 in a reliable quarter to the same effect, but adding that another British steamer had been sunk by an enemy vessel in the same waters. On receiving this information the navy authorities sent further orders yesterday to the Japanese warships commissioned with the duty of protecting the shipping interests in those waters to probe the matter fully.

According to another version, a telegram received in a certain reliable quarter on Feb. 23 says that a German converted warterday says that a German converted warship appeared off Colombo and sank a British steamer on the 17th and another British steamer on the 22nd southwest of Colombo. Rumour has it that the said enemy vessel is a submarine. Again it is said the raider subsequently exploded and sank, which is scarcely credible.

The alleged appearance of the German vessel or vessels in the neighbourhood of The Nippon Yusen Kaisha on Feb. 23 sent lippines has been repeatedly reported for some time past, and the present reports, which came hot on the footsteps of the former rumours, seem to have caused some alarm in shipping circles, though the names of the sunken steamers are not reported and therefore the story is the more flimsy. The Nippon Yusen Kaisha yesterday sent a telegram of enquiry about the truth of the report to its branch in Bombay, enquiring for available details and the sphere of the danger zone, but no reply to the enquiry had been received last night. As regards the alleged appearance of an enemy submarine in Indian waters, the naval authorities strongly deny the possibility, though they cannot absolutely deny the existence of an enemy converted warship. At any rate, it is believed, that a squadron of "a certain" country has been detailed in that direction to search for the mysterious vessel.

DR. TANAKADATE'S INVENTION

Dr. Aikitsu Tanakadate is reported to have invented an instrument to be used by aviators to ascertain their position more accurately during flights. Dr. Tanakadate intends to test his instrument before long.

Sometime in March Dr. Tanakadate will fly in the dirigible "Yuhi-Go" over Tokyo, Saitama, Chiba and Yebaraki prefectures to try his instrument, and preparations are already being made at Tokorozawa for his arrival.

For several years Dr. Tanakadate has been studying the variations shown by the compass in different parts of the country, and his investigation in this direction brought out the idea of inventing a compass by which aviators could ascertain accurately their position in the air.

In the past, aviators have been unable to ascertain their exact position during night fights or in heavy mists, and Dr. Tanakadate is confident that by his new instrument any aviator will be able to tell exactly where he is flying. If the instrument prove a success, it will be of great service to aviators, and flying at night or in mist will be much safer.

KOKUSAI-HAVAS

[Delayed in Transmission]

Paris, Feb. 21.—To-day's date marks the first anniversary of the beginning of the battle of Verdun, the greatest onslaught in the history of the war so far.

A year ago to-day, the German army, under the Crown Prince, started their stupendous effort to tear their way through on the road to Paris in the hopes of beating France to her knees. The enemy, however, only met with disastrous failure.

It was the fiercest and most sanguinary battle ever known and lasted many months. It was distinguished by three features. First, that which called forth the admiration of the world was the heroic, splendid resistance of the French Army; second, the fearful losses inflicted on the Germans, who were hurled against the French lines in dense masses and mown down by the French artillery and machine-guns. Third, a concentration on the German side of heavy artillery which, until the Somme offensive launched by the Allies last July, exceeded anything that had ever been seen before on any battle front.

When the British and French armies opened their joint attacks on the German position on the Somme, the enemy's assaults had brought him on to the right bank of the Meuse, within four miles of the fortress and town of Verdun. But he got no nearer; and even while the battle of the Somme was still raging the French Verdun army returned to the attack and, on October 24, achieved a notable victory.

The German line was pushed back at Douaumont, the fort re-taken, and something like 5,000 prisoners were captured. The French struck the second blow on December 15 and followed it up with others on succeeding days.

The victory was far more sweeping on this occasion than that won in October. Much ground was regained, more than 11,000 prisoners taken and 115 guns seized or destroyed.

The new French lines thus established have remained practically intact from the end of December until the present time.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 22.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his communiqué on Wednesday evening, says: "We seized a portion of the enemy's trenches, to-day, northeast of Gueudecourt. South of Armentières, we entered the hostile trenches on a front of 650 yards, penetrating to some depth and inflicting many casualties.

"We made a raid south-east of Ypres, on a 500-yard front, reaching the support line. Many of the enemy were killed, dugouts and mine shafts were destroyed and 114 prisoners taken here.

"The total number of prisoners for the day was 184. Our casualties were slight."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 25.—Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig in his Saturday evening Communiqué says, as a result of our increasing pressure, the enemy vacated an important position on the Ancre.

We progressed considerably on a mile front south and south-east of Miraumont and entered Petit-Miraumont. We also advanced on a front of a mile and a half south and south-east of Serre.

The enemy rushed one of our posts west of Lens, but a counter-attack immediately recovered the position.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

London, Feb. 26.—It is officially announced that the British forces have entered Petit Miraumont in France.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 26.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Sunday evening communiqué says: "The enemy continued to yield ground along the Ancre, and small bodies of our troops advanced on a wide front and occupied Serre and other important points to the east, meeting with little opposition."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 26.—Reuter's Correspondent at British Headquarters in France telegraphs that a patrol on Saturday morning first discovered the retirement of the German line in the Ancre Valley.

The extreme depth to which the German retreat had been carried out was reported to be three miles.

We occupied Miraumont, Miraumont-le-petit, Pys and Serre without obstinate resistance.

We advanced on Saturday evening on Warlencourt and Irles and Miraumont on the enemy's heels, and gained a large tract of country with no loss of life.

There is an unconfirmed report that the enemy is evacuating Bapaume, a great strategic point, whence explosions and fires are observed proceeding.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 27.—Reuter's correspondent at the British Headquarters says the capture of Serre gives the British the most dominating position for further operations.

The famous position at Butte Warlencourt was also occupied.

The fog which prevailed was most advantageous to the enemy, as it shielded their retirement from our aeroplanes, while the frost of the preceding days enabled them to withdraw most of their guns.

The Germans left a few guns to make a show of firing, and a quantity of ammunition for the simple reason that they had not time to move them.

Until the British patrols have reported it is impossible to say where the Germans will make a stand, but the ridge at Bapaume is most probable.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 27.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Monday evening Communiqué, says our advance has been maintained, and extends along an eleven mile front eastward of Gudecourt to southward of Gommecourt, and to a depth of two miles.

We have occupied Warlencourt-Eaucourt, Pys, and Miraumont, and reached the outskirts of Lebarquieries and Buisiecuxan Mont.

We repulsed, with loss, German attacks on our post southward of the Somme, and successfully raided Arras, Monchyanbois and Lens.

ON THE RUSSIAN FRONTS

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Feb. 23.—Western front. After one hour's artillery preparation the Germans, about two battalions strong, attacked the Russian positions twenty kilometres east of Zolochoff, and succeeded in rushing into the Russian trenches, but were repulsed by a counterattack.

Firing and reconnoissances continue on the Rumanian and on the Caucasian fronts.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Feb. 26.—Western front. South of the Vishnewski Lake the enemy released a gascloud which reached the Russian trenches but owing to a change of the wind it turned towards the trenches of the enemy.

Firing continues on the Rumanian front.

Caucasus front. The Turks, about one company in strength, tried to advance against a Russian vanpost south of Petra Kale (southwest of Elleu), but were repulsed by the Russian fire.

Later.—Western front. Russian scout detachments after an artillery preparation entered the enemy's trenches west of Jablonica (northeast of Koresmezo) and took 26 prisoners.

Firing and reconnaissances continue on the Rumanian front.

Caucasus front. The Russian scouts attacked an enemy's vanpost near the western bank of the Van Lake, repulsing the Turks with heavy losses, taking prisoner 11 officers and 38 men.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Feb. 27.—Western front. Near Smorgony the enemy performed a gas attack, letting out 8 gas clouds in 7 hours.

Firing and reconnoissances continue on the Rumanian front.

Caucasus front. The attack of the Turks on the Russian troops, north of the Sivass roadway, was repulsed by Russian fire and counter-attack.

CAMPAIGN IN MESOPOTAMIA

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 24.—An official communiqué regarding the operations in Mesopotamia reports that the British have secured and consolidated two lines of trenches at the southern end of the Sannaiyat position. Fighting continues. The Tigris river has risen to flood level, thus hindering operations.

London, Feb. 26.—Mr. A. Bonar Law announced in the House of Commons today that all the Turkish positions on the Tigris River front from Sannaiyat to Kut-el-Amara had been captured. The Turks are retreating toward Baghailah pursued by British cavalry.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 26.—In the House of Commons to-day Mr. A. Bonar Law, on behalf of the Premier, announced that as a result of the operations in Mesopotamia, the whole of the enemy positions at Sannaiyat and Kut-el-Amara had been secured, and thus Kut-el-Amara itself passes automatically into British hands.

The Turkish communiqué admits the evacuation of Kut "according to a prearranged plan, and in order to effect a junction with re-inforcements."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 27.—The official report from Mesopotamia reads: "Early on Saturday morning, we captured the ridge across the neck of the Shumnah Peninsula. It then became evident that the enemy was in full retreat in the direction of Baghoulah, to the west of Kut-el-Amara. Turkish dêpots and stores were seen to be afire. A strong force of cavalry and infantry were engaged heavily all day long, and inflicted severe casualties on the enemy.

In the meantime, the British pursue their successes at Sannaiyat and captured the fifth Turkish line, the Nakjailat and Suivada positions and regained the Atabarash-Magasis line.

Aeroplanes co-operated, and were invaluable in bombing and using their machine-guns, flying at minimum altitudes. We took during the two days 1830 prisoners and the whole of the enemy's positions from Sannaiyat to Kut-el-Amara being thus secured, Kut itself automatically passes into our hands.

The full Turkish losses are not yet known."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 27.—The official communiqué from Mesopotamia reads: "The southern portion of the Sannaiyat position captured by our troops on Thursday, consisted of two lines of defenses on a 450 yards' frontage, with a depth of 100 yards.

"The enemy launched six counter-attacks against us in an attempt to regain the positions, but failed on each occasion. Our assault, on Thursday afternoon, resulted in the capture of two lines on a 900-yard front.

"Before day-break on Friday, we crossed the Tigris in the neighbourhood of the bed of the Shumran River. Our covering parties established themselves on the left bank taking a number of prisoners.

"Within nine hours we had completed a bridge and consolidated our position despite the stubborn resistance of the enemy.

"We simultaneously resumed the assault on Sannaiyat and captured the third and fourth lines of defense on a front of 1050 yards. On Friday we took 544 prisoners in the Shumran area."

FUTILITY OF GERMAN BLOCKADE

London Feb. 21.—The Report for 1916 of the Liverpool Steamship Owners' Association shows that the ocean-going tonnage of Great Britain has been reduced less than 5 per cent. after 30 months of war. The figures, says the Report, show the futility of the German blockade.

LATEST NEWS OF PIRACY DECLARATION BY GERMANY

Strong Action Taken By Neturals Led By The United States In Protest

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

Hongkong, Feb. 22.—Mr. Liang Shi-yi, President of the Bank of Communications has granted an interview to Reuter's representative here, in which he expressed delight and commendation of the protest by the President of China and the Cabinet against Germany's declaration of unrestricted submarine warfare.

"I favour China joining the Allies at this juncture," said Mr. Liang. "At the same time, I think it is due to the friendly relations between China and Japan and to the mutual interest of both countries that the Orient should be inseparably bound together.

"It would be well for China to work conjointly with Japan. I am of opinion, therefore, that before China takes her final decisive step, she should openly and frankly disclose her mind to Japan and sincerely endeavour to reach perfect understanding and co-operation. As soon as this is accomplished, I say deliberately, and emphatically that there should be no waste of time in waiting for Germany's reply. We should forthwith declare ourselves on the side of the Allies and throw in China's lot with them."

Owing to the opposition in a section of official circles and among parliamentary members, the Chinese Government has been hesitating to take a final step towards Germany, though it had already decided on severing relations after repeated conferences of Ministers of State. In this connection, says local rumour, Messrs. Liu Cheng-hsiang and Liang Chi-chao have been sounding the views of the allied Ministers about the matter, and as a result they have ascertained that the latter are very strong in their attitude. The Chinese Government, in consequence, has almost decided on taking a decisive step and carry out its first intention to sever relations with Germany. The decision, however, was only come to after further consultation among the Ministers and parliamentary members. To arrive at a definite decision, Vice-President Feng Kuo-chang is reported to be going to Peking from Nanking shortly to meet President Li Yuan-hung and Premier Tuan Chi-jui. It is surmised that on his arrival in Peking he will seek an interview with the President, the Premier and other prominent ministers and mandarins, and settle the final steps to be taken by the Government towards Germany and the question of China's participation in the war on the side of the Allies.

Because Mr. Feng Kuo-chang did not participate in the conference at which the question of sending a strong protest to the German Note relating to unrestricted submarine warfare was discussed and decided on, he was somewhat displeased with the Government attitude, and raised opposition to the Government decision on diplomatic rupture with Germany; and was also against China's participation in the war on the side of the Allies. But as the result of an understanding between him and Premier Tuan since then, the Vice-President while agreeing to wink at the sending of a strong protest to Germany, still has not consented to the proposal of an open rupture with Germany and China's siding with the Allies. Thus it is still uncertain whether China will even now carry out the decision of severing her relations with Germany and join the Allies. The general belief is that in the end China will break with Germany, but probably take no active part on behalf of the Allies. This question remains to be settled later. As the Allies may or may not take high-handed measures in case China further hesitates, it is thought that China will give a final decision soon to avoid causing awkward developments.

In that case it is possible that China will approach the Allies openly with the proposals providing for the revision of the customs tariff and the postponement of the payment of the Boxer indemnity as the conditions for her participation in the war.

The Allies will probably consent to China's proposals, though not in their entirety, in view of the fact that already the allied Ministers at Peking are exchanging views on the subject of the tariff revision informally proposed by China. With regard to the question of the proposed custom tariff revision, the standpoint of Japan is not the same as other members of the allied group, as it has an important bearing upon Japan's trade interests with China. Consequently a good deal depends on what measures the Japanese Government takes about the matter.

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

Peking, Feb. 23.—The Vice-President Feng Kuo-cheng arrived in Peking to-day from Nanking. Much interest attaches to his visit. Especially in view of an agreement to purchase opium stocks in Shanghai which it is alleged Mr. Feng Kuo-cheng concluded on his own authority and for which he has been much criticized. It is stated that a number of outstanding questions will be settled during the visit of the Vice-President including that of the future action of China toward Germany.

The Chinese newspapers also predict some important change in the Cabinet.

A telegram received in Tokyo yesterday says that the German Government has handed Mr. Yen Hui-ching, the Chinese Minister at Berlin, a Note in reply to China's protest, stating that the German Government did not think the protest sent in by the Chinese Government was made on its own initiative, but Germany did not refuse to recognize some amount of reason in China's protestation to which she had only to reply that she wanted to have it clearly understood that she did not intend at all to threaten the lives and properties of Chinese subjects. The Note further stated that Germany had entertained very friendly intentions towards China in the past and Germany wished to continue to be friendly towards that country in future as well and that this friendship could not be injured by any interference of a third party. The Chinese Minister has transmitted the full contents of the German Note to Peking.

In this connection, a Peking dispatch says that the Chinese Government was on the 21st in receipt of a telegram from its Minister to Berlin, containing the reply of the German Government to China's protest. Not only is Germany's reply quite beside the main points of the protestation made by China, but also it is anything but friendly as China expected. Consequently the Chinese Government is trying to keep its contents in strict secrecy.

A Peking message dated the 23rd says that according to the authorities of the Peking Government the German government sent a secret telegram to the Chinese Government through the Chinese Minister at Berlin a few days ago. The text of the secret message has nothing to say as to China's protest but merely expresses Germany's wishes for the maintenance of the friendly relationship between China and Germany, adding that China should not listen to the suggestions of the Allies.

A telegram received in Tokyo on Feb. 24 to Berlin, in his telegram stated that the German Government had published the text of China's protest to Germany, but in doing so had struck out that part of the protest in which China declared that in case Germany failed to accept China's protest China would be compelled to break off relations with Germany. It is understood that the German Government has published China's protest after wiring secret message to Peking, which is anything satisfying to China. The Chinese Government, on the receipt of the German reply, has at once urged Vice-President Feng Kuo-chang to come to Peking to discuss the next step to be taken by China towards Germany, which is expected to be carried out very soon.

Petrograd, Feb. 23.—Commenting on the memorandum sent by President Wilson to Austria, the "Russkij Velia" forecasts the full adherence by Austria to the ruthless submarine warfare will give America not only liberty to break off relations, but the right to adopt more active measures. If, however, inspired by Germany, Austria makes certain concessions, President Wilson gains the opportunity to pursue diplomatic relations hovering between peace and war.

The "Novoye Vremya" considers the memorandum well-calculated to justify the forthcoming rupture of diplomatic relations between America and Austria.

The "Gazette de Bourse" opines that the memorandum will be read with a feeling of bitterness both in Vienna and Berlin. The German Government will be obliged to again capitulate or incur all the consequences of a war with the rich trans-Atlantic Power.

KOKUSAI-HAVAS

Paris, Feb. 20.—The very effective measures taken by the Allies against the threatened blockade by Germany of the coast of France, as well as against those of England and Italy, are proved by the figures showing the number of entries into French ports since the blockade was declared on February.

No less than 112 ships on the average have daily reached the harbours of France during the first half of February as against a daily average of about 100 during November and December last. The number of entries is, therefore, very satisfactory—the more especially so in view of the fact that some neutral owners taking the blockade menace seriously, have hitherto not allowed their ships to leave their ports. It is evident now that the much vaunted German submarine threat is not giving the results its authors hoped for.

Another point to note is that the U-boats are chiefly attacking unarmed ships and are very chary about approaching vessels, upon which anything resembling a gun can be detected. In a few days all French merchantmen, not excepting those of small tonnage will carry pieces of ordnance.

The "Manchester Guardian" has published figures showing that the losses inflicted on merchant shipping during the past week of the new campaign of ruthless submarine warfare, have fallen below the weekly average for last December.

New York, Feb. 23.—A message from Washington announces that a telegram has been received from the American Consul at Malta, which announces that the M.M. liner Athos was the victim of a submarine on February 17, when 210 miles east of Malta. The message says that the Rev. Robert A. Haden, of the American Presbyterian Mission at Soochow, China, perished as the result of the disaster.

The Athos was a vessel of 12,000 tons, built in 1914.

The Yokohama agent of the Messageries Maritimes received a telegram from the head office in Marseilles at 7 a.m. on Feb. 24, which announced that the Athos was torpedoed at noon on February 17 and sank in five minutes. The message added that all on board were saved by the arrival of an allied warship.

When the vessel left Yokohama, she had on board mails and general cargo valued at 2,000,000 yen of which three-quarters was in silk. The principal shippers of silk were the Mitsu Bussan Kaisha 412 piculs, Sulzer, Rudolph & Co. 305, Hara Yushutsu-ten 115, Adet, Campredon & Co. 115. Sieber, Hegner & Co. 222, Jardine, Matheson & Co. 45 and, Jewett & Bent 40. Dell' Oro & Co., the American Trading Co., and a few others shipped raw silk.

Washington, Feb. 23.—Senator Fall, a Republican, has introduced to the Senate a resolution authorising President Wilson to employ armed forces to protect the lives and property of Americans from the German submarine menace.

The resolution was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

An acrimonious debate took place earlier in the session, the Democrats accusing the Republicans of delaying legislation with the object of forcing an extra session of Congress. The Democrats announced that their own purpose was a continuous session until the Revenue Bill and other important Bills are ratified. Accordingly at a late hour to-night the Senate showed no signs of an adjournment.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 24.—The House of Commons was crowded to-day when the Premier, Mr. Lloyd George, addressed it on the situation.

On rising he was loudly cheered. He said that the success of the allied cause depended upon the solution of tonnage difficulties. Over a million tons of our shipping has been allocated to France alone, a considerable amount to Russia and Italy, and also a considerable amount had been sunk. There was not only a shortage for the general needs of the nation, but also for military purposes. The nation must be prepared for drastic measures to cope with submarinism, otherwise disaster confronted us. The tonnage problem must therefore be tackled ruthlessly and promptly by naval measures, the building of new ships, dispensing with unnecessary imports, and increasing home food production.

With regard to imports Mr. Lloyd George said that the problem of timber, of which 6,400,000 tons were imported last year, must be dealt with in order to save tonnage.

We were importing millions of tons of iron ore while there was plenty of low-grade ore in Great Britain. If we could augment the supply of labour we could enormously increase the output, thus effecting a large saving of tonnage.

Our foodstuffs at present were lamentably low, not owing to the submarines but to the bad harvest. We must make every effort to increase production in 1917.

It was proposed to guarantee the farmer a minimum price for wheat, oats, and barley. The guaranteed minimum price of wheat per quarter would be sixty shillings in 1917, fifty-five shillings for the next two years, and forty-five shillings for the next three years.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 24.—Concluding his speech on the situation, Mr. Lloyd George, the Premier, said paper imports would be reduced to 640,000 tons which was half the present allowance.

All essential food-stuffs would be placed on the free list, but apples, tomatoes and certain raw fruits would be prohibited.

Mineral waters would be prohibited, and importation of cocoa and coffee would be temporarily stopped as we had large stocks of these.

The importation of foreign tea would be prohibited, while even the importation of Indian tea would be reduced to a certain extent. This would save 900,000 tons.

The output of beer would be reduced to 10,000,000 barrels, saving 600,000 tons of imports for its manufacture. Spirits would be correspondingly reduced.

The restrictions would be imposed immediately.

London, Feb. 24.—The Dutch steamers Zaandijk Noorderdijk, Eemland, Jacatra, Menado Bandoen and Gaartenland were torpedoed and sunk on February 22. The crews were landed, and it is presumed that there was no loss of life. The tonnages of the first six steamers above mentioned are given as 4,189; 7,116; 3,770; 5,373; 5,847; 5,851.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

The Hague, Feb. 25.—It is officially announced that when Berlin proclaimed unrestricted submarine warfare, the Dutch Government lodged a protest. Germany was urged to take care that no Dutch vessels en route to or from Dutch ports fell victims to German U-boats. The Berlin Government replied that it was ready to comply with the Dutch demands, but said it was impossible to guarantee absolute safety.

The seven boats, availing themselves of the German offer of opportunity left port together, on February 22. All were torpedoed without the papers being examined. Two hundred members of the crews have been landed, and it is supposed that the remainder are safe.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

The Hague, Feb. 25.—The German Legation, in a long extraordinary explanation of the torpedoing of seven Dutch steamers on February 22, lays the blame on the Dutch.

The Germans allege that the date for the safe home-coming of the Dutch vessels was originally fixed for February 5, postponed to February 9 and then to the eleventh in view of the situation in Holland.

Finally the Dutch shipowners were informed that their vessels could leave in a group either on February 22 or March 17. The safety guaranteed on February 22, however, was only comparative, whereas it was absolute on March 17. The German Government says that the torpedoing was regrettable, but that the shipowners are responsible because their vessels failed on February 22.

Washington, Feb. 25.—The Senate, in session to-day, adopted the Republican resolution, authorizing President Wilson to use the armed forces of the United States to protect American commerce and the property and lives of American citizens.

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

New York, Feb. 26.—The correspondent of the Associated Press at Washington says that President Wilson will address the joint session of Congress at 1 p.m. to-day. He will ask authority to use the forces of the United States to protect American rights on the high seas.

Washington, Feb. 26.—President Wilson appeared before the joint session of Congress, this afternoon, and asked for authority to place the United States in a state of armed neutrality to resist the German submarine menace.

The President continued: "The invasion of the plain rights of neutrals on the high seas, the further sacrifices of American lives and ships, the intolerable blockade of American commerce, almost as effectual as if the country were at war, have taken place as overt acts which, as was only to be expected, have forced me to appeal to Congress."

President Wilson asked to be empowered to take whatever steps might be considered necessary, including the arming of merchantmen and convoying them with war vessels. He asked to be allowed to take whatever other steps might eventually prove needful, and also take measures for adequate means for the protection of Americans, wherever such means were lacking.

President Wilson expressed the devout hope that it would not become necessary to put armed force into action, saying: "I am sure the American people will understand the spirit in which I am now acting, and the purpose I hold nearest to my heart. The American people desire to exercise none but the rights of peace. Our desires are the same as theirs. I am anxious that the people of the nations at war should also understand and not mistrust us. No course of my choosing will lead to war. If war comes, it will be only by the wilful acts of aggression of others."

The President concluded by declaring that he was speaking on behalf of Humanity.

Those in the Senate had remained silent during the whole of the Presidential speech, impressed with the gravity of the issues. But when the President ceased speaking, his auditors gave vent to bursts of applause and cheering which swept through the hall.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S ADDRESS TO CONGRESS

[Official to American Embassy Through Kokusai]

Washington, Feb. 26.—The President to-day addressed Congress in joint session on the situation resulting from Germany's new submarine policy and requested authority to take such steps as may be necessary for the protection of American life and property at sea. The President said:

"No one doubts what it is our duty to do. We must defend our commerce and the lives of our people in the midst of the present trying circumstances with discretion but with clear and steadfast purposes. Only the method and the extent remain to be chosen upon the occasion, if occasion should indeed arise. Since it has unhappily proved impossible to safeguard our neutral rights by diplomatic means against the unwarranted infringement they are suffering at the hands of Germany there may be no recourse but to armed neutrality which we shall know how to maintain and for which there is abundant American precedent.

"It is devoutly to be hoped that it will not be necessary to put armed force anywhere into action; the American people do not desire it and our desire is not different from theirs. I am sure that they will understand the spirit in which I am now acting and the purpose I hold nearest my heart and would wish to exhibit in everything I do. I am anxious that the people of the nations at war also would understand and not mistrust us. I hope that I need give no further proof and assurances than I have already given throughout nearly three years of anxious patience that I am the friend of peace and mean to preserve it for America as long as I am able. I am not now proposing or contemplating war or any steps that need lead to it. I merely request that you will accord me by your own vote and definite bestowal the means and the authority to safeguard in practice the right of a great people who are at peace and who are desirous of exercising none but the rights of peace to follow the pursuits of peace in quietness and good will,—rights recognized time out of mind by all the civilized nations of the world. No course of my choosing or of theirs will lead to war. War can come only by the wilfull acts and aggressions of others.

"You will understand why I can make no definite proposals or forecasts of action now and must ask your supporting authority in the most general terms the form in which action may become necessary cannot yet be foreseen. I believe that the people will be willing to trust me to act with restraint, with prudence and in the true spirit of amity and good faith that they have themselves displayed throughout the trying months and it is in that belief that I request that you will authorize me to supply our merchant ships with defensive arms should that become necessary and with the means of using them and to employ any other instrumentalities or methods that may be necessary and adequate to protect our ships and our people in their legitimate and peaceful pursuits on the seas. I request also that you will grant me at the same time, along with the powers I ask, a sufficient credit to enable me to provide adequate means of protection where they are lacking includ-

Washington, Feb. 26.—The Republican resolution authorising President Wilson to use the armed forces of the United States to protect the commerce, property and lives of Americans was not adopted, but referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The Republicans are, apparently, trying to force an extra session to prevent President Wilson fully controlling the situation as regards Germany.

PRESIDENT WILSON SPEAKES TO CONGRESS

Washington, Feb. 3.—The full text of President Wilson's address before Congress follows:

Gentlemen of the Congress:

The Imperial German Government on the 31st of January announced to this Government and to the Governments of the other neutral nations that on and after the first day of February, the present month, it would adopt a policy with regard to the use of submarines against all shipping seeking to pass through certain designated areas of the high seas, to which it is clearly my duty to call your attention.

Let me remind the Congress that on the 18th of April last, in view of the sinking, on the 24th of March, of the cross-Channel passenger steamer Sussex by a German submarine, without summons or warning, and the consequent loss of the lives of several citizens of the United States who were passengers aboard her, this Government addressed a note to the Imperial German Government, in which it made the following declaration:

If it is still the purpose of the Imperial German Government to prosecute relentless and indiscriminate warfare against vessels of commerce by the use of submarines, without regard to what the Government of the United States must consider the sacred and indisputable rules of international law and the universally recognized dictates of humanity, the Government of the United States is at last forced to the conclusion that there is but one course it can pursue. Unless the Imperial Government should now immediately declare and effect an abandonment of its present methods of submarine warfare against passenger and freight carrying vessels, the Government of the United States can have no choice but to sever diplomatic relations with the German Empire altogether.

In reply to this declaration the Imperial German Government gave this Government the following assurance:

The German Government is prepared to do its utmost to confine the operations of war for the rest of its duration, to the fighting forces of the belligerents, thereby also insuring the freedom of the seas, a principle upon which the German Government believes now, as before, to be in agreement with the Government of the United States.

The German Government, guided by this idea, notifies the Government of the United States that the German naval forces have received the following orders: In accordance with the general principles of visit and search and destruction of merchant vessels, recognized by international law, such vessels, both within and without the area declared a naval war zone, shall not be sunk without warning and without saving human lives, unless these ships attempt to escape or offer resistance.

But, it added, neutrals cannot expect that Germany, forced to fight for her existence, shall, for the sake of neutral interest, restrict the use of an effective weapon if her enemy is permitted to continue to apply at will methods of warfare violating the rules of international law. Such a demand would be incompatible with the character of neutrality, and the German Government is convinced that the Government of the United States does not think of making such a demand, knowing that the Government of the United States has repeatedly declared that it is determined to restore the principle of the freedom of the seas, from whatever quarter it has been violated.

To this the Government of the United States replied on the 8th of May, accepting, of course, the assurance given, but adding:

The Government of the United States feels it necessary to state that it takes it for granted that the Imperial Government does not intend to imply that the maintenance of its newly announced policy is in any way contingent upon the course or result of diplomatic negotiations between the Government of the United States and any other belligerent Government, notwithstanding the fact that certain passages in the Imperial Government's note of the 4th inst. might appear to be susceptible of that construction.

In order, however, to avoid any misunderstanding, the Government of the United States notifies the Imperial Government that it cannot for a moment entertain, much less discuss, a suggestion that respect by German naval authorities for the rights of citizens of the United States upon the high seas should in any way, or in the slightest degree, be made contingent upon the conduct of any other Government affecting the rights of neutrals and non-combatants. Responsibility in such matters is single, not joint; absolute, not relative.

To this note of the 8th of May the Imperial Government made no reply.

On the 31st of January, the Wednesday of the present week, the German Ambassador handed to the Secretary of State, along with a formal note, a memorandum which contained the following statement:

The Imperial Government, therefore, does not doubt that the Government of the United States will understand the situation thus forced upon Germany by the Entente Allies' brutal methods of war and by their determination to destroy the Central Powers, and that the Government of the United States will further realize that the now openly disclosed intention of the Entente Allies gives back to Germany the freedom of action which she reserved in her note addressed to the Government of the United States on May 4, 1916.

Under these circumstances, Germany will meet the illegal measures of her enemies by forcibly preventing, after Feb. 1, 1917, in a zone around Great Britain, France, Italy and in the Eastern Mediterranean, all navigation, that of neutrals included, from and to England and from and to France, etc., etc. All ships met within the zone will be sunk.

I think that you will agree with me that in view of this declaration, which, suddenly and without prior intimation of any kind, deliberately withdraws the solemn assurance given in the Imperial Government's note of the 4th of May, 1916, this Government has no alternative consistent with the dignity and honour of the United States but to take the course which, in its note of the 18th of April, 1916, it announced that it would take in the event that the German Government did not declare and effect an abandonment of the methods of submarine warfare which it was then employing, and to which it now purposes again to resort.

I have therefore directed the Secretary of State to announce to His Excellency the German Ambassador that all diplomatic relations between the United States and the German Empire are severed, and that the American Ambassador at Berlin will immediately be withdrawn; and, in accordance with this decision, to hand to His Excellency his passports.

Notwithstanding this unexpected action of the Government, this sudden and deeply deplorable renunciation of its assurances, given this Government at one of the most critical moments of tension in the relations of the two Governments, I refuse to believe that it is the intention of the German authorities to do in fact what they have warned us they will feel at liberty to do.

I cannot bring myself to believe that they will indeed pay no regard to the ancient friendship between their people and our own or to the solemn obligations which have been exchanged between them and destroy American ships and take the lives of American citizens in the wilful prosecution of the ruthless naval programme they have announced their intention to adopt. Only actual overt acts on their part can make me believe it even now.

If this inveterate confidence on my part in the sobriety and prudent foresight of their purpose should unhappily prove unfounded; if American ships and American lives should in fact be sacrificed by their naval commanders, in heedless contravention of the just and reasonable understandings of international law and the obvious dictates of humanity, I shall take the liberty of coming again before the Congress to ask that authority be given me to use any means that may be necessary for the protection of our seamen and our people in the prosecution of their peaceful and legitimate errands on the high seas. I can do nothing less. I take it for granted that all neutral Governments will take the same course.

We do not desire any hostile conflict with the Imperial Government. We are the sincere friends of the German people and earnestly desire to remain at peace with the Government which speaks for them. We shall not believe that they are hostile to us unless and until we are obliged to believe it, and we purpose nothing more than the reasonable defense of the undoubted rights of our people. We wish to serve no selfish ends. We seek merely to stand true alike in thought and in action to the immemorial principles of our people which I have sought to express in my address to the Senate only two weeks ago—seek merely to vindicate our right to liberty and justice and an unmolested life.

These are the bases of peace, not war. God grant that we may not be challenged to defend them by acts of wilful injustice on the part of the Government of Germany!

Washington, Feb. 3.—Senator Thomas of Colorado, a member of the Finance Committee, introduced to-day this amendment to the revenue bill now in the Senate Committee.

"That for the purpose of defraying the expense to be incurred in placing the Nation in a state of military and naval preparedness, the Secretary of the Treasury shall be authorized to issue on the credit of the United States not to exceed $500,000,000 of United States notes not bearing interest payable to bearer at the United States Treasury, and of such denomination as he may deem expedient, not less than $5 each, to be paid to all who shall supply material to and for the army and navy of the United States of whatever character and description therefor.

GERMANY'S RUTHLESS SUBMARINISM NOTE

Washington, D.C., Jan. 31, 1917.

Mr. Secretary of State:

Your Excellency was good enough to transmit to the Imperial Government a copy of the message which the President of the United States of America addressed to the Senate on the 22nd inst. The Imperial Government has given it the earnest consideration which the President's statements deserve, inspired, as they are by deep sentiments of responsibility.

It is highly gratifying to the Imperial Government to ascertain that the main tendencies of this important statement correspond largely to the desires and principles professed by Germany. These principles especially include self-government and equality of rights for all nations. Germany would be sincerely glad if in recognition of this principle countries like Ireland and India, which do not enjoy the benefits of political independence, should now obtain their freedom.

The German people also repudiate all alliances which serve to force the countries into a competition for might and to involve them in a net of selfish intrigues. On the other hand, Germany will gladly co-operate in all efforts to prevent future wars.

The freedom of the seas, being a preliminary condition of the free existence of nations and the peaceful intercourse between them, as well as the open-door for the commerce of all nations, has always formed part of the leading principles of Germany's political program. All the more the Imperial Government regrets that the attitude of her enemies who are so entirely opposed to peace, makes it impossible for the world at present to bring about the realization of these lofty ideals.

Germany and her allies were ready to enter now into a discussion of peace, and had set down as basis the guarantee of existence, honor, and free development of their peoples. Their aims, as has been expressly stated in the note of Dec. 12, 1916, were not directed toward the destruction or annihilation of their enemies and were, according to their conviction, perfectly compatible with the rights of the other nations. As to Belgium, for which such warm and cordial sympathy is felt in the United States, the Chancellor had declared only a few weeks previously that its annexation had never formed part of Germany's intentions. The peace to be signed with Belgium was to provide for such conditions in that country, with which Germany desires to maintain friendly neighborly relations, that Belgium should not be used again by Germany's enemies for the purpose of instigating continuous hostile intrigues. Such precautionary measures are all the more necessary, as Germany's enemies have repeatedly stated, not only in speeches delivered by their leading men, but also in the statutes of the Economical Conference in Paris, that it is their intention not to treat Germany as an equal, even after peace has been restored, but to continue their hostile attitude, and especially to wage a systematical economic war against her.

The attempt of the four allied powers to bring about peace has failed, owing to the lust of conquest of their enemies, who desired to dictate the condition of peace. Under the pretense of following the principle of nationality, our enemies have disclosed their real aims in this way, viz.: To dismember and dishonor Germany, Austria-Hungary, Turkey, and Bulgaria. To the wish of reconciliation they oppose the will of destruction. They desire a fight to the bitter end.

A new situation has thus been created which forces Germany to new decisions. Since two years and a half England is using her naval power for a criminal attempt to force Germany into submission by starvation. In brutal contempt of international law, the group of powers led by England does not only curtail the legitimate trade of their opponents, but they also, by ruthless pressure, compel neutral countries either to altogether forego every trade not agreeable to the Entente Powers or to limit it according to their arbitrary decrees.

The American Government knows the steps which have been taken to cause England and her Allies to return to the rules of international law and to respect the freedom of the seas. The English Government, however, insists upon continuing its war of starvation which does not at all affect the military power of its opponents, but compels women and children, the sick and the aged, to suffer for their country pains and privations which endanger the vitality of the nation. Thus British tyranny mercilessly increases the sufferings of the world, indifferent to the laws of humanity, indifferent to the protests of the neutrals whom they severely harm, indifferent even to the silent longing for peace among England's own allies. Each day of the terrible struggle causes new destruction, new sufferings. Each day shortening the war will, on both sides, preserve the lives of thousands of brave soldiers and be a benefit to mankind.

The Imperial Government could not justify before its own conscience, before the German people and before history the neglect of any means destined to bring about the end of the war. Like the President of the United States, the Imperial Government had hoped to reach this goal by negotiations. After the attempts to come to an understanding with the Entente Powers have been answered by the latter with the announcement of an intensified continuing of the war, the Imperial Government—in order to serve the welfare of mankind in a higher sense and not to wrong its own people—is now compelled to continue the fight for existence, again forced upon it, with the full employment of all the weapons which are at its disposal.

Sincerely trusting that the people and the Government of the United States will understand the motives for this decision and its necessity, the Imperial Government hopes that the United States may view the new situation from the lofty heights of impartiality, and assist, on their part, to prevent further misery and unavoidable sacrifice of human life.

Enclosing two memoranda regarding the details of the contemplated military measures at sea, I remain, etc.,

J. BERNSTORFF.

Berlin, Jan. 31 (by Wireless to Sayville).—Following is the annex referred to in the German note:

"From Feb. 1, 1917, within barred zones around Great Britain, France, Italy, and in the Eastern Mediterranean, as outlined in the following, all sea traffic forthwith will be opposed. Such barred zones are:

"In the North Sea, the district around England and France, which is limited by a line twenty nautical miles; the district along the Dutch coast as far as the Terschelling Lightship, the degree of longitude of the Terschelling Lightship to Udsir; a line from there across the point 62 degrees north latitude, 5 longitude, westward along 62 degrees to a point three nautical miles south of the south point of Farover, (Faroe Islands?) from there across the point 62 degrees north, —— degrees west, to 61 degrees north, 15 degrees west; then 57 degrees north, 20 degrees west, to 47 degrees north, 29 degrees west; further, to 43 degrees north, 15 degrees west; then on degree latitude 43 degrees north to the point twenty nautical miles from Cape Finisterre and twenty nautical miles distance along the Spanish north coast as far as the French frontier.

"Concerning the south in the Mediterranean: For neutral shipping there remains open the sea district west of a line from Pt. de les Paquett to 38 degrees 20 minutes north and 6 degrees east, as well as north and west of a zone sixty sea miles broad along the North African coast, beginning on (?) degrees west longitude.

"In order to connect this sea district with Greece, the zone leads twenty sea miles in width north or east, following this line: Thirty-eight degrees north and 6 degrees east, 38 degrees north and 11 degrees 30 minutes east, to 34 degrees north and 11 degrees 30 minutes east to 34 degrees north and 22 degrees 30 minutes east. From there it leads to a zone twenty sea miles broad west of 22 degrees 30 minutes east longitude into Greek territorial waters.

"Neutral ships plying within the barred zones do so at their own risk. Although precautions are being taken to spare neutral ships which on Feb. 1 are on the way to ports in the barred zone, during an appropriate delay, yet it is urgently to be advised that they should be warned and directed to other routes by all means available.

"Neutral ships lying in ports of the barred zones can with the same safety abandon the barred zones if they sail before Feb. 5 and take the shortest route into the open district.

GERMANY IN DESPAIR

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, Feb. 27.—Reviewing the speech in the British House of Commons, in which Mr. Lloyd-George, the Premier, said the final success of the Allies depended upon the solution of the question of tonnage, the "Novoye Vremya" writes a lengthy leader. In the course of the article, the paper mentions that the German Government considers that England is her most powerful enemy.

For this reason, she attempts to inflict on England her most weighty blows by a pitiless submarine warfare. Such policy is inspired by despair and is only likely to exasperate neutrals into a war with Germany. It will, moreover, force the British inhabitants during the last months of the war to import only the strictest necessities for existence, thus enable the mercantile fleet to carry both to England and the allied nations the material so indispensable to victory.

PRUSSIA FEELING THE PINCH

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, Feb. 22.—The Prussian Minister of the Interior has issued a Proclamation, which admits that frost has completely stopped the supply of potatoes, the stocks of which are certain to be exhausted before the new harvest. This has strained the, already weak, available stocks of corn owing to the necessity of distributing flour in the great cities. Therefore orders have been given to the rural authorities to take severe measures to compel farmers to supply food-stuffs.

"Traffic of regular American passenger steamers can go on unmolested if:

A—Falmouth is taken as the port of destination; and if,

B—On the going and return journey the Scilly Islands, as well as the point 50 degrees north, 20 degrees west, be steered on. Along this route no German mines will be laid.

C—If steamers on this journey bear the following special signals, which only they will be permitted to display in American ports: A coating of paint on the ship's hull and the superstructure in vertical stripes three meters broad, alternating white and red; on every mast a large flag of checkered white and red, on the stern the American national flag; during darkness the national flag and the coat of paint to be as easily recognizable as possible from a distance; and the ships must be completely and brightly illuminated.

D—If only one steamer runs each week in each direction arriving at Falmouth on Sundays, leaving Falmouth on Wednesdays.

E—If guarantees and assurances are given by the American Government that these steamers carry no contraband, (according to the German list of contraband.)

"Two copies of maps on which the barred zones are outlined are added."

RUSSIAN PARLIAMENT HAS RE-ASSEMBLED

Petrograd, Feb. 27.—The Duma and Council of Empire reopened to-day.

Petrograd, Feb. 26.—Now that the re-opening of the session of the Duma is drawing near at hand, Parliamentary members have already returned to Petrograd. Meetings of various political parties are now being held here with a view to defining their respective attitude toward the coming session of the Duma and the political situation in Russia is suggestive of the imminence of an important political development. Prince Golitzyn, the Premier, M. Protopopoff, the Home Minister and M. Rodsianko, the President of the Duma, have recently submitted reports on the political situation to the Tsar at the Tsarskoe Selo Palace, as the result of which it has become clear that the change of the Cabinet expected to take place simultaneously with the re-opening of the Duma will not be effected and politicians seem rather dispirited. Though it appears that Prince Golitzyn wishes to rely solely upon some powerful support in the Council of the Empire where he intends to shut himself up, yet this will be very difficult for him under the present circumstances.—"Nichinichi."

The Duma which has been repeatedly adjourned was to be re-opened on Tuesday. In view of the unsatisfactory co-operation between the Duma and the Government, says the "Asahi," Prince Golitzyn appears to be contemplating the reconstruction of the Russian Ministry. Above all the resignation of M. Protopopoff, Home Minister, will give satisfaction to the Duma. The Home Minister ever since he became the target of bitter attacks in the Duma has not been seen much either in official or Court circles, but he has a firm and immovable influence established in the court where he enjoys the great confidence of the Tsarina.

M. Protopopoff who was on intimate terms with Rasputin, the murdered monk, is a politician of extreme conservative principles through thick and thin, and the Premier too is a politician of the same type and principles as the Home Minister, so that it is rather difficult for Prince Golitzyn to effect the change of the Home Minister, especially in view of the great influence M. Protopopoff has either in the Court or Cabinet. However the Duma led by the Progressives is clamouring for the reconstruction of the Ministry and it is a patent fact that troubles will inevitably arise between the Duma and the Cabinet.

According to a report received in a certain quarter, says the "Asahi," Prince Golitzyn has recently embarked on the task of reforming his Cabinet as the result of which the Ministers of the Interior, Agriculture and Education are expected to be changed, and it is also reported that the political situation in Russia is grave and chaotic. Whether the Premier will carry out the reformation of his Cabinet or not remains to be seen, but be that as it may the present Russian Ministry will in all probability be faced with a crisis which is feared to culminate in the change of the Ministry.

KING GEORGE SPEAKS ON EAST AND WEST

London, Feb. 24.—On the occasion of the opening of the School for Oriental Studies in London, yesterday, His Majesty King George said:

"I cannot sufficiently emphasise the wide scope and vast importance of this work. This school will afford fresh opportunities for the particular studies of those services which have been the pioneers of progress and the instruments of good government in India and Egypt.

"This institution will furnish with a fuller technical equipment the pioneers of commerce and industry, who, in each successive generation, undertake the duty of upholding the honoured fame of British trade in the East.

"This work will serve to develop a sympathy which already so happily exists between my subjects and those of the Emperor of my Far Eastern Ally—Japan.

"This school is about to open its doors in the midst of an unparalleled crisis in the world's history. For more than two years, the people of my dominions, with loyalty and devotion, have vied with each other in offering blood and treasure for the prosecution of a righteous war. A sense of common sacrifice and of common endeavour has drawn us all nearer to one another in a feeling of sympathy. Meanwhile, we believe the peaceful labours of this institution, in spreading an accurate scientific knowledge of eastern life and thought, will foster the spirit of loyalty and patriotism, and will knit together still closer the peoples of many nations to the peoples of my Empire."

London, Feb. 24.—King George to-day attended the inauguration ceremony of the School for Oriental Studies and honoured the occasion with an address, in which His Britannic Majesty had the following words to say: "There has existed for many years a happy relationship of sympathy and friendship between British subjects and the subjects of Our ally in the Extreme Orient. This cord of sympathetic friendship between the two nations will be strengthened and further cemented through the school education in the two countries."

The converted Treasury Bills, continued the Chancellor, amounted to £130,000,000. He pointed out that the number of subscribers was approximately 5,289,000. In conclusion, Mr. Law laid emphasis on the fact that while the German Loan had successively decreased the British had increased.

THE RAID OFF KENT COAST

London, Feb. 27.—Sir Edward Carson, the First Lord of the Admiralty, speaking in the House of Commons to-day, announced that German destroyers had bombarded Broadstairs and Margate, early on Monday morning.

A woman and a child had been killed, two persons injured and two houses damaged. Sir Edward stated: "A patrol of our destroyers between 11 p.m. on Sunday and 12 a.m. on Monday encountered various enemy destroyers and were engaged with them for some time under heavy fire and torpedo attack. As soon as the firing was heard, our forces in the vicinity closed on the enemy, who however, had withdrawn before our ships arrived on the scene."

ESTIMATES PROVIDE FOR BRITISH ARMY OF 5,000,000

London, Feb. 24.—It is announced that the new Estimates just issued provide for an army of five million men exclusive of India. Additional navy estimates call for 50,000 men, thus bringing up the personnel of the navy to 450,000.

GERMAN PLOTTERS AT WORK IN SPANISH KINGDOM NOW

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Madrid, Feb. 22.—There has been an outburst of popular wrath in Spain at the discovery of buoys at Cartagena containing materials for a German plot in Spain.

It appears that the coastguards found two buoys connected by a chain, to which were attached thirty watertight cases. One of these was full of explosives, while the other contained correspondence and instructions for Germans occupying official positions in Spain.

A submarine which placed the buoys also secretly landed several men who were instructed to use the explosives.

The German Consul at Cartagena and a German in Madrid named Kaibel have been arrested.

IDAHO'S ANTI-ALIEN BILL

San Francisco, Feb. 20.—Idaho's anti-alien landownership act which was withdrawn from the State Legislature on the suggestion of Secretary of State Lansing has been introduced again. The reason given is that the Japanese protest was made without any instructions from the Tokyo government. Mr. Booth, an attorney however, urged Ambassador Sato to draw up a protest from the State Department. Mr. Booth however says that this is not true.—"Asahi."

New York, Feb. 20.—An anti-alien land act has again been introduced in the Upper House of the State Legislature of Idaho, as it has become clear that Japan did not lodge any official protest against the bill as was believed.—"Nichinichi."

Seattle, Feb. 21.—The anti-Japanese movement in Idaho is becoming intense. In addition to the revival of the land veto bill a bill providing for the prohibition of marriage between the white race and the Mongolian race was introduced in the Senate on the 20th, a day prior to the expected explanation by Mr. Booth on the land veto bill in the Senate. The new bill had its origin in recent trouble between a Japanese resident of Twinforth and the local authorities over the marriage between the said Japanese and a white woman.

The Japanese in question applied some time ago to the local district office for a marriage certificate, when a clerk of the district office refused his application on the ground that the Japanese had negro blood in his veins. The statement produced by the clerk of the district office to the Idaho Senate mentions that the said Japanese was accompanied by Mr. Booth when he came to the district office with his application, and from this fact it is apparent that the bill has been introduced with a view to entrapping the pro-Japanese elements and inciting anti-Japanese sentiments, by those who want to cause further complication and estrangement between Japan and America.—"Asahi."

Seattle, Feb. 22.—Mr. Booth, the barrister, appeared in the Senate committee yesterday and explained his action regarding the anti-Japanese land veto bill. According to his explanation, Mr. Booth made efforts for the rejection of the land law bill during the period between January 26, when the bill was passed by the Idaho Lower House and February 6 when the Bill was rejected in the Upper House, asking Mr. Herrick, a barrister of Washington, the Japanese consular authorities at Portland and Senator Borah (for Idaho) to make efforts for the rejection of the bill in the Idaho Lower House.

Producing telegrams and letters exchanged between him and those people Mr. Booth said that, if necessary, he would produce more documents having relation to the present affair. He said that he took up the case by the request of two Japanese and he understood that the fee and other expenses involved in the affair were borne by the Japanese community, adding that he did not claim such a large sum as fee as mentioned in the statement produced by the Secretary of State. I was rather a laughing matter to think that he requested $10,000 as fee for his services, said Mr. Booth, and it was a annoyance to him that the statements of four members should have been recorded as evidence, because he told them these things as a joke when he was asked to take up the case and consented. Among other things Mr. Booth denied the statements that he charged a sum of $28 for a telephone conversation with Mr. Herrick each time he talked with him over the wire, or that he instigated the State Department and the Japanese Embassy to protest against the anti-Japanese land bill in the Idaho Legislative, or that he induced Japanese residents to make purchase of land before the passage of the land bill. The statements, he said, were all unfounded fabrications. In conclusion, Mr. Booth declared that the measures taken by him were absolutely rational and reasonable in every respect.—"Asahi."

Seattle, Feb. 22.—After dwelling on the Land Law Bill, Mr. Booth referred to the marriage prohibition measure just introduced. He denied as untrue the report of the clerk of the Twinforth district office that he accompanied the Japanese to the court when he made application for the grant of a marriage permit. He stated that the said Japanese was one named Frank Saigon and was married to a white woman named Della Lay, of Tunedoka, a city of Idaho, under the permission granted by the municipal authorities of that city.

The anti-Japanese agitators are gaining influence over the pro-Japanese elements and the situation is growing in favour of the former, so that the passage of the two anti-Japanese bills is thought to be possible under such circumstances. It is reported that the Japanese Consul at Portland yesterday applied to the Secretary of the State Government of Idaho to procure a copy of the text of the marriage prohibition bill. It is anticipated that a protest will come forth from the Japanese community.—"Asahi."

In connection with the anti-Japanese Land Law Bill in the Idaho State Legislative, a vernacular paper reports that the Foreign Office is in receipt of an official report from Mr. Sato, the Ambassador at Washington reporting on the nature of the new measure, which is practically the same as the bill, introduced in the state legislative of Idaho some time ago, but was dropped by the committee owing to the protest of President Wilson. The Bill provides for a prohibitory restriction on land ownership of alien subjects not entitled to become naturalized in the State. In view of the growing influence of the anti-Japanese agitators in the state there is every possibility of the bill being passed by the State Legislative. In these circumstances, the Japanese Government is paying keen attention to the development of the situation, and it is understood that according to the turn of the situation, the Government will take steps to instruct the Japanese Ambassador to Washington to call attention of the American Secretary of State, Mr. Lansing, to the matter.

NEW MILITARY BILL IN U. S.

ASAHI DEAD AGAINST CHINA JOINING ALLIES

Why is it necessary for China to enter into the vortex of the war? asks the "Tokyo Asahi". The United States has been most severely hit by the German declaration of unrestricted submarine warfare, of all the neutral nations, and consequently the United States severed diplomatic relations with Germany and is willing to declare war if it becomes necessary to do so. The United States advised other neutral nations to follow suit, but the "Asahi" cannot understand why it is necessary for the Chinese Government to consider joining the war.

China will not suffer from the unrestricted activity of German divers, and although China possess a few vessels, they are all used for the coastwise trade of China. There is, no indication that the German submarines will begin their activity on the Pacific Ocean, and the paper is confident that as long as the Japanese Navy exists, there will be no danger east of Singapore.

China even took a neutral position when other nations fought on her own land, as, in the Russo-Japanese war, and the German-Japanese war, and it is beyond the understanding of the "Asahi" that only when Germany threatens the sinking of merchantmen, China should become so aroused and come to consider the severance of diplomatic relations, and even the declaring of war against Germany.

The paper considers that the loss and danger that China will encounter with the declaration of war against Germany will be much larger than imagined by the Chinese Government. Again from the standpoint of Japan, the paper does not welcome the severance of diplomatic relations between China and Germany. If China insists on entering the vortex of the present war, as a friendly and neighbouring nation, Japan should advise her not to take such a step.

However, the Terauchi Cabinet is trying to bring China into the present war, and the Chinese Government took advantage of the situation and brought the demand of the raise of customs duty and the postponement of the indemnity payment, and it seems, the paper says, that the Terauchi Cabinet is desiring to make China join the war even accepting some of the demands made by China.

While apparently China is quiet and peaceful, the "Asahi" states that there are still differences between the government officials and the public, and it is not desirable for Japan to take the side of one party as it will invite the ill-feeling of the other. Judging from this point, the postponement of the indemnity payment and floating the Chinese loan, will aid the government party, but they will make the public entertain ill-feeling against Japan. Such financial aid to China will only benefit the Government, which will utilize the money in oppressing the public.

The "Asahi" fails to understand the reason why the Terauchi Cabinet desires to bring China into the war even giving such a concession. The government says that when China joins the Entente, the German influence in China can be driven away, and the Japanese traders will harvest the benefit of entering the Chinese market, but the paper does not believe that the driving out of the Germans in China will cause such a benefit to Japan. At present the Germans in China are unable to obtain even a few cases of goods from Germany, and at present the Germans have not much influence in the Chinese market.

The small benefit that can be obtained by entering the Chinese market, will be insignificant when compared with the loss to be caused by the increase of the customs duty, and while the war benefit will be only for six months or one year, the loss caused by the increase of the customs duty will be permanent.

Judging from any point of view, the "Asahi" declares that Japan will not profit by bringing China into the present war, and it fails to understand the reason why the Terauchi Cabinet is so keen about bringing China into the war even at such a great sacrifice, to the Japanese commerce.

AN UNJUSTIFIABLE ATTACK ON JAPAN'S ARMY HEAD

The "Jiji" regrets that the military authorities of Japan are not paying proper attention to the development of arms and munitions during the present war, while nobody doubts that the greatest lesson has been taught by the present war regarding the development of arms. The Japanese military officers have no intention of carrying out the lessons given by the present war, and even in the Budget for next year there is no item to improve the present arms and equipments of the Japanese army.

It goes without saying that the arms and equipments of the Japanese Army are far behind those of European nations. The British tank, and the German 42 C. M. guns were never dreamed of by Japanese officers, but such arms are daily used on the European fronts. In the stock of aeroplanes, machine-guns and other equipment, Japan is far behind other nations, but the military authorities of Japan do not realize the inferiority of their own equipment, and have no intention to improve the present system.

The "Jiji" says that the Japanese arms are so old fashioned that if a war is to be fought between Japan and some European nation, it will be nothing but a war of ancient and modern arms, and however strong the Japanese soldiers may be, they cannot fight against the modern arms of a European nation.

The Japanese military authorities are still giving more consideration to the number of soldiers than to the improvement of arms. When the additional establishment of two divisions was discussed, the military authorities said that although the arms and equipment should be improved, the power of arms cannot be equalled with human power, and the most essential problem for the Japanese army is to increase the number of Divisions.

Even though the present war in Europe is demonstrating the power of arms and modern inventions, the Japanese Army officers do not believe that the present war will teach them any lesson regarding the improvement of arms. It is commonly believed by the Japanese army officers that the present war has brought some changes in war tactics, but it has not made any change in arms or equipment. The paper declares that the Japanese army officers are only considering the increase of the number of soldiers and are not paying any attention to the improvement and development of arms.

The "Jiji" further regrets that the Military authorities of Japan are not trying to assist the Entente forces in Europe by supplying them with arms and munitions. All Entente countries are now suffering from lack of munitions, and as a nation fighting with the Entente, Japan should give them every possible assistance, and the most serviceable and important assistance Japan could give them is the supply of munitions, but the Army authorities do not see the necessity of giving our allies such assistance, and have been quite unconcerned regarding the supply of munitions to the Allies. Japan, says the "Jiji", is at present in an ideal position to give such an assistance to the allies, and realizing the importance of the supply of munitions, the War Department should manufacture munitions on a large scale and fulfil Japan's duty to the other allied nations by supplying them with munitions. If the War Department encourages the manufacture of munition by private factories and concerns, the department will also gain a valuable experience in utilizing the private factories in the manufacture of munitions.

The "Jiji" sincerely regrets that the War Department and army officers are not paying any attention to these problems, but are merely watching the European war with curiosity.

MORE SNEERS AT CHINA

The severance of diplomatic relations with another nation is a serious and important problem for any nation, and it should be only made when the situation concerns the integrity and independence of a nation, says the "Tokyo Nichinichi". The Chinese Government, however, seems to be considering the severance of the diplomatic relations with Germany and even the declaration of war merely from the standpoint of profit and interest. The Chinese Government followed the advice of President Wilson, and protested against the unrestricted submarine warfare, and at present is waiting the further development of the situation, and on the other hand, China has demanded the right of voice in the Peace Conference in the event of China joining the Entente, and it is reported that she also made several profitable proposals in return for her joining the Entente. The plan of increasing the tariff is a great blow to the Japanese traders, and the paper believes that the proposals will not be accepted by the Japanese Government. If ever the present Cabinet consents to the increase of the tariff, the government will invite the enmity of the public as well as those interested in the Chinese trade.

THE NEGLECT OF CHINA

The "Hochi" declares that the Japanese Government often thinks more of Europe than Asia, and says that the Japanese government had purchased a large amount of Exchequer bonds issued by the British Government and also bought up the Japanese Government bonds in the London market. The intention of the Government to give assistance to England by subscribing to the flotation of bonds and also the buying up of the Japanese bonds in the market, is admirable, and the fact has pleased the British public immensely. But the "Hochi" believes that the monetary assistance to England is not so urgently necessary as monetary assistance to China. While the British public will welcome the Japanese assistance and appreciate it, they are not in need of such an assistance. But China is in urgent need of financial assistance from Japan, and the paper regrets that the Japanese government officials and bankers pay more attention to the European situation and overlook the important happenings in the Orient. The neighbouring country of China is at present in great need of financial assistance, and one tenth of the amount given to the British nation by purchase of British bonds and buying up of Japanese bonds, would have been enough for the development and assistance of the Chinese nation.

The first consideration of the Japanese capitalists and government officials should be directed to China and other countries in the Orient than to the far away and comparatively rich European nations.

THE BELGIAN'S FATE

The "Yorozu" desires to draw the attention of the Japanese to the condition of the Belgians, and hopes that the Japanese public will express their sympathy towards the Belgians by giving them proper assistance.

Belgium stood up to protect her own neutrality and Germany mercilessly attacked her, destroyed properties, plundered wealth, and killed the innocent. Hunger and fear came to oppress the Belgians, and according to the report from those Belgians still remaining in their own land, it is said that they have no work to do and no food to eat, and they are pressed by the German soldiers to work for them. Many of them are engaged in digging trenches which will be used against their own country and people. The paper wishes that the Japanese public will realize the cruel position in which these unfortunate Belgians are to work for the destruction of their own country, their own brothers and sisters, under the forced orders of the Germans.

The "Yorozu" says that Belgium was an industrial country, but the Germans took away all material for the industries and destroyed factories, and the large number of workmen formerly employed at these factories are now unemployed in forced idleness.

The United States of America had been giving every possible relief and assistance to the unfortunate Belgians, but since the diplomatic relations have been severed between the United States and Germany, the paper believes that such work of relief will stop.

The paper asks all the Japanese who feel for these unfortunate Belgians and desire to protect the right, to come and help these Belgians.

There has been a plan to send a relief mission to the Sick and Wounded Soldiers of the Allies, and the paper hopes that these generous and kind people who desire to express their sympathies towards the sick and wounded soldiers, will also pay their attention to the Belgians who are not only ruined, starved and maltreated by the Germans, but who are forced to help the Germans for the destruction of their own homes and murder of their own kinsmen.

Any attempt to give relief to the Belgians, will not be only a help to the Belgians, but will be for the sake of humanity.

TO STOP INFERIOR ARTICLES

The "Yorozu" declares that the greatest problem in the economic world of Japan to-day is how to prevent the manufacture of inferior articles. The problem is not a new one, and for a great many years, the accusation has been made against Japanese products, not only by foreign buyers but also by domestic consumers. This accusation is always loudly voiced whenever the manufacturers of the country are prosperous, and the paper says that whenever the demand exceeds the supply the manufacturers make the inferior articles fill their orders and harvest the profit.

The paper regrets that the Japanese articles are inferior, and the fact cannot be denied, but the problem should be considered from two sides. The accusation is heard from the side of the purchasers, and in many cases the accusation is true, and the Japanese manufacturers cannot escape their faults, but at the same time, the paper insists that the cause of the accusation should be carefully investigated, as many accusations are echoed too loudly. The "Yorozu" believes that if the Japanese manufacturers and the foreign purchasers are brought more closely together, they will come to a better understanding.

The paper also states that there is a tendency among the Japanese manufacturers not to pay any attention to the commercial and industrial conditions of foreign countries, and their ignorance of the foreign market often causes the manufacture of inferior articles. The men employed for the examination of products, often do not understand the foreign market as well as the foreign usage of the articles, and consequently these men pass inferior articles without realizing that such articles are not servicable.

The paper hopes that Japanese manufacturers and those interested in the foreign trade will study the condition and circumstances of the foreign market as well as the people. Whenever any accusation is made, the manufacturers and the government authorities should carefully study and investigate why and how the accusation is made, or else it will be impossible to stop the manufacture of the inferior articles.

YOKOHAMA C. & A. C. HELD ANNUAL MEETING

The Annual General Meeting of the Yokohama Country and Athletic Club was held on Tuesday evening at the Board of Trade Rooms in Yokohama. We make the following excerpts from the Report presented by the Committee:

List of Honour:

The Committee regret to record the death at the front of Messrs. J. Barnes, G. W. Hawkins, T. H. G. Kenderdine, and C. Sellier.

Athletics:

A Sports Meeting was held on June 10th. The entries and attendance were good and some close races were witnessed. Joy and da Costa share the sprints between them, and K. Tresize showed up well in the longer distances. The Dare Cup was won by Klingen from 100 yds.

Baseball:

The Baseball Team was organised early in the season, and C. H. Thorn was elected Captain; K. F. Coe, Vice-Captain; and L. M. Howe, Manager. A good deal of progress was made up to the time of the Fourth of July game with our old rivals, the Tokyo Americans, but unfortunately on that day the team took a slump and we were very badly defeated by Tokyo, the score being 19 to 1. This seemed to have demoralised the players, and, in spite of fairly consistent practice and numerous games throughout the summer months, the team did not regain anywhere near their previous form until the first Interport contest with Kobe, in which Kobe won 6 to 4. This game resulted in high-class baseball by both contestants, and, on the strength of it, we surely expected to win the succeeding one, but we lost out by the score of 25 to 11, after a comedy of errors.

Earlier in the season Mr. Thorn resigned the Captaincy, and K. F. Coe was elected in his place, with B. G. Walker as Vice-Captain. We had much promising material on the field, and it was lack of experience more than anything else which resulted in the loss of so many games. A new rival developed in Yokohama in the so-called Yokohama Americans, who put a fairly strong team in the field, although we were fortunate enough to win against them in the only contest we played. It is to be regretted that members of the latter team could not play on the Y.C. & A.C. aggregation.

For the coming year we have our team intact, with the exception of H. Colton, who has removed to Kobe. His loss will be sorely felt, but there will be several new additions to the squad, and we are in hopes of putting a team on the field this year which will equal the best that Yokohama has had for many seasons.

Cricket:

Mr. A. P. Scott was elected Captain.

The season of 1916 did not present any outstanding features. The weather was very much against cricket, and a considerable proportion of the games were ruined on this account.

In addition to this there was considerable difficulty in raising full sides, but under present circumstances this is not to be wondered at.

The Interport Match was played in Kobe, and resulted in a win for the home team by three wickets. The Match was a low-scoring one and was over in a day and a half, and the finish was quite exciting.

Association Football:

The Season opened on the 28th October, 1916, and the following Officers were elected:—

Captain:—B. Deveson.

Vice-Captain:—T. A. Levack and S. A. Southwell.

The Interport game played in Kobe on the 11th March, 1916, resulted in a draw 1—1, after a very closely contested game.

The League inaugurated last year has been continued, St. Joseph's School replacing Hiratsuka, who were unable to raise a team this Season. The Y. C. & A.C. 2nd XI. have played four games so far, resulting as follows:—

1916.

8th December, versus St. Joseph's at Yokohama.. 3—2 Won.
11th December, versus Tokyo at Yokohama ..... 2—0 „

1917.

7th January, versus T.H.N.S. at Yokohama ..... 3—2 „
10th February, versus Tokyo at Tokyo ..... 4—2 Lost.

One game against the Tokyo Higher Normal School in Tokyo had to be forfeited owing to insufficient support.

There has been one 1st XI. game versus N.E. Japan, which resulted in a win for the Y.C. & A.C. by 8 goals to nil.

The Interport game this Season is to be played in Yokohama, and will take place some time at the beginning of March.

Rugby Football:

The 1915/1916 Season Interport Match versus Kobe was played in Yokohama on the 25th March, 1916, and resulted in a win for Yokohama by 8 points to 3.

The following officers were elected, in October, for the 1916/1917 Season:—

Captain:—D. Laidlaw.

Vice-Captains:—R. N. Postlethwaite and B. Deveson.

Since this, owing to the departure of Mr. Laidlaw for China, and the illness of Mr. Postlethwaite, Mr. Deveson has taken on the duties of the captaincy.

Three matches have been played against Keio University, one resulting in a win, one a draw, and one in a loss.

A match has also been played against the Kyoto Higher Normal School, when a weak Club team was defeated by 11 points to nil.

The prospects are not encouraging, and the game has not been well supported this season.

Hockey:

The following officers were elected:

Captain:—H. T. Hume.

Vice-Captain:—T. M. Knott, and P. F. Lloyd.

Hon. Secretary.—P. F. Lloyd.

Through the courtesy of the Municipal authorities we were again able to obtain the use of the Settlement ground for mid-day practices on Tuesdays and Thursdays, but these games were so consistently badly supported that they had eventually to be abandoned. Some of last year's players have left, others have been incapacitated or too busy to turn out, while a marked falling off was evident among the younger players, which is to be regretted.

Games against Keio University were arranged on the following dates:—

Nov. 11th ..... Scratched.
Nov. 25th in Yokohama, won by Yokohama 3-1
Jan. 20th in Yokohama, won by Yokohama 6-2

Lawn Tennis:

The past Season has been most successful; a larger number of members have used the Courts, and non-playing members have shown their interest in Tennis by witnessing the various matches and tournaments played.

In the Spring a Scaled Handicap Singles Tournament was started and was carried well forward into the Summer before the results were known, G. F. Wevill and D. Coupar securing the first and second places respectively.

The Annual Spring Handicap Tournaments opened in April with a record entry of 86, and it was found necessary to form two classes of Singles. Great interest was shown and several of the events were closely contested, the winners being, after many rounds had been played off, as follows:—

Singles, Class A., I. M. Isaacs.
Singles, Class B., P. L. Monkman.
Doubles, F. E. Colchester & C. R. Rice.
Mixed Doubles, Mrs. Moss & C. H. Thorn.

The final events were all played off on July 8th under ideal conditions before a large number of spectators, when, with the assistance of subscribing members, the Committee were able to engage the Imperial Bodyguard Band and to arrange a gala afternoon which was heartily appreciated by all present.

On June 25th the Club played Keio University First Team Singles and Doubles and were defeated by 14 matches to 2. A return fixture on November 26th with Keio again resulted in their favour as follows:—

1st Team, 5 Matches to 1., 3 Matches unfinished.

2nd Team, 8 Matches to 1.

The Autumn Handicap Tournaments were duly held with 103 entries, the largest in the annals of the Club. Owing to this record entry both the Singles and Men's Doubles were divided into two classes. The winners of the Tournament were as follows:—

Handicap Singles, Class A, C. H. Thorn.
Handicap Singles, Class B, S. R. Shepard.
Handicap Doubles, Class A, W. A. Tomlinson and I. M. Isaacs.
Handicap Doubles, Class B, G. F. Wevil and L. M. Howe.
Handicap Mixed Doubles, Miss A. Cain and T. G. Ely.

Championship Events.—Concurrently with the Autumn Tournaments, the Championship events, Singles and Doubles, were held, and in both cases last year's holders relinquished their titles.

Singles, I. M. Isaacs.

Doubles, F. E. Colchester and C. R. Rice.

In connection with the Championship Singles a handsome trophy has been kindly presented by the American Trading Co., and the Permanent Committee have also kindly provided one for the Doubles.

The Courts throughout the season have been well used and are in good condition, and will require little or no repairs during next Season.

KEIO UNIVERSITY WILL HAVE MEDICAL COLLEGE

Keio University will open a new medical college on April 16. This will be an excellent new addition to this influential private university. The Keio University authorities contemplating the establishment of a new medical college opened a subscription list some time ago for the purpose of obtaining funds necessary for the materialization of the plan.

This measure was more fruitful than had been anticipated, and the amount wanted has already been covered. Moreover His Majesty the Emperor was pleased to grant the sum of 30,000 yen towards the fund. The new college will take in 100 students in April and the work on the necessary college buildings will be started in due course. It has been decided to nominate Dr. Kitasato, President of the Kitasato Institution for Infectious diseases, dean of the new college.

300,000 YEN FOR KOKUMINTO

Mr. Ginjiro Katsuta, proprietor of Katsuta Shoka, ship owners of Kobe, has contributed 300,000 yen towards the campaign expenses of the Kokuminto. In making the contribution, Mr. Katsuta is reported to have remarked that he was disgusted with the political parties now existing, especially with the Kenseikai and the Seiyukai, the two leading parties of the country.

He believes that the Kokuminto is the ideal political party at this moment, although it is not so powerful as large parties, and he contributed the money in the hopes that the party will elect suitable representatives in the Lower House. Mr. Katsuta has not been connected with any party in the past, and although he paid no attention to politics, he was so disgusted with the leading political parties that he desires that the Kokuminto will have the tives in the coming election and clear the majority vote in the House of Representa- political circle of useless politicians.

TOKYO A.F.C. WIN AGAIN

The Tokyo A.F.C. proved the victors in their League Match, on last Saturday against the St. Joseph's College team. The latter were under the disadvantage of playing with only ten men. As all footballers are aware this is a far greater disadvantage than it appears on paper, as it upsets the entire side. Saturday's game was no exception, and the visitors were all up in the air for most of the game, with the exception of their two backs and goalkeeper. The latter, F. Koch, did sterling work especially in the second half when the Tokyo forwards gave him no respite. That he kept his citadel intact in the second moiety of the game, was by no means due to the poor shooting of the attackers, as he had at least half a dozen shots which would have scored with a weaker man in goal.

The home team, Tokyo A.F.C. scored twice in the first half thanks to Curtis and Buckney and crossed over with a lead of two to nothing.

The second half was practically a bombardment of the visitors' goal, except on one occasion when the visitors scored their only point. From a general rush, J. Koch headed the ball into the net from a good centre by Olsen about 8 minutes before time. The incident caused quite a change to come over the visiting team and they made things quite lively in the last few minutes of the game, but failed to draw level.

Considering their handicap with one man short and the weight they were giving away, the visitors can truly pride themselves on being beaten but not disgraced. The home team played a very scrappy game, and all found the ground a severe handicap.

The teams were:—

Tokyo A.F.C. Goal:—W. Y. Duer; Backs: D. Haigh (Capt.), L. V. Allen; Half-backs: H. C. Spackman, H. E. Klingen, F. Weston; Forward: N. K. Roscoe, S. Heaslett, A. Buckney, A. G. Curtis or A. N. Other, A. E. Wood.

St. Joseph's Goal:—F. Koch; Backs, da Silva, Vaughan; Half-backs, Aubré and Brinckmeier; Forwards, Olsen, Genato, Fachtmann, Cotte, J. Koch.

Referee: Mr. J. S. Willes.

Linesmen: Masters Aubrey and Awdrey Bryan.

BIG HAULS OF FISH

A big catch of tunnies is reported from Kanagawa prefecture where the catch of Yellow-tails and tunnies was very poor last season. The other day 350 huge tunnies, each weighing about 400 pounds and valued at 20,000 yen in all, were caught at Manadzuru, Ashigarashimo-gori, Kanagawa prefecture, and the catch continue to be very favourable there with the result that fishing villages near Odawara are again livening up in consequence. Tunnies have been shipped to the Billingsgate in Tokyo and the fall in prices of fish is expected. Another big catch of tunnies is also reported from Idzu.

A SUCCESSFUL CONCERT

The Tokyo music lovers had an opportunity to enjoy the music by the Yokohama Orchestra Society Monday night at the Opera Comique, Akasaka Mitsuke. The Society should be congratulated upon having Mrs. Helen Wetmore-Neumann and Mr. Paul Nipkow as the soloists last night.

The concert was given under the auspices of the Patriotic League of Britons Overseas, and the proceeds of the evening helped to swell the war relief funds. The foreign and Japanese communities of Tokyo and Yokohama packed the little theatre and were lavish in their praise of the musical treat afforded them.

The orchestra, under the bâton of Mr. C. H. Thorn, rendered master-pieces by Mendelssohn, Arensky, Gounod and Granados delightfully. The orchestra which consisted of thirty-six pieces, treated the audience to some of the best music heard in Tokyo for many years.

The leading features of the evening were the soprano solos by Mrs. Helen Wetmore-Neumann of Kobe, who came to Tokyo and Yokohoma on purpose to oblige the Yokohama Orchestra Society. She is better known in musical circles as Miss Helen Wetmore. She has sung most successfully in the United States and Canada, and was regarded as one of the best concert singers of America. It was a rare opportunity for the Tokyo music lover to listen to Miss Helen Wetmore, who was only known to the community in Japan by reputation.

Mrs. Wetmore-Neumann is noted for her romantic and feminine presentation of songs, and during her concerts in the United States, the music critics highly complimented her upon the high order of her musical ability. Last night at the Opera Comique, she sang "Ah, fors' è lui" from La Traviata by Verdi, "My Laddie" by William Armour Thayer, "Vielle Chanson" by Georges Bizet, and "Yesterday and Today" by Charles Gilbert Spross, every song being received with hearty and enthusiastic applause.

Mr. Paul Nipkow, also had his share of success, and as it is so rare in Tokyo to have the occasion to listen to an artist on the 'cello, his performance was a revelation to the lovers of string music. The music of the 'cello is quite unknown in Japan, and among the Japanese music lovers there have been many who longed for an opportunity to listen to a good 'cello player. Those Japanese who attended the concert last night, though small in number, showed their appreciation of Mr. Nipkow's skill.

The Orchestra was also a success, due to the skilful direction of Mr. Thorn.

NEWS & NOTES

Contributions to the fund for the relief of the sick and wounded soldiers of the Allies which is now being raised in this country now amount to 760,000 yen.

According to the statistics prepared by the Department of Justice the number of boy hooligans, recognized as such by law, in this country is at present about 38.000.

That university professors will be extended the right to become members of the House of Representatives, was decided upon at the semi-weekly session of the Cabinet meeting on March 2. This reverses the old order of things.

On Monday 44 fishermen of the village of Nakiri, Shima-gun, Miye prefecture being overtaken by a storm at sea were shipwrecked.

Three life-boats were despatched at once to the scene but only six of the men were picked up.

The trial run of the biggest locomotive in Japan the construction of which was some time ago completed at the Imperial Government Railways works in Hamamatsu has been attended with satisfactory results. This locomotive built for broad gauge railways is the first of its kind in Japan proper.

Tokyo people apparently are great lovers of moving pictures. It is stated that Tokyo, with 58 cinema halls, has more picture palaces than any town in Japan. Even Osaka has only 23 halls and Kyoto comes next with 11. According to statistics, there is a cinema house for every 35,000 people in Tokyo.

A joint conference of the railway officials of China and Japan is to be held in April, and the Imperial Railway Board has extended the invitation to the Chinese railway officials, to visit Japan and travel through the country as the guests of the Imperial Railways. A recent report from Peking says that about thirty Chinese officials will visit Japan during the conference.

Wireless messages between Japan and America through the Funabashi Wireless Station hitherto have had to be in plain words. But from March 1 the following codes books are allowed to be used provided it is stated the name of code used:—A.B.C. Code, 1st and 5th editions, Bentry's Complete Phrase Code, Broomhall's International Combination Code, Lever's Standard code, Scott's Code and Western Union.

One hundred and four steamers, both allied and neutral, have been sunk by German submarines since the commencement of the unrestricted German submarine warfare, according to investigations made by the Nippon Yusen Kaisha. The investigations are said to have been made based on the reports received by the company, who believe that the actual number of the victims may be more. They are 84 British, 3 Italian, 1 American, 3 Greek, 4 Norwe-

Thanks to the good offices of Mr. Inouye, President of the Yokohama Specie Bank, the insurance companies concerned have agreed to pay between 470,000 yen and 500,000 yen for damages caused by the recent explosion at the Yokohama Merchandise Warehousing Co., while the latter consented to pay 135,000 yen for damage the neighbouring houses. The damage to the Warehousing Co. and adjacent houses was at first put at about one million yen, but subsequent investigations put it at about 600,000 yen.

A scheme is under consideration to make the fire-brigade headquarters which is at present under the control of the Tokyo Metropolitan Police Bureau an independent organization, to be put under the direct control of the city office. This measure if realized, it is hoped, will considerably diminish the inconvenience which has hitherto been often experienced in reaching a point of agreement with regard to the steps to be taken to put down the outbreak of fires. The city authorities are projecting to replace horses by motor power in the near future.

Last Friday Her Majesty the Empress granted the sum of 100,000 yen out of the Privy Purse towards the fund of the mission for the relief of the sick and wounded of the Allies, recently organized at the instance of Baron Shibusawa and others, as a mark of special appreciation of this humanitarian project. Prince Tokugawa, President of the allied relief mission, proceeded to the Palace in the morning at 10.30 o'clock and received the gift through Baron Hatano, Minister of the Imperial Household Department.

CHINA'S INDECISION

In spite of the deep mist of confusion of views that still screens China's real attitude toward Germany from outside penetration, three facts seem to stand out unmistakable. Evasive and persuasive, Germany's reply does not comply with the main point of China's protest against ruthless submarinism, which, to be consistent with her declared warning, compels China, at least, to sever diplomatic relations with Germany. That is one fact that leaves no room for doubt. Another is that despite this fact, there is opposition which cannot be despised to a step, which by rights China should take to vindicate her protest. In the third place this opposition is due to the machinations of German agents and their mercenaries in China, among whom are found men of no small influence. No patriotic Chinese keenly conscious of the honour and dignity of his country will fail to see that between the first and the last two facts there is irreconcilable contradiction, which to pass over will be deeply to injure China's international reputation. For, inaction on China's part in tacit acceptance of Germany's reply must needs produce an impression abroad that from the first she did not mean her protest to be serious and she sent it to Germany merely to deceive the world. Furthermore, her acquiescence in the German reply will make her a party to the atrocious German submarine warfare in defiance of the friendly representations of the United States Government and in direct hostility to the Allies. Nor is that all. Nobody believes that the Chinese doing the mercenary service to Germany are moving in the matter from their personal convictions, and the world must come to the conclusion that Chinese statesmen are open to dirty bargains when dealing with questions of international rights and justice and of humanity.

If however the question of compensation is not wholly divorceable from that of China's breaking off with Germany, we had hoped that her intelligence would be quite up to the task of making a choice. Especially in view of the latest revelations of German Machievalism, we should think, China should have no occasion to hesitate. The paid hirelings of Germany in China are said to be making it a feature of their argument that in the event of China's entering the war on the Allies' side, Japan will gain more influence than ever in China to the latter's disadvantage. Yet is it not Germany herself that has been persistently plotting to win over Russia and Japan by baiting the former with an offer of its gradual absorption of India, and by tempting the latter with a free hand in China? Is it not plain as light, that if only Germany could obtain peace by persuading the two Powers to agree to separate conditions she would at any moment throw China overboard and make her a victim of the arrangement? Or take the Zimmermann Note to Mexico that has astounded the world. There it is proposed that Japan shall join Germany in smashing the United States, the great Republic to which China looks up to as a most trusted friend. Whatever Germany's reply to China's protest may say or whatever Minister Hintze and his paid and unpaid agents may offer, it cannot but be perfectly clear that there is nothing in the German mind and heart but how to save the German Empire from its impending punishment and the protection of China's interests does not form the least part of the plan. Thus China should have no difficulty whatever in deciding whose offer and promises to accept and rely upon.

If, again, the Allies stand for good faith and the real permanent benefit of China, of which there can be no doubt, is it not for China voluntarily to rise and show the appreciation of the fact? The world rang with praise for China when she served Germany with her admirably worded protest last month. Why? Because it was a noble act actuated by a noble motive. It has unquestionably added to the respect toward China of the Allied Powers, this country being one of them. If China draws the sword now solely in the name of the righteous cause for which the Allies are fighting, there can be not a moment's doubt that by that single act China will raise her position by a leap among those Powers, who in appreciation of it will go a long way to meet her wishes. Higgling over conditions may in a sense be unavoidable, but carrying the operation too far will certainly not produce the same psychological effect on the Allies as a voluntary move on China's part. In any case, most strongly we should hope that China will not be guilty of the folly of letting go by the present golden opportunity by being deluded by German artifices and lip promises. Remember Germany has twice plotted the undoing of China, first by the proposed control of her territory and people by a foreign Power and second by the projected destruction of her best friend. Japan scornfully rejects these plots. Is China still to wag her tail at Germany?

A CHANGE COMES OVER POLITICS IN PEKING

The situation in China has undergone a sudden change owing to the unexpected resignation of Premier Tuan Chi-jui over dissensions of opinions with President Li Yuan-hung anent diplomatic questions towards Germany. Until the end of last week it was generally believed that China would take immediate steps to break with Germany in accordance with the decision of the Cabinet Council and if occasion necessitated would declare war on Germany following the example of the Allies, all indications tending that way.

According to a Peking dispatch received here on last Sunday Premier Tuan Chi-jui, accompanied by all the Ministers of State, went to the President's office on last Saturday and submitted the decision of the Cabinet on the pending question with Germany deliberately explaining the reason for the decision of the cabinet, and asked the sanction of the President. President Li Yuan-hung, however, objected to the Cabinet's decision and refused to give his sanction. Premier Tuan, indignant at the President's attitude, resigned on the spot and left Peking in the afternoon for Tientsin.

Another Peking dispatch says that Premier Tuan Chi-jui visited President Li Yuan-hung on Saturday morning and submitted the report of the Cabinet Council relating to the decision on the break with Germany, and requested the President to sanction the decision before reporting the matter to parliament. President Li after glancing over the report refused to sanction it. Premier Tuan asked why the President refused to sanction the decision which had been consented to by a majority of the parliamentary members and passed by the Cabinet Council. President Li replied that he could not sanction such a decision because he was gravely concerned about the fate of the state and he rejected such proposal in his capacity as President of China. Premier Tuan was very indignant and declaring that he had nothing more to say about the matter left the office. Returning to his office he wrote out his resignation and sent it to the President through Mr. Han, the Education Minister, later leaving Peking for Tientsin.

In this connection yet another Peking dispatch states that the strong attitude of President Li Yuan-hung, who rejected the decision of the Cabinet, reveals the fact that behind the President there is influence of the United States and Germany. Another prominent factor that accounts for the strong attitude of the President is the fact that the Foreign Minister, Vice-Minister and other junior members of the Foreign Department are dissatisfied with the attitude of the members of the diplomatic section under Premier Tuan, who settled the matter without consulting with the members of the Foreign Department. It is believed that the Foreign Minister and other members of the Foreign Department had prevailed upon the President to refuse giving sanction to the decision of the Tuan Ministry.

Another Peking message states that after Premier Tuan left the President's office President Li invited Vice-President Feng Kuo-chang, Mr. Hsu Shih-chang and other elder statesmen and held conference. The Vice-President and elder statesmen made efforts to reconcile and mediate between the President and the Premier, but their efforts were futile as the President maintained a strong attitude and refused to change his determination. President Li requested Mr. Hsu Shih-chang to become Premier in place of Premier Tuan, but Mr. Hsu declined the offer. The President is determined to replace the Premier with Mr. Wang Shih-cheng or Mr. Li Ching-hsi. Premier Tuan, who has gone back to his home in Tientsin, it is said, will never come back to Peking. The Minister of Education and Communications will probably resign following the example of Premier Tuan. It is a mistake to interpret the rupture between the President and the Premier as the result of dissension of opinion or collision of feeling, apart from which there is a more significant origin that should be noticed with keen attention. The German Minister admires the strong and courageous determination of the President and takes pride in the superiority of German influence which is so deep-rooted in Chinese political circles. The rupture between the President and the Premier has taken the foreign community in Peking by surprise, and keen interest is attached to the future development of the situation. It is generally observed that as the trouble is an outcome of very complicated circumstances and partakes of delicate diplomatic significance it is very difficult to expect any smooth settlement. Further complication is expected as inevitable.

REACH ANOTHER PHASE IN SINO-GERMAN TANGLE

Mr. Yoshizawa, Japanese Charge d'Affaires in Peking, called on Vice-President Feng Kuco-chang, on last Thursday, says a Peking message, and had an interview with him on the question of China's participation in the war. As the result, the Vice-President has come to fully understand the intention of the Allies. The same day the Russian Minister called on Mr. Liang Chi-chao and explained the Allies' viewpoint in reply to the questions of the Chinese Government. The Ministers of France and Italy called on Mr. Liu Cheng-hsiang the same day and energetically advised the Chinese statesman to speedily settle the question of China's participation in the war.

Prior to this, on last Wednesday, the British Charge d'Affaires interviewed Dr. Wu Ting-fang and urged the Foreign Minister to decide China's attitude. While the allied ministers are making energetic efforts for moving China to side with them against Germany, the German Minister is moving no less energetically to check China's being persuaded. The German Minister has made frequent calls on President Li Yuan-hung through the introduction of Mr. In Chang, ex-Chinese Minister to Germany and a pro-German statesman in the Chinese Government, and after airing his view has striven to prevent China's being influenced by the movement of the allied ministers.

Meanwhile Dr. Reinsch, the American Minister, is engaged in a movement to prevail on the Chinese Government with his own opinion and has frequently approached President Li Yuan-hung, presumably trying to persuade China to follow the example of America in her dealing with Germany. The opinion of the members of the Chinese Cabinet is in favour of China's siding with the Allies, while influential members in the President's office are inclined to listen to the advice of the American Minister. Nothing is clearly known as to the advice advanced by the American Minister in Peking about the question in issue, but according to a Peking dispatch to the "Tokyo Nichinichi" he is opposed to the idea of China's siding with the Allies and is striving to check the movement, emphatically advising Premier Tuan Chi-jui to observe an attitude of strict neutrality, which he opines is best for China at the present moment.

A Shanghai dispatch to the "Tokyo Asahi," says that at the extraordinary meeting of the Cabinet Council held last Wednesday in connection with the proposal made by the Allies about China's siding with them against Germany, the members of the Cabinet unanimously urged the necessity and advisability of China's following the advice of the Allies, and insisted on a speedy settlement of China's decision on the subject. Mr. Hsu Shih-ying, Mr. Chang Yao-tseng and others, who hitherto opposed the proposal, have changed their minds and seconded the proposal. After the conference, the Premier went to the President's office to report progress. Thereon President Li Yuan-hung sanctioned the decision of the Cabinet Council and that night telegraphed to the provincial governments the Cabinet decision and asked their agreement. Vice-President Feng Kuo-chang wired his opinion to the provincial governors dwelling on the necessity of China's siding with the Allies. At the meeting of the Cabinet Council on Thursday, necessary proceedings for submitting the Government's decision to Parliament were concluded. The final decision was reached, the President has changed his opinion and now declares that he is prepared to follow the opinion of the majority. Thus the opinion of the Chinese Government is in perfect unison, and it is expected that with the declaration of rupture with Germany the Chinese Government will establish a Naval Board of Command with Mr. Chin Yun-peng as Chief.

As may be seen from the above reports, President Li Yuan-hung has apparently been persuaded by the advocates of drastic measures, whose opinion is gradually gaining ground among the majority of the Chinese people, both in official and private circles. At least, it seems certain that the Chinese Government has finally decided to declare diplomatic rupture within a few days. The report that Dr. Wu Ting-fang, Foreign Minister, who was known to be strongly opposed to the rupture with Germany, has determined to resign, reveals the advent of the announcement of China's strong determination against Germany, though it may be some time before the question of her siding with the Allies is finally settled.

The latest dispatches from Peking state that the Allies' Ministers in Peking held a conference on last Friday. Mr. Liu Cheng-hsiang, representing the Chinese Government, was present and expressed thanks on behalf of the Government for the kindly advice given by the Allies in their Note inviting China to join them. The Allies are optimistic about the result of their movement, which is believed to have proved a success. Acting on the decision of the Cabinet council of Thursday last, President Li Yuan-hung invited to his office the presidents and about thirty leading members of the two Houses of Parliament on Friday and submitting the decision of the Government asked their opinion. In the first place the President reported on diplomatic affairs in the past and announced that the Government had decided to resort to rupture with Germany and further to participate in the war on the side of the Allies, concerning which he wished to hear the views and opinions of parliament, though he was firmly convinced the latter would approve the proposal, adding that he disliked the idea of such an important diplomatic question being availed of as a tool of political strife and party competition. The members present all expressed their approval of the proposition of the Government. The Government will shortly submit the proposal formally to parliament. It is understood now that China will declare diplomatic rupture with Germany as the first step and then declare war against Germany, later identifying herself with the allies.

OFFICIAL SCOFFS AT HUN EFFORTS TO ESTRANGE JAPAN

The news of Germany's latest act of madness in Mexico was received with surprise at the Foreign Office here, as well it might be. A high official when seen by a "Japan Mail" reported last Friday said: "The revelation of Germany's plan to egg on Mexico to declare war against the United States, in the event of the Washington Government departing from its present neutrality, is interesting in many ways, but surprise is too mild a term to employ to the feelings aroused at the attempt by the Berlin Government to tempt Japan to be false to her plighted word. It goes without saying that the Tokyo Government has no intention of listening to Berlin.

"Though the message from Washington says that Mexico was to approach Japan with a view to a premature peace with Germany and to tempt Japan to betray her trust, Mexico has made no steps toward that end. Even had she done so, the Imperial Government, under no circumstances, would have consented to listen to any such proposal. The policy of the Imperial Government in the past has been, and still is to give every possible help to the Entente, of which Japan is a member. Viscount Motono, the present Minister of Foreign Affairs is especially determined to render every assistance possible for the good of the allied cause, and see that Japan in every detail fulfils her duty as a party to the alliance fighting against Germany and German cruelties."

"The Foreign Office," continued the official, "believes that the governments and peoples of all the other Entente powers fully recognize the assistance Japan has given, and are also aware that the sympathy of the public in Japan is with them in their struggle with Germany. Any report hinting at the possibility of Japan deserting her alliance is utterly groundless. The Foreign Office is most anxious to assure the Allied Powers that Japan is prepared to share the difficulties and hardships of the struggle with Great Britain, France, Russia, Italy, Montenegro, Serbia, Rumania and Portugal until the struggle ends."

In conclusion, the official referred to the frequent attempts of Germany to sow seeds of distrust between Japan and Great Britain, and also to cause an estrangement between Japan and the United States. The Foreign Office, however, rests assured that the Entente Powers will continue their full confidence in Japan's loyalty and recognize that all along she has been making every effort to forward the efforts of the Allies on the road to victory.

Tokyo, Mar. 2.—The Kokusai News Agency is authorized to state that the suggestion contained in the news report from Washington to the effect that the proposal made by Germany for an alliance between Germany, Japan and Mexico to be directed against the United States is not based upon any known fact. No suggestion or proposal of such character has been made to Japan officially or unofficially by Mexico or by any other power or person. A high official said; "There could be but one answer to such an outrageous and audacious proposal, namely an indignant refusal to consider it. The Japanese Government would, in fact, regard any such proposal as an unfriendly act. The entire proposal is the evil dream of degenerate minds."

MR. SHINOBU SPEAKS ON INDIAN POLITICS

"The administrative conditions in India at present are not so troublous and chaotic as Germans expect, but they are not so calm and peaceful as people in Japan believe." This was the keynote of a speech made by Mr. Shinobu, the Japanese Consul-General in Calcutta, at a dinner party arranged by the Indo-Japanese Association at the Seiyoken Hotel, Tsukiji on last Saturday. Mr. Shinobu has recently returned home from India on leave and outlined the present administrative conditions in India in his speech.

Before the war, he said, the Germans anticipated that the Indians would raise a flag of revolt against England simultaneously with the outbreak of hostilities, but this anticipation is not yet realized to the disappointment of the Germans. Present day India, however, is not so calm and quiet as it appears; there are not wanting many Indians of purely anarchical principles whose haunt is Bengal, and it is not rare that police officers fall victims to the attacks of these anarchists.

On the other hand, the number of revolutionaries who are antagonistic against England is not small and with their headquarters in America they have laboured for the propagation of revolutionary principles. Many revolutionaries returned to India from America by the Komagata Maru and other steamers after the war broke out and Indian revolutionaries, both at home and abroad, planned to rise in revolt by concert in February, 1915. The Lahore affair by which name this plot is generally known was barely nipped in the bud and the trial of those convicted on that occasion has but recently been concluded. Apart from anarchists or revolutionaries there are so-called autonomy agitators in India who are dissatisfied with the present British administrative systems in their land. These autonomists are very considerable in number and it is not at all an exaggeration to state that the majority of pure Indian people are autonomists [Whatever the speaker meant is lost by translation]. That India is not pleased with the present British administration in various respects is undisputable.

There may be several reasons accounting for this dissatisfaction, but one must be the racial self-awakening of Indians accentuated by the Russo-Japanese war, and the discriminating treatment the present administration makes between Indians and English may be another source of displeasure. Indians prefer the ideal life while the English are men of actual life which is diametrically opposite to the former, but what chiefly makes the administration in India a very difficult one is the wide difference of habits and customs between Indians and British. Indians still stick to their time-honoured manners of life, so that there exists practically no private social intercourse between Indians and English people.

The oppressive policy adopted by the former Viceroy of India and others has undeniably added to injure the feeling of Indians and though India is not so troubled and confused as the Germans anticipated, yet it is not so peaceful and quiet as our people believe here.

ADVICE HOW TO SPEND MONEY ONE HASN'T GOT

"If I became a narikin or parvenu" is the subject upon which the "Chuwo," one of the Tokyo papers, is collecting opinions from its readers for which prizes are offered for the best essay. Never before have there been in Japan so many mushroom millionaires as at present, whose quickly-attained prosperity is all due to the protracted war in Europe, and in view of the fact that the life of a narikin is really tantalizing to many people, the said question put by the "Chuwo" has met with a ready response on the part of its readers who now daily send their answers as to how they would utilize their suddenly accumulated fortune. Selections from these answers are daily published in the paper and though some readers are apt to indulge unavoidably in somewhat wild hopes or fancies on this subject yet the majority seem to be serious in answering the question "If I became a parvenu."

In yesterday's issue of the "Chuwo" one reader writes that if he became an upstart millionaire, he would build large theatres in Tokyo, Osaka and other such cities where many labourers live for the sole purpose of giving consolation to these under-paid workers. He says that he would construct at his own expenses two or three such theatres in these cities and invite poor workers and their families at least three times a week to attend where dramatic performances, singing, cinematograph and all kinds of amusement could be available. At every entr'acte, he says, the audience would listen to easy and instructive lectures from prominent persons which would contribute towards the development of their character.

Another reader signifies his intention to establish a Sino-Japanese commercial school. "If I attained wealth," he says, "I would consult with influential business men about the establishment of a Sino-Japanese commercial school as an undertaking after the present war. I would go to China myself and establish the school in Tsingtau or some other suitable place in China and educate both Japanese and Chinese youths with the true spirit of mutual friendship. To spread the influence of the Japanese language in China would be one of the objects of the school, and I would also start a Sino-Japanese trading company where the school would be erected. The graduates of the school would be employed by the company and its many branches in various parts of China which would strive for the development of Sino-Japanese trade with a view to strengthening the commercial and industrial influence of Japan in our neighbour republic."

There are many other opinions expressed by readers of the "Chuwo": one says that he would establish an ideal orphanage to care for ill-starred children; some say that they would spend their wealth in the cause of temperance work, while another expresses his cherished hope for the establishment of a model employment office.

Another answer which is rather different from the majority is given by a reader in Korea who says that he would sacrifice his wealth for the sake of Koreans and the Formosan aborigines. "Japan is," he states, "under the necessity of making Koreans and Formosan natives assimilate with us, but this is the most difficult thing of all Japan's colonial problems. The government is of course responsible for this problem, but the nation at large should share the responsibility. If I became a parvenu, therefore, I would try to encourage marriages between Japanese and Formosan natives, and give 300 yen or 500 to a Japanese who married a Formosan native every time a baby was born to them. The money would have to be spent for the education of their child. I would also bring many Formosan natives to Japan proper to give them desirable education, and if all this was done I think it would partly contribute towards the success of Japan's colonial policy."

ON THE FRENCH FRONT

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 28.—The retreat of the enemy on the Ancre is the most considerable one since the battle of the Marne, but experts, though they rejoice at the bloodless capture of some of the strongest German fortresses, warn the public against exaggerating the significance of the German movement.

They point out that the operation is so well-timed as regards weather that it has enabled the enemy to remove his guns and escape without great loss from positions threatened with envelopment.

The gradual withdrawal of the enemy continues with occasional determined resistance from isolated detachments, especially in the vicinity of Bapaume, but without delaying the general advance of the British. The sloppy ground precludes vigorous pursuit.

It is, of course, impossible to tell how far the retreat will continue. The two natural lines of country affording a strong position are firstly the Bapaume ridge, and, behind that the longer line between Cambrac and Arras. It is not unlikely that the enemy may be compelled to withdraw to the latter.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 28.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Tuesday evening communiqué, says: "We have made further progress and captured Le Barque and occupied Ligny. We have also established ourselves in the western and northern defenses of Puisieux-au-mont. We have made raids southwest of Lens and also to the east of Armentières, where on a half-mile front we have entered three lines of trenches and done considerable damage to the defenses."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 1.—Reuter's representative at British Headquarters in France, in a message dated February 26, says: "The Germans are still retreating along the whole line between Gommecourt and Transloy. The British everywhere are in close contact.

"The weather cleared up for a short time to-day, the first time for ten days. Thus the aeroplanes were able to obtain photographs, which should indicate the direction of the withdrawal. It is now probable that the Germans will not stop until they reach the Arras to Cambrai line, as the ceaseless British pressure threatens to prevent them retaining the Bapaume ridge.

"The German retreat may tactically have temporarily improved the enemy's position, but strategically the enemy, for the first time, is admitting his defeat. The retreat of the Germans is an unqualified triumph for the British Army."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 1.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Wednesday evening communiqué, says: "This morning, we captured a portion of a trench to the north-east of Sailly-Saillisel and took 85 prisoners. We have occupied the fortress of Gommecourt and captured the villages of Thilloy and Puisieux-au-mont with the trench systems adjoining. We have pushed our line 1,000 yards to the north-east of Gommecourt."

Reuter's representative at British Headquarters in France, under date of February 28, says: "The German evacuation of the fortress of Gommecourt is most interesting, because it marks the northward extension of their retreat. Fighting yesterday was more in the open. In consequence, the British are pressing on the rear-guards of the enemy more vigorously.

"Things also are busy on the Somme front, where a successful attack was made on Sailly-Saillisel with a view to straighten out the line.

"The enemy undoubtedly realizes the riskiness of his movement, and is abandoning much ammunition owing to want of time to destroy it.

"The British line now runs north of Gommecourt through Puisieux, Irles and Ligny to between Transloy and Les Boeufs."

A German official statement by wireless says: "There was an infantry combat, in accordance with our plans, on the Ancre in which we surprised the French, capturing a river post on the Aisne and driving the enemy out."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 2.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Thursday evening communiqué, reports: "We took 2,133 prisoners in February, including 36 officers. The enemy continues to retreat. Northward of Miraumont, we have advanced 600 yards on a 1½ mile front."

Reuter's representative at British Headquarters in France telegraphs: "Around Ligny, we are now upon ground which is actually higher than Bapaume. It is, therefore, only a question of advancing the guns to dominate the fortress and render it untenable. There are hints of developments of a most dramatic nature if only the weather holds good."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Paris, Mar. 2.—The correspondent of "Le Journal" gives a remarkable explanation of the success of the British on the Ancre, which he says was particularly due to the terrific efficacy of the new gas-shells which caused the enemy astonishing, heavy losses.

The German official statement reads: "We voluntarily evacuated our foremost positions on both banks of the Ancre and took up another defensive line. The enemy remained in ignorance of our movements. Our rear-guards compelled the enemy to fight for the possession of the destroyed country. We are retreating before a superior force of attackers. Our weak detachments inflicted sanguinary losses on the British. In their attacks on Le Transloy, and Sailly with the exception of two narrow positions which they captured, the enemy was defeated."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, Mar. 3.—Now that it is impossible to longer conceal the German retreat on the Ancre, the German press, with one inspired accord, have begun to publish explanations which are intended to reassure the population, disquieted for weeks past by the rumours of evacuation.

The papers now declare they knew all about it on February 20. Hence they are delighted to observe the "enemy's astonishment." The "Koelnische Zeitung" describes the retreat as a model operation.

Coincidentally, the military governor of Cologne threatens severe punishment for those spreading "absurdly exaggerated rumours."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 4.—Correspondents at Headquarters on Friday night emphasize that the enemy carefully concealed from his troops the fact that they were retreating and the progress of the British advance.

The German retreat is necessarily slow, but the British reached the enemy position at Achie-le-petit, the first of the two remaining trench systems, before Bapaume.

Fighting at close quarters is proceeding in Rowpart Wood, north of Warlencourt. In consequence of the enemy trying to recover a position he lost too soon, the enemy is approximating to the general line, which he will probably defend with a show of force. His positions are uncomfortable, many being filled with water, but are defended with forests of wire.

Our advance has been wonderfully stimulated, the British being eager to show their skill in the open.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 4.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Friday evening communiqué, says: "We made further progress north of Warlencourt and Eaucourt and northwest of Puisieux-au-mont. We repulsed the counter-attacks on our advanced positions north-east of Gueudecourt and north-west of Ligny and Thilloy.

"As the result of to-day's fighting on the Ancre we took 128 prisoners.

"We raided hostile trenches in the neighbourhood of Angres, Caronne and Loos."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 4.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Saturday evening communiqué, says: "After a stubborn resistance, we made further progress north of Puisieux-au-mont and eastward of Commecourt. Our line was advanced a quarter of a mile on a frontage of 5 miles."

Reuter's representative at Headquarters says: "There has been a partial lull in the German retirement for the past two days, due to the increasing difficulty of the enemy carrying out his movements unobserved. Yesterday was largely devoted to cleaning up the result. Over 200 prisoners were rounded up, while the artillery secured new objectives."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 5.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Sunday evening communiqué, says: "We attacked and captured the enemy's frontal and supporting lines eastward of Bouchavesnes on a frontage of 1,200 yards. We took 173 prisoners. We heavily repulsed several counter-attacks. The enemy continued to yield ground east of Gommecourt, where we advanced to a depth of 1,200 yards on a frontage of two miles. The total prisoners for the day was 190."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Paris, Mar. 6.—The correspondent of "La Liberté" with the British forces says: "Fighting has been ceaseless. There has been a fierce battle from Gommecourt to Irles during the last 48 hours, which has extended over a front of 8 kilometres.

"The "Tommies" have advanced appreciably despite the resistance, which is daily becoming more powerful. The German retirement is being unceasingly harrassed by the abnormal bulge in the German line between Arras and Bapaume. It is becoming increasingly more difficult to defend. The fall of the salient may be expected very soon. The British artillery has begun an intense bombardment of the positions below Bapaume."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 6.—The communiqué today reveals the fact that the British line now extends as far south as Roye, a distance of 130 miles from Paris.

Correspondents with the British forces describe the appalling state of the evacuated German ground. But the whole battlefield is matted with bodies that have lain unburied for months. Many were probably drowned in the mud through which they were unable to wade.

ON THE RUSSIAN FRONTS

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, March 1.—Western front. Firing and reconnaissances are in progress.

Rumanian ront. The enemy, on February 27, after an artillery preparation attacked the Russian positions on both sides of the Jacobeni to Kimpolung roadway and seized the heights 3 kilometres southwest of Valeputna. In the evening of the same day, the enemy was repulsed by the Russian counter-attack from the height near the railway.

Firing is in progress on the Caucasus front. The snowstorm on the Pontic Taurus continues.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Mar. 1.—Western front. Firing and reconnaissances are in progress.

Rumania. The Russian troops performed, in the night before February 28, counter-attacks on the heights, which had been taken the day before by the enemy on both sides of the Jacobeni-Kimpolung roadway. The Rusian attacks north of the roadway had no success, but south of the roadway the position was re-established. The Rumanians attacked the enemy's positions 2 kilometres south of Rekosa (north of the river Zavala), dislodging him and seizing one height, capturing as well a machine-gun and prisoners.

London, Mar. 2.—An official report from Mesopotamia states that the pursuit of the Turks continued on Wednesday, with the enemy in great confusion. Since February 23, the British army has captured 4,300 Turkish prisoners, twenty-eight guns, nineteen trench mortars, three Turkish ships, two tugs, ten barges and thirty pontoons.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Mar. 2.—On the Rumanian front, in the region north of the railroad running from Jakobeni to Kimpolung, the fighting is still going on. Near the village of Rekozy, north of Zavla, the Germans performed a counter attack, compelling the Rumanians to withdraw from a height occupied on the previous evening. North of the River Rymnik the Russians annihilated two German detachments, taking 23 prisoners and capturing two machine guns.

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, Mar. 3.—The Russians have captured Hamadan and are now pursuing the retreating enemy.

Hamadan, a city of 30,000 inhabitants in Persia, is at the northern base of Mount Elwend, 160 miles west south-west of Teheran. It is the centre of converging routes from Bagdad, Erivan, Teheran and Ispahan and is a manufacturing centre for leather, carpets and woollen and cotton fabrics.

London, Mar. 4.—A dispatch from Teheran announces that the Russians have captured the town of Hamadan.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, March 4.—Western front. The gas attack, which was performed by the Russians North of the Naroch Lake caused a commotion in the enemy's trenches. The Germans, about a battalion in strength after an hour's artillery preparation attacked the Russian trenches near Slaventin (south-east of Brzezany), but having reached these trenches they were dislodged by a counterattack of the Russian reserve troops.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Mar. 4.—Western front. The Russians south of Krevo performed a gas attack, which caused a commotion in the enemy's trenches.

The Russian troops in Persia assumed the offensive and seized in the Bidjar direction the village Hanie-Kale, 35 kilometres south-east of Bidjar.

Hamadan was taken by the Russians on March 2.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Mar. 5.—Firing and reconnoissances continue on the western and the Rumanian fronts. South-west of Luzk, the Russian artillery brought down an enemy aeroplane, which caught fire, the aviators being taken prisoner.

The Turks, more than one company in strength, attacked from three different directions a Russian strategical point north-west of Kalkit, but were repulsed into their trenches.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 5.—The official Russian communiqué reads: "Our Persian detachment assumed the offensive in the direction of Bidjar and captured a village two miles to the south-east of it. We captured Hamadan on Friday."

BRITISH DESTROYER SUNK

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 5.—The Admiralty announce that a destroyer was sunk in the North Sea with all hands on March 1. It is thought probable that the vessel struck a mine.

CAMPAIGN IN MESOPOTAMIA

London, March 1.—The official communication from Mesopotamia reads: "The close pursuit of the enemy continues and is being steadily maintained. On Monday, the advanced troops were engaging the enemy on the left bank of the Tigris over 30 miles west northwest of Kut-el-Amara. The enemy abandoned, at this spot quantities of arms and equipment and four Howitzers. We took 360 prisoners on Sunday, and 161 on Monday."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 1.—In the House of Lords, Earl Curzon of Kedleston, member of the War Cabinet, read a telegram from General Maude, dated the morning of the 25th ultimo, saying the cavalry and infantry had moved westward in pursuit of the retreating enemy.

Strong Turkish rearguards occupied a trench position 15 miles west-north-west of Kut, evidently covering the withdrawal. After an intense bombardment, our infantry assaulted the enemy's position and obtained a footing therein, while our cavalry operated round the Turkish northern flank.

Lord Curzon added it was evident the scene of operations had shifted considerably upstream beyond Kut. He believed that several thousand prisoners had been taken.

SMALL LOSS OF LIFE WHEN WHITE STAR LINER SANK

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 28.—The Cunard Company, the owners of the White Star Liner Laconia, have issued a statement concerning the loss of life when the vessel was sunk off Queenstown. It is announced that practically all on board the Laconia were removed from the vessel in safety. It is known, however, that one person lost his (or her) life and some are now missing.

A message from New York says that there were six American passengers and twenty Americans among the crew of the Laconia.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 28.—The Queenstown correspondent of the "Daily Chronicle" telegraphs that the Laconia was hit by two torpedoes. The weather was comparatively calm at the time. The vessel took a terrible list and the boats were lowered with difficulty. There was no panic.

It is reported here that two American lady passengers on the Laconia died from exposure in the boats. The official statement says that three of the passengers lost their lives and three are missing. Of the crew, six are missing, and six are now in hospital.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 28.—The two American ladies, who were victims of the Laconia tragedy, were among seven people who died out of 21 occupants of a waterlogged boat. Death was due to exposure.

LATEST HUN SIGN OF DIPLOMATIC INSANITY

Washington, Mar. 1.—Mr. Lansing, the Secretary of State, in referring to Dr. Zimmermann's Note to Mexico has authorized the following statement.

"I do not believe that Japan had any knowledge of this Note, nor do I believe, for a moment, that she would consider any proposition made by the enemy."

Dr. Zimmermann, the German Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, on behalf of Germany has sent a Note to Mexico seeking an alliance between Mexico and Japan in a war with the United States.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

New York, March 1.—The Associated Press Washington correspondent says he is enabled to reveal that Germany, in planning her "unrestricted submarine warfare," proposed an Alliance with Mexico and Japan to make war on the United States if the latter did not remain neutral. Japan, through Mexican mediation, was to be urged to abandon the Entente Powers and join in an attack on the United States.

The proposal was contained in the following letter from German Foreign Minister Zimmermann sent through Count Berndorff, then German Ambassador in Washington, to Herr von Eckardt, German Minister to Mexico, under date January 19th, 1917:—

"On February 1st we intend to begin submarine warfare unrestricted. Despite this, it is our endeavour to keep the United States neutral.

"If this attempt is not successful we propose an Alliance on the following basis with Mexico:

"That we shall make war together and together make peace. We shall give general financial support, and it is understood that Mexico is to recover her lost territory of New Mexico, Texas and Arizona. Details are left for settlement.

"You are instructed to inform the President of Mexico of above in the greatest confidence as soon as it is certain there will be an outbreak of war with the United States and suggest that the President of Mexico on his own initiative should communicate with Japan suggesting her adherence at once to this plan, and at the same time offer to mediate between Germany and Japan.

"Please call the attention of the President of Mexico to the point that employment of ruthless submarine warfare now promises to compel England to make peace in a few months.

(Signed) "Zimmerman."

This document has been in the hands of the Government since President Wilson severed diplomatic relations with Germany.

The document supplies the missing link in many separate chains of circumstances, which until now seemed to lead to a definite point. It sheds new light upon frequently reported but indefinable movements in the Mexican situation, with the friction between the United States and Japan. There is [no] intimation that Germany's astounding proposal that Japan turn traitor against the Allies has been answered by Tokyo.

The document is considered to give new credence to the persistent efforts to secure submarine bases in Mexico, and also to show the connection between Carranza's recent proposal that the Neutrals' export of food and munitions to the Entente Powers be cut off, and the intimation that he might cease to supply oil to Great Britain.

Such a proposal as that Germany instructed her Minister to make to Mexico borders on an act of war, if actually it is not an act of war.

No doubt exists in Washington that the persisted report of the last two years of operations by German agents in Mexico, Central America and the West Indies were based on fact.

Washington, March 1.—The Japanese Embassy here has issued the following statement:—

"Regarding the alleged German attempt to induce Japan and Mexico to make war upon the United States, published by the Press this morning, the Japanese Embassy, while lacking information as to whether such an invitation has ever reached Tokyo, desires to state most emphatically that no invitation of this sort would, under any circumstances, be entertained by the Japanese Government, which is in entire accord and in close relations with the other Powers on account of former agreements and our common cause, and, moreover, because of our good friendship with the United States, which is every day growing in sincerity and cordiality."

Washington, March 1.—When the question of Dr. Zimmerman's Note to Mexico was brought up in the Senate to-day, Mr. C. Swanson, Democratic Senator from Virginia, announced that President Wilson had authorized him to state that the Note, as published by the Associated Press was "substantially correct."

Washington, March 1.—In response to a request from the Senate for further information of the Zimmermann Note to Mexico, President Wilson sent the following statement through Mr. Lansing, Secretary of State:

The United States Government is in possession of evidence establishing the fact that the Note is authentic. That evidence was procured during the present week, but it is incompatible with the public interest to send the Senate further information regarding it, at the present time.

New York, March 2.—An interpellation was raised in the Senate as to where and how the Washington Government had come into possession of the letter of the German Foreign Minister. The Government has, however, declined to make known who supplied that remarkable letter and simply stated that such an intrigue could never realize its object. The Government has also declared that the Mexican Government would maintain strict neutrality and that von Eckhart, the German Minister in Mexico, knew nothing about the matter.—"Asahi."

New York, March 2.—The "New York Times" commenting on the Zimmermann note says that the German proposal is very unintelligible and ridiculous. Japan has concluded an alliance treaty and has practically attained her desire to become the commanding power of the Orient. Not sured."

only that, but Japan has bound herself with the Allies by a strong cord alliance in declaring war against Germany, and moreover she maintains friendly relations with the United States. There is no complication likely to estrange Japan and the United States, excepting the questions relating to the treatment of Japanese which question is, however, limited to the Western States and of local insignificance. Nevertheless Germany seems to expect that Japan would suddenly change her mind and fight against the allies, to whom she is firmly attached, in response to the Berlin invitation. The paper fails to see any reason for such incomprehensive expectation of Germany."—"Asahi."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 2.—The revelation of the Mexican plot is regarded by the British press as a crowning exposure of the roguery, desperation and folly of Germany's rulers. The dramatic timing of the revelation is considered as fresh proof of the prudence with which President Wilson is seeking to consolidate the American nation by fully acquainting it with Germany's crimes, before announcing the decision that the sinking of the Laconia was an overt act necessitating war.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

New York, Mar. 3.—A message from London states that a semi-official report from Berlin admits the authenticity of the Zimmermann note. The statement does not give the text, but says the offer of an allowance was forwarded to the German Minister in the City of Mexico with express instructions not to present it to the Mexican government unless he knew certainly that the United States was about to declare war. The statement suggests that treachery in American territory was responsible for the publication of the note in the United States.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, Mar. 3.—Germany justifies her intrigue in Mexico against America on the ground that it was in anticipation of the subsequently justified abandonment of neutrality by America. Germany, however, is angry at the "treachery" whereby the intrigue was discovered.

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

London, March 3.—The revelation of Germany's advances to Mexico with a view to embroiling Japan and attacking the United States was received by the British press with amazement. It is characterized as the crowning exhibition of roguery and folly of Germany's rulers.

"The Daily Telegraph" says:—"Our ally in the Far East who happens also to be an ally of Russia was to cast in her lot with a power which stands before a condemning world of honest men, the declared enemy of half the population of the universe and is besieged by land as well as by sea. We trust that this exposure which will certainly bring some word from Tokyo will, once and for all, convince the American people that they have as little cause to fear the Japanese as have British dominions in the Pacific which that power is assisting in defending. Japan did not enter upon the war lightly. She has made great sacrifices in fulfilling her duty. She will make peace when her partners make peace and not a day before, of that we are absolutely as-London, Mar. 3.—In commenting on the Zimmermann Note to Mexico written with a view to embroiling Mexico and Japan with the United States on behalf of Germany, the "Daily News" says: "The credulity which could contemplate the association of Japan and Mexico in an attack on the United States springs from the same mental infirmity as that which prompted the Germans to a complete faith in a revolt in Ireland and disintegration of the British Empire in 1914.

"Only Germany could believe that solicitation by such a state as Mexico would suffice to detach the Japanese Government from its loyalty to the Entente and launch it on a foolhardy and treacherous assault on the United States."

The "Daily Mail" says: "It need scarcely be said that Japan would in no circumstances have had any dealing with the Germans.

"In this country we know with how stainless a standard of honour she waged the war of 1904-05, in which there was not one single infringement of international law. The history of that struggle is a living testimony against Germany and proof that men can fight without using the methods of devils."

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

London, Mar. 4.—The Japanese Ambassador in London, interviewed regarding the German intrigue in Mexico and Japan says:

"The idea is not only monstrous, impossible and outrageous to our sense of dignity but grossly insulting to the intelligence of our public.

"It is needless to say that a press telegram from the United States was the first intimation we had in the matter and were it not for the source from which it emanated we could hardly have brought ourselves to believe that even what is now so well known subjectively of the German Government should have gone to such an extent of miscalculation and self-deception.

"The revelation was very timely and its result must be to convince the American people once and for all that they have as little cause to fear the Japanese as have the British Dominions in the Pacific which Japan is assisting in defending.

"The Germans have again overdone their game and its real outcome will, we are sure, be an increased cordiality between the United States and Japan."

KOKUSAI-HAVAS

Paris, Mar. 3.—In an article commenting upon the instructions of Dr. Zimmermann to Von Ekhardt, "Le Temps" writes as follows:—

"When Japan, in 1914, placed herself by the side of the Entente powers she had not forgotten the difficulties which long negotiations in preceding years had only partially solved, but she thought these difficulties would be more easily solved when a closer bond united her to Great Britain and the allies of Great Britain. She believed also that the outcome of the conflict would assure the equilibrium and peace of the world and that she chose her course on the side giving the best assurance for world order.

"Did the Berlin Government suppose that Japan would change her mind on account of Germany proclaiming a suppression of neutral navigation on all the seas? If Germany did so, it shows once more its poor judgment. Though at war against Germany, Japan for a long time has shown extreme moderation toward the German citizens residing in her territory. This may have given rise to hopes and illusions in Germany and may explain, to a certain extent, the Machiavelian and stupid proposal which Von Echkhardt was to convey to Mexico.

"Viscount Motono's last speech and all the career of this prominent statesman should have interpreted Japan to Germany. Viscount Motono has conceived, as must be conceived by all patriots of all honest countries, the situation of Europe and the world. He knows that the German policy, at peace or war, means injury to the rights and independence of foreign peoples."

"Le Journal des Debats" writes on the same subject:—"Dr. Zimmermann in endeavouring to offer to Japan the proposal for an alliance breaks all records for duplicity. Japan is the loyal and active ally of the Entente. After having acted directly against Germany where it was possible to strike a blow, Japan gives indirect but regular assistance to the Allies. Nothing, absolutely nothing, could bring us to suspect her good faith but the German Minister for Foreign Affairs supposes that others can be guilty of the same foul schemes as himself and he thinks that Japan could be disloyal to her part."

The following declaration was made to a member of the press at the Japanese Embassy. "In our opinion, all that has happened is that on the part of Germany there is a foul plot easy to foil and to which we must attach no importance. It would be insulting to suppose that Japan could give adhesion to these German schemes."

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, Mar. 5.—The "Retch" considers the address to Mexico of Dr. Zimmermann, German Foreign Minister, a specimen of traitorous Teuton crude ingenuousness, made with the calculated hope of easily enticing Japan to join Mexico against America.

The "Russkoye Volia" says the calculation of Germany to lure Japan against America is more than naïve, as whatever relations exist between the two great Pacific Ocean powers, Japan is firmly and wisely continuing hostile to Germany. Only the mental aberration of German diplomats could conclude that Japan would sacrifice her best interests for the King of Prussia.

New York, Mar. 6.—A Hindu, who gives the name of Hanadod Chakiaberty (?), and a German named Ernest Sokunner (?) have been arrested here for conspiring to form a military expedition against India through China.

The prisoners have confessed that under the direction of Captain von Igel, who succeeded Captain von Papen, as military attaché to the German Embassy at Washington, Chakiaberty, posing as a Persian merchant, fraudulently obtained a passport to proceed to Berlin.

On arrival there, he conferred with the German officials and returned to New York. On his return here, he and his accomplices plotted to induce the Chinese Government to permit the storing of munition from the United States on Chinese territory, pending the contemplated invasion of India. All their efforts, however, proved abortive.

SENATE DID NOT VOTE ARMED NEUTRALITY BILL

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Feb. 28.—A Washington dispatch says that President Wilson has gone before Congress and asked for authority to establish the country in a state of armed neutrality. He stated that full plans had been made to protect American ships in the German war zone.

The President said that while he still desired peace, there was something greater than peace. Namely, the protection of the rights of Americans, and upholding the rights of American ships to sail the seas unmolested.

The President requested Congress to authorize the supply of defensive arms to merchantmen, and also allow adequate means being taken for their protection, including war risk insurance.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

Washington, Mar. 1.—The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations last night decided on a Bill to meet the President's request for plenary powers to protect U.S. life and property on the high seas in almost the exact terms it is understood he himself suggested to one of its members.

The House of Representatives' Committee on Foreign Relations, however, amended a similar Bill, omitting to empower the President to employ other instrumentalities besides arming American ships and providing gunners therefor, and also forbidding the Government War-risk Bureau to insure ships carrying munitions of war.

Should both measures pass in their present form, a Conference of Representatives of the two Houses will be necessary.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

New York, Mar. 1.—Editorial opinion on President Wilson's request for authority to arm American ships against Germany's submarine menace is, as was expected, universally favourable. The only criticism is that his requests are too moderate in view of the fact that Americans lost their lives through the sinking of the Laconia, constituting a plain violation of American rights.

It is somewhat unfortunate, perhaps that the desire of certain politicians to force an Extra Session of Congress, because the next House is expected to have a slight Republican majority, has delayed action in sundry important measures, but this has little influence on editorial opinion of the crisis with Germany.

The New York "World" says—"The President has asked from Congress the smallest measure of power that a Chief Magistrate, mindful of his obligations and responsibilities, could have demanded. He has asked the least that a patriotic Congress could grant. If Congress differs at all with the President, the difference should side with greater powers than the President asked."

The New York "Tribune" says:—"The Government at last faces an overt act on the part of Germany which cannot be explained away. The slaughter of our citizens in cold-blood—a crime repeated again and again by Germany—calls for a remonstrance through which shall flame our long-restrained righteous wrath. It calls not for amateurish experiment in 'near-war,' but real war undertaken with serious appreciation of what war now means."

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

Washington, March 1.—The House of Representatives, to-day, by 403 to 13 votes passed a Bill which empowers the President to order the arming of merchantmen. The measure, however, does not extend authority to the President to use other instrumentalities, which Mr. Wilson specifically desires.

It is expected that when the Bill, passed by the Lower House, reaches the Senate on Friday, the Senate Bill, which the Administration fully commends, will be substituted and finally will pass both Houses.

Washington, March 4.—The Sixty-fourth Congress expired at noon without voting the Armed Neutrality Bill.

When the hands of the clock pointed to 12 noon, Senator Hichcock announced the failure of the Senate to ratify the President's request "by the most reprehensible fitibuster in the history of civilized Governments."

On coming to the Capitol in the morning, President Wilson signed the Naval Appropriation Bill and the Resolution authorizing a $150,000,000 bond issue to expedite naval construction.

During the early morning Senator Hitchcock put on record a Manifesto signed by Senators of both parties, setting forth the facts of the filibuster.

It is learned authoritatively that President Wilson will arm American merchantmen and take other steps for their protection, believing he has right to do so and that the general attitude of Congress in the matter sufficiently demonstrates its support.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

Washington, March 4.—President Wilson in a statement, on Sunday evening, informed the country that he may be without power to arm merchantmen and take other steps to meet the submarine menace in the absence of authority from Congress. He says that an extra session of Congress will be required to give him authority, but that it is useless to call an extra session, while the Senate works under the present rule, which permits a small minority to keep an overwhelming majority acting. He proposes to call a special session of the Senate on Monday to revise the rules in order to supply means of action to save the country from disaster.

Washington, March 4.—Senator Sherman read in the Senate German Foreign Minister Zimmermann's admission of German intrigue with Mexico after which Senator Frank D. Brandegee, of Connecticut, spoke to the Armed Neutrality Bill, characterizing Germany as a homicidal maniac, with whom it was unsafe to argue. He said:—

"Are we going to lie on our backs and let this monstrous Frankenstein trample over us ruthlessly? I am not deceived in regarding the effect of this Bill. The next freight or passenger ship with American gunners aboard, which attempts to enter British or neutral port through the German war-zone will be attacked by a German submarine. That means war. If this nation be fit to live and if perchance our defensive gunners should sink that submarine, that means war. When Germany proclaimed unrestricted submarine warfare after February 1st against the Allies, she declared war against the world."

Senator Stone, the Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, whose constituency in Missouri contains many Germans, opposed the arming of munitionships or granting the President authority to employ "other instrumentalities" for the protection of ships. He talked 4½ hours, causing fear that another filibuster was under way.

Afterward certain Progressives objected to every effort on the part of the Democratic leaders to limit the debate. While these exhorted the members to abandon dilatory tactics, President Wilson's supporters in both the old parties, estimated at least at 90 per cent. of the Senate, drew up a Manifesto to be published if the Bill did not come to a vote by to-morrow noon when, according to law, the Session ends.

Washington, Mar. 5.—A Democratic caucus of the Senate will be called to-morrow to discuss the establishment of a closure rule. Thirty-three Senators have already agreed to support the anti-filibuster movement.

At the request of President Wilson, Mr. Thomas W. Gregory U.S. Attorney-General, has been instructed to open an investigation as to the President's power to arm merchantmen for defense, without the specific authorization of Congress.

DASTARDLY SCHEME TO MURDER MR. WILSON

New York, Mar. 5.—The Police at Hoboken, to-day arrested Fritz Kolb and two accomplices, who are charged with being implicated in a plot to blow up President Wilson with bombs. Kolb planned the murder, and bombs, which he intended to send to Mr. Wilson to-night, were found in his room.

The Police are investigating the ramifications of the plot, which it is alleged, included the blowing up of the Tampico oil-works in Mexico and munition plants in the United States.

U.S. NAVAL BILLS PASS

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, Mar. 4.—The Senate to-day passed, without a division, a naval appropriation Bill for $535,000,000, also it sanctioned the issue of $150,000,000 in bonds to provide an emergency fund; $115,000,000 was voted to enable the President to expedite naval construction. An amendment of an additional vote of $35,000,000 for submarines was adopted, making all appropriations available immediately, instead of 1/3 being ear-marked for establishing another navy-yard on the Pacific Coast.

WILSON GOES TO WHITE HOUSE FOR SECOND TERM

Washington, Mar. 5.—President Woodrow Wilson was inaugurated as President of the United States for a second term, at mid-day to-day.

Before an immense crowd, which packed the Plaza in front of the Capitol he delivered his inaugural address.

After reviewing briefly the legislative achievements of the Government during the last four years, the President said that other matters were now forcing themselves on the executive's attention, and calling for the fresh consecration of the nation's service. In referring to the international crisis, President Wilson said: "We wished for nothing for ourselves that we were not ready to demand for all mankind—fair dealing, justice, and freedom to live and be at ease against organized wrong. It is in this spirit and with this thought, we groan and are more and more aware, and are more and more certain that the part we wished to play was the part of those who mean to vindicate and fortify peace. We have been obliged to arm ourselves to make good our claim to a certain minimum of right and freedom of action."

Provincials no longer, he continued, Americans must prepare to take a part as citizens of the world and there must be no turning back. America must stand for peace, the stability of free peoples, and national equality in matters of right. The seas must be free to all, and the family of nations should not support any government that does not derive its power from the consent of the governed. In sounding a solemn warning against any factional intrigue to break the harmony and embarrass the spirit of the American people, the President called for an America united in feeling, purpose and vision.

The day was stormy, but the sun came out for a short time as the President led the procession to the White House.

AUSTRIA NOW BEYOND THE PALE OF CIVILIZATION

London, Mar. 6.—Reuter's correspondent at Vienna telegraphs that the Austrian reply to the American Note regarding ruthless submarine warfare, declares that neutrals are responsible for any losses suffered by entering territory where warlike operations are in existence.

New York, March 6.—According to a dispatch from London, the Austrian Government has handed to Mr. Penfield, the American Ambassador in Vienna, its reply to the American Note concerning the unrestricted submarine warfare which approves the German naval policy. The Austrian reply says that though Austria does not oppose the proposal of America for the protection of the lives of neutrals they have already been warned not to enter the prohibited zones, so that neutrals who act contrary to this warning are themselves responsible for any losses sustained thereby.—Asahi.

CRISIS IN CHINA'S CABINET TAKES TURN FOR BETTER

President Send Emissary To Tientsin To Recall Premier Tuan

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

Peking, March 1.—The Minister of Foreign Affairs Mr. Wu Ting-fang has tendered his resignation solely for reasons of health. He has long suffered from deafness which has been accentuated by a recent illness rendering his participation in the deliberations at the Cabinet and the conduct of diplomatic negotiations difficult.

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

Peking, March 2.—President Li Yuan-hung has refused to accept the resignation of Dr. Wu Ting-fang, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, under any circumstances until a suitable successor has been found.

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

Peking, March 2.—There has been no development up to the present in the Sino-German crisis though it is understood that the Government has now reached a definite decision to break with Germany but when and how the action will be taken has not been revealed.

In view of the emphatic tone of the protest sent to Germany, the Government's delay and the constant holding of apparently resultless conferences are much criticised. All circles, except a small pro-German minority, hope that a definite step will be taken soon.

The Chinese Government has at last reached a decision to sever its diplomatic relations with Germany and will make a declaration to that effect early this week, according to the reliable information received at the Foreign Office from Peking yesterday.

President Li Yuan-hung, who had stubbornly resisted any radical measure, came to see the futility of his efforts and reversed his former attitude. This has removed the last obstacle which blocked the Chinese Government from taking a free and decisive step.

There is still another procedure which the Government must go through before declaring the diplomatic rupture against Germany. The consent of Parliament must be obtained. This is merely a matter of formality, in the opinion of a high official of the Foreign Office. Some opposition, of course, may be expected from the pro-German members of Parliament, but the little weight they can muster, can easily be foretold.

The Chinese Government is also collecting the views and opinions from the Governors of all the Provinces as to the course China should pursue. Again this is a matter of formality and the Governors' attitude can, in practise, have little influence in moulding the drastic policy the Government is already determined to adopt.

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

Peking, March 5.—Premier Tuan Chi-jui, after an altercation with the President over China's action with regard to Germany, has sent in his resignation and left for Tientsin.

The resignation probably will not be accepted and in any case China's attitude towards Germany will still not be altered.

It appears the Cabinet thus went to the Presidential office and reported its decision with regard to Germany, but apparently before any step is taken the matter will be referred to Parliament.

In the course of the discussion Mr. Tuan Chi-jui revealed certain negotiations, which he has been carrying on, thereupon the President rebuked the Premier, saying that he is the President and commander of the army and navy. Tuan Chi-jui then created a scene and left for Tientsin.

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

Peking, Mar. 5.—Reports on the political crisis in Peking are most conflicting, but it appears to be mainly due to difference of opinion between the President and the Premier on the question of submitting the Cabinet's decision to Parliament. The Premier contends that inasmuch as the Cabinet is a responsible one, the President has no right to oppose its decision. On the other hand, the President considers that such a grave question as the severance of relations with Germany and the possible entry into the war should be submitted to Parliament. The President therefore refused to approve the decision.

The "Peking Gazette" also reports that Tuan Chi-jui has no knowledge that the President had despatched certain instructions to the Chinese Minister in Tokyo which necessitate a consultation with Japan before the Chinese Government was able to approach the Entente on any important matter connected with further action with regard to Germany.

The Cabinet therefore drafted the following telegram which was submitted to the Japanese Government before the Government's decision was communicated to the other Entente powers. The telegram instructed the Chinese Minister in Tokyo to inform the Japanese Government that the Chinese Government had decided to sever relations with Germany immediately and align itself at the side of the Entente. With regard to the definition of the war services of China and compensation, these matters would have to be fixed by mutual agreement at the proper time.

Meanwhile the President has sent a delegation consisting of the Vice-Chief of the General Staff, the Speaker of the House of Representatives and two other prominent men to Tientsin to persuade Tuan Chi-jui to return to the capital.

Peking, Mar. 6.—General Tuan Chi-jui, who has resigned the Premiership of China owing to dissensions of opinions with President Li Yuan-hung anent diplomatic questions towards Germany was visited by 12 representatives of the Chinese National Assembly last evening in Tientsin. The indignation of General Tuan at President Li's attitude was somewhat modified at that time and he told these members that in view of the gravity of the situation in China he was the less inclined to hamper the political situation and that he would return to Peking to assume the post if his diplomatic views be adopted. General Tuan, however, did not give his consent readily to returning to Peking and asked them for some time in order to reconsider the affair. To-day General Feng Kuo-chang, the Vice-President of China, proceeded to Tientsin, to accompany General Tuan to Peking, as the latter has signified his intention of withdrawing his resignation. The reconstruction of the Chinese cabinet, therefore, has been dropped.

Peking, Mar. 5.—It appears that President Li Yuan-hung desires to accept the invitation of the Allies and to rule China smoothly if he succeeds in the rejection of General Tuan and the consequent reformation of the cabinet. The anti-Tuan politicians are in favour of the President's intention and have become careful not to injure the feelings of the Allies.

Rear-Admiral Hintze, German Minister had an appointment with President Li on Sunday, but it was broken owing to the unexpected resignation of Premier Tuan. President Li has had it announced that he refused to see the German Minister lest his interview should displease the allied diplomatic representatives.—"Asahi."

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

Peking, March 6.—The Premier, Mr. Tuan Chi-jui returns to Peking to-night as a result of the persuasion of the Vice-President who went down to Tientsin this morning with the object of getting Mr. Tuan Chi-jui to reconsider his resignation.

There is every indication that the President has considerably modified his attitude. On Monday night, he entertained at dinner the Vice-President Mr. Feng Kuo-chang and Chief of the General Staff, General Wang Shih-chen and also General Hsu Shih-chang. It is reportel that the President successively asked Hsu Shih-chang and Wang Shih-chen to accept the Premiership, which both declined. The President asked Feng Kuo-chang what should be done, and the latter said that further effort should be made to persuade Tuan Chi-jui to withdraw his resignation. Feng Kuo-chang offered to go to Tientsin personally.

The President thereupon entrusted the settlement of the crisis to Feng Kuo-chang, who undoubtedly went to Tientsin with the assurances of the President that he would not further oppose the policy of the Cabinet.

A report received at the official quarters yesterday says that Premier Tuan who left Peking for Tientsin returned to Peking on the 6th, taking the 7.20 train from Tientsin with Vice-President Feng. However it is not yet known whether or not President Li and Premier Tuan will become reconciled but it is evident that other officials of the Chinese Government have been trying to bring Premier Tuan back to office. President Li has been persuaded by others to reconcile with Premier Tuan.

In connection with the resignation of Premier Tuan Chi-jui, later reports from Peking state that President Li Yuan-hung dispatched a messenger to Tientsin on the mission of inducing Premier Tuan to return to Peking. In the meantime President Li invited Vice-President Feng Kuo-chang, Mr. Hsu Shih-chang, Mr. Wang Shih-chen and other elder statesmen, and consulted over the matter. The Vice-President, Mr. Hsu and others all expressed their views in favour of Premier Tuan and tried to mediate between the President and the Premier. Persuaded by their views,

INTERNET ARCHIVE http://www.archive.org/details/ UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS URBANA-CHAMPAIGN

President Li finally decided to dispatch Hsu Pang-hsieh and Cheng Yun-peng to Tientsin on the mission of prevailing upon Premier Tuan to change his mind and return to Peking and resume the premiership.

President Li, being convinced that Parliament will oppose the proposed break with Germany, has been insisting on submitting the proposal to debate in parliament, while on the other hand Premier Tuan, thinking otherwise, is quite willing to submit the proposal to parliament. Thus both the President and the Premier have come to terms on the point of submitting the proposal to parliament from different viewpoints, and in view of the fact that their agreement in that respect is merely superficial it is clearly noticeable that there exists a wide gulf in the depth of their opinions. Inasmuch as Premier Tuan is rather strong in his determination it is thought unlikely that he will remain in office unless President Li makes some concessions on his part. Still it being very difficult to find a suitable successor to the Premiership at present, after all Premier Tuan will probably have to accept the mediation of Vice-President Feng Kuo-chang and Mr. Hsu and others and remain in office. According to a report received in an official quarter, Premier Tuan is expected to return to Peking apparently being induced by the advice of Vice-President Feng and other elder statesmen, leaving Tientsin on Tuesday evening. The report adds that there is hope of the trouble being smoothly settled and unless further complications arise the matter promises to be amicably settled. The allied ministers will, according to the report, keep aloof from the trouble and watch the development of the situation without taking any step as to meddle with the affair. In some circles the resignation of Premier Tuan is regarded as a tactful dodge to place President Li in a difficult situation and to enhance his own influence by making the President acquiesce to his opinion.

Peking, March 6.—General Tuan Chi-jui, Premier, accompanied by General Feng Kuo-chang, Vice-President of China, returned to Peking from Tientsin by a special train to-night at 10 o'clock. President Li Yuan-hung is said to have consented to leaving all diplomatic questions in the hands of the Cabinet hereafter, and an important diplomatic development is expected in a few days.—"Asahi."

Peking, March 7.—With the return of Premier Tuan to Peking, President Li is reported to have accepted the following three conditions.

The President will approve the present diplomatic policy of the Tuan Cabinet. The President will henceforth approve and give his signatures to all instructions issued by the Cabinet.

The President will not henceforth interfere with instructions to local Governors and Ministers abroad which are decided at the Cabinet conference.—"Nichinichi."

BETHMANN-HOLLWEG BLOWS OFF STEAM IN REICHSTAG

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, March 1.—Speaking in the Reichstag, Herr Bethmann-Hollweg, the German Chancellor, said it would be unfruitful for him to specify Germany's peace conditions in advance.

Germany's one ambition, he said, was the obtaining of reparation for all the wrongs suffered. Germany had tried as much as possible to alleviate the difficulties caused to neutral shipping by the establishment of barred zones, all these difficulties being caused by England's tyranny over the sea.

"We will and we shall break this enslavement of non-English races," remarked Bethmann-Hollweg, who declared that Germany's position as regards the barred zone was irrevocable.

Bethmann-Hollweg accused President Wilson with brusquely breaking off relations, and accused him of gross partiality towards England.

He declared that the successes of the submarine warfare had surpassed the expectations of the Navy, even though reports from many had not yet been received.

Dealing with the necessity of remodelling the internal life of the nation after the war, Bethmann-Hollweg defended the military system on the ground of geographical necessity.

TURKEY'S MERCANTILE FLEET

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, March 6.—A Persian traveller, who has just returned here from Turkey, bring the following news of Turkey's mercantile navy. He says that as the result of the activities of French and British submarines, co-operating with the Black Sea Fleet, Turkey now only possesses ten merchant vessels.

According to Lloyd Register of Shipping for 1916, Turkey possessed 113 steamships with a gross tonnage of 83,087 and 66 sailing vessels with a net tonnage of 17,701. In 1911, Turkey possessed 120 steamers of 66,878 tons and 963 sailing vessels of 205,641 tons.

Forster M.P., Financial Secretary to the War Office made the following announcement: Major-General Maude, commanding in Mesopotamia, reports that the remnant of the Turks are completely shattered. They will only reach Bagdad as a disorderly mob. Over 5,000 have been taken prisoners. Since the commencement of the offensive on December 12, the total Turks killed and wounded are estimated at over 20,000.

LATEST HYPOCRISY OF KAISER WILHELM II

REUTER'S WAR SERVICE

Amsterdam, Feb. 15.—Conversing with the poet Mueller at the Hofburg recently, the Kaiser declared that Napoleon's phantom Continental blockade had become a reality which was hitting England harder than anything up to the present. "Right and morality are on the side of Germany and for their triumph every clean weapon must be used."

An official message from Berlin states that the Kaiser, in an order to the Navy, says: "In the impending decisive battle the task falls on my Navy of turning the English war method of starvation, with which our hardest and most obstinate enemy intends to overthrow the German people, against him and his Allies by combating their sea-traffic with all the means in our power. In this the submarine stands in the first rank."

The Kaiser expresses his confidence that the war designs of the enemy will be broken.

The following are some of Germany's "clean weapons." In every case irrefutable proof has been obtained that she has done these things. What vestige of "right and morality" do they leave her?

The violation of Belgium.

Germany violated the neutrality of Belgium, which, together with other nations, she was pledged to respect.

German lies concerning Great Britain, endeavouring to fix responsibility on her for the war.

Falsification of documents seized in the Belgian archives to fix responsibility on Great Britain.

Systematic murder of wounded and prisoners.

Use of liquid fire projectors.

Use of asphyxiating gas.

The use of this was expressly forbidden by the Hague Convention of 1899, which Germany singed. Sir John French reported on May 3, 1915, regarding the first use of poison gas on the British front at Ypres: "A week before the Germans first used this method they announced in their official communiqué that we were making use of asphyxiating gases. At the time there appeared to be no reason for this astounding falsehood, but now of course, it is obvious it was part of the scheme. It....shows they recognized its illegality and were anxious to forestall neutral and possibly domestic criticism."

Firing on the Red Cross.

Mounting machine guns in Red Cross ambulances.

Misuse of the white flag.

Murder of medical officers and strecher bearers.

Use of poison. Poison was freely used in the wells in Southwest Africa.

Maltreatment of prisoners:—Constructive murder of prisoners in camps at Wittenburg, Gradelegen, etc.

Use of non-combatants as screens for troops—at Saint Dié by the Bavarians and at Autriche, etc.

Murder of women and children.

Wholesale massacres of civilians at Dinant, Visé, Creil, Louvain, Andenne, Liége, Aerschot, etc.

Rape of women superintended and ordered by officers.

Torture of women—a woman "pegged out" in the form of a crucifix behind the trenches at Richebourg L'Avoué.

Forced labour and deportation of women and men.

The wanton burning of villages.

Destruction of historic buildings and objects of art:—Louvain, Rheims Cathedral, Senlis and Ypres.

(No neutral protested and the Pope did not move.)

Sacrilege.

Murder of priests.

Murder of Miss Cavell.

Bombing of non-combatants and open town.

Attacks by German aircraft on neutral vessels without warning or regard for the safety of those on board.

Submarine murder:—The Lusitania, Arabic, Sussex, etc.

Firing on civilians in the water, e.g. the Falaba.

Scattering of mines outside territorial waters.

Wanton bombardment of open towns.

Torpedoing of hospital ships.

Murder of Captain Fryatt.

In addition to these, atrocities and filthinesses that cannot be printed.

MR. SUZUKI FROM MONGORIA

Mr. Tenki Suzuki who has just returned from an extensive trip through Mongolia brings the report of the death of the German, Captain Paptchaff, of whom various conflicting reports have been circulated.

Mr. Suzuki says that Captain Paptchaff with eight hundred men attacked the Mongolian natives and after conquering the native force, met a force of Chinese troops equipped with machine guns. Captain Paptchaff was shot through the head in the battle with the Chinese force.

All through Mongolia, says Mr. Suzuki he found that the people entertain no ill-feeling towards the Japanese, and although it seemed that the Chinese Government is trying to prevent friendly relations between the Japanese and the Mongolians, there is no indication of ill-feeling against the Japanese in any part of Mongolia. In eastern Mongolia there are no Russians, and there are about twenty Japanese merchants dealing in medicines. Mr. Suzuki stated that he intends to try to interest the leading men of Japan for the development of trade in Mongolia.

BEWARE OF GERMANS IN CHINA

China has long hesitated to decide on any definite policy against Germany, and various opinions have been expressed among the Government officials of China, but the "Jiji" states that the Chinese officials have finally arrived at a decision, and the matter of severing diplomatic relations with Germany and also the question of joining the Entente will be shortly brought before Parliament.

China's intention to follow the example of the United States and sever diplomatic relations with Germany is proper, and there is no one who opposes the plan, however some believe that her plan of joining the Entente, is too strong, and criticize her intention. But the "Jiji" declares that in the past Germany has adopted crafty policies in China, and for more than ten years the German officials and residents in China have endeavoured to strengthen German influence in China, and did not even hesitate to cause internal disturbances to increase their own power in China. In the past, Germany was the cause of many troubles in China, and it is believed that the Chinese Government intends to drive away German influence from China and to prevent further disturbances at this moment. The question of joining the Entente entirely rests with the Chinese Government, and no outside power should dictate the step to be taken by the Chinese Government on the subject, but the "Jiji" says that it would not hesitate to approve the decision of the Government to join the Entente in the event of such plan being adopted by Peking.

The Germans in China proved their cleverness and carefulness in their attempt to increase German influence, commercially and politically, and the paper says that when the Chinese Government decides to declare war against Germany, she should be well prepared to meet the crafty activity of the Germans. Since the United States advised China to follow suit and sever diplomatic relations with Germany, the German Minister at Peking has been exceedingly active trying to prevent China from following the example of the United States. Many German residents in China, have been working under the order of the German Minister to influence the Chinese to prevent the severance of diplomatic relations between China and Germany. It is reported that by influencing commercial bodies in Hankow, Kwangtung, Shanghai and other sea-ports, the Germans made such organizations telegraph the Peking Government requesting it to remain neutral. While there is no proof that these requests were made under the advice and influence of the Germans, the "Jiji" says that it is not difficult to regard such a movement as the result of the German campaigning to influence the Chinese Government.

The Germans in China have gained influence in political and military circles of China, and it is evident that in the event of the severance of diplomatic relations with Germany, the Germans in China will not hesitate to adopt desperate measures and will not stop at anything to disturb the peace of China, and the "Jiji" advises the Chinese Government to be well prepared for such an emergency, and order the military commanders in all provinces to be ready to use military forces to maintain peace.

WHAT IS OKUMA DOING?

The "Asahi" says that Marquis Okuma can not remain quiet in the coming general election, and in order to make himself clear to the public, he should announce his own political opinions, but the paper is surprised to learn that Marquis Okuma has abandoned his intention of making campaign speeches for the coming election.

The paper says the present political situation, including the dissolution of the 38th session of the Diet and the coming general election, was caused by the conflict between Prince Yamagata and Marquis Okuma.

Viscount Kato was recommended by Marquis Okuma as the succeeding Premier, but Prince Yamagata did not sanction it and made Count Terauchi the Premier, and all the political differences and disturbances have been caused by this conflict between Prince Yamagata and Marquis Okuma.

The coming election is a fight between the Government party, and the Kenseikai and the Kokuminto, but the paper declares in reality it is a fight between Prince Yamagata and Marquis Okuma. The present Government has been attacking and blaming the Okuma Cabinet from every direction, ever since it was organized. The "Asahi" does not believe that Marquis Okuma can remain silent at this important moment, and moreover he has a responsibility to stand up at this moment and declare his political views, as the coming election will be affected by what Marquis Okuma did in the past.

CONCERNING CINEMAS

The Imperial Educational Society has proposed the regulation of the cinema theatres on the ground that the pictures shown have a bad effect upon School children, but the "Asahi" says that the cinema pictures have already been established as an institution for educating the public and as places of amusement, and to regulate the entire cinema pictures from the standpoint of children is a mistake.

The value of cinema pictures in educating the people is well known, and while it is regrettable that some undesirable pictures are shown by the producers, the attempt to hinder the development of the cinema pictures from the viewpoint of children is an unwise step. The police will look after the undesirable pictures, and as to the effect of the picture upon the children, the educators and parents of children should pay attention, and such a matter should not be regulated by law. With proper care by parents and educators, the motion pictures could be well utilized for the education of children as well as grown-ups, and the entire cinema theatres should not be regulated by one set rule made merely for the sake of children.

NICHINICHI'S SENSIBLE ADVICE TO MERCHANTS

The British Government has prohibited the import of various articles in order to spare cargo space for the transportation of war supplies. The "Tokyo Nichinichi" sympathizes with the British Government and says that since the outbreak of the war, the number and tonnage of the British merchant marine have decreased, and it is proper for the British government to stop the import of unnecessary goods. Before the war England had a merchant tonnage of 12,000,000 but since the beginning of the war, one million tons have been loaned to France, 400,000 tons to Italy, and several ships to Russia. Moreover in the past two years a large number of the British ships have been sunk by the German divers.

It is imposible to build sufficient new ships at present, and the new prohibition of import is necessary for the self protection of England. Though Japan may suffer from the prohibition, or any other measures adopted by the Allied powers of Europe, the paper says that Japan should bear the inconvenience and difficulty and hope for the early end of the war.

The German divers have been active in the open seas, and it was on this account that the United States came to sever diplomatic relations with Germany, and the "Nichinichi" declares that the important step to be taken by all the allied powers and the United States is to stop the submarine outrages, and the paper believes that if the allied forces attack the German line this Spring and drive out the Germans from Belgium, Germany will not carry out her merciless submarine warfare.

PREMIER SHOULD RESIGN

The Terauchi Cabinet has already once dissolved the Diet, but seeing that the coming election will be unfavourable for the Government, it has threatened the public with the declaration that the Cabinet will again dissolve the Diet, and the "Yorozu" says that it is not necessary to say whether or not the policy of the Cabinet is proper, but the policy of the Cabinet shows that Count Terauchi has no regard for public opinion. The public should advise Count Terauchi to resign, declares the paper.

Count Terauchi has been a military officer for thirty years, and he has favoured the Military officers from Choshu, and established the power of the Choshu military men in the Department of the Army. The "Yorozu" says that Count Terauchi has been the most absolute administrator of military affairs, and when he was appointed Governor-General of Chosen, he selected his relations and intimate friends for important positions in Chosen, and it is plain that if Count Terauchi is left as Premier much longer, the public will suffer from his selfish administration.

The political ideas of Count Terauchi do not appeal to the public, and he will never be a good politician, and in the speech given before the Prefectural Governors, he expressed himself too boldly. There is no reason that the public should suffer because Count Terauchi is Premier, and it is a fact that the public does not want Count Terauchi.

Count Terauchi has tried every means to force himself upon the public, but the paper believes that however he may struggle he will fall in the end, as he will not be able to save himself from circumstances that are closing upon him.

Statesmen should bear all their responsibilities, and should resign if it is necessary to do so to fulfil their duty, but Count Terauchi has been placing all responsibilities upon the former Cabinet. In a word, Count Terauchi is endeavouring to give his own mistaken administration, and he will fall deeper into difficulties, and the "Yorozu" states that the best step for Count Terauchi is to tender his resignation as soon as possible.

DISSATISFACTION WITH COMMERCE CHAMBERS

Reports are coming from various parts of Japan that the public is not satisfied with the Chambers of Commerce which seem to be in a generally chaotic conditions, says the "Kokumin". The Chambers of Commerce are organized by businessmen for their own development, and the purpose of the Chambers of Commerce is to represent the opinion of businessmen and make the necessary investigations for the progress of commerce.

Although all Chambers of Commerce of Japan are established with this aim, the "Kokumin" says that there are many businessmen who pay little attention to the work of the Chambers. The officials of the Chambers of Commerce do not make any investigation and know nothing about the commercial condition of the country, and whenever any investigation has to be made, the Government must organize a special committee to do so, because the Chambers of Commerce organized for such a purpose are of no value whatever.

Not only are the Chambers of Commerce separated from the larger businessmen and capitalists, but also from the majority of their members, but the position of the officials of the Chambers are prominent and influential, and most of the Chambers have sufficient funds for activity, and consequently there appear many ambitious men who desire to utilize the position and the funds for their own personal interest. There are many cases when the Chambers of Commerce were used as political tools.

In the Tokyo Chamber of Commerce, Mr. R. Nakano, the retiring President, recommended Dr. Soyeda, but Dr. Soyeda has no requirements to become the official of the Chamber. To elect Dr. Soyeda, he was suddenly made a Director of the Hakushinsha, and he was elected a member of the Chamber. However there was some irregularity in the recent election, and another election has to be held. The paper would show that this incident proves that the Tokyo Chamber of Commerce is not an organization of the businessmen of Tokyo, but merely a toy for a few prominent businessmen in Tokyo.

The "Kokumin" declares that the problem of the appointment of Dr. Soyeda is only a minor question, and the Minister of Agriculture and Commerce should develop and improve the Chambers of Commerce throughout Japan, so that the organizations could actually benefit the business men of the country who centribute towards the maintenance of the Chambers and improve the commercial condition of the nation.

TOO MUCH RELIGION IN MISSION SCHOOLS NOW

An interesting article upon the mission schools in Japan is published in the March issue of the "Taiyo." The writer regrets that the Mission Schools here have lost their good features recently.

The influence of the foreign missionaries in building up the modern Japan, should not be forgotten, says the writer. When the educational system of Japan was still primitive, the establishment of educational institutions by the missionaries was carried out and should be appreciated by the Japanese. To educating "Young Japan," many missionaries have devoted their lives, and their work occupies a prominent position in the history of the Japanese education in the first half of the Meiji era.

Messrs. Brown, Berbeck, Hebon, Williams and other pioneer missionaries in Japan devoted their energy for the education of the young Japanese, and among the rising young men of Japan at the beginning of the Meiji Era, there are only a few who did not receive the influence of the good example of these pioneer missionaries and educators. Many prominent men to-day received their education in the mission schools which were then regarded as model schools.

But the writer regrets that the mission schools have changed and they are no longer model schools. With the death or departure of the promoters of these schools, the spirit that guided the schools has vanished, and some have turned mercenary and others are in a very poor condition.

The reason why the Mission schools were welcomed by the intelligent class of the Japanese in the past was because while the mission schools were the exact duplicates of the ordinary educational institutions of foreign countries having proper teachers and equipment, the Japanese schools at that time were only poorly equipped. Another reason which drew so many students to the Mission schools was the desire on the part of the young Japanese to obtain foreign knowledge. Although in all the Mission schools there was a tendency to feel that the education given was not proper for Japanese the students received a good knowledge of foreign languages and learned about the conditions and affairs of foreign countries. The schools were full of cosmopolitan ideas which could not be found in the Japanese schools of that period. The schools had peculiar guiding spirits influenced by the noble characters of the promoters and teachers of the schools, and the good effect of such spirits could not be denied.

Whenever, any Mission Society sends missionaries to an unknown territory, such missionaries who are able to carry out the difficult task of preaching to people of entirely different thought and ideas are selected, and such pioneer missionaries as mentioned above, were those who were trusted by the Society to carry out their noble and important work. These pioneers established schools to educate the Japanese, and they did not force their religious belief on the students, but endeavoured only to give them the necessary and proper education. Consequently while the mission schools were regarded as religious institutions there was little or no religious colour in their teaching of young Japanese. Not confining themselves to religion they gave their pupil a worthy spiritual education. The character of all pioneer missionaries was noble and great and commanded the respect of every one.

The writer says, however, that recently the mission schools have changed, and the pioneers who were respected and loved by students and public are gone, and in their place common missionaries, who have no idea of education, have arrived, and at present beyond the advantage of teaching foreign languages, the Mission schools have lost all the good points which were so firmly established by the pioneers. Even among the Mission schools of to-day there are many which are far inferior to Japanese schools.

Also at the present mission schools, the religious colour has become more vivid, and while the pioneers disregarded religious differences and welcomed both believers and non-believers, there is a tendency among the mission schools of to-day to disregard non-believers. Not only have they lost their former specialities and peculiarities, in the educational system they have become much inferior to the earlier mission schools.

The writer says that he received education in a mission school, and has a profound respect for teachers of the mission schools, but the present conditions of the mission schools make him regret that they are no longer as of yore. He hopes that the missionaries in charge of the mission schools will pay more attention to improve present conditions.

Sir:—The article in "The Taiyo" on the subject of the decline of educational standards in Mission Schools, from which you translate in your issue of Sunday, is well taken. It points out a weakness which educationists have noticed for some time. But the cause is due not so much to a more inferior class of missionary now being sent to the mission field, as to the mismanagement of mission schools by missionary boards or the bishops or supervisors of missions in the field. Many of these men have no proper idea of what a scientific education really means and often have no experience as educationists at all; and consequently they are as liable as not to appoint men like themselves as directors or presidents of mission schools. To appoint a man who knows little or nothing about education and school management as head of a college or school is just as absurd and improper as it would be to appoint a merchant or clergyman as head of a medical school. So long as mission schools are open to this treatment it is impossible to expect them to maintain a standard up to that required by the Board of Education. But is there any reason why the Board of Education cannot refuse to grant license to schools that do not have a professional pedagogist at the head? It is no reflection on the Japanese system of education to say that, considering the large amount of money spent on mission schools in Japan, there is no right reason why a first-class professional educator should not be at the head of each and the standard of education be quite above that provided by the national schools of the empire. An American or British school or college in Japan should have an American or British graduate in pedagogy and school management at the head, and the institution should maintain the same standard as a school of the same class in America or England. It is the conviction of foreign educators that at present an English or American primary, middle or high school gives a higher standard of education than a school of the same class in Japan. But at present this class of schools under missionary auspices in Japan gives a lower standard of education than the national schools of Japan. This shows grave mismanagement on the part of mission boards and mission superintendents in Japan and it is a wonder that the Japanese authorities tolerate it. For the reason is one of pure neglect or incompetence. There are no doubt many missionaries in Japan engaged in country mission work who are much better adapted to school work than those selected by the mission superintendents. There is a general impression among some that men are chosen for educational positions not so much because of fitness or ability but because of convenience or influence. It is indeed a remarkable circumstance that the people at home should contribute so liberally to education in missionary lands and yet take no precaution to see that the investment is efficiently supervised and the best modern education provided. As to interfering with the religious convictions of students there is never any danger of this impropriety in a well-conducted school. For a school carried on along the lines of a good English or American school has a positive religious and moral influence above what the special exhorter could hope to give. But a loosely conducted institution that pays little or no attention to clothes, manners and general discipline, and to the quality of the teaching has a distinctly demoralizing influence on young minds. There is no such thing as a moderately good egg; and in the same way a school is either good or bad in its effect on students. In educational work incompetence is immoral. The question is whether any amount of criticism can prevail over the present apparent degree of selfsatisfaction!

Yours etc.

TAISHO.

ST. GEORGE'S SOCIETY HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of members of the Yokohama and Tokyo Branch of the Royal Society of St. George was held at the British Consulate-General, Yokohama, on last Friday. Following the manner of last year, it was decided to celebrate the anniversary by raising a fund among members to donate for the maintenance of beds in the Red Cross Hospitals for soldiers.

Mr. E. F. Crowe, C.M.G., the President, in addressing the members, spoke in part as follows:—

Gentlemen,—Last year you will remember that we decided to celebrate St. George's Day by raising money for the King's Birthday Beds, and the amount so collected was, as you will see from the accounts, 3,904 yen, say £400. You may recall that the total amount contributed from Japan was £3,177, equivalent to 61 Beds, so that the members of St. George's Society put up more than 12 per cent. of the total, which, taking it all round, was a very satisfactory result.

You will note that photos of some of the beds have been sent to us, and they bring very vividly before one how useful our money can be in ameliorating the lot of our gallant men who have been wounded.

At this time last year I must confess that I had confidently hoped that the war would be over before next St. George's Day, but like many other people far more competent to judge than myself, I have been proved wrong, and we find ourselves faced by the possibility of war continuing for some time longer. In these circumstances it is clear that once more the idea of a Ball is unthinkable, and members will have to decide whether they wish to celebrate St. George's Day, and if so, in what way it should be done. Personally, I do not think we can do better than repeat what we did last year, and your Committee are all of the same opinion. I think, however, that if it is agreed that we should raise money for the beds, we should stipulate that our beds be called St. George's Beds, Yokohama and Tokyo. If we decide on this course, I hope that we shall be able to improve on last year's figures. Our sister Society of St. Andrew's, I note, have increased their contribution to the Scotch Red Cross Beds by over 30 per cent., and what Scotsmen can do, Englishmen can do also.

I regret that a prohibition of imports has just been announced, which may hit some of you rather hard, but no one who reads Mr. Lloyd George's magnificent speech will doubt as to the absolute necessity of this measure, and I feel sure that even those who are the most effected, will show the same or greater generosity, than before. I need not emphasize the seriousness of the situation at home; you all of you realise it. Full of confidence as we are in the ultimate result, we know that our people at home and those of our Allies who are actually fighting must be enduring great hardships. When the list comes round to you don't treat it in the spirit in which you look at an ordinary subscription list. Before you decide what you can spare just think for a moment or two. Picture to yourself what sufferings the men have gone through who are going to occupy your beds—think of the position in which people are placed at home—think of the food problem and the cost and difficulty of getting food—think of the income tax which people are paying—5/- in the £ for some, and about 3/- for many others. Then look at the other side of the picture—think of the security in which you are living here, the comparative luxury which you enjoy, the comparative lowness of taxes. When you have thought about all this I am sure you will give, not what you think you can afford, but what you can uncomfortably spare.

INTERPORT FOOTBALL

The teams chosen to represent Kobe and Yokohama in the annual Association Football Match, which will be played on the Y. C. & A. C. Grounds to-day, are as follows.

Yokohama.—Goal: T. W. D. Bannister.

Backs: T. M. Knott and O. F. Mocock.

Halves: T. A. Levack, B. Deveson (Capt.) and P. Nipkow.

Forwards: I. M. Isaacs, J. E. Dye, V. A. Hearne, L. Andreis, and C. W. Martyr.

Kobe.—Goal: H. F. da Costa.

Halves: R. G. Crane, D. McRae (Capt.) and F. G. Thomas.

Forwards: A. McClellan, T. Henbury, P. J. Togneri, S. G. Stanford, and C. Eastwood.

Followers of the game will observe that the visitors, with the exception of P. J. Togneri, and, we believe, F. G. Thomas have all played in Interport contests, so on paper they should have a rosy chance of taking the "flag" back. The home team, however, have three sterling men in Deveson, Hearne and Levack and with Bannister between the sticks, have no great cause for alarm provided Henbury is well "nursed."

Admission to the ground is by ticket, 1.00 yen and all proceeds will be donated to the International Red Cross Fund.

There will be no Interport Dinner.

MARCH BILL AT IMPERIAL

The actors of the Ichimura Theatre play at the Imperial during March, and being rising young actors of promise, their appearance is being welcomed by the lovers of old Japanese dramas. The plays being staged at the Imperial are "Sakura Giminden," "Boshibari" "Gosho Gorozo" and "Kioi Jishi."

The "Sakura Giminden" is the story of Sakura Sogoro who at the risk of his own life and destruction of his family, fights the feudal lord for the sake of the villagers. The drama is one of the favorites of the Japanese public, and it tells of the noble fight Sogoro makes against his Lord to save the families of the village from starvation. Kichiyemon, the famous actor, takes the part of Sorogo, and Matsusuke, Kikujiro and other actors help Kichiyemon to make the piece a success.

The third scene of the drama pictures the farewell between Sogoro and his family on the eve of his departure for Yedo to appeal to the Shogun for relief. Direct appeal to the Shogun is prohibited, and even though he may succeed in making the appeal, he will receive severe punishment for his attempt. The farewell between Sogoro and his wife and three children, is a sad scene. The pourtrayal was so realistic at the first performance held on March first, that the audience was moved to tears.

The story of Sogoro and his sacrifice is often told to the Japanese children as a lesson of devotion, and the drama is characteristic of the Japanese admiration of sacrifice for a noble cause.

The second piece, "Boshibari" is an old comic dance play, and three actors who are noted for dancing perform the piece. They are Kanyá, Mitsugoro and Kikugoro, who comported themselves well. The piece is one of the best comic plays in Japan, and its humour will even appeal to occidental taste. A master in leaving the house on a trip, ties up his two servants so that they cannot steal his wine and get drunk as usual. Though hindered by being tied up, the two open the wine cellar and steal the wine. After having imbibed a quantity of wine, they start to dance, and enjoy themselves, but in the midst of their merriment the master returns. Dancing with both hands tied up, is comical, and difficult, and only such actors as are master dancers could perform the parts successfully. The three actors well demonstrated their skilful dancing in this piece.

The "Gosho Gorozo" is also a well-known love drama in which a struggle between poverty and loyalty, and also jealousy between two suitors are pictured. This drama is picturesque in the stage setting, and the costumes worn by the actors in this piece are gorgeously beautiful. It is one of the typical Japanese dramas.

The last piece "Kioi Jishi" is a merry dancing play, and in the arrangement of dances and costumes it is beautiful, and is well chosen as ringing down the curtain. In this piece also, Mitsugoro, Kanya and others proved their natural skill in dancing.

The March bill of the Imperial is a most attractive one and the performers are the best among the rising actors of Japan.

LA BELLE HELENE AT ROSI'S

The pleasing comic opera "La Belle Hélène" is the March bill at the Opera Comique, Akasaka Mitsuke, and the "first night" attendance, last Thursday, was a good augury for the run of the piece. Originally "La Belle Hélène" was scheduled for February, but the elaborate preparation Mr. Rosi planned for the staging of the opera could not be made in time.

The opera lovers of Tokyo, who desired to see "La Belle Hélène," were well rewarded for the suspense and delay caused by the preparation, as the stage effects and costumes did great credit to the efforts of Mr. Rosi who had omitted nothing for the perfect setting of the piece.

Constant attendants at the treatre have all noticed, that each month the singers have shown steady improvement in singing and stage technique.

Miss Nobu Hara plays the part of Helen, and the excellence of her execution of the part goes without saying as musical circles in Tokyo know her and her singing well. However it should be added that in the present piece, she excelled all she has done before. Mrs. Shimizu played the part of Paris and surprised the audience with her excellent execution of a man's part. It was her first time on the stage of the Opera Comique in the rôle of a man, and her performance was an immense success.

Mr. Shimizu plays Calchas, and he is as funny as ever. As a comic actor he has been improving at every performance, and when it comes to making the audience laugh, he is a past-master, as all his jokes and humourous acting come as natural as can be. He is the mainstay of the Opera Comique, and it is no exaggeration to state that Mr. and Mrs. Shimizu and Miss Hara are the performers on whose shoulder rests the success of the whole opera. Other players however did well in the smaller parts.

The first act opens at the temple of Jupiter in Sparta, where among others who have placed their offerings at his shrine, is Helen. With Calchas, she discusses the means of escaping the decree of the oracle which declared that she was to leave her husband, Menelaus and fly with Paris, son of Priam. Later Paris, disguised as a shepherd meets Helen who falls in love with him. Then follows the humorous scene of a grand tournament, at which those present join in guessing conundrums. This is the most interesting scene in the whole opera. Paris wins the prize and declares himself to Helen.

The second act is Helen's sleeping room. Paris enters the room with the aid of Calchas, but Menelaus returns unexpectedly and surprises Helen, who thought that she had seen Paris only in dream. Menelaus drives Paris out of the room.

The third act opens with the quarrel between Helen and Menelaus on the seashore at Nauplia. Menelaus announces that the new augur approaches, and when the latter comes on a golden galley, he orders Helen to offer white heifers to Venus who is angry with her. Helen obeys and goes on board when she finds that the augur himself is Paris.

The third act is most beautifully staged, and the costumes and scenery are pleasing to the eye. "La Belle Hélène" at the Opera Comique is a success and one of the best staged and performed pieces shown there up to date.

The official mission to inquire into the state of prisoners in Szechuan reports that the practice of mixing lime with the prisoners' rice and porridge is common among the gaolers in order to save the cost of feeding them and results in many deaths.

The Government has now ordered all magistrates in future to prevent such inhuman practices.

It is reported that a sea current commonly called "Aka Shio" (red current) from the colour it assumes, which is highly poisonous to the shellfish set in on the coast of Miye prefecture recently and the 200,000 mothers-of-pearl which are being artificially nursed in the Tomoya Bay on the coast have perished.

Medical profession is generally considered as one of the most profitable and enviable occupations in Japan, so that it is no wonder that there are about 1,000 young women candidates for the forthcoming dentists' license examination. Every year has shown a tendency towards the increase of women taking this official examination, but this year the number of female candidates is said to be unprecedentedly large. The dentists' license examination which will take place early in next month will be taken by over 1,000 women over 18 years of age, and there are also many women going in for the pharmaceutists' license examination to be held a little later. The physicians' license examination has been recently held in Tokyo and it is said that of the 66 candidates for this examination 47 were young women.

The Foreign Office announced Tuesday that Mr. Yoshida, Acting Consul-General at Calcutta had reported that, on March 5th, the Government of India issued an order regarding the necessity of having a passport for any one entering or leaving the country.

The new regulation says that any one above fifteen years of age, who intends to leave or enter India, should have a passport. Old passports issued by the Indian government within the last two years will be acknowledged. Those coming to India from foreign countries, should obtain passports from the British Ambassador or Consul stationed in such countries. This regulation, however does not apply to the crews of ships.

RESOURCES OF JAPAN IN RELATION TO BRITAIN

At the monthly meeting of the Japan Society, held in London on January 24, Mr. K. Yamasaki, Consul-General for Japan at the British Capital, read the following paper on "The Resources of Japan in Their Relations to British Commerce after the War":

Japan, it may be recalled, was opened up to international intercourse in the latter part of the nineteenth century. It was an American commodore who first visited Japan and induced the Government, then under the Tokugawa family, to open her ports to European trade. The first English envoy sent to Japan was Sir Harry Parkes, who was responsible for the conclusion of the first Commercial Treaty between England and Japan. Since the Meiji Reformation in 1868, Japanese industrial resources have rapidly developed. Englishmen have contributed greatly to the progress of Japan, and we are grateful for the kind assistance which this country has given us. They made the first railway between Yokohama and Tokyo, a distance of 18 miles, in 1872. Now Japan had over 7,000 miles of railways. In 1915 the total gross tonnage of Japan's commercial fleet was over 1,600,000 tons. It is very gratifying to note that, with the development of Japanese industrial resources and the improved facilities of communication, Japan's trade with Great Britain, France, Russia, and other friendly countries has shown a great increase. However, the present war has considerably disturbed international commerce. While the Allies are putting forth their utmost exertions to bring this war to a victorious issue, it is incumbent upon us to study the economic resources of each Allied country in their relation to international trade after the war.

It may be asserted that Japan's large population is an important asset to her industry. Being a mountainous country only 20 per cent. of the total area of Japan is under cultivation, yet those engaged in agriculture constitute nearly 60 per cent. of the total population. How important a role the peasantry is still playing in Japan's economic and social life is demonstrated by the step taken by the Government the year before last, when the price of rice, one of the principal agricultural products of Japan, fell on account of the good harvest. The Government bought the greater part of the stock on the market, in order to raise its price. This measure, though it may appear rather curious to you, had in view the lessening of possible suffering on the part of the agricultural class. As to Japan's mineral resources, Japan is the second largest copper-producing country in the world. Japan is supplying this country and her other Allies with a large amount of copper. We now supply India and Australia with a certain amount of coal. The production of good was fairly large until recent times. Before the country was opened up for international intercourse, gold had been abundant as compared with silver. When Japan was thrown open to international trade a great amount of gold flowed out of the country, on account of the difference in the ratio to silver, entailing a great loss to the nation.

It is significant that Japan is rapidly changing from an agricultural to an industrial nation. Cotton manufacture is one of the principal industries of Japan. The statistics show that the average number of spindles working daily in Japan in 1914 was about 2,400,000. There are a number of large cotton mills in Osaka and Tokyo, and some of them are admirably equipped for looking after the welfare and comfort of their employees. Woollen manufacture was not carried on before on any considerable scale, but the war has given an impetus to this industry, and Japanese factories are executing orders from the Russian Government. As regards the production of iron and steel, there is a Government ironworks, and, besides, there are others in private hands. As Japan lacks rich iron mines, she imports iron ore chiefly from China. Shipbuilding is very flourishing in Japan at present. The total tonnage now under construction is estimated at 600,000 tons.

After thus giving a short survey of the agricultural and industrial resources of Japan, let me speak briefly on the subject of her financial condition. In 1915 the total revenue of the Japanese Government amounted to about £60,800,000, and its total expenditure was about £60,200,000. After the Manchurian campaign in 1905-1906, Japan's external loans reached the high total of £152,000,000, but this debt was reduced to £142,000,000 by March, 1916. I am happy to say that quite recently Japan lent about £12,000,000 to Russia to enable her to cover the payment for war materials ordered from Japan. The Japanese Government also bought British Treasury Bills to the amount of £10,000,000 in America to help ameliorate the Anglo-America exchange, and in December last year a British loan for £10,000,000 was raised in Japan most successfully. The proceeds of the loan were remitted to America to serve the same purpose.

Now I come to the subject of trade between the United Kingdom and Japan. This country used to export to Japan far more than it imported from Japan. In 1913 total exports to Japan amounted to nearly £14,000,000, while imports from Japan were only about £4,000,000. The principal exports to Japan were ships, iron and steel, machinery, sulphate of ammonia, woollen, worsted, and cotton manufactures, but the chief imports from Japan were silk manufactures, copper, straw braids, chemical products, buttons, and studs. Thus you will see that Japan has been a very good customer to English manufacturers. Since the beginning of the war the exports of this country to Japan have greatly decreased, owing to the difficulties of production, &c. On the other hand, the imports to this country from Japan have increased considerably. The exports from the U.K. to Japan in 1916 were valued at £5,000,000, while the imports to this country from Japan in the same year were about £9,000,000. The principal commodities exported from this country to Japan in 1915 were iron and steel, machinery and cotton manufactures, and the chief articles imported to this country from Japan in 1915 were silk manufactures, copper, vegetable oil, straw and hemp braids, green peas, and rice. It may safely be asserted that the trade between the United Kingdom and Japan during the last two years has been in an abnormal state. How long this war will last no one can possibly tell, but when the world again enters upon a peaceful existence, international trade relations will be put into the melting pot. As to Anglo-Japanese trade, to a certain extent, it will return to pre-war conditions, but after the war new and powerful elements will be at work. After the conclusion of peace, Japan's demand for highly-finished articles, such as machines, electric apparatus, iron and steel manufactures, cottons and woollens of high grade, and chemical products will receive a stimulus. German merchants used to be the unscrupulous competitors of English merchants in the Japanese market before the war. In the future no Japanese will buy German goods, and English manufacturers will find Japan a very attractive market for their finished goods. In the same way I hope that a greater amount of Japanese goods than before will be supplied to the English market, hitherto flooded with German and Austrian goods.

It is highly advisable that you should further develop various new industries within the British Empire, if not within the United Kingdom. With this object in view, you might, perhaps, adopt some form of protection. As regards trade relations between Japan, on the one hand, and with India and Australia on the other, we must see to it that after the war Germany's trade shall never revive in Japan nor in the United Kingdom, nor in the British Dominions and Colonies, so that commercial relations between Japan and the British Empire will become closer, unless undue obstructions are placed on the road. China is one of the greatest commercial markets in the world. Japan has been accused of encroaching on British trade interests in China, but in my belief, this accusation is absolutely devoid of foundation. Lancashire will continue to supply China with cotton goods of high grade, only a comparatively small quantity of cotton of coarse grade being shipped from Japan to China. Above all, I hope that friendly relations will continue to prevail between English and Japanese merchants in China, in order that they may advance hand-in-hand, united in one task of developing the vast resources of China, most of which still remain dormant. The cordial sentiments and common interests consecrated by the Anglo-Japanese Alliance are still more firmly strengthened by the joint task which Great Britain and Japan are carrying out in penalising the enemy of human progress and human welfare, and it is our earnest desire that the trade between the two countries may receive a fresh stimulus after the war in order to enable England and Japan to contribute still further to international good fellowship and civilisation.

JAPAN AND CHINA CAN HOLD THE WORLD AT BAY

Unless Japan co-operate with China on the basis of the fighting power of both nations being extended to each other's diplomacy, commerce and industry, Japan will be isolated after the war and China will be led to destruction. If Japan desires to preserve her life as a living state she must consider her defences which lead to co-operation in this line with China. The fate of Japan must be in accordance with China. This is the view of a certain writer in the March number of the "Taiyo." The writer continues:

"Japan has made plans to increase her army to 25 divisions but at present there are only 21 although the total number is expected to be formed by 1924. The army then including actives, first and second reserves will number 1,500,000 men. This plan was made with Russia as forming the main basis of the hypothesis but considering the available railway communications with that country it can only be enumerated at about 1,200,000 men at the most. Russia on the other hand has come to realize that it is bad policy to come into friction with Japan in the spheres of Manchuria and Chosen and has turned her course southward into Chinese territory. The European conflict is attracting Russian concentration from the Far East and no friction with Japan is likely for at least ten years to come, thus to uphold Japan's position her present 21 divisions are sufficient. Supposing that Japan's army was to invade China, what could the present 21 divisions do in that vast territory, nay, say 30 divisions and more if you like. Further could Japan raise an army beyond this? Let us get down to facts: supposing Japan was to send an army of 50,000, the expenses for one single year will be 150,000,000 yen. In addition, we must consider the expenses of the navy which will consume about 500,000,000 yen per year. The Tsingtau expedition, covering only three months with 50,000 men, cost the Government 100,000,000 yen. Such enormous expenses cannot be shouldered by a country of Japan's calibre. And yet there is an element in this country who try to instigate the idea of snatching Manchuria and Mongolia not to mention of creating a rebellion in China, which it is deemed would be advantageous to Japan. Such is not an advantage to Japan as a national policy.

"As may be seen, Japan's military policy had Russia in sight and was not made with the view of invading China. In view of the present war Russia will not be able to extend her full force in the East for many years to come. This goes to prove that Japan may slacken her concentration towards her ambition in the expansion of her army. Considering the trend of things the call of the times must be the enlarging of our fleet. The United States is making expansion upon expansion of her navy with her eye on the diplomatic cloud of the East. Germany too, is preserving her fleet to maintain her position after the war. Thus the focus of the Powers' eyes will be the markets of China, which will be attracting the war clouds to these waters. In order to create a balance of power in this line the need of Japan to-day is to expand her navy. She must be able to protect the coasts of China and the South Seas from the guns of her enemy. The actual state of things is happening to-day. Without Japan's fleet it is apparent that the countries of the Eastern littoral of the Pacific could not carry on their trade in peace, unmolested as we are to-day. But when we consider the movements in navy expansion of the Powers, we cannot but regret to say that Japan trails at the tail end. This is grave danger to the territorial integrity of China.

"The starting point of Japan's China policy lies in the territorial integrity of that nation. To go further back it is for the preservation of Japan's life as an independent state. Her conflict with Russia sacrificing the lives of her budding generation was no other than from this principle. If Japan had not attained this what would the position of China be, with armed Russia in Korea and Manchuria. To preserve and utilize the results of the war Japan must open the resources of these countries to the world as a source to increase her wealth and to make firm the root she has planted in these sections. This would assure the territorial integrity of China and keep the Powers from the partition of that country.

"To maintain the above principle the resort was to the army but from henceforward it must be the navy. Comparing the Dreadnought class of fighting ships Japan has 7, Great Britain 41, Germany 20 and the United States 14. Considering the plans of the above countries the probability is that the number will be doubled many times that of Japan within the near future. At present Japan's sea power is only one-third that of Germany and one-half that of the United States. The underlying cause to this is the fact that the authorities have not realized the need. They plan to fight lone handed laying stress on their army. The army was their consolation leaving the navy to take a stagnant and retrogressive position.

"Our policy towards China is as aforesaid: but the Chinese sentiment took our army developments as turned towards that state which is an illusion, thus bringing misunderstanding between the two countries as it exists to-day. It is high time that Japan reflects and changes her policy. The two countries must come to know the inner moves of each other; they must co-operate in armament. If such cannot be brought about, their fate will be pressure from the foreign powers after the war.

"Therefore, it comes to this; it is none other than that the naval and military alliance of the two countries which is an urgent question holding in its hands the destiny of the two states. Since China is a continental nation she should lay stress on her army expansion, whereas Japan in view of her insular position should concentrate on naval expansion. With such end in view Japan should give all she can to aid to upbuild the Chinese army in time of peace and war. In times of rebellion, if the sovereignty of the state be endangered, Japan should send her troops to aid. China should leave her navy developments to Japan; she should build her ships in Japan. China should feature as a military state and Japan as a naval one. With such co-operation they should safeguard the shores of the mainland to repel all encroaching forces.

"The present tendency of China is to decrease her army due to the sad plight of her financial condition. Japan should aid in turning things to the contrary course. It is feared by some that if China's army is strongly formed the result will be that China will with the passing current events oppose the moves of Japan. This need not be feared for Japan can ameliorate matters with the force of her navy pounding on the shores of the Chinese coast thus aiding the works of the army even if it is weaker in numbers. When such a state of things takes place the other powers will not remain quiet as observers. They will be sure to come to see what luck can be obtained at the scene of fire.

"The territorial integrity of China was the will of our late and enlightened Emperor Meiji; it has become the desire of the people. Of course with the passing of time some change has been made but the spirit remains the same. The bonds of the two nations should be made firm so as to continue to oblivion. This is the fundamental policy to maintain the peace of the Far East. In order to make this applicable, Japan should produce efficient naval and military officers so as to be able to supply China. China should in return grant Japan the exploiting of her vast resources so that Japan may be supplied with sufficient funds towards the common end. This is an important question which the nation must take to heart in unison. I cannot but request the sound consideration of the intellectuals of the two nations."

MORNING STAR SCHOOL WELCOMES M. VIGROUX

The teaching staff and pupils of the Morning Star School at Kudan, had the pleasure of welcoming back Professor Jos. Vigroux, one of the four instructors, who, at the outbreak of war in 1914, returned to France to join the Colours.

On his arrival in France, in October 1914, M. Vigroux was drafted into the celebrated Régiment colonial du Maroc, which has been several times since mentioned in the Order of the Day, decorated with the Red Ribbon of the Légion d'Honneur and the Croix de Guerre.

Professor Vigroux was soon sent to the front with his regiment. He fought in the engagements along the line from Mametz to Fricourt, where he was promoted to sergeant. Later on, his regiment was detailed to defend the lines of the Yser and fought in the battle of Ypres. In one of the battles here, on April 27, 1915, Sergeant Vigroux was severely wounded when gallantly leading his section into action against the German trenches. For his heroic behaviour, on this occasion, he was cited in the Order of the Day, and decorated with the Croix de Guerre.

Unfortunately, the wound he received at Ypres, incapacitated Professor Vigroux for further military service. In consequence, the French Government has sent him back to Japan, on furlough, that he may continue his services in the work of education, and in the teaching of the French language.

COMING ELECTION MEANS MUCH TO TERAUCHI CABINET

The general election, on the result of which the destiny of the Terauchi Ministry depends, is drawing near. Candidates competing for election for the House of Representatives are already in the field so that the attention of the whole nation is now naturally turned to the progress of the campaign. From the heat and turmoil of the Parliamentary election, however, many episodes, interesting incidents, charges and so forth are evolved and now-a-days the vernacular press never wearies of the talk of so-called election romances. One sufficient to head the list is told by the Osaka "Asahi."

As reported in these columns, Mr. Katsuda of Kobe, who has amassed a big fortune from his shipping business due to the European war was reported to have contributed 300,000 yen towards the election fund of the Kokuminto party some time ago, the veracity of which report is not yet confirmed even by the donator himself. The report however spread with the rapidity of the prophet's gourd throughout the empire only to tantalize many candidates who are now embarrassed for funds wherewith to carry on their campaign, and it is said that ever since his generosity was reported in local papers this shipping "narikin," or parvenu has been in receipt of at least a dozen letters every day from various parts of the country asking or importuning the generous Katsuda for a loan of money or recommending "promising" candidates whom he may well help materially. A few days ago Mr. Katsuda received a singular letter from a person signing himself "a miner in Hokkaido." The letter reads; What a wide difference there exists between you and I, while we are both God's sons! From morn till night I work in slimy pits with a heavy pick-axe in my hands and what I get for this horrid toil is only 95 sen a day. My family consisting of 5 persons solely live by my sweat. Lucky millionaire! You, thanks to the European conflict, have amassed an enormous fortune at a single stroke and have now given away 300,000 yen to politicians as lightly as you would throw away worn-out sandals. What a stroke of luck, and how great your generosity is! In this barren and deserted part of Hokkaido where there can be found none but wild bears, I can not but be surprised to learn of your enormous gift and ponder over the wide gap between your lot and mine." The miner in this letter does not ask the millionaire for a loan, nor does he advise him to help some candidate; his letter was but an exclamation mark of Mr. Katsuda's handsome gift.

A provincial gentleman appeared the other day before Mr. Katsuda's office to seek an interview with the "prodigy in the Japanese shipping world," as he said. He said that he was so impressed with the enormous gift to the Kokuminto party which sounded the first bugle of attack on the Terauchi Cabinet in the last session of the Imperial Diet that he resolved to cast a "precious" vote for a Kokuminto candidate in the general election, and with this statement he departed for regions unknown. But later it became known that this queer gentlemen had travelled one hundred miles to Kobe fr m Fukui where he now lives, only to tell Mr. Katsuda of his decision actuated by the report of the millionaire's donation. The generosity of Mr. Katsuda has made the provincial political maniac travel such a long journey.

THREATENED RAILROAD STRIKE

A report received by the N.Y.K. Office Thursday from New York says that the railway workers of the United States are threatening a general strike on Saturday, March seventeenth, if the eight-hour rule is not adopted.

A Kokusai Reuter message dated Washington March 14 reads: "The Federated Railway Unions have been threatening a huge strike if the eight hours' day Bill is not put into force. They have now written to President Wilson to say that if the nation is involved in war, while negotiations continue with the employers, they will cooperate with the Government to the fullest extent."

TO COIN HALF SEN PIECES

The Department of Finance has at last decided to start the speedy coinage of half sen pieces to the amount of 100,000 yen in view of the very stringent scarcity of this subsidiary coin now in circulation. The scarcity has been felt for a long time and the authorities wanted to remedy it in December last. The Mint in Osaka, however, was too busily occupied at that time with the turning out of Russian silver coins so that the output of ½ sen pieces has been delayed. Recently the scarcity has daily been becoming keener and it is reported that retail merchants are using postage stamps in place of ½ sen pieces. The new half a sen coins are expected to be put in circulation by the end of this month.

In Gifu prefecture, says a local paper, some parliamentary candidates have been so vascillating and irresolute in declaring their candidatures for the House of Representatives that neither the repeated advice of their political friends nor assurances of bona fide supports from their sympathizers has succeeded in making them define their attitude and announce their candidatures. The augury of fortune-tellers has finally decided the attitude of some candidates. Mr. Oba, ex-M.P., is now contesting the city of Ogaki, but it is said that he long pondered over the question of whether "to compete for election or not to compete." He could not decide for himself and traveling a long way up to Tokyo visited a certain soothsayer in Aoyama to have his fortune divined in connection with the forthcoming general election.

The fortune-teller produced a happy augury assuring the wavering politician of a solid success in the election. He instantly returned to his native town and announced his intention to stand as a candidate. In Ogaki, there is another candidate who also puzzled his supporters with his wavering attitude. He is Mr. Makino, a Kokuminto candidate. It is said Mr. Makino is a believer in clairvoyance, and before declaring his candidature he first of all went down as far as Kyushu. In the town of Nobeoka, Miyazaki prefecture, Kyushu, there is a self-styled clairvoyant and Mr. Makino asked this man to exercise his faculty of clairvoyancy to discover his fate as a parliamentary candidate. The result of the experiment was excellent and his victory was guaranteed.

ARMED RAIDER SAID TO BE IN INDIAN OCEAN

The Navy Department on Monday issued an official statement to the following effect:

Advices have been received that a German converted cruiser has made its appearance in the Indian Ocean. The British and Imperial Japanese navies are taking proper steps for the search and destruction of the enemy vessel. The steamers sailing in those waters are cautioned to get information or proper direction from the British authorities in the neighbourhood of the Indian Ocean or the warships of the Imperial navy in the vicinity of the danger zone, in order to assure their safety.

In connection with the above statement, an authority in the navy office is represented as stating that since the sinking of two British steamers in the sea off Colombo on the 17th and 21st of last month the authorities of the British and Japanese navies have been making close investigations and researches into the real origin of the disaster, and have finally found that the disaster was caused by a German converted cruiser. Further they have ascertained the character of the enemy vessel and her armaments and have commenced activities to give chase to and destroy the enemy, but in fear of giving a chance to the enemy to escape, the authorities of the two countries have hitherto exercised strict secrecy over the matter until they have decided to give publication to the matter, as they have come to the conviction that the navies of the two powers will easily destroy the enemy vessel at no distant date.

A dispatch received in a certain quarter, yesterday afternoon, says that a Japanese steamer, named Fukai Maru, has been sunk by an enemy vessel in the Indian Ocean. There is no Japanese steamer bearing such name as reported in the dispatch, perhaps it is a mistake for the steamer Fukui Maru, according to a well-informed authority. The said Fukui Maru is a 4,029 tons (gross) ship, launched in 1890, and is chartered by a certain foreign trading firm. The report, together with the official statement announced by the navy authorities and the recent dispatch from Sydney reporting the declaration of the Navy Minister of Australia that a German commerce raider of about 4,000 tons capacity was sighted between Colombo and Aden with a hydro-aeroplane on board, affirm the presence of the enemy vessel in the direction of the Indian Ocean, which is almost certainly the same ship that sunk the steamers Worcestershire and Perseus, as reported some time ago in these columns.

MANY PARLIAMENTARY CANDIDATES

The "Nichinichi" reports that there are now 450 aspirants for the seats in the House of Representatives. They have all declared candidature for the Lower House, but there are dozens of gentlemen who are sitting on the fence. The number of the parliamentary candidates is not definite yet and is believed it will exceed 450 as the election campaign progresses.

THE EUROPEAN WAR

ON THE FRENCH FRONT

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 7.—The French communiqué on Monday evening reads: "On the right of the Meuse, a vigorous counter-attack ejected the enemy from the part of the line he occupied yesterday, north of Caurières Wood. An enemy attempt, north of Fleury, also ended in complete failure."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 7.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Tuesday evening communiqué says: "We have made further progress northwest of Irles and to the north of Puisieux-au-mont. We raided the enemy trenches eastward of Bouchavesnes and later our artillery dispersed the enemy massing for a counter-attack on the trenches we had recently captured there."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 8.—Reuter's representative at British Headquarters says: "The British are now confronted by double the number of German Divisions that faced them a year ago, including what remains of the flower of the German Army."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 8.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Wednesday communiqué, says that the situation shows no change.

KOKUSAI-HAVAS

Paris, Mar. 8.—Reuter's special correspondent with the French army writes: "The season of minor operations is drawing to a close. These operations have served their turn; they have kept the front from falling into a state of dolorous inactivity during the midwinter months, and have transfered a considerable number of unwary Germans from their own side to ours; they have afforded us much information concerning the disposition of the enemy's effectives and have enabled us to survey considerable portions of his trench front and at many points to improve our own front at his expense.

"The coup de main may be defined as a detached operation complete in itself and not intended to lead to any further action. In its essence is its completeness of organization and speed of execution. In practically all such operations the objective must be attained quickly or it will not be attained at all, for the numbers employed are so small that if the enemy is given time to recover himself and organize his defence the chance of success is lost."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 9.—Severe frost is general through Great Britain. There have been heavy snowfalls in many counties.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 10.—The French have recaptured the greater part of the salient in Champagne seized by the Germans on February 15, says the French communiqué of Thursday evening. The attack was made after an intense artillery preparation, between the Butte de Mesnil and the Maison de Champagne. One hundred prisoners were taken.

Reuter's correspondent says that the French attack of Thursday, between the Butte de Mesnil and the Maison de Champagne, was brilliantly and successfully carried out. The French carried the German position on a front of 1,500 metres and penetrated to a depth varying from 600 to 800 metres. A violent German counter-attack was repulsed after a desperate struggle, in which the enemy lost heavily. The French took 136 prisoners in this action.

Reuter's correspondent at British headquarters cabled on Thursday that a furious gale was sweeping the battlefield of the Ancre carrying blinding snow in squalls, sometimes making it impossible to see more than a few hundred feet.

The enemy has been very active improving his front before Bapaume. The British have advanced slightly on both banks of the Ancre and have entered German trenches near Biaches.

KOKUSAI-HAVAS

Paris, Mar. 11.—The French success in Champagne, though purely local, is very significant as only a narrow strip of ground is now left in German hands. And this forms an exposed salient into the French lines. The French advance substantially wipes off the slate the German movement on February 15 between Butte-du-Mesnil and Maison-de-Champagne, which appeared, for some time, to the inauguration of a big effort in Champagne similar to the move in 1916 against Verdun.

The Germans seemed then ready to pay a heavy price for victory and, reckless of losses, plunged into the allied lines. By the French reply, they have lost all that they gained. The brilliancy of the French advance is intensified by the fact that it was executed in a tempest of snow. The soldiers had their footsteps clogged by snow, but went forward with such ardour that the Germans were forced out of their strong positions. The significance of the stroke is shown by the desperate attempts of the German Imperial troops to repair the loss.

Great aerial activity has been reported in the last few days, more intense than anything of a similar character since the battle of the Somme. It shows that a period of reconnaissance is still going on. From the beginning of the war, the aviation service has increased in value, until at present a point has been reached, where no successful offensive or defensive is possible without the mastery of the air, which mastery belongs, without doubt, to the Allies.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 12.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Saturday evening communiqué, reports: "The British troops attacked and captured the village of Irles and the neighbouring defenses. Our advance extends over a front of three miles. Over 100 prisoners have already been counted."

French experts emphasise the importance of the British success at Irles as facilitating the envelopment of Bapaume. They state that several hundred prisoners were captured.

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

London, March 12.—The correspondent, of the Paris journal La Liberté, with British Headquarters in France in an article on the German retreat in the West says: "The garrison was ordered to hold out, but the British applied methods which had been already successful at other fortresses, pushing out flanking parties while the heavy artillery on the centre pounded the defences. It was learned that the enemy was preparing to evacuate and an assault was ordered. The British surprised the Germans on the point of departure. A sharp fight ended in the killing or capture of the garrison and occupation within half an hour. Meanwhile other British forces engaged the enemy rearguards and crushingly defeated them."

The "Daily Mail" correspondent at British Headquarters in France, says: "A growing sense of expectancy pervades the front, especially amongst the Germans, who extricated themselves from the slough of the Somme, where only the heavy rains of October saved them from an immense disaster, and now inspired by new hope their artillery fire is more deliberate and the infantry more active. Their counter-attacks are more methodical and their numbers opposed to the British are greater than they have ever been. The enemy apparently is preparing for a great effort somewhere."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 13.—At noon yesterday, the French again attacked the German positions west of Maisons-de-Champagne and captured, on a mile front, all the enemy trenches. The French, also, seized Hill 185 and entered the fortified works on it, taking 100 prisoners.

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, March 7.—The Russians, who have been pursuing the Turks since the capture of Hamadan, have occupied the Assadabod Pass. The Turks are retreating towards Kinganer. Further north the Tsar's forces are engaged with the Turks, and fighting is in progress near Sehna.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Mar. 7.—Firing and reconnaissances are in progress on the western and the Rumanian fronts.

Caucasus front. The Russian troops in the Vidjan direction continue the pursuit of the enemy and fighting still goes on. In the Hamadan direction the Russian troops are pursuing the Turks in their retreat from the Asad-Abad summit to Kiangavar. The pursuit of the Turks in the Dovled-Abad direction continues.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 9th.—A Russian communiqué says that pursuing the Turks from Hamadan we occupied Kengaver on the 3rd. Our military operations continue to develop in the direction of Biozar and Douletabad.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, March 13.—Western front. Gas attacks were performed by the Russians South-east of Tukkum and east of the Mitava roadway. Firing and scout skirmishes are in progress on the rest of the front.

Rumanian front. The fights for the heights north-west of Okna continue, also firing and reconnaissances.

Caucasus front. The attempts of the Turks in advancing along the Sivas roadway were repulsed. In the Hamadan direction the Russian troops seized Sakne after a fight. The Turks offered a stubborn resistance, but had to retreat under the Russian pursuit towards Bisutun. Provision stores were seized in Sakne.

Later.—South-west of the Naroch Lake and south-east of Kovel the enemy performed gas attacks. His attempts in advancing were stopped by the Russian fire. Firing and reconnoissances continue on the rest of the front.

Caucasus front. The Russian troops in the Hamadan direction, dislodged the Turks from the position near Bisutun and seized this place. The Turks, being pursued by the Russians, retreated towards Hadji Abad.

A Russian aviator succeeded, near Riga, in knocking down one German aeroplane, the enemy's aviators being wounded and taken prisoner.

CAMPAIGN IN MESOPOTAMIA

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 8.—An official despatch from Mesopotamia says the British cavalry engaged the Turkish rear-guards on the 5th instant at Laj near Ctesiphon [this is the point reached by Townshend in his first dash without adequate means on Bagdad].

Enemy booty left by the Turks fleeing from Kut is strewn along 80 miles of country. It is impossible accurately to estimate British captures of spoil. Thirty-eight guns have so far been salvaged from the Tigris.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 9.—A Mesopotamia official despatch says our pursuing troops met little opposition. The cavalry, traversing Ctesiphon, bivouacked at Bawi, 14 miles from the southern outskirts of Bagdad. They took 85 prisoners and one gun.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

London, March 11.—It is officially announced that the British troops have captured Bagdad from the Turks.

Bagdad, or Baghdad is the capital of a province of Asiatic Turkey, on the Tigris, 500 miles from its mouth. It is surrounded by a brick wall, 5 miles in circumference, and 40 feet high, but in some places broken down, and by a deep dry ditch; the river is spanned by a bridge of boats, 220 yards long, and the communication is guarded by a citadel. There are four gates, the finest of which, bearing date 1220, has remained closed since 1638. Bagdad has an extremely picturesque appearance from the outside, being encircled and interspersed with groves of date-trees, through which one may catch the gleam of domes and minarets; but it does not improve on closer inspection. The bazaars exhibit the produce of both Turkish and European markets; but commerce has greatly decreased since Persia began to trade with Europe by way of Trebizond, or of the Persian Gulf on the south. Nevertheless Bagdad still carries on a considerable traffic with Aleppo and Damascus, and has manufactures of red and yellow leather, silk, and cotton stuffs. Dates, wool, grain, and timbac (a substitute for tobacco) are exported, and a number of horses are sent into India. Of the population, estimated at 200,000, the greatest part are Turks and Arabs. In 1831 an inundation destroyed one-half of the town and several thousand lives. Cholera visits it periodically. The "Bagdad Railway" is to run from Konieh, via Adana and Bagdad, to the Persian Gulf. Since 1836 British steamers have plied on the Tigris between Bagdad and Basra; and here is one of the chief stations of the Anglo-Indian telegraph. Bagdad in the 9th century was greatly enlarged by Haroun Al-Raschid, and under his son, Al-Mamun, it became the great seat of Arabic learning and literature. It was conquered by the Sultan Murad IV, in 1638, and ever since has been under the sway of the Porte. The province of Bagdad, comprising great part of the lower basins of the Euphrates and Tigris, falls into the vilayets of Bagdad (pop. 900,000), Mosul (500,000), and Basra (600,000).

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Mar. 8.—The Russian forces in the Caucasus, in the Hamadan direction, pursuing the enemy, have occupied Kiangaver. The Russians have continued their advance in the direction of Sidjilsk and Douletabad.

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

London, March 12.—A distinguished authority on the Middle East and Near East, in an interview with Reuters, emphasized the far-reaching moral effect of the fall of Bagdad which would, he said, be especially welcome to the Persians as Omer, that holy place, Kerbela and Newef would soon be freed from the heavy hand of the Turks who last year desecrated the shrines therein. It is anticipated that the Russo-British military co-operation will now compel an evacuation by the Turks and of this the consequences might be even more disastrous. The effect in Berlin and Constantinople will be most depressing. It is a severe blow to the Kaiser's dream of dominion in the East connected by the Berlin Bagdad railway.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 13.—Speaking in the House of Commons, to-day, Mr. A. Bonar Law, on behalf of the Premier, stated that the occupation of Bagdad was the sequel to a series of brilliant operations carried out, by British and Indian troops, with a dash and determination for which no praise was too high.

The speaker recalled that, after severe fighting on the right bank of the Tigris, in which heavy losses were inflicted on the enemy, General Maude's army, by crossing the river near Kut, imperilled the safety of the Turks.

The enemy immediately retired towards Bagdad. General Maude's forces pursued him with the utmost energy, capturing many prisoners and a quantity of material. Nearly two-thirds of the enemy's artillery was either captured or thrown into the Tigris.

On March 5, the British cavalry came up with the Turkish rear-guard, 27 miles from Bagdad. After an action, the Turks abandoned their position. The cavalry, on March 7, found the enemy in position on the Diala River, an affluent of the Tigris, a formidable obstacle over 30 yards wide and unfordable.

General Maude, therefore, withdrew the cavalry and brought up the infantry. The Turks, by this time, had been reinforced and offered a formidable resistance. On March 3, General Maude had a bridge thrown across the Tigris at its point of confluence with the Diala River. Thereupon, the cavalry crossed, supported by infantry, to the right bank. Despite the heat and dust they made a brilliant march of 18 miles and found the enemy strongly entrenched six miles south-west of Bagdad. The cavalry immediately drove the foe back two miles and pressed the advantage home on March 9 and 10, forcing the enemy back to within three miles of Bagdad.

Meanwhile, the troops on the left bank of the Tigris forced the passage of the Diala River and drove the Turks back towards Bagdad, which was entered on March 11.

Amid cheers, Mr. Bonar Law concluded by saying: "General Maude's Army, thus completed the victory of Kut by a pursuit of 110 miles during which the River Tigris was crossed three times."

MR. JOHN BUCHAN'S WEEKLY REVIEW OF WAR

[BRITISH EMBASSY DESPATCH THROUGH KOKUSAI]

London, March 10.—Despite the discussions aroused by the German retirement in France the explanation seems increasingly simple. The reports received daily concerning the grounds, condition and position occupied by the British has made it clearer than ever that the enemy withdrew because he was forced to do so. The positions he held were becoming completely untenable. The destruction caused in the area ceded has been on a scale greater even than expected. The casualties inflicted on the enemy is proved by the enormous number of unburied corpses he left everywhere in his wake. Therefore it is no wonder the morale of his troops was breaking and he feared the consequences.

Daily the British have improved their own position and tactically at various points dominated him with artillery and still more therefore he had no choice but to sacrifice his prestige and to escape temporarily a more important disaster.

The Germans believe so strongly in moral effect as their conduct throughout the war has proved that they obviously shrank at last from this necessary sacrifice. In fact the official German explanations of the retreat which still seek desperately to conceal its extent and importance confirm this view. In a military sense the German command held a weak position. The salient which in their line was being rapidly pinched and grew sharper becoming increasingly less worth holding. Could it be straightened they would theoratically be in a stronger position. Whether this will prove to be the case remains a question. The retreating force can less easily make a stand where it wishes than an advancing force. Meanwhile interest has by no means ended. Monchy is roughly the point on the German right whereon the retirement pivots, and now becomes the centre and most forward point of the new salient further north created by the retirement. To hold Monchy, which is high ground flanking the present line, is obviously of value to the enemy. It is equally obvious he must sacrifice men to hold it.

The progress of operations in Mesopotamia and Sinai Peninsula continues satisfactory. General Maude still with a broken enemy before him has advanced steadily in the direction of Bagdad. His cavalry is within a few miles, but it is possible the Turks will make an effort to prevent the British troops from entering Bagdad by making a stand on the Diala River. The rate of advance has been somewhat slower in the past week owing to the necessity of reorganising the transport, making new, and lengthening old communications. Meanwhile the value of the victory at Kut is emphasised by the fact that two-hundred miles north the Turkish columns are falling back before the Russians towards the Persian frontier, apparently retreating on Bagdad. Beyond the Sinai Peninsula within the borders of Palestine the Turks have abandoned a fortified position of very considerable strength.

FRANCE DETERMINED TO FIGHT TO VICTORY

KOKUSAI-HAVAS

Paris, March 8.—On March 7 a meeting was organised at Sarbonne by the Federation Nationale des Grandes Associations Francaises, for the purpose of asserting the national determination to carry on the war to a victorious conclusion.

M. Paul Deschanel, President of the Chamber of Deputies was in the chair. He was supported by the President of the Senate and M. Briand, the Premier. Every important society, every class, every opinion—in fact all France was represented.

A series of speeches was closed by the Minister of Justice, M. Viviani, who on behalf of the Government said:

"France firm and indomitable after 30 months of war, is approaching a victorious peace—the only peace compatible with her honour and her respect for her dead heroes. As France has stood in war, so will she stand to-morrow in peace—peace with reparation with Alsace and Lorraine restored to her. Her enemy, surrounded by a ring of iron and fire, is both uneasy and ferocious and gathering the last vestiges of his strength for a supreme and desperate effort. We are ready for him."

PROBLEMS OF PEKING OCCUPY MANY HEADS

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 7.—In connection with the situation at Peking, Reuter's Agency learns that the Allies are closely co-operating in advising China. Conversations are now proceeding as regards the financial assistance for China in the event of her breaking off relations with Germany.

This will probably take the form of the postponement of the Boxer indemnity and the revision of the customs tariff. Leading people in China favour the severance of relations, but there are technical difficulties in connection with the departure, which the President desires to overcome, before giving his consent to the break.

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

Peking Mar. 7.—Although it cannot be said that the political crisis has ended until the Premier has interviewed the President and reassumed office, political circles consider the matter as settled.

It is understood that before the Vice-President left for Tientsin, he obtained the President's acceptance of three demands, namely, that the President will approve the Cabinet's decision as regards Germany and sign any mandate which the Cabinet presents. He will not interfere with the despatch of telegrams by the Cabinet to Chinese Ministers abroad or in the provinces.

On his arrival at Tientsin, the Vice-President with Mr. Liang Chi-chao and Mr. Tang Hua-lung, Speaker of the Lower House, called on Mr. Tuan Chi-jui and, after three hours' discussion, persuaded the Premier to return to the capital.

On the evening March 8 the Vice-President called on the President and reported the return of the Premier and arranged an early interview between the latter and the President.

"The national farce, staged in the face of a national crisis at Peking with the leading rôles acted by President Li Yuan-hung, Vice-President Feng Kuo-chang, and Premier Tuan Chi-jui, came to an end when the Premier returned from Tientsin March 6 to withdraw his resignation which he tendered a few days ago in a dramatic scene at the session of the Council of State." That was how a high official of the Foreign Office put the matter yesterday.

"As was expected," said the same official, "President Li, finding himself lost at the quick action of the Premier, sent Vice-President Feng after him to urge him to reconsider his resignation."

In requesting the Premier to continue to hold office, President Li is understood to have signified his readiness to yield unconditionally, or almost unconditionally, to the policy vis-à-vis Germany in shaping which Premier Tuan took a leading part, for otherwise the Premier could not have been persuaded to comply with the President's earnest wish. If nothing untoward has happened since, the way is now paved for the Chinese Government to hasten its final decision.

If it was only a question of diplomatically breaking with Germany it is thought at the Foreign Office not necessarily a matter that must obtain the consent of Parliament.

It is the question whether China should join the European war as a member of the Entente Allies that is pulling her Government back from arriving at any decision to take final steps, for this question is too grave for China to allow it to be passed upon without taking into confidence Parliament, which represents the voice of the people. But once reported to Parliament, the official referred to predicted that the Cabinet's decision would be speedily adopted, since two-thirds of the members of both the Upper and Lower Houses are strongly pro-Ally.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 6.—Reuter learns that there is complete unanimity among the Allied Powers regarding the Chinese situation. They are acting in close co-operation, giving any advice that China may ask. Nothing is known here of any Note by the Allied Ministers to China, but conversations are in progress regarding financial assistance to be given to China in the event of her deciding on a break of relations with Germany. This would probably take the form of postponement until after the war of the payment of the Boxer Indemnity to the Powers and of the revision of the Customs tariff to an effective five per centum. There are two points still under discussion. All leading people in China favour the severance of relations with Germany, but there are still some technical difficulties which the President desires to overcome before giving his assent.

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

Peking, Mar. 9.—The Government's decision to break with Germany will be submitted to Parliament on Saturday when the Premier accompanied by all the Ministers of the Cabinet will first go to the Senate and then to the House of Representatives to report the Government policy.

The Premier invited the representatives of various parties to a conference yesterday in order to ascertain their views on the Sino-German question. One hundred and eight attended of whom one hundred and two favoured the rupture.

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

Peking, Mar. 11.—The Premier, Mr. Tuan Chi-jui, in secret session of the Senate this afternoon, outlined the policy of the Government versus Germany, and the Senate approved his programme by 158 votes to 37. The policy, as outlined by the Premier, includes the severance of relations with Germany.

At a secret session of the House of Representatives yesterday afternoon, the policy was approved by a vote of 331 votes to 87. At the meeting of the House of Representatives yesterday, the pro-German element attempted to create a disturbance, when the question of the endorsement of the policy came to a vote, but they were quickly suppressed.

Now that both Houses of China's Parliament have adopted the Cabinet's decision to sever diplomatic relations with Germany, China, having gone through all the necessary procedures, is expected to make a declaration against the Berlin Government any moment. The Foreign Office here received from Peking the reports of Parliament's action.

Yesterday, the Council of State was to have met and have made final preparations for declaring diplomatic rupture against Germany, according to reliable information reaching the Foreign Office. As the Council of State, the Premier of which is Tuan Chi-jui, is the body of leaders which has persisted in breaking with Germany in spite of the strong opposition led by President Li Yuan-hung and his followers, the meeting yesterday is believed to have resulted in China's final decision to make her attitude known to the world.

The Chinese Government, it is expected, will, after its declaration of diplomatic severance against Germany, ask the Entente Governments to open negotiations with regard to obtaining their agreement to the revision of Customs duties, the postponement of the payment of the Boxer indemnities, and other conditions China demands. But China will have to wait before she gets the consent of the Allied Governments to these conditions. The Entente Powers are expected to withhold their consent until they see China joining the struggle against the Kaiser's alliance. And China is now already well on the road to the point where it will become impossible not to side with the Entente Powers. Her declaration of breaking with Germany is the first step.

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

Peking, March 12.—The German reply to China's protest of February 9 was delivered to the Chinese Government, late on Saturday evening, and reads as follows:

By instructions from my home Government, which reached me at 7 p.m. on March 10, I beg to forward you the following reply to China's protest to the latest blockade policy of Germany.

The Imperial German Government expresses great surprise at the threat used by the Government of the Republic of China in its Note of protest. Many other countries also protested, but China, which has been on friendly relations with Germany, is the only State which added a threat to its protest. The surprise is doubly great because China has no shipping interests in the blockaded zones and will not suffer thereby. The Chinese Government mentions that loss of life among Chinese citizens has occurred as the result of the present methods of war.

The German Government wishes to point out that the Chinese Government has never communicated with the Imperial Government regarding a single case of this kind nor has she protested against such incidents before.

According to reports, received by the Imperial German Government, such losses as have been actually sustained by Chinese subjects have occurred in the firing line, while they were engaged in digging trenches or on other war service. They thus courted dangers inevitable to all forces engaged.

The fact that Germany has several times protested against their employment gives excellent proof of its friendly feelings toward China. In consideration of these friendly relations, the Imperial German Government is willing to treat the matter as if the threat had never been uttered. It is reasonable, therefore, for the Imperial Government to expect that the Chinese Government will revise its views respecting the question.

Germany's enemies were the first to declare a blockade of Germany, and the same is being persistently carried out. It is, therefore, difficult for Germany to cancel her blockade policy. The Imperial Government, nevertheless, is willing to comply with the wishes of the Chinese Government by opening negotiations to arrive at a plan for protecting Chinese lives and property, and will see that the utmost regard is given to Chinese shipping rights. The reason which has prompted the Imperial Government to adopt this conciliatory policy, is the knowledge that once diplomatic relations are severed with Germany, China will not only lose a truly good friend, but will also be entangled in unthinkable difficulties.

In forwarding to your Excellency the above instructions from my home Government, I beg also to state that, if the Government of China is willing, I am empowered to open negotiations for the protection of the shipping rights of China.

The Note is signed by the German Minister.

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

Shanghai, March 14, 12.45 p.m.—The Chinese Naval Authorities early this morning took possession of the German steamers Albenga, Dickercamers, Meidah, Neile and Sikiang lying in Whampoo river at this port and put the German crews ashore. There was no disturbance.

This sudden action was a surprise because it had been understood that the Entente Ministers in Peking were to have been notified of the breach of relation this afternoon and the publication of official rupture between China and Germany would be made at 6 o'clock. The action of the Chinese naval authorities here in advance of official notification is believed to have been taken in order to prevent damage being done to the machinery of the German vessels.

INDIA'S WAR LOAN

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 13.—The Government has ordered an urgent "whip" on the occasion of a "vital division" to-morrow when Mr. Austen Chamberlain, Secretary of State for India, is to move the approval of India's War Loan of £100,000,000. It is noteworthy that the motion does not refer to the increase of the cotton duties.

It is, however, anticipated that 30 Lancashire members of the House of Commons will vote against the Government. The Nationalists have not decided upon any action yet. The Labour Party has settled that its members may vote as they please.

RUSSIA WANTS CHINESE MINERS

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, March 11.—The Council of the Association of Mining and Industrials in southern Russia, has sent a petition to the Minister of Commerce. The document contains a request that the Government will import 10,000 Chinese coolies into the Don region for mining work.

SUN YAT-SEN CABLES TO THE BRITISH PREMIER

Shanghai, Mar. 8.—The "China Press" in commenting on a cable message sent by Dr. Sun Yat-sen to Mr. Lloyd-George, on March 7, says: "The telegram, while overdrawn, undoubtedly reflects something of the thoughts which are taking form in the minds of the Chinese people."

The "North China Daily News" says: "Dr. Sun Yat-sen's message reflects little credit on his purpose or sincerity. A more insidious or more mischievous composition it would be hard to imagine. Certainly no Englishman in any official capacity has approached Dr. Sun Yat-sen. The statement he puts into the mouth of Mr. Tuan, the Premier, that the Entente is coercing China, is pure fiction.

"There is not a vestige of truth in the suggestion of coercion, nor has the Premier ever made such a suggestion. The remark about the Mahomedans is merely silly.

"Regarding the malicious hint about dissension among the Entente, Japan may take notice if she thinks fit to do so. But we imagine it will be beneath her dignity. The whole message appears carefully contrived to bring discredit on the allies, and, incidentally to stir up trouble against the Chinese Government."

What is Known Here

Almost identical telegrams appeared in the "Asahi," the "Jiji" and the "Nichinichi" yesterday purporting to give the text of Dr. Sun's message to Mr. Lloyd-George. It is evident that either the censor has been at work, or that the "N.-C. Daily News," at any rate, has got a very different version of the affair. From the news received here of Dr. Sun's message, he has made no statement that calls for such drastic criticism as that bestowed by the "North China Daily News." According to the message received by our Japanese contemporaries, Dr. Sun Yat-sen, on March 7, cabled as follows to the British Premier:—

As a patriot of China and as one who still appreciates the courtesy of England in saving his life, I regard it my duty to inform you that the attempt of the British officials in China to bring China to the side of the Entente will only work injurious effects both upon China and England. The leading British residents in China have advised me to use my good offices in urging China to join the Entente, but after serious consideration, I have arrived at the conclusion that for China to abandon her neutrality would be both hurtful to China and to England.

China is still in a primitive stage as a Republic, and the Chinese public is a patient in the hospital for constitutional governments, and at present China is unable to nurse herself. Thus for China careful nursing by others is absolutely necessary. China cannot be called a systematized nation. China is only maintaining her position by the peace-loving habits and sentiment of the people.

If once there happens any outbreak, the whole country will be plunged in anarchic chaos. China has an unlimited trust and confidence in the power of the British Government, and does not doubt the final victory of England. However there are many who proffer the near-sighted advice of bringing China to the side of the Entente, and even some British newspapers have voiced the opinion that the Chinese Army should be despatched to Mesopotamia. These incidents have already begun to make the Chinese doubt the power of the British Government.

If once China enters the vortex of the war, it would not only endanger the existence of China as a nation, but it would be also injurious to British power and influence in the Far East. The more eagerly China is advised to join the Entente, the more clearly it will be a confession that the Entente powers are unable to handle Germany.

It is reported that Premier Tuan informed the President of the Republic that the Entente powers are endeavouring to bring China to their side, and among the statesmen of China there have been many who strongly opposed the plan of China joining the Entente. Any political disturbance in China will bring chaotic conditions, and a state of anarchy will create two dangerous factors. One will be those who maintain hostile sentiments to foreigners, and the other will be the persecution of the Mohamedans.

Sentiment against foreigners has been suppressed by us since the first revolution, but the old feeling against foreigners and foreign countries is still existing, and in an emergency, it will cause a second Boxer trouble and lead to the persecution of foreign residents in China.

If war is declared against any foreign nation, the ignorant people will be unable to discriminate between one foreigner and another, the dangerous effect of which will be felt most strongly by England which has so large an interest in China.

The Mohamedans in China cannot be overlooked, and for them to declare war against the Sacred Land will be their greatest crime. I fear that the worst effect of the anarchic condition of China will be the lack of unity among the Entente powers, which will cause a disadvantageous situation for the Allied nations. Under such circumstances, there is no other step to be taken by China, but to remain absolutely neutral.

The reason I wish to draw the attention of Your Excellency to the matter, is not merely to prevent chaotic disturbances in China, but because I have a deep sympathy toward the present situation of England, and hope that England will maintain her power and reputation, which I sincerely respect.

Opinion At Foreign Office

Speaking of the London dispatch to the effect that Dr. Sun Yat-sen has telegraphed to Premier Lloyd-George an appeal protesting against the Entente Powers drawing China into the vortex of the European war on the ground that such state of affairs would throw his whole country into a veritable anarchy and that the Mohamedan portion of the population would surely take advantage of the disorder, thus in the long run turning the whole situation unfavourable to the Allies, an official of the Foreign Office when seen last Friday was not in accordance with Dr. Sun's fear.

"Judged from the facts in the past," he said, "such a fear seems to me groundless. Where is the so-much talked-of Moslem rising? The German schemers have completely failed in inciting the Mohamedans in Arabia, Afghanistan, India, Chinese Turkistan, or anywhere else. It is well known that there exists no feeling of religious tie between the Moslem populace of China and that of Turkey."

A Copy of the Cable?

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

[Delayed in Transmission]

Shanghai, Mar. 8.—Newspapers to-day print a copy of a cable from Dr. Sun Yat-sen to Mr. Lloyd-George wherein the former says: "I deem it my duty to point out the injurious consequences to China and England caused by the agitation of some of your officials here to bring China into the European conflict. After careful study, I have come to the conclusion that it would be disastrous to both countries should China break her neutrality.

"Should China enter the war, it would prove dangerous to her national life and injurious to the prestige of England in the Far East. Already this question has raised bitter dissensions among our statesmen. Discord now may cause anarchism, evoking two strong elements in China—to wit anti-foreign fanatics and Mohamedans. The anti-foreign spirit still lives and the people may take advantage of a critical time and rise in another Boxer movement with the general massacre of foreigners."

Dr. Sun fears the worst result of the anarchism would be dissension among the Entente, which he says would surely mean disaster to the cause of the Entente. Under such conditions, at this critical juncture, China, he says cannot be expected to do otherwise than maintain strict neutrality.

The news that Dr. Sun Yat-sen had sent a telegram to Mr. Lloyd-George protesting against China being involved in the war is still fresh in the minds of our readers we trust. The telegram announcing the incident, stated that the message had called forth strong comment from the "N.C. Daily News." The paper in question has now reached us and we give below our contemporary's comment contained in its issue of March 8 and 9. In a leaderette on March 8 we find:

Dr. Sun's Telegram

From the manner in which it reaches us, we are bound to assume that the extraordinary telegram to Mr. Lloyd George which we reproduce elsewhere is indeed from Dr. Sun Yat-sen. If we have been hoaxed, we express our regrets to Dr. Sun in advance, as the message reflects but little credit on his purpose or sincerity. Indeed a more insidiously mischievous composition would be hard to imagine. It would be interesting to know what "prominent Englishmen" have approached Dr. Sun. Certainly no one in any official capacity has done so, either here or in Peking. The statement put into General Tuan's mouth that the Entente Powers are coercing China is a pure figment. The Entente Ministers did not even approach the Government for several days after China had sent her note to Germany; and there is not a vestige of truth in the suggestion of "coercion" nor has the Premier ever made such a suggestion. We should also like to know what English dailies have advocated sending Chinese divisions to Mesopotamia. The remark about Mohammedans is merely silly: there are far more Mohammedans in India than in China and no Indians are more loyal to the Raj. Of the malicious hint about "dissension among the Entente Group" Japan may take notice if she thinks fit, but we imagine it will be beneath her dignity. The whole message appears carefully contrived to bring discredit on the Allies and, incidentally, to stir up trouble against the Chinese Government.

The Text of Message

The text of the telegram in full as it appeared in the "N.-C. Daily News" was:

His Excellency Lloyd George,
London.

Your Excellency:

As a patriot of China and grateful friend of England to whom I owe my life, I deem it my duty to point out to you the injurious consequences to China and England caused by this agitation of some of your officials here to bring China into the European conflict. I have been approached by prominent English to consider the question of China joining the Allies. After careful study I come to the conclusion that it would be disastrous to both countries should China break neutrality.

For China is yet an infant Republic and as a nation she may be likened to a sick man just entering the hospital of constitutionalism. Unable to look after herself at this stage she needs careful nursing and support. Therefore, China cannot be regarded as an organized country. She is held intact only by custom and sentiment of peace-loving people. But at once should there arise discord, general anarchy would result.

Hitherto the Chinese possessed unbounded faith and assurance in the strength of England and her ultimate triumph, but since this agitation by short-sighted though well-intentioned people, while some English dailies even advocate the sending of several Chinese divisions into Mesopotamia, this confidence has been greatly shakened.

Should China enter the war it would prove dangerous to her national life and injurious to the prestige of England in the Far East. The mere desire to get China to join the Allies is to Chinese minds a confession of the Allies' inability to cope with Germany.

Just now came Premier Tuan's report to the President that Entente Powers are coercing China to join the Allies. Already this question has raised bitter dissensions among our statesmen. Discord now may cause anarchism which will evoke the two strong but perilous elements in China; anti-foreign fanatics and Mohammedans. Since our revolution, anti-foreign feelings have been suppressed by us, but the anti-foreign spirit lives and may take advantage of the critical time and rise in another Boxer movement with general massacre of foreigners. If war is declared against any country, the ignorant classes cannot distinguish one nation from the other and consequences would be more fatal to England owing to her larger interests in the Orient.

Again the Mohammedans cannot be overlooked. To fight against their Holy Land would be a sacrilege.

The worst result of anarchism in China, I fear, would be dissension among the Entente Group, which would surely mean disaster to the Entente Cause. Under such conditions and at this critical juncture China cannot be expected to do otherwise than maintain strict neutrality.

My motive for calling your Excellency's attention to this injurious agitation is actuated not purely by the desire to preserve China from anarchy and dissolution, but prompted by my warmest sympathy for a country whose interest I have deeply at heart and whose integrity and fair name I have every reason to uphold and honour.

SUN YAT-SEN.

Further Criticism

In the course of a leading article on March 9, the British daily in Shanghai contained this:—

"It is to be observed that the news of this reconciliation [between President and Premier] had not reached Shanghai when Dr. Sun Yat-sen took it upon himself to send his very mischievous telegram to Mr. Lloyd-George. For any further expression of the feelings which that message evokes, beyond what we said yesterday, we refer our readers to the letter published on page 4 to-day. It is, however, pertinent to ask by what right Dr. Sun considers himself entitled to lay down the law for his fellow-countrymen. He holds no official position. Under the late President, if we recollect rightly, he held the post of railway administrator, which carried with it a handsome emolument but, in his hands, presented no other aspects of importance. It is true that in the past his name was prominently connected with the overthrow of the Manchus, not least, however, because of their own clumsy attempt to kidnap him in London. In any case, the sands of the Manchu dynasty were running out, and their own misrule was far more responsible for their overthrow than any subterranean influence of Dr. Sun. His brief term of office as President at Nanking revealed no qualities as administrator or empire-builder. And while China has since looked on at two revolutions against the man who caught up the reins of government when they fell from the effete hands of the Nanking President, and has acquiesced in every vile term of abuse that could be heaped upon that man, it is an interesting speculation where she would have been to-day if there had been no Yuan Shih-kai to save her from the ineptitudes of a Sun Yat-sen. We have no quarrel with Dr. Sun for thinking that China should remain neutral. Everyone is entitled to his own opinion. But we particularly dislike slobbering references to Dr. Sun's gratitude and longing to uphold the "fair name" of that nation which every other line of his telegram is so maliciously designed to besmirch and discredit in Chinese eyes.

And in view of Dr. Sun's mispresentation of recent events and his outrageous slander that the Allies are coercing China into joining them, it may be as well to recount briefly the principal happenings since America broke off diplomatic relationships with Germany. On February 4 Dr. Reinsch, the American Minister, called upon the Premier, notified him of what his Government had done and formally invited China to follow suit. On February 9 China communicated to Admiral von Hintze, the German Minister, her intention to break off relationships unless Germany modified her submarine policy. At this period the Ministers of the Entente remained scrupulously aloof. It was not until the 15th that we were informed from London that they were then in touch with the Chinese Government "regarding measures likely to result" from the prospective breach. Only on the 20th did the French Minister and the Belgian Chargé d'Affaires officially communicate to the Chinese Government what the Allies would be prepared to do to meet certain of its requirements in the event of China's breaking with Germany. Meanwhile the various parties in Parliament had been actively discussing what their attitude should be; and the solid support on their part, which General Tuan represented when he went to that memorable interview with the President last Sunday, was arrived at with that absolute independence which the needs of the case and the honour of Parliament demand. Throughout these four crucial weeks the position of the Entente Powers has been this and no more: "If you, China, break with Germany, we shall naturally be disposed to meet you in certain matters in which you are interested." Even this declaration was not made until eight days after the chief parties in Parliament were reported to be solidly for China's following the example of America, on which she has repeatedly said that she intends to model her own conduct. All the more then do we welcome the reference of the final step to Parliament. Germany is working strenuously to avert the breach and she appears to have made some impression on the timidity of the local commercial bodies. It is for the whole Government of China to reply; and the Entente, while always ready to welcome China to their midst, are content to await the decision at her hands.

BREAD RAIDS IN PETROGRAD

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Petrograd, March 11.—It is semi-officially announced that "owing to the very heavy falls of snow having delayed the arrival of foodstuffs, some of the Petrograd inhabitants created a panic and raided the bread supplies, causing a shortage. Energetic measures prevented the disturbances becoming serious."

Municipal sales of bread and other exceptional steps have been taken. The railways are gradually being cleared of snow and the arrivals of foodstuffs are again approaching the normal.

RUSSIA WANTS EASTERN TRADE

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, March 7.—The Petrograd Society of Oriental Studies has decided to open a museum at Odessa with the object of cultivating the economical rapprochement of Black Sea ports with the East. Simultaneously with the opening of the branch the Petrograd Practical Oriental Academy will open a branch of its school there, where Eastern languages will be taught and future commercial agents qualified.

VISCOUNT UCHIDA AND GERMANY'S INTRIGUE

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, March 9.—Interviewed by a representative of the "Novoye Vremya," Viscount Uchida, Ambassador for Japan, said that this is not the first time Germany has tried to implicate Japan against America. Notwithstanding the most cordial relations existing between Japan and the Allies, and the most sincere friendship between Tokyo and Washington, Germany can only find the hackneyed Mexican question as a pretext to envenom the good feelings existing between Japan and America.

The mutual relations between these two powers, America and Japan, could not be better. The commercial treaty entirely covers the immigration question to the mutual satisfaction of both. And although Japan, more than any other nation, is interested in China, she is prepared jointly to work together with the Allies in the Far East. Equal co-ordination is noticeable as regards China entering the field against Germany, who in case of war loses her interned warships and railway concessions.

"Regarding Russo-Japanese relations," concluded the Ambassador, "I can only say that since the war, they have been most firm and cordial. Three conventions bind our nations to settle all questions which might possibly arise, and now the principal rôle in developing mutual understanding belongs to the respective peoples. Undoubtedly, the present war has united us both commercially and financially, but we must witness still closer friendship. With all my power, I shall endeavour to strengthen the stability of our alliance."

An official dispatch from Washington received at the Foreign Office says that the declarations of Premier Count Terauchi and Viscount Motono, the Foreign Minister, about the German intrigue attempting to entice Mexico and Japan to form an alliance with Germany against America continue to be published in the American press and to call forth very friendly comments indicating a very favourable echo of the statements. Notable among the press comments is the article of the New York "Sun," which referring to the speech of President Wilson at his installation says that the dark cloud lying on the horizon of the future of the United States, mentioned by the President in his speech, will be swept away by Japan who is the light which breaks that spell of the dark cloud enshrouding the future of the path of the national development of the United States. The sincere attitude shown by Japan towards the United States in the recent affair is a great contribution to the growth of the friendly relationship between her and the United States, no less contributory than the kindly knocking at the door of Japan by Commodore Perry and America's candid and impartial attitude towards Japan.

Any American gentleman of fair mind will not overlook and remain unmoved by the noble indignation and strong dignity manifested by Japan towards the German

DEBASED HUN KULTUR PLANS NEW DEVILRY NOW

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

London, March 6.—Reuter learns with regard to the accusations of murder by the German Minister of War concerning the treatment by the British of prisoners in the war zone that the following are the facts of the case:

It should be stated first that since the beginning of the war only one German prisoner has become a casualty through being near the firing line. This man who was employed in work in the rear was struck by a strong German shot. Any suggestion that the British wilfully placed prisoners in such a position as to be endangered by the enemy's fire is preposterous, although it is known that this has been the deliberate policy of the Germans. The latest utterance by the German War Minister is regarded as simply a prelude to a further campaign of frightfulness. The facts with regard to this question are the following: At the end of January the German Government presented an ultimatum threatening reprisals if prisoners were not removed to the distance of 30 kilometres from the firing line. A reply was demanded within three days.

On February 6th the British Government offered to keep prisoners of war at a proper distance behind the firing line, provided that the Germans adopted similar measures not only on the western, but also on the eastern front where it was known that they had been deliberately placed in positions of danger. The Germans have been in possession of these assurances over a month, but so far has not even acknowledged the Note. Only one conclusion can be drawn from that, namely, the enemy is contemplating a further form of bloodthirsty conduct "as reprisals" for ill-treatment on our part that does not exist. Meantime the German prisoners of war receive the same rations as the British troops and are as carefully and warmly clad as the British troops.

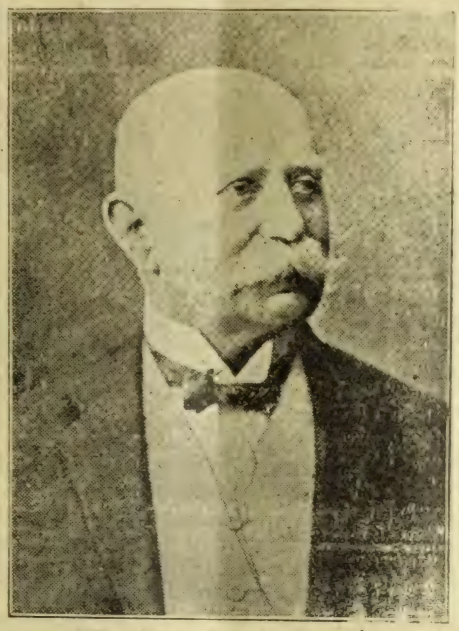
In a recent survey through Reuter's Agency of the general aspects of the war, the following paragraph in view of the above is of especial interest:—

The enemy's depression is evident anew in the latest German pretence that the Allies bait transport ships with poisoned food for the destruction of such submarine crews as capture them. This futile and frantic invention probably points only to some forthcoming new atrocity in the Germans' own warfare. For hitherto they always prelude each abomination of their own by falsely accusing their enemies of having used it first.

A notable instance of this kind of treachery was the German preparation for the use of asphyxiating gas. On May 3, 1915, Sir John French, reporting the first use of gas by the British said:—

"A week before the Germans first used this method they announced in their official communiqué that we were making use of asphyxiating gases. At the time there appeared to be no reason for this astounding falsehood, but now of course, it is obvious it was part of the scheme. It . . . shows they recognized its illegality and were anxious to forestall neutral and possibly domestic criticism."

There is, therefore, every reason to believe the hint thrown out in the latest telegram at the head of this column, that German Kultur has already devised some new devilish atrocity to spring upon civilization.



intrigue. The paper concludes by saying that in case any American political agitator or malicious minded American publicist attempts to estrange the good relations between Japan and the United States in future it wishes the American nation will reflect on this and never forget the true aspect of Americo-Japanese friendship.

PIRATES "PAINED HEARTH"

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, Mar. 7.—The Austrian reply to the United States' request for a statement of Austria's submarine policy amounts to 3,500 words. The substance of the Note is that she has associated herself with Germany's new plans for submarine warfare. The Note declares the British blockade illegal as it aims at establishing British tyranny on the sea. The blockade by the Central Powers, however, which was imposed with "pained hearts" will incline the Allies to make an honourable peace. Therefore, concludes the Note, it will really secure the freedom of the seas.

U.S. STATE DEPARTMENT AND PIRATES' ACTIONS

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

New York, Mar. 11.—The Associated Press correspondent at Washington wires that the State Department indicates that the mere appearance of a German submarine or periscope presupposes a hostile purpose in view of Germany's unrestricted submarine warfare declaration.

An American vessel could fire the moment it sighted such an appearance.

The Navy Department has requested all news sources not to publish details of the armament or the names of and destination of American vessels bound to and from European ports.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

Washington, Mar. 10.—President Wilson has decided to call a special session of Congress, to convene April 16.

The President has been advised that he has the right to arm American merchant vessels against German submarines. He is expected to take steps to carry this out immediately.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, Mar. 11.—President Wilson has convoked an extra session of Congress to convene on April 16, to receive such communications as may be made by the executive.

It is understood that a number of American merchantmen will sail through the submarine zones immediately. They will be armed by Government. Their names will not be published.

President Wilson has convoked Congress to confirm his arming of merchantmen.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

Washington, Mar. 12.—Formal notice has been sent to diplomats of the friendly powers here that American vessels traversing the German submarine zone will carry an armed guard for the protection of the vessels and the lives of those on board.

As a result of a ruling by the State Department that vessels armed fore as well as aft may clear from American ports, it is expected that there will be a general arming. Thus the Entente vessels visiting United States ports will be given fuller scope as regards the arms they carry in future.

SHIPPING AND PIRATES

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Twelve fishing vessels were sunk, and three escaped after being attacked.

An official statement from Paris says that 859 merchantmen arrived in French ports during the week ending March 4. One vessel over, and one under 1600 tons were sunk. No vessels were unsuccessfully attacked. Sixteen French fishing vessels were sunk.

U.S. SENATE ON CLOSURE

Washington, Mar. 8.—The Bi-partisan Closure Committee has agreed to recommend a change in the rules of the Senate so that a two-thirds vote will be sufficient to terminate a debate on the floor.

Senator Walsh argued in favour of reform rules, saying that when, as at present, general alarm pervaded the country regarding the probability of war, Congress should be in a position to act and not be thwarted by misguided pacifists. He referred to history to show that during the American Civil War ten or more members of the Senate were expelled for treason because of their attitude toward the war.

Later.

The Republican and Democratic caucuses have ratified the proposed change in the closure rules of the Senate.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

Washington, Mar. 9.—The Senate discussed the closure motion. The Democratic leaders intend to insist on a continuous session until the measure is passed.

IRISH QUESTION ONCE AGAIN IN COMMONS

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 6.—In a speech in the House of Commons to-day, Mr. Lloyd-George, the Premier, said Government was prepared to grant Home Rule to those parts of Ireland clearly demanding it. But, he added, it would be as glaring an outrage upon the principle of self-government to place Ulster under Irish rule as to deny self-government to the rest of Ireland. Mr. Lloyd-George said that no party would support the demand that Ulster should be forced into settlement. His offer of self-government to parts of Ireland would take immediate effect. He was not the least afraid of submitting the proposals to any unbiassed friend of Ireland in any quarter of the globe. He moved as an amendment to Mr. T. P. O'Connor's motion that: "This House would welcome any settlement which would produce a better understanding between Ireland and the rest of the United Kingdom, but considers it impossible to impose by force on any section of Ireland a form of Government which has not the consent of the governed."

Following the speech by the Premier, Mr. Asquith suggested that the Irish question should be referred to outside impartial authority for the adjustment of the interests and sentiments concerned. The constitution of such a body might be facilitated by the presence here of a number of dominion statesmen, who already have solved various problems of local autonomy in different ways:

Following a request to express an opinion on Mr. Asquith's suggestion, Mr. Lloyd-George said it was the duty of the Nationalists to say whether they meant to oppose the measure embodying the Government's offer. In response to an appeal by Mr. Redmond not to participate in futile discussion, but consult him on future action, the Nationalists, who had adopted a markedly hostile attitude during the Premier's speech, left the House. The debate was adjourned until March 8.

The following day Mr. Bonar Law remarked that he saw no advantage in "yesterday's Irish discussion."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 7.—The Nationalists have manifested their intention to oppose the Government by all means in their power. Their attitude toward the war and allegiance to the cause, however, will remain unaltered.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 8.—Mr. T. P. O'Connor, Nationalist member for Scotland Division of Liverpool, moved the following resolution in the House of Commons to-day:

"That in view of strengthening the hands of the Allies in achieving recognition of the equal rights of small nations, and the principle of nationality against the opposite principles of militarism and government without the consent of the governed, it is essential to immediately confer on Ireland the free institutions long promised her."

Mr. O'Connor appealed to the House to make a united and genuine effort to settle the Irish Question forthwith.

GERMANY AND MEXICO

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 8.—The revelation of the German overtures to Mexico has occasioned considerable heart-searching in Germany. There have been numerous questions raised about the matter in the Reichstag, where Dr. von Zimmermann announced that the despatch had been sent in secret code. He was unaware, he said, how the Americans had obtained it and deciphered it. It was a misfortune, but he was not very sorry that the overtures had become known in Japan through publication in America.

CANNOT EXPECT PERFECT CABINET

Although the present Cabinet is attacked by the Opposition party on the grounds that it is a non-party Cabinet, and was impeached in the Diet, the "Jiji" says that the present Cabinet is the result of the present status of the nation, and it is not a "palace in the air". Even with regard to the statesmen, we have to select from those existing to-day, and the public cannot expect a perfect Cabinet under such circumstances.

By the result of the coming general election, a change may or may not be made in the Cabinet, declares the "Jiji". If the Opposition party obtains a majority in the Lower House, it is natural that the vote of lack of confidence in the Cabinet will be again brought out and passed, and the present Cabinet must resign. There are some who believe that the next session of the Diet will be again dissolved by the Cabinet, but the "Jiji" does not think that the dissolution of the next session of the Diet can be achieved, even if the cabinet desires it.

When the Terauchi Cabinet resigns, it is evident that a Kenseikai Cabinet will be organized. Some doubts whether the Elder Statesmen will recognize the Cabinet organized by the head of a party, but history tells us many cases when the head of a party organized the Cabinet. When the Cabinet is changed by the result of the general election and the passage of the vote of lack of confidence, the Elder Statesmen cannot look for a candidate in other quarters, disregarding the majority party. Consequently if the result of the general election gives the majority votes to the Kenseikai, it will mean a Kato Cabinet to succeed the Terauchi Cabinet.

But on the oher hand, if the Seiyukai, and neutral members who favour the Government, control the majority votes of the House, the present Cabinet will be safe, and there will be no political change. But the Seiyukai will not remain silent, if it obtains a sufficient number of members in the House of Representatives. With the majority vote, the Seiyukai will not be inactive long, and the party will try to organize a Seiyukai Cabinet. A Hara Cabinet or Saionji Cabinet will be realized under these conditions.

The "Jiji" declares, however, that if the Kenseikai, the Seiyukai and other parties just maintain the balance of power in the next Diet, the present Cabinet will be safe for some time.

Further the paper says that in Japan there are only, Count Terauchi, Viscount Kato, Mr. Hara, and Marquis Saionji fit to organize a Cabinet, and it is impossible to look for any other person beyond the above mentioned four. The ability and experience of these four men are well known to all Japanese and the public cannot expect much more than the ability of these men.

In a word, the political power of Japan is in the hands of these four men, and they have to organize the Cabinet in turns.

But the "Jiji" hopes that these men will not fight for their own personal power and influence, but maintaining friendship between them, they should take turns in governing the nation. Any Cabinet which has the support of the entire nation cannot be established in Japan under the present circumstances and the paper sincerely hopes that these men in whose hands the politics of Japan rests, will not quarrel among themselves, but look after the politics of the nation with sincere regard, and whenever circumstances necessitate, one will pass his power to the other, and rule the nation in turn.

TO KEEP STUDENTS FROM FOLITICS

With the permission allowing professors of Imperial Universities to become candidates for the member of the House of Representatives, the problem of prohibiting University students from taking any hand in the political campaign arose, says the "Yorozu". In the past, university students have often been active in election campaigns, but the authorities of the Department of Education and also the Universities are against the students' participation in the election campaign, and it is reported that some measures will be adopted to prohibit students from taking part in the election campaign.

The paper says the step to allow University professors to become Members of the House of Representatives is proper, and it is a matter for rejoicing for the sake of the nation as well as for the scholars. On the other hand, the paper says that it is natural for the students to wish the election of their professors for whom they entertain admiration and respect, and the Government should have expected the activity of students when they allowed professors to become members of Parliament.

The Imperial Universities are not homes for old men, declares the "Yorozu", and the Government should give the professors of Universities freedom of speech, give opportunities for their political activity, and to educate the uneducated politicians by their speeches and policies. The students are merely the future professors and scholars, and it is necessary for them to study the political situation, to become in touch with the active world, to apply the result of their studies to the actual cases and facts.

The "Yorozu" says the policy of education of the Government has been to mould the students in one and the same type, and while students of private institutions enjoy comparative freedom, those of the Government Universities and Colleges have been strictly restricted in their movements and speech. This method of education, says the paper, prevents the full development of faculties of the young students.

In the present campaign a large number of the students of the Imperial Universities began activity to campaign for their favorite candidates, and alarmed at the report, the educational authorities are trying to prohibit their activity. The "Yorozu" declares that such a moment is the most opportune to solve the pencing question of the change of the present educational policy.

ILLITERATE CANDIDATES

Among the candidates for the membership in the House of Representatives, there are many who are illiterate, and the "Yorozu" declares that such candidates should be avoided.

Among the members of the House of Representatives in the past, there were only a few who understood financial problems, and most of them lacked the proper knowledge of foreign countries and diplomatic relations, and consequently whenever any important discussion on financial problems, or diplomatic questions took place the majority of the members did not understand the nature and scope of the discussion, and cast their votes in favour or against the bill, without knowing what they were doing. Even there were a few in the House of Representatives, who could not write their own names.

There are some who regard the House of Representatives, as a place of amusement and daily make unnecessary noise during the session of the Diet to prevent the proceedings of the House, and even begin fights among themselves. If the administration of the country is left in the hands of such ignorant members, it means a most dangerous situation.

Each political party should select learned and suitable persons for members of the House of Representatives, but the political condition of to-day is such that the proper persons who have their own definite opinion of political affairs, do not wish to become members of the House. Moreover, the leaders of the political parties find it much easier to control the ignorant and illiterate members who blindly obey their instruction than to handle well-educated and conscientious persons.

Even in the present campaign there are many candidates who are probably wealthy, but are ignorant, and the paper asks the public to avoid such candidates, and elect at least such persons able to understand financial and diplomatic problems. The illiterate with money, is not able to represent the public and discuss important national affairs in the House of Representatives.

AN OCTOGENARIAN CANDIDATE

Mr. Bokushin Oi, must be the oldest gentleman of all the aspirants for the seats in the Lower House, who are at present strenuously canvassing among their respective constituents. According to the "Asahi" Mr. Oi is 84 years of age and still enjoys life. He is now contesting the city of Sakai, Osaka prefecture, in the heat and turmoil of the parliamentary general election which is to take place next month. In the last general election Mr. Oi wanted to declare his candidature for the Lower House and it is reported that there appeared then an older candidate. This went so much "against the grain" that Mr. Oi gave up the dea of becoming an M.P. In the present election, however, he rests assured that there is no candidate older than 84 years. The "Asahi" says he is old in years but young in vigour.

THE FALL OF BAGDAD

The fall of Bagdad does not affect materially the war situation of Europe, but it has a great significance to Asiatic nations and especially to the Orient, says the "Hochi".

The Kaiser obtained Tsingtau on a groundless pretext, and made it the base of the German action in the Orient, and Germany endeavoured to gain influence in the Shantung Province. On the other hand, the Kaiser constructed the Bagdad Railway, and it was the intention of the Kaiser to oppress India and China from the two bases of action, Tsingtau and Bagdad.

At the beginning of the present war, Germany brought Turkey to her side, although there were no historical relations between Turkey and Germany to make the alliance of the two nations possible, and the Kaiser made Turkey despatch her troops to Asia Minor under the command of German officers. This movement of Germany was of course to divide the attack of the allied forces, but also to threaten India. Even while Germany was fighting against so many nations, the Kaiser has been planning the conquest of India and China.

However the campaign of the British and Russian forces was successful and Bagdad fell on March 11th. The "Hochi" states that the victory of Bagdad will not materially benefit the Allied forces, even though the victory will give a certain encouragement to the forces of the allied powers. If the occupation of Mesopotamia by the British and Russian forces becomes permanent, the Pan-Germanism of the Kaiser will be shattered, and the great ambition of Germany to place India, China and the Far East under her control will become nothing but an empty dream. Thus Persia will be able to escape from the oppression of Germany, and India will be free from any danger. Consequently the victory of Bagdad should not be under-estimated although it does not actually affect the situation in Europe.

The disposition of Turkey after the conclusion of the war, will be the most grave problem, says the "Hochi". If the Entente wins the final victory, Turkey will be driven out of Europe and also Mesopotamia, and Turkey which once was one of the strongest nations of Europe, will be driven into a small corner of Asia Minor. Even her own existence is threatened by the future development of the situation. If Germany wins the final victory. Turkey must obey whatever Germany dictates to her.

Turkey was placed in such an unfortunate position, simply because she left England and France with which she had been on friendly terms for so many centuries, and tempted by insignificant financial assistance proposed by the Kaiser, she took the side of Germany. While Turkey brought misfortune on herself, her condition to-day is to be pitied.

The "Hochi" believes that it will not be too late to leave her allies to-day and join the Entente, in order to protect her own future. The paper hopes that all nations of Asia, will be more careful in their movements, giving full consideration to the peace and order of Asia. At least the fall of Bagdad should be well remembered by all the people of Asiatic nations.

ASKS COUNT TERAUCHI TO EXPLAIN

The "Tokyo Asahi" is perplexed over the two different versions regarding the invitation of the Entente powers to make China join their side, and especially over the conflicting statements made by Count Terauchi and Premier Tuan of China, and the paper hopes that Count Terauchi will clearly explain the actual situation.

It was reported that the Chinese Government demanded financial support, the postponement of the indemnity payment and the revision of the Chinese tariff as the conditions for joining the Entente, and that Count Terauchi was in favour of granting the Chinese demands. However the problem of revising the Chinese tariff means far more to Japan than to other Entente nations, and the representatives of the spinning industries called upon the government officials recently to protest against the sanction of the revision of the Chinese tariff. The "Asahi" is surprised to learn that Mr. Nakashoji, Minister of Agriculture and Commerce, Viscount Motono, the Foreign Minister, and Count Terauchi, the Premier, have all denied that the revision of the tariff has been discussed as one of the conditions demanded by the Chinese government. Viscount Motono stated that the revision of the tariff is the wish of the Chinese Government, but is not the actual problem, and Mr. Nakashoji said that such a demand was out of the question.

However on the other hand, says the "Asahi," according to telegraphic reports from Peking, Premier Tuan declared in the Senate and House of Representatives that the Chinese Government was advised by the Entente powers to join them in the present war, and if China refuses to join them, China would be isolated, but when China follows the advice of the Entente Powers and joins the war, the problems of revision of the tariff, the postponement of the indemnity payment, and foreign troops stationed in China, would be favourably solved by the Entente.

Thus, while Count Terauchi and other officials of the Japanese government are denying that such conditions have been brought up, the Chinese officials are declaring officially that these conditions are the actual problems. The Japanese government declares that there is no condition for China's joining with the Entente, but the Chinese officials state that there are conditions, favourable to China.

The paper is perplexed which side to believe. If Count Terauchi and the cabinet officials have deluded the public and representatives of the spinning industries by false statements, the confidence of the people in the government will be entirely lost. The paper, however, does not believe that Count Terauchi would attempt to delude the people by such a method. But, on the other hand, it is unlikely that the Chinese officials would make false statements to the Chinese public. Still the statements made by the two governments on the subject are conflicting.

It is probable that the Entente powers are proposing such conditions to China to invite her to join the war. Is it to be understood that Count Terauchi had not been consulted by the other Entente powers on the subject and consequently he does not know anything about the negotiation?

If it is so, Japan has been disregarded by the Entente powers, and the position of Japan in China, approved by the statement made by Sir Edward Grey that England would not do anything in China without consulting Japan has been lost. The "Asahi" sincerely wishes that Count Terauchi will make proper explanation of the situation, so that the public will understand the real condition.

TO IMPROVE PRIVY COUNCIL

The "Yorozu" declares that the Privy Council should be improved, and that the present members of the Council are too old to fully execute their duties. To give courteous treatment to the aged statesmen and officials is quite appropriate, but proper means should be employed for paying such aged persons respect, and the important state affairs should not be placed in their hands.

The Privy Council is an important institution, and it has to consider every important problem of the country and answer inquiries made by H.I.M. the Emperor, regarding every affair and condition of the nation. The men who constitute the Council should not be those behind the time, but the present Privy Council looks like a home for old men. The majority of the present members are so behind the time that they are unable to understand the present situation. It is recently reported that Count Yoshikawa, Vice-Chairman of the Council, might resign, and the "Yorozu" says that at this good opportunity, the entire Council should be re-organized.

The paper declares that first of all it is necessary to make Prince Yamagata, Chairman of the Council, resign. Prince Yamagata is eighty years old, and he is usually absent at the regular meetings of the Council, and it is only once or twice in the whole year that the Prince makes his appearance to take the chair of the Council. The public is no longer satisfied with such a condition. Among the members of the Council, Marquis Matsukata, Marquis Hachisuka, Count Kabayama, Viscount Sugi, Viscount Kawase, Viscount Fukuoka, Baron Nambu and Baron Kuki, are already men of the past, and their existence is doubted by the public. These aged and old fashioned persons are unable to give proper answer to inquiries made by H.I.M. the Emperor on current state affairs.

The "Yorozu" hopes that young and new blood will be brought into the Council to make it able to fulfil its duty towards His Majesty the Emperor. H.I.M. the Emperor was born in the twelfth year of Meiji, but none of the members of the Privy Council were born during the Meiji Era, and they are relics of old Japan The present members of the Council should consider the future of the nation, and tender resignation to give their place to young, able and proper persons to assist His Majesty in the administration of the state.

CHENGCHIATUN AFFAIR PRACTICALLY CLOSED

The Chinese government is gradually carrying out its pledge for the atonement for the outbreak of the Chengchiatun affair of last year, in accordance with the provisions of the agreement arranged between the Chinese authorities and the representatives of the Japanese government at Peking. General Chang Tsu-lin, the military governor of Mukden, sent Gen. Ma, chief of staff of the 38th division, and Mr. Ma, diplomatic commissioner of the Mukden government, on the 5th to the Kwantung Government-General as his messengers with the written apology of the military governor, which was tendered to General Baron Nakamura, the Japanese governor-general of Kwantung. On the 7th General Chang came himself to the Japanese Consulate-general at Mukden and personally tendered an apology to the Japanese consul-general. The penitentiary punishment of General Feng, the commander of the 28th division, who is directly responsible for the wanton assault on the Japanese subject by the Chinese troops and the collision between those troops and the Japanese troops, is expected to be carried out shortly, the order of punishment having already reached the military governor from the central government. The punishment of the Chinese officers and their juniors also held directly responsible for the incident is also expected to be carried out at the same time with the punishment of the commander of the division. The execution of the punishment is to be notified to the Japanese government as soon as it is put into practice.

The compensation for damage sustained by Yoshimoto, the Japanese resident of Chengchiatung, who was assailed by the Chinese troops, will be handed to the beneficiary by the Japanese Consul-general at Mukden, to whom the Chinese authorities have recently paid 500 Mexican dollars for the purpose. The official instruction relating to the promotion of friendly relations between Japan and China has been already sent from the central government to the military governor of Mukden and is expected to be shortly announced to the Chinese people throughout South Manchuria.

On the occasion of the execution of the terms arranged in the agreement shortly the whole of the Japanese troops dispatched to Chengchiatun and Ssupingkai and other places between those two places will be withdrawn at once. As regards the engagement of more Japanese police advisers in the office of the military governor at Mukden, negotiations are going on between the military governor's office and the Kwantung government-general through Lieut.-Colonel Kikuchi and Machino. The advisers will be selected from among civilians experienced in police affairs, and not from among military officers.

A Mukden dispatch says that an instruction ordering the Chinese people in Manchuria to pay proper respects to Japanese troops and residents in Manchuria has been proclaimed in the name of General Chang Tsuo-lin, the military governor of Mukden. The payment of compensation to Yoshimoto, who suffered from the wanton assault of the Chinese troops, is concluded. The punishment of General Feng, the commander of the 28th division, and the officers of the division, who are directly responsible for the incident will be announced in a few days.

MAJOR ISOBE DECORATED

The Navy Department received a report from Captain K. Matsumura, the Naval Attaché to the Japanese Embassy at Paris Thursday that Major Isobe when engaged in air scouting near Verdun was wounded on March 10th. He received a wound in the head, and although he is in a serious condition, his life is not in danger. Major Isobe has been decorated by the French Government for his recent service near Verdun which resulted in his being wounded.

Major Isobe has been twice wounded since he joined the Aviation Corps of France.

According to an "Asahi" despatch, it has now become known that Major Isobe who is with the French at the front in the capacity of a French Lieutenant while piloting a chasing aeroplane near Verdun became unconscious suddenly at a height of 80 metres and fell. Major Isobe sustained serious injuries in the face and head, but his recovery is not despaired of.

FAMOUS MONGOLIAN LEADER DEAD

The fate of Babtchap, general commander of the Mongolian army, in the view of many is still enshrouded in mystery. Mr. Masuzo Susuki, however, who recently returned from Mongolia, is credited with saying that the famous Mongol general has already died on the battlefield.

Mr. Susuki gives details in corroborating his statement. He says that on the 8th of last October Babtchap led his troops in an attack on Linhsi in Mongolia. The place was defended by 500 Chinese infantrymen, who were later reinforced by 1,000 men under the command of General Mi Chen-te. In spite of the reinforcements having a number of machine-guns, Babtchap's troops came out victorious. After suffering defeat the Chinese troops beat a retreat. Babtchap in triumph advanced his troops to occupy the enemy's position but as ill-luck would have it the Mongol general was shot through the head and killed by a Chinese wounded soldier who was hiding in the deserted Chinese trenches.

MR. BRAND WHITLOCK NOW NAMED

New York, Mar. 14.—According to a dispatch from Washington, Mr. Brand Whitlock, American Minister to Belgium is now mentioned as the most probable successor to the late Mr. George Wilkins Guthrie. There is some objection to the appointment of Mr. Morgan, Minister to Brazil, as he is a Republican, and as for Mr. Vans McCormick he is not inclined to fill the post. Mr. Whitlock has not yet been approached with the offer and it is not clear if he will accept the post. It appears that President Wilson attaches much importance to the Ambassadorship to Japan in order to promote better relations between Japan and America and is now paying great attention to the selection of the successor.—"Asahi."

CELEBRATE MUKDEN VICTORY AT KAIKOSHA

Several hundred Army and Navy officers and over one thousand families of the officers and soldiers who died in the battle of Mukden gathered at the Kaikosha, last Saturday, to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the victory of Mukden in the Russo-Japanese war.

Saturday was the occasion of the double celebration of the anniversary of the Mukden victory and the fortieth anniversary of the Kaikosha, the Army Club. While the formal programme of the celebration began at four o'clock in the afternoon, a large number of officers and guests arrived at the Kaikosha as early as eleven in the morning. Among the Army officers gathered for the celebration memoirs of the Mukden battles were related, and regrets for the death of their comrades were expressed.

In the compounds of the Yasukuni Jinja, fire works were set off, and the wrestling matches were held by the professional and amateur wrestlers.

To remind the officers and others of the battles of Mukden, the refreshments given at the Kaikosha, consisted of the army ration of canned goods, and cold dishes.

SHARKS SEEN IN YOKOHAMA

At 9.30 Thursday morning, great excitement was caused among the loiterers near Maita-bashi bridge, when two huge sharks made their appearance in the canal, whither they seemed to have found their way from outside the harbour. After remaining there for a while the monsters, reported to measure about nine feet in length, disappeared in the direction of the Yato-bashi bridge. Several fishermen made hasty preparations to capture them, but were unsuccessful.

GERMAN AMBITIONS IN THE EAST

There are numerous indications that after the war Germany will change her Imperial programme. As all the world knows, she began this present war in the hope of destroying British sea-power and establishing German world-dominion on a basis of German naval supremacy. This ambitious plan not only violated every tradition of Prussian policy, but was contrary to the most inspired teachings of the great Bismarck.

Bismarck was always a Continentalist. It is remarkable that, notwithstanding the earlier aspirations of the Hohenzollerns, and despite the fact that in the 17th and 18th centuries Prussia had more than once endeavoured to become a naval State, Bismarck to the end of his life remained a believer in the fact that Germany's destiny had Continental limits. He believed that if Germany was ever to hold world-dominion it could only be with the active assistance of and in alliance with Holland, Austria, Russia, and Italy. And there are ample signs now that Germany, before many months have passed, may be compelled to abandon her dreams of sea-domination and return to the theories of her old Iron Chancellor.

Within the last few months a German-Persian Union and a German-Chinese Union have been established (Deutsch-Persischer und Deutsch-Chinesischer Verband). On 3rd April, 1916, at the headquarters of the latter organization in Berlin a lecture entitled "Was Geht Uns China An?" was delivered by an influential member of the Prussian Parliament, in which the lecturer claimed that German world-empire could be established only on a basis of an overland dominion extending from the North Sea to China by way of Turkey and Persia. The reasoning behind this suggestion was not only sound, but subtle, and deserves the attention of every Imperially-minded Englishman. It is an idea which must be combated as vigorously and strenuously as we are now shattering Germany's naval idea.

The speaker argued that the present war would be followed by an era of economic strife, and that many of the world's best markets would be more or less closed to Germany. In any future war the British Navy would be able even more effectively than now to prevent raw material and foodstuffs reaching Germany from the Americas. A British blockade, however, could be rendered absolutely ineffective if Germany controlled the ancient trade highway from Europe to the East known as the "Silkstreet." Persia and China could easily provide the legions of 1927 (the date of Germany's next great attempt) with all the food, petrol, copper, and cotton required finally to establish the Teuton as the master of Europe and Asia.

It is known that at the present moment Germany is busily negotiating for valuable railway, canal, and trading concessions in China; that her system of commercial and political espionage has been strengthened and ramified throughout the whole of Siberia, in the Ukraina, from the Black Sea through Irkutsk and Teheran to the Far East; and that the powerful Siemens Combine, which owns all the rich copper ores in the Caucasus and in Armenia, has recently sent bodies of specially trained experts through Persia with the object of discovering and opening up new sources of mineral wealth. A mere cursory perusal of the Veroffentlichungen des Reichskolonialamates at Berlin (Publications of the Berlin Colonial Office) for 1916 is sufficient to prove that the German authorities are not only alive to the commercial possibilities of this new idea, but also to its political and military value, for these publications contain frequent reports of Asiatic exploitation and point out the important results, commercial and strategic, which will accrue.

Two other facts only need be mentioned here to prove the truth of my contention. The Hamburg-Amerika Line has suddenly revealed a suspiciously vivid interest in Persia, and has heavily invested money in certain Germano-Persian schemes. Finally a prominent German economist, by name Quessel, has declared that Germany, by controlling the Asiatic market, can become self-supporting so far as cotton and copper are concerned (Quessel, Die Deutschen Interessen in Ostasien. Sozialistische Monatshefte, 1916, 3, 4).

Martin, the Prussian writer and Privy Councillor, in a remarkable book entitled "Berlin-Baghdad," published in 1907, declared that Germany's future "lies in Asia and in the air." Perhaps the most significant chapters in this book are those which contain a close and clever exposition of the strategical value of the region between the Altai and the Himalaya Mountains known as the Gobi Desert. This region is spoken of as the "key of Asia" and the "central tableland of the Old World." Martin states that were Germany to control this vast plateau it could be developed into the most formidable air-base in the world. A thousand super-Zeppelins could be stationed there. India could be threatened on the one side, Russia on the other. But Germany must be "first in the air." Then and only then, will she be able to "hold the principal overland route to the East" and to "establish her transcontinental empire."

These are the facts. That German statesmen are contemplating a change of Imperial policy after the war is regarded in well-informed neutral circles as practically certain. The present writer recently sought the opinion on this subject of a responsible neutral politician, who said that "a transcontinental Empire from Antwerp to Shanghai would undoubtedly be Germany's reply to the decisions of the Paris Conference."

Such an empire would be not only particularly inimical to British interest; it would also be an even greater menace to the future peace of the world than would a German-Colonial empire. The question, therefore, for all Englishmen who believe in the mission and in the destiny of their race, is how can Germany's new idea be defeated?

There is only one answer to such a question, Germany must be isolated. England, on the other hand, must strengthen and consolidate her foreign alliances, and, with the help of Russia, must cut across the "Silk-street." She must be first in the air, as on sea, and she must do in Persia what she has done in India. Most necessary of all, she must capture control—and that immediately—of the Gobi Plateau, the key of the Old World, thus securing it as the future base of an Anglo-Russian air-police. The cause of the outbreak is attributed to the carelessness of the grandmother of the carpenter in handling a fire in the oven.

The company dispatched an expert a few days ago in order to make investigations and draft plans for the new enterprise, which hopes to do a big trade in ice with ships calling at the islands.

Considering the enormous increase of passenger traffic between Tokyo and Kobe, beginning March 20th the Imperial Railways will run a special express train consisting of first and second class coaches, which will leave Tokyo at 7.30 p.m. and arrive at Kobe at 9.40 the next morning.

The express train that leaves Kobe for Tokyo at 8 p.m. will not have any second class coach after March 20th, but the Railways will run from March 20th a new train consisting of first and second class coaches which will leave Kobe at 7.10 p.m. and arrive at Tokyo at 9.30 the next morning.

Mr. Maurice E. Benson, advance manager of the Bandman Opera Company, who is now in Shanghai announces that the Company is having a most successful tour and is now playing to excellent houses in Hongkong. The repertoire includes such well-known and recent London successes as "High Jinks," "Mr. Manhattan," "The Bing Boys Are Here," "The Happy Day," "The Girl from Ciro's" and "Theodore & Co.," and the casts include nearly all last year's principals and chorus, as well as Miss Addie Leigh, who was most successful on a previous visit there, and a newcomer in Miss Kathleen Doyle, who plays second lead. The Company is expected to arrive there on Friday, the 23rd instant, and to open at the Lyceum Theatre on Saturday, the 24th.

An "Association for the Study of the Nursing of Children" has been recently organized by Mr. Mamoru Kitagaki with Dr. Baron Kikuchi as honorary adviser, Drs. Tsukamoto, Karasawa, Messrs. Heizaburo Takashima, Suyeo Iwaya, Tanabashi and Kurahashi who are also interested in the problems, as active advisors. The association will commence, at the start, the study of the ways of nursing children from one year to fourteen years old, so as to apply the results obtained therefrom in practice in daily life. Among other things the chief objects which the association has now in view are the publication of an organ called "The Child" from next month as well as the holding of social meetings for the purpose of diffusing the knowledge about the bringing up of the young. The headquarters of the association are situated at Gon-nosuke-saka, Shimo-Meguro, in the suburbs of Tokyo.

CHINA ASKS TOO MUCH FOR HER WAR SERVICES

That to concede the Chinese tariff revision in return for China's entrance on the side of the Allies would work no good but evil to Japan, is the view of the "Jitsugyo no Nihon" as published in its editorial of March 15. We read:

"When the Americo-German rupture took place the United States began to make attempts to persuade other neutrals, especially China, to follow her course. In accord with the Allied countries Japan also favoured the move. This step so puzzled Chinese authorities that they did not know what course to take. China has cut off diplomatic relations with Germany and is at present making overtures regarding her entrance to the Allied group on the condition that the Powers agree to Chinese tariff revision.

The Allies in Europe and the United States have shown their willingness to the proposition and Japan seems to be inclining to the same effect. The negotiation has not taken a formal course and Japan has not yet made her avowal openly. The Cabinet states that the question has not taken any definite form whatever. That may be true, but from past experience, it is expected that China will at some future date propose the change. The last revision was made in 1902 during the days when prices were high. What was 5 per cent. then, to-day, has decreased to a great extent. That China should have another revision made is extremely advantageous to her but Japan will receive a great set back to her trade and industry. If China is to get this tariff revision as the reward for her entrance to the side of the Allies the conditions are too one-sided.

"Last year when the Allies tried to get China on their side Japan alone protested and the question was left to scatter like smoke. What material effects are there whether China joins the Allies or not? What good will China's navy and army do in the Orient? What chance is there for China to send her troops to Europe? What resources has China that will operate to the immediate benefit of the Allies? The addition of China is only an abstract one: it is another number to the opposition of the Teutonic element. Her entrance will have no influence whatever in the early restoration of peace. I rejoice in the steps taken by Japan last year, but that Japan should try to persuade China even at the point of force in accordance with the Allies cannot be called anything but foolishness.

"The revision of the present 5 per cent. tariffs is nothing but to raise the tariff rates in fact. We cannot ascertain the actual difference with the change but considering the case of cotton yarns it is estimated that the increase will be 2 per cent. The increase will no doubt swell the coffers of China and will work as a protection to the Chinese industries, but to Japan there is nothing but injury. With such a situation the Japanese Government cannot but take a contrary step to the Chinese proposal.

"The present question on tariff is one which China has been looking forward to propose for a long while. She made vent to the effect in 1913 reflecting on the articles of the Anglo-Chinese Commercial Treaty but, due to the conditional consent of Japan, the question was left in the balance. Therefore, in view of the desire of the Allies, China has again found a chance to present her will. That Japan had always placed a conditional assent while the European countries granted unconditional sanction is owing to the trade circumstances of Japan. The trade of Japan is chiefly with China and the decline thereof has great effects on the industries of Japan. While European goods compete against each other they do not come into rivalry with Chinese goods. Japanese goods, on the other hand, have to compete with European and Chinese goods. Therefore, a slight increase of tariffs will have effect on Japan's products. It creates a barrier on our goods. It will be protecting the newly established industries of China. For instance, there is the spinning industry. Not only in this line but in others also. Therefore Japan cannot take steps to please the Western countries; she must consider the future of her industries and trade.

China is suffering from financial straits and the revision will with the present condition of trade, bring in about 10,000,000 taels which will be welcome in the empty coffers of that country. We can realize the state of things by reflecting on our own troubles; we sympathize with China in this matter. China may think that Japan is opposing her without a whit of consideration; but that is not so. It is due to the trade circumstances of this country. That tariff standard is not a stationary thing, and subject to change with circumstances, forms the basis of all treaties but that does not mean that a country must favour a change. The Government must not favour the plan. If Japan is to assent Japan should ask something to balance the bargain.

"It may be one policy to ask China to levy consumption duties on some of her domestic products. The abolition of the transit duties may be another. China may subsidize and grant privileges to the domestic goods and it may be well to ask China to treat foreign and domestic goods in an equal manner. The Chinese step apparently shows the tendency to protection. If Japan enters a position in which she must concede, the Government should see that some reciprocal gains be obtained. We realize the position of China but we must look for our interests and self-interest underlies all policies of the nations."

A LUCKY ESCAPE

Mr. Katsuji Fuse, the "Nichinichi" correspondent in Petrograd, had his room hit by a stray bullet in the revolutionary disturbances there. When the People's army opened fire on the police constables, who concealed themselves in houses near the Neva River, a stray bullet hit the wall of his house facing the Nava Road, and penetrating the wall it hit a chair in the study. Mr. Fuse, however, is reported to have been out of his house at the time.

ELECTION CAMPAIGN IN WESTERN JAPAN

The election situation in the western parts of the country and especially in the Osaka district has become very interesting and active. Mr. Nakashoji, the Minister of the Department of Agriculture and Commerce, and Baron Goto, the Minister of Home Affairs have already made a trip through these parts to sound the election situation and probably to win the public sentiment to the support of the Government party. Further more Mr. Shoda, the Minister of Finance has just arrived at Osaka, and it is believed that the mission of his trip will be also a political one.

At this interesting moment, the grand campaign meeting held by the Osaka branch of the Kenseikai on March fifteenth, is very significant, and Mr. Y. Ozaki, former Minister of Justice, Mr. Taketomi, former Minister of Communications, Mr. Wakatsuki, former Minister of Finance and Mr. S. Shimada, Speaker of the House of Representatives, spoke at the meeting.

Mr. Ozaki said that the loss caused to Japan by the dissolution of the 38th session of the Diet by the Terauchi Cabinet was so immense that Japan will have to remain inactive for one year. The suspension of the national activity for one year will greatly prevent the development of the country. Since the outbreak of the European War, Japan has gained a profit of almost 700,000,000 yen but Japan was not the only country that profited by the war, and there are many other nations which obtained a much larger profit. The United States had obtained a profit of almost fifteen billion yen up to the end of 1916, which is about twenty times larger than the Japanese profit. Compared with the earning of the United States, Japan has not been making proper progress.

Japan is now in a critically important period, but it is regrettable that by the dissolution of the Diet, Japan has to remain inactive for one year. The Cabinet is not giving any consideration to the loss to be sustained by the country on account of the dissolution of the Diet, and even the public is not paying any attention to the condition. Mr. Ozaki advised the public to study the circumstances and cause of the dissolution of the Diet, and prevent any repetition of such hurtful administration.

Count Terauchi, said Mr. Ozaki, attacked the Okuma Cabinet, and not only did he criticise the foreign policy of the former Cabinet but even went so far as to read the secret resolution of the Okuma Cabinet before the meeting of Committees of the House of Representatives, to use it as a weapon to attack the Okuma Cabinet. Such an act has never been heard in the history of the country and it greatly hurts the reputation of Japan in the eye of other nations. The Okuma Cabinet put its hands in the internal administration of China, and the Terauchi Cabinet declared that it would never meddle with the internal affairs of China, but the present Cabinet has been backing the Tuan Cabinet which is supported by only a small number of the Chinese, and is adopting a policy to grant the increase of the Chinese tariff and the postponement of the indemnity payment, so disadvantageous to Japan.

So long as the Terauchi Cabinet exists, the Japanese public and the nation will sustain an enormous loss, and Mr. Ozaki declared that he was trying to destroy the Terauchi Cabinet as it is unable to handle important state affairs.

Mr. Shimada said that when the Government and the Parliament disagree, it is the public that will settle the question, and the public has the final key to solve the question. Consequently the coming election is very important for the future progress of the nation. The present Cabinet has been declaring impartiality, but it is secretly joining hands with the Seiyukai. While the Cabinet gave the instructions regarding the coming election to the Governors of Prefectures, it has not declared its policy to the public. The present Cabinet believes that the national politics should be handled by a handful of officials, and is not respecting the public. Any one who supports such a Cabinet should be laughed at.

THE FUTURE OF HOLLAND

A scatter-brained alarmist article upon the future of Holland is printed in a recent issue of the "Nihon oyobi Nihonjin." Mr. Juro Takei, the author of the article declares that the future attitude of Holland towards the present war, will have a serious effect upon Japan, and probably the outcome of the war will decide the fate of Holland.

Mr. Takei says that since the outbreak of the war, he has been keenly watching the situation in Holland, whose attitude has an important meaning to Japan. Germany who so cruelly invaded the neutral Belgium, has been respecting in some degree the neutrality of Holland for some unknown reason. Holland has managed to keep at peace by not showing any decided favour with either side in the war.

The fate of Holland has been in the hands of Germany, and it has been the intention of Germany to make Rotterdam her naval base. When Holland proposed to build forts several years ago, Germany urged England to protest against such action. While Germany has always intended to annex Holland, it should not be forgotten that Holland possesses rich possessions in the East Indies. The writer believes that Dutch East India is the cause which has made Germany refrain from laying her hands upon the territory of Holland.

If Germany wins the final victory in the war, or if Germany is thoroughly defeated by the Entente, the writer believes, Holland will confront a grave situation, and even her existence will be in danger. The recent declaration of unrestricted submarine warfare by Germany placed Holland in a difficult position.

If Holland tries to remain neutral in the war, the commerce and industry of the country will be ruined, and the people must face starvation, but if she tries to protect the land and the interest of the people, East India will be in danger. If she joins the Entente, she will meet with a similar fate to Belgium.

Germany, now becoming desperate, is likely to invade Holland and conquer Denmark, and by the use of the submarines in the British Channel, to threaten England, but it is doubtful whether Germany will give up her ambition in East India in order to threaten England. However the writer believes that Germany will pretend to respect the neutrality of Holand, and utilize Holland for her own benefit. In that case Holland will be oppressed by the military forces and submarines of Germany, and will be regarded by the Entente as siding with Germany. Thus Holland will find herself in a grave position.

The writer wonders whether the Dutch people will side with Germany in order to maintain peace in the country, or remain neutral with the determination to sacrifice the entire people and land of the country if necessary. The fighting power of Holland is limited, and she only has twelve war ships, including the coast defence boats and small cruisers, twenty-nine torpedo boats, eight submarines and 150,000 soldiers in the Army. (The writer seems to ignore Holland's defences by flooding entirely.)

With such scanty defence, Holland will be crushed by the German forces, and moreover since the outbreak of the war, a large amount of money has been spent by the Dutch to protect the nation, and she has practically been in a state of war. When the unrestricted submarine warfare is fully started by Germany (sic), the trade with East India, North and South America, and even England will be stopped, and the trade and commerce will be endangered.

These facts prove that Holland is now in a grave position. Her future step depends upon the policy of Germany, and if Germany goes one step further, there are only two ways for her to choose, either to join the Entente or side with Germany. If she joins the Entente, it will not affect Japan directly, but if she sides with Germany or remains apparently neutral giving assistance to Germany secretly, her movement will affect Japan directly.

Holland has a large possession in Asia, and her siding with Germany will cause a change of situation in Asia, and Japan will be the first nation that feels the change most keenly, says the writer in conclusion. Where the danger lies, our readers are left to guess.

BARON SHIBUSAWA IN KANSAI

In the capacity of vice-president of the mission of sympathy to the Allies, Baron Shibusawa is now energetically canvassing among millionaires in Kansai districts in order to increase the funds of the humanitarian project. Baron Shibusawa reaching Kobe from Tokyo a few days ago, addressed a gathering of influential persons invited to the meeting by Governor Seino of Hyogo at the Hyogo prefectural office on Thursday, and explained the cause of raising the relief fund for the sick and wounded soldiers of the Allies. The meeting was attended by 22 millionaires and many others, and according to the "Asahi" the Baron's appeal was so fruitful that altogether 100,000 yen was subscribed to the fund on the spot. It is also said that there are indications of many rich men responding to Baron Shibusawa's appeal. He will go to Osaka from Kobe to-day and then visit Nara, Kyoto, Ise and Nagoya.

STRIKE AT MURORAN WORKS

The strike of the workmen of the Japan Steel Works at Muroran has not yet been settled. Some 2,800 workmen still refuse to return, although 1,400 men reported for work Monday morning. The strike now has a serious aspect, and Mr. B. Suzuki, President of the Aiyu Kai, the labour organization, left Tokyo on Sunday for Hokkaido and was to arrive at Muroran this morning to try and settle the differences between workmen and employers.

General Fujii, commander of the Seventh Division of the Army who happened to arrive at Muroran on Sunday addressed the three hundred ex-soldiers among the strikers in front of the gate of the works, and advised them to return to their work, saying that simply because of personal reasons, to prevent the working of an important industry at this critical moment for the nation is not the proper act for Japanese citizens.

ON THE FRENCH FRONT

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 13.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Tuesday evening communiqué, says: "Owing to our bombardment, the enemy abandoned his main defences along the main ridge westward of Bapaume along a 3½ miles front. We drove back the rearguards in this area to a depth of a mile, and occupied Grevillers and Loupart Wood. We also made progress east and north-east of Gommecourt on a frontage of a mile."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 14.—The French afternoon communiqué reads:—"The Germans west of Maison-de-Champagne, on Monday evening, launched violent counter-attacks on Hill 185. Our barrage and machine-gun fire stopped the enemy dead. We maintained all our positions. We took 150 prisoners on Monday, and by three coups-de-main the same evening between the Avre and the Aisne brought back more captives."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 14.—Reuter's representative at British Head-quarters in France telegraphs: "Our guns and the steady pressure of our troops have compelled the Germans in France to resume their movement backward. The enemy has been pushed back, under cover of very hazy weather, along a front of between 4,000 and 5,000 metres and to a depth which, hitherto, it has been impossible to estimate, during the last 24 hours alone. "There should be important news available to-morrow," concludes the despatch.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Paris, March 14.—The great German retreat before the British is the only topic. The air is full of sensational reports that the retreat is turning into a débacle under the unremitting activity of the pursuers, who are superior both in material and initiative. It is impossible, at present, to say how far this is true, but undoubtedly the British continue advancing to the north-east and east of Gommecourt. We are probably witnessing the beginning of very great events, involving more than the fall of Bapaume.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 15.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Wednesday evening communiqué, says: "The British line has been advanced one and a half miles on a frontage south-westward and westward of Bapaume. We have made progress on a 2,000 yards frontage to the south of Achiet-le-Petit and occupied one thousand yards of trenches south-west of Essarts, which is north-east of Gommecourt. We raided the enemy's trenches to the east of Armentières and effectively bombarded his positions to the north of the Somme. To the east of Arras, two explosions were caused."

Reuter's correspondent at British Head-quarters in France says: "The British advance, which was resumed on a front of 4 miles west of Bapaume, on Monday, resulted in further development of open warfare. The strong screen of rear-guards, covering the German retreat, avoided action as far as possible. The British troops are now entering an undulating, green, wooded country. One of the most amazing spectacles of the advance, is the system of roads and railways that are creeping up under the hands of myriads of workers."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 16.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig in his Thursday evening communiqué says: "The area of the enemy's withdrawal has been extended southwards.

"We occupied trenches on a two and a half mile front south of St. Pierre-Vaast Wood to the north of Saillisel.

"We beat off strong counter-attacks east of Achiet-le-petit and improved our position in this neighbourhood.

"The enemy entered our trenches south-east of Arras and a few British are missing.

"Another raiding party was repulsed north-east of Neuvelle-St. Vaast."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 17.—The German official communiqué reads: "English detachments between Sailly and St. Pierre Vaast Wood, and French detachments between Beauvraignes and Lassigny have established themselves in trenches abandoned according to our plans."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 17.—The British troops have taken Bapaume announces a dispatch to Reuter's from the army headquarters in France.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London Mar. 17.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his communiqué on Friday evening reported that the British advance was continuing north of the Somme. The Allies hold nearly all of the St. Pierre-Vaast Wood and also the trench extending a thousand yards to the south and two thousand to the north.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 18.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Saturday evening communiqué, says: "Bapaume was captured after some stiff fighting with the German rear-guards. The town has been systematically pillaged by the enemy, who destroyed private houses and public buildings, and carried off or burnt everything of value.

"Our advance proceeded rapidly to-day, astride the Somme and southwards of the river. We entered the enemy positions on a sixteen miles' front and occupied Fresnes, Hargny Villers-Carbonnel, Barleux, Eterpigny and La Maisonette.

"To the north of the river, in addition to Bapaume, we hold Le Transloy, Biefvillers, Bihucourt, Achiet-le-grand, Achiet-le-petit, Ablainzeville, Bucquoy and Essarts. We also took Quesnoy farm, 1,500 yards north-east of the last-named place and gained the western and north-western defences of Monchy-au-bois. We carried out successful raids to the east and north of Arras, reaching the support line.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 18.—Reuter's representative with British Headquarters in France telegraphs: "Our troops are now entering Peronne."

A Paris message says the French troops have entered Roye and Lassigny, south of Peronne. They have now crossed the Roye-Noyon road.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

New York, March 18.—An official communiqué from Berlin says: "Peronne and Noyon have been abandoned."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 18.—The French communiqué, on Saturday evening, read: "On all the front between Andechy and the Oise the enemy, refusing battle, abandoned, under our pressure, the powerfully and scientifically fortified line he has occupied for two years. Our advance to-day continued rapidly. Our patrols entered the village of Roye, and we also occupied Lassigny and reached and passed, at several points to the north east of it, the Roye-Noyon road."

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

London, Mar. 18.—It is reported that the British forces have captured Bapaume, Le Transloy and Achiet-le-petit.

An official despatch from Paris announces that the French advanced, last night, to the north between the Avre and the Oise on a front of 20 kilometres and to a depth, at some points of four kilometres.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 18.—The French communiqué, this afternoon reads: "We made important progress between the Avre and Oise and are now in possession of the whole ground between our old lines and the Roye-Noyon road. From Damery to Lagny height lively engagements with detachments of the enemy's rear-guards ended in our favour, and in no wise checked the pursuit of the enemy, which continues to the north of Noyon Road.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 18.—The German official communiqué to-day announces: "Between Arras and the Oise, the Anglo-French troops occupied sections of our former positions, including Bapaume, Roye and Noyon, which we evacuated in accordance with our plans.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 19.—Events on the Western front are moving with bewildering rapidity. Well-known lines of maps are changing hourly. The Germans still cling to their formula of withdrawing according to plan. But, there is no longer any doubt about the serious breach made in Germany's famous wall of steel. The breach extends from Monchy, south-west to Noyon plateau; a distance of about 100 miles as the trenches go. All the German armies in this sector are falling back towards the Belgian frontier with the Anglo-French cavalry in pursuit.

There is naturally no question of a general German collapse, but the retreat is certain to have a demoralising influence on the harassed Germans, especially as the main direction of the Anglo-French offensive threatens the most vital part of the German line, and likewise strikes at the lines of communication.

The Allies are now within eight miles of Saint Quentin and five miles of Cambrai. The capture of Noyon was a very important tactical achievement, since it breaks the nose of the German salient menacingly pointed at Paris.

The Germans have left an appalling scene of wanton destruction behind them. Everything possible was destroyed, except wire entanglements and trenches, which in many cases were intact. But this is nothing to the crowning iniquity of poisoning the wells which were filled with arsenic.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Paris, March 19.—The Sunday evening communiqué says: "The French advance continued on a front of over 60 kilometres between the Avre and the Aisne. North of the former, French cavalry have entered Nesle. The French advanced 20 kilometres north-east of Lassigny in the direction of Ham. Further south, our cavalry and light detachments occupied Noyon on Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. Between the Oise and Soissons, the whole German first line, with the villages of Carlepont, Morsam and Nouvronvinjre fell into our hands. We have occupied Crouy."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 19.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Sunday evening communiqué says: "We have occupied Nesle, Chaulnes and Peronne and pressed the German rear-guards back. We have advanced several miles during the last 24 hours to a maximum depth of 10 miles on a front of 45 miles from southward of Chaulnes to the neighbourhood of Arras. We have also occupied over 60 villages."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 19.—The French, keeping close touch with the enemy, continued to advance without stopping. They have now reached Ham and Nesle and are in touch with the railway at several points. They have occupied Geuscarg, north of Noyon, and captured a second German position east of the Oise. During the last three days, they have liberated about 100 townships and villages.

San Francisco, March 20.—The general retreat made by the Germans from Chaulnes and the Oise was very rapid, but a Berlin communiqué claims that the German retreat on a front from Arras and the Aisne was made systematically. According to a Paris communiqué, the French have occupied more than 100 villages in the fierce fighting of the past three days.—"Asahi."

London, Mar. 15.—The official report from Mesopotamia reads: "Our advanced detachments are now 30 miles upsteam from Bagdad. The small-arms factory at Bagdad was found in good repair. Our guns lost at Kut-et-Amara in 1916 have now been recovered."

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Mar. 17.—Western Front. The enemy near Staniaslavoy attacked the Russian positions and succeeded for a time in seizing a part of the trenches, but was dislodged by the counterattacks of the Russian reserve troops and repulsed to his trenches. Several attempts in approaching the Russian front at different places were performed by strong enemy's scout parties, but were all repulsed.

Firing continues along the Rumanian front.

Caucasus front. The Russians in the Kelmanshah direction dislodged the Turks from their fortified positions near the Halshkian summit west of Kermanshah. Reconnaissances, successful for the Russians, continue on the rest of the front.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Petrograd, Mar. 18.—The Russian forces have entered Van, 145 miles south east of Erzerum.

Van is the chief town of the vilayet of the same name, in Armenia, Asiatic Turkey. It is situated near the east shore of Lake Van, 145 miles S.E. of Erzerum. It has manufactures of cotton goods and moiré. Its citadel crowns an isolated ridge, on which appear cuneiform and other inscriptions. The suburb Baghlar extends over the plain below. Van is believed to occupy the site of Thospia, the capital of the kingdom of Biaina. Lake Van extends about 80 miles E to W and from 20 to 40 N. to S.; it is salt and has no visible outlet.

London, Mar. 18.—The Mesopotamian official communiqué from General Maude reads: There was fighting on the right bank of the Tigris, on Wednesday morning, when the Turkish rearguard was driven from the bridges to a position covering the railway station at Mushaidie. We captured the position early on Thursday morning. By Friday the whole enemy division was in full flight towards Samarra, 70 miles N.N. W. of Bagdad."

London, Mar. 18.—A British official dispatch from Mesopotamia says that the Turkish army in Mesopotamia is making the general retreat towards Samarra.—"Asahi."

CAMPAIGN IN MESOPOTAMIA

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, March 14.—There is an under-current of real concern in Germany in the press comment over the capture of Bagdad. The "Cologne Gazette" says it is a great success and it would be a mistake to under-value its importance.

The "Koelnische Volks Zeitung" remarks that the British have won an indubitable success, although it is only transitory and will not affect the decision of the war. It is a heavy blow against Turkey, and painful for the Quadruple Alliance.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 13.—The official communiqué from Mesopotamia reads: "We maintained close touch with the enemy southward of Bagdad on the evening of the tenth. During the night, the enemy evacuated the entire line of trenches. We advanced in close contact and there was a general advance on both banks of the Tigris.

"We occupied the railway station at dawn, and then the city. The cavalry advanced in pursuit of the enemy, and, after slight resistance, occupied Kahdimain (Khanikin?) taking 100 prisoners.

The gun-boats then took up the pursuit. "Since February 23, the Turks have been destroying and removing everything of possible value from Bagdad. Our booty, nevertheless was considerable. The enemy abandoned 500 wounded. We counted between two and three hundred dead and took 300 prisoners on the left bank of the Tigris on March 10. The inhabitants of Bagdad gave us a hearty welcome."

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, March 14.—The Russian forces have occupied Kermanshah, a flourishing town of Persia, capital of Persian Kurdistan, near the right bank of the river Kerkhah.

The town has a population of 30,000 and is a big centre for the manufacture of carpets and weapons.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 17.—An official report from Mesopotamia says that after establishing posts on the left bank of the Tigris, thirty miles upstream, General Maude attacked the right bank fifteen miles north of Bagdad. After a night march on Wednesday the British drove back the enemy three miles. The Turks continued to retreat until dusk when the British occupied a portion of the town of Bakabah on the right bank of the Diala.

MR. JOHN BUCHAN'S WEEKLY SUMMARY

[H.B.M.'S DESPATCH THROUGH KOKUSAI]

London, Mar. 18.—The developments in the past week on the British front in France were of considerable importance. The capture of Irles was only very skilfully conducted. The fact that approximately three hundred prisoners were taken proves that the enemy was unprepared to evacuate the position. Also the very hasty subsequent evacuation of the important Loupart Wood shows that the advance was pressing more closely than he anticipated. The German retirement from Loupart and other positions dominating Bapaume was particularly interesting because it settles a doubtful tactical point. The enemy cannot stand for an appreciable time on any part of the ridge running westward from before Bapaume to Monchy. It is not a continuous ridge but a possible line of defence carrying several commanding points. Since he retired from the strong eastern end the rest of the positions must become increasingly untenable. The same is true of Bapaume. Everything suggests that the enemy's retirement is likely to continue, also his rearguards to be uncomfortably hustled by the rate and persistency of the British advance. At Irles a considerable body of his troops was caught before it could withdraw; also an immensely strong position at Loupart Wood was abandoned so hastily that, contrary to German custom, the dugouts were left intact and a minimum of destruction performed by the defenders before retreating. The British guns are coming forward rapidly despite difficulties of the ground and the Germans are finding it increasingly hard to resist the pressure.

In Mesopotamia, the British advance north of Bagdad continues. Very evidently its unexpected speed has turned Turkish defeat at Kut into a rout. To start from an advanced base in the neighbourhood of Kut and cover one hundred and thirteen miles of difficult country in exactly a fortnight in sufficient force to capture Bagdad at the end, is a feat of generalship and organization of a very remarkable order. Much forced marching was thereby entailed with subsequent fighting performed in blinding dust-storms. The broken enemy so hotly pursued that he could make no prolonged stand anywhere. The only serious affort to check the advance was on the strong carefully prepared line of the Diala River whence the enemy was ejected by brilliant tactics and the impetus of the attack of the troops who splendidly withstood the strain of many days most ardous marching.

Bagdad is valuable as being in the heart of Mesopotamia and a junction where river traffic between north and south meets the rail traffic from the east through Persia. It practically commands the caravan route in a north-easterly direction to the Russian frontier, thence eastward by the only easy road through the Median Mountains to the Persian plateau. On this road the Turkish forces are retiring westward before the Russians. They can no longer retreat to Bagdad their original base and their situation is almost precarious.

ONLY A BLOCKHEAD!

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, Mar. 19.—Herr Maximilian Harden, the Editor of the weekly paper, Die Zukunft, in a remarkable article, says that only a blockhead could deny the importance of the fall of Bagdad and the changing power in Asia. He scornfully refers to the gushing hopes of submarinism, and points out that the ruthlessness has merely resulted in two of the greatest republics in the world, the United States and China breaking off relations with Germany. He foreshadows a triplet of America, China and Japan vigorously intervening in the war from now on.

CHINA SEVERS DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS WITH GERMANY

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

Peking Mar. 14.—The severance of diplomatic relations with Germany has been definitely announced.

By special request the Entente Ministers and Charges d'Affaires called at the Wai-chiao-pu at half past two this afternoon when it is understood Mr. Wu Ting-fang announced the rupture with Germany. A number of questions connected with this step were discussed. The neutral Ministers were received an hour later while it is noteworthy that the American Minister was received after the neutrals by himself. Thus there are now four diplomatic groups in Peking, the Entente, the Central Powers, the neutral and the American.

The German Minister was handed passports at noon accompanied by the following covering despatch from Mr. Wu Ting-fang, the Minister for Foreign Affairs: In reference to the new submarine policy of Germany the Government of the Republic of China dictated by a desire to further the cause of the world's peace and to maintain the sanctity of international law, addressed a protest to Your Excellency on February 9th and declared that if contrary to its expectations, the protest should be ineffectual the Chinese Government would be constrained to sever the diplomatic relations at present existing between the two countries. During the lapse of a month no heed has been paid to this protest of the Chinese Government in the activities of the German submarines which have caused the loss of many Chinese lives. On March 10th a reply was received from Your Excellency in which it states that the German Government is willing to open negotiations to arrive at a plan for the protection of Chinese life and property. Yet it declares that it is difficult. Germany therefore is not in accord with the object of the protest and the Chinese Government to its deep regret considers its protest ineffectual. Therefore, the Chinese Government is constrained to sever the diplomatic relations at present existing with the German Government.

"I have the honour to send herewith a passport for Your Excellency, members of your Legation staff and their families with a retinue for their protection while leaving Chinese territory. As regards the German Consular officers, this Ministry has instructed the different Commissioners of Foreign Affairs at treaty ports to issue to them similar passports for leaving the country."

The Foreign Office here received from Peking on the 15th an official report to the effect that on the afternoon of the 14th the Foreign Minister, Dr. Wu Ting-fang, in an audience with the Entente Ministers, informed them that the Chinese Government had decided to break off diplomatic relations with Germany and would hand passports to the German Minister and Consuls. Further informations stated that a few hours after Dr. Wu had parted with the Entente representatives, he notified the German Minister, Admiral von Hintze that the relation between China and Germany had been severed, and at the same time handed to him and to his official suite their passports. This act of the Chinese Government brought to an end the question whether China would break with Germany over the submarine tactics of the Kaiser's navy,—the question which took China nearly a month and a half to decide.

However, the climax of China's hostile cause against Germany is yet to come. A high official of the Foreign Office, in reviewing the situation of the 15th, expressed himself as expecting to see China soon joining the European war on the side of the Entente Powers. He was of the opinion that China's diplomatic rupture against Germany was only a preliminary to her predetermined policy of actually siding with the Entente in the titanic struggle.

According to another high official, there was a reason why China separated the question of breaking with Germany from that of participating in the war. China wants, he said, to seize this rare opportunity to put forth a series of demands on the Entente Powers as a condition for her openly coming out on their side. For this reason,—and for that reason only,—she is taking her time before she obtains the assurance from the Entente Governments that they will agree to grant her wishes. And now that she has gone so far as to diplomatically break with the German Government, she is expected within a few days to approach the Entente Governments with the request to open negotiations on the concessions she demands,—namely, the revision of her Customs duties, the postponement of the Boxer payments, financial assistance, and other items.

A recent Peking dispatch said that Premier Tuan Chi-jui stated that the Entente Governments had confided in him their willingness to give them favourable considerations in case China actually joins the war. The Foreign Office here was reticent on the subject when asked whether such was the case. There is, however, every reason to believe that a certain understanding as to how China's demands will be dealt with has been decided upon among the Entente Governments.

"No discord exists among the Entente on that question. I can tell you that much," said an official on the 15th.

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

Shanghai, Mar. 15.—The "North China Daily News" says: "With all the dignity the situation requires China has set her seal of disapproval upon Germany's iniquitous war on neutrals. She has publicly aligned herself with the cause of right and justice. There is something extraordinarily impressive in the great deliberation with which the government proceeded, and the sudden, swift decision with which she forestalled any treacherous act by putting guards on board the German ships in the Whangpoo. The Republic of China is to be warmly complimented on the address with which China acted. The situation has been an extremely difficult one and even yet the merchant classes have not realized its importance to China of the step her leaders have taken, but all parties in Peking have united to support the Government as never before and the Republic thus makes its entry into the great international affairs of the world with a decorum and circumspection which cannot be surpassed. We are convinced that China will never regret what she has done."

The Foreign Office on the 16th announced that it had received from Peking the text of the proclamation issued by President Li Yuan-hung dated March 14th with regard to the diplomatic rupture with Germany. It reads as follows—

Since the outbreak of the European war our country has strictly observed its neutrality. Unexpectedly, however, on February 3 this year the German Government notified us to the effect that after that date its newly decided blockade programme would endanger the navigation of neutral merchant vessels within the lines of certain limited zones. In view of her method of attacking merchantmen which had already damaged the lives and property of our people to no small degree, Germany's present submarine programme would seriously increase the danger. From the standpoint of upholding the public law and protecting the lives and property of our people we lodged a vigorous protest with Germany and we made it known to her that unless she altered her policy our country would be constrained to sever the existing diplomatic relations.

In spite of the deep desire on our part that Germany would not prove obdurate but would maintain friendly relations, unfortunately she did not cease to practice her policy of submarinism though a month had passed since we protested. Numerous merchant vessels of various nationalities have been sunk and a number of our people killed. It was entirely against our wish that the German Government, on the 14th inst., unofficially replied that it could not retract its blockade tactics.

In respect, therefore, to the public law and in the interest of our peoples' lives and property we proclaim that the existing diplomatic relations with Germany are to be broken off from to-day.

Shanghai, Mar. 15.—Profiting by the reports received from America of the scuttling of German ships on the eve of the breaking off of diplomatic relations between America and Germany, the Chinese authorities have exercised a little "intelligent anticipation" here in Shanghai. Yesterday armed guards were placed on board the six self-interned German ships in the Huangpu river.

The German crews of the six steamers were sent on shore, and there was evidence last evening that the further precaution was to be taken of removing three ships from the lower river to a point above the city near the Arsenal. Similar steps were taken in the United States when that country severed diplomatic relations with Germany.

The six German ships in port are the Albenga (2,769 tons), the Deike Rickmers (2,567 tons), the Sikiang (1,016 tons), the Meidah and Meilee (river boats of 1,150 tons each) and the Fortuna (112 tons). All except the small wooden craft Fortuna have been at anchor here since the beginning of the war, while she came in from Yangtze ports on July 3, 1915. There are no interned German gun-boats here, although there are two at Nanking. Other enemy ships in port, says the "N. C. Daily News" are the Austrian-Lloyd strs. Bohemia, China, and Silesia, all fine liners that formerly ran between Japan and Trieste and which have been here since September, 1914; but they are Austrian, not German.

The Chinese navy officials had charge of yesterday's proceedings on the river, and the guards placed on board the German ships were Chinese navy men from the ships of the first cruiser squadron in the charge of Admiral Lin Pao-yueh, who succeeded Admiral Li, who lost office at the time of the naval turn-over in connexion with the Yunnan rebellion. There are four cruisers and a transport in the first squadron and the cruiser Haiyung took an important part in the steps that were taken yesterday.

In the Wayside-Yangtszepoo district were the Albenga, the Sikiang, and the Fortuna. The Haiyung moved up stream and then a small, white, armed yacht flying an Admiral's pennant,—a vessel without an English name but commonly known as "the Admiral's yacht," went alongside the German ships, and formally notified the German officers that wireless instructions had been received from Peking during the night that the Chinese navy was to take possession of all German craft.

The German crews left the ships quietly, having no alternative with an armed guard on board, an armed ship alongside, and a cruiser standing by. Chinese officers with details of sailors and marines were placed in charge of the ships. All this took place yesterday forenoon, beginning at nine o'clock, and the whole thing was carried out systematically without a hitch.

Late yesterday afternoon, the tugs Vulcan and Victoria were seen alongside the Sikiang, and there was a report that the three vessels in the lower river were last night to be towed to the upper river near where the Deike Rickmers has been for about a year. It is interesting to note in this connexion that the second ranking officer of the Chinese Naval Department has been in Shanghai for some days,—Admiral Tsao Chia-hsiang, Vice-Minister of Marine, who was sent from Peking to take charge of defensive arrangements at Shanghai.

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

Shanghai, Mar. 18.—The prompt and most efficient action taken by the Chinese Naval Authorities in seizing the German vessels Deike Rickmers, Sikiang, Albenga, Meilee, Meigah and Fortuna has been fully justified by the discovery of four bombs of high power in the cylinders of the Deike Rickmers, three in the engine-room of the Sikiang and two under the midship boilers of the Albenga.

Cylindrical bombs about 4½ inches in diameter by 6in. in length with time-fuses and percussion caps already filled, some hidden with dastardly cunning, were discovered. The machinery was dismantled and parts are missing.

Great credit is due to the manner in which the naval authorities by active measures frustrated the German preparedness.

It is reported that an explosion on a German gun-boat at Amoy has caused internal damage to the vessel, which, however, was not sunk.

The French Consul-General has closed down the German Government subsidized engineering school in the French Concession, without incident.

ANTI-GERMAN RIOTS RIFE IN RUSSIA NOW

Serious Demonstrations Are Reported From Petrograd And Moscow

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

London, March 15.—A despatch from Petrograd confirms the previous intimations that there has been a successful revolution there and at Moscow. The Duma, backed by the army, is said to control the situation.

M. Stürmer and other prominent people have been thrown into prison.

For the past few days conflicting news have been reaching here in connection with the outbreak of a revolution in Russia. Owing to the strict censorship exercised over telegraphic communication by the Petrograd authorities, the reports reaching here are too meagre to penetrate the true state of affairs there. From the Foreign Office here nothing could be learned yesterday.

According to a reliable source of information, however, the situation in Russia has been assuming a serious aspect for some time and now appears to be reaching its height.

One report went so far as to say that the revolutionists had already taken possession of the Tsar's Winter Palace in Petrograd, while another was to the effect that they had only occupied a court house. The gravity of the situation is doubled by the fact that the revolutionists are being joined by the troops on home duty and they are participating in the uprising.

While the latest dispatch that the Emperor Nicholas was ready to secede the throne to the Crown Prince was doubted by those well informed on Russian affairs, they admitted that a storm was raging there which is not likely to clear until the revolutionists demands be satisfied. Unless the air clears, martial law is certain to be declared in Petrograd, Moscow and other leading cities.

The cause for which the revolutionists are contending is said to be their determination to oust from the Government the Minister of Home Affairs, M. Protopopoff and his followers who exercise a powerful influence in Court circles. M. Milikof, the foremost radical in the Duma, who was lately reported to be at the head of the movement against this power behind the Throne, is believed to be leading the present revolutionary cause. It is generally felt that some radical reorganization of the Cabinet must take place before the tumult can be subdued.

London, Mar. 16.—His Majesty Tsar Nicholas II, the Emperor of all the Russias, has abdicated. The Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch, brother of the present Tsar, becomes regent.

From an authoritative source it was learned on the 17th that the latest reports received confirm the early press dispatch to the effect that Tsar Nicholas had abdicated in favour of his 12 year old son the Tzarevitch, the Grand Duke Alexis Nicholaivitch.

At the Russian Embassy reporters sought vainly for further news regarding the situation in Russia on the 17th. However, according to reliable reports to a certain quarter here, the following facts were obtained which throw much light on the turbulent state of affairs existing in Russia for the past few days.

The internecine political strife in Russia had lately been assuming a gloomy aspect, giving a general impression that a storm was apparently nearing. The attitude of the Conservatives towards the progressive elements of politicians was that of bitter hatred, causing these politicians to become so antagonistic against the old school of government officials as to regard them as if they were their avowed enemy. It had been expected for some time that something radical was bound to take place at the coming session of the Duma.

When the Duma opened its session on February 27, however, there was no sign of disturbance. It was not until March 8 when uneasiness began to be felt. On that day the workingmen employed in various factories in Petrograd went on a general strike. The strikers, somehow or other, enlisted the sympathy of the troops stationed in the Capital and soon riots began to run high in several sections of the city. Driven by hunger caused by unemployment the workers and their families marched in line up and down the streets, crying "Give us bread, give us bread!" Sympathizers soon joined the demonstration.

Stores closed their doors and the traffic system was forced to suspend work The situation seemed to forebode some awful event nearly on the verge of explosion.

Premier Golitzin, therefore, at once called to his official residence all the Ministers of State, the Presidents of the two Houses, the Mayor of the Capital and several other important officials and in conference they unanimously adopted an emergency measure to satisfy the people's demand for more food. But in the meantime a group of politicians dissatisfied with the Government had taken advantage of the disorder and manage to turn the indignant attention of the rioters towards the Government. The riots now take colour of a political nature.

On March 9, the employes of the Government Arsenal also joined the strikers, adding more seriousness to the already grave situation. This was followed next day, March 10, numerous small conflicts between the strikers on the one side and policemen and gendarmes on the other, causing not a few persons to be killed or wounded. On the same day the military authorities in Petrograd issued a proclamation prohibiting any sort of meeting of the people and instructing the police to use arms in dealing with the recalcitrants. But this act of the military authorities only added oil to the fuel.

On the following day, March 11, in disputing the crowds, policemen fired their guns killing many persons. On the 12th, a portion of the troops threw themselves on the side of the strikers and the situation became almost uncontrollable. With red flags in their hands they marched through the streets, firing on policemen, attacking the Arsenal, setting a courthouse on fire, destroying several jails, and releasing prisoners.

On March 13, a large portion of the Imperial Guards and three regiments of ordinary troops joined the rioters. They took possession of the old fortress opposite the Winter Palace. Throughout the city the condition became almost anarchical and the demonstration assumed a more political and revolutionary aspect, many rioters intruding into the Duma and yelling for progressive deputies with the cry of "Down with the Government!"

Meanwhile the Duma was not slow to act. Already on March 11, the Duma telegraphed to the Tsar, who had been at the Grand Headquarters in the front, that the state of affairs was critical and that the only way to save it was to form a responsible Cabinet. At the same time, a temporary special committee was organized, consisting of twelve deputies of the progressive school, in order to regain and maintain public order. The Emperor, upon learning the crisis at the Capital, hastily made his way to Petrograd but so far it is not known whether or not he reached there. On the other hand, a body of representatives of the Duma is reported to have started to meet the Emperor on his way back to the Capital for the purpose of requesting him to grant the decision of the Duma and also to persuade him to recognize the sign of the time for establishing a responsible Cabinet. The Duma has also arrested several members of the Cabinet. It is also effectively putting down the rioters by making more free distribution of bread and other food-stuffs.

The special Committee of the Duma on March 14, in the name of the President of the Duma, M. Rodsianko, notified the Commanders-in-Chief of both the Black Sea and Baltic fleets that the former Cabinet ceased to exist and now the Governmental authority was in its hands. The committee also notified to them and proclaimed to the people of Russia that though they must all co-operate in reshaping the internal administrative system of the nation the newly formed Government is determined to prosecute with an utmost vigor the present war against the Kaiser's alliance to a successful conclusion.

New York, March 15.—The political situation has been growing chaotic hourly in Russia for the past several days and the citizens who suffer from the lack of foodstuffs actuated by the imperfection of traffic communications have been vehemently attacking the Government in co-operation with the Duma. For fear of the rioting assuming serious proportions, the authorities resorted to extraordinary expedients at last and simultaneously ordered the Duma closed. On March, however, the Duma resolved to disregard the order of the dissolution and also to continue the session. A special committee, of which M. Rodsianko is the chairman, was appointed and established a provisional government; the provisional government locked up the whole of the Cabinet members in co-operation with the troops which have taken the side of the Duma. It was on March 13. On that day the provisional government issued a notification to the public, troops, banks and railways urging the restoration of order. On March 14 public peace and order being completely restored the Duma announced that it was maintaining order in the Russian capital in harmony with the troops.

San Francisco, March 16.—A Berlin official report states that when the Duma met on March 9 rioting took place and the Ministers were threatened. Prince Golitzin instantly ordered the House to sit in camera but in the secret meeting M. Rodsianko demanded positively that the Tsar dismiss the Golitzin Ministry. Prince Golitzin made a reply but as soon as he left the rostrum the order dissolving the Duma was proclaimed.—"Nichinichi."

San Francisco, Mar. 16.—Sukhomlinov, the discredited former Minister of War, who was dismissed suspected of being a spy in the pay of the German government, has had his shoulder-straps shorn off and been thrown into prison. The fate of the ministers of the Cabinet still remain unknown despite the rumour of the release of some of them. The Entente Allies and their sympathizers are now gratified.

A dispatch reaching the British government from Sir George Buchanan, the British Ambassador in Petrograd, states that although the Tsar has decided to abdicate his decision is not carried out yet.

In the House of Commons, Mr. Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, stated that the Tsar had abdicated and the Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch became Regent.

H.M. Tsar Nicholas II. is now at the Detached Palace in Pikov and the Tsarina at the Tsarskoe Selo Palace.

Fifteen united nobility bodies in Petrograd have all participated in the revolution. The new Russian cabinet has decided on the issue of order of amnesty for political convicts. The arrest of German spies and traitors is in steady progress.—"Nichinichi."

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

Petrograd, Mar. 17.—Tsar Nicholas having abdicated on behalf of himself and the Tsarevitch in favour of Grand Duke Michael at midnight Thursday, Michael himself abdicated at 2.30 o'clock Friday afternoon, thus bringing the Romanof dynasty to an end.

Petrograd, Mar. 17.—Tsar Nicholas upon his abdication, issued the following manifesto:

"After almost three years of great strife, Russia is beset by a new and painful trial. Internal troubles menace the ultimate issue of the war. The honour of our armies and the future of our cherished country oblige us at all cost to conduct the war to a victorious end.

"The enemy is at his last gasp. The moment is approaching when we Allies will definitely crush our foe.

"At this decisive moment in the fate of Russia, our conscience prompts us to facilitate the organization of our people for the realization of a rapid victory. Therefore, by accord with the Duma, we consider it for the best to abdicate the crown of Russia and depose our supreme power. Undesirous of separation from our well-beloved son, we bequeath our inheritance to our brother, Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch, blessing his accession to the Throne."

The Emperor transferred the supreme command of the armies to Grand Duke Nicholas Nicolaivitch.

Grand Duke Michael issued the following declaration.

"My brother has confided in me a heavy task, transferring to me the Throne at a moment unprecedented in war and internal troubles. Convinced that the good of our country should be our first consideration, I have adopted a firm resolution to accept the supreme power only if such be the desire of the people, expressed in a plebiscite through an assembly of constituents.

"Therefore, I implore all Russians to submit to the decree of the provisional government and with the least delay, on a basis of universal suffrage, establish a form of government."

While strict discipline must be maintained while on duty, all social restrictions will be removed from the soldiers, who will enjoy all the social rights shared by all citizens.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 17.—Three days of silence from Russia were broken here by a dispatch sent from Petrograd March 13, describing the revolution which resulted in the Duma, aided by the army, assuming control of the government and arresting the reactionary Ministers and former Ministers whom the people have long suspected of pro-German sympathies which were responsible for the shortage of food and lack of enthusiasm in conducting the war.

The popular discontent which was smouldering March 10 flamed up the following day and became conflagration March 12 when street fighting, in which soldiers fought other soldiers and people, ended in the troops, including guards and naval forces, joining the revolutionists.

The action of the police in firing on the crowds, which most of the troops refused to do, was resented by the soldiery. There were fierce battles at various points between the police and the troops. Many police stations, as well as detective headquarters, were burned with all the archives relating to political personages and organizations.

The Duma met secretly Sunday and resolved Monday to continue sitting in defiance of the order suspending the body. President Rodzianko telegraphed the Tsar, insisting on a change in government. He also sent messages to the commanding generals at the front, soliciting their support in persuading the Tsar. The generals replied affirmatively. Deputations of troops, accompanied by armed citizens, arrived at the Duma Monday and took charge of the public buildings. The fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul and the prisons were seized.

Arrests included M. Sturmer, former Premier; General Sukhomlinoff, former Minister of War; M. Protopopoff, Home Minister; and the president of the Council of the Empire. A national cabinet was formed with Prince Lvoff as Premier.

Premier Golitzin, Home Minister Protopopoff and other officials were arrested and brought to the Duma. The majority were released but Protopopoff and the Minister of Justice were detained in the Tauris Palace. All motor cars in Petrograd were commandeered, but will all be returned. Order is now the watchword of the day.

The new Foreign Minister, M. Miliukoff, returned to Petrograd March 15. He declared the new government considered it indispensable that the abdication of the Emperor should be final and the regency should be temporarily entrusted to Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch.

"Such is our decision," he said. "We consider it impossible to alter it."

He contradicted the rumors that the Tsar had been arrested. He stated that according to latest reports His Majesty was at Pskoff and the Empress at Tsarskoe Selo.

"The problems which we are going to solve," continued Miliukoff, "consist of the re-establishment of a power capable of obtaining victory. The great crime of the late government was in throwing the country into complete disorganization, subjecting it to the hardest of trials. This might have dangerously affected the issue of the war. The increase in popular discontent caused the revolution, which was almost the shortest in history, and accompanied by less bloodshed."

"It enabled the people to regain confidence in the government's strength. It will increase popular enthusiasm and multiply national forces, bringing about a quicker victory for Russia and the Allies."

During the revolution the Duma was the centre of an enormous moral force. Every hour brought new signs of the continual growth of power derived from the forces of national representation.

A later dispatch from Reuter's correspondent at Petrograd further described the events leading up to the revolution. It says that for weeks people were obliged to stand five hours in forty degrees of frost waiting to buy bread. Even then they were frequently unable to obtain any. Potatoes were eight times higher than usual, while other foodstuffs were prohibitive. With the Premier a nonentity it is not surprising that the food situation produced dismay.

Although thousands of Cossacks and mounted infantry patrolled the Nevsky, the people were undeterred in their demonstrations. As they cheered the troops some of the latter doffed their caps and cheered back, but to this eloquent sign of the times the authorities remained blind.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Petrograd, Mar. 17.—Yesterday afternoon the banks reopened. Drastic measures are being taken to restore order. All malefactors who resist arrest are liable to be shot at sign.

The Provisional Government has issued a a manifesto to the subjects of Russia which states that the Cabinet's policy is as follows: An immediate general amnesty will be granted to all political and religious offenders, freedom of the press, freedom of association, freedom of labour organization, freedom to strike. The extension of these liberties to be granted to officials and troops so far as military technical conditions permit; the abolition of all social, religious and national restrictions; immediate preparation shall be made for summoning a constituent Assembly based on universal suffrage, which shall establish a governmental regime and a constitution for the country.

A most important conference of the Executive of the Duma and delegates of workmen has been held, lasting all night long. Finally an agreement was practically reached concerning the transition period prior to the elections for a constituent Assembly. The Executive insisted on the interests of the war and the necessity of the complete establishment of order before the elections.

M. Kerenski, who is a Socialist, has accepted the portfolio of Justice on condition that the constituent assembly is convened at elections based on universal suffrage.

The British, French and Italian diplomats and Military Attachés have informed the Executive of the Duma of their readiness to recognize the Executive as the sole authority in Russia and to enter upon business relations forthwith.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 18.—The incongruity of the Tsar's manifesto and the actual situation in Petrograd is becoming manifest. Any idea of an imperial regency seems to be fading. The latest telegrams from Petrograd show that popular feeling strongly inclines toward a constitutional republic, of which Prince Lvoff is momentarily the head.

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, Mar. 18.—The Russian Government has sent the following telegram to Russian representatives abroad:

Latterly events, due to national indignation provoked by the hopeless abuses and criminal nearsightedness and incompetency of the old régime, have occurred. Only sane popular feeling facilitated and shortened the crisis, resulting in an unanimous rallying, in less than a week, of the population and army under the revolutionary flag, with the minimum number of victims ever yet recorded in similar, previous, important upheavals.

By a manifesto issued at Pskov, on March 15, Tsar Nicholas II abdicated, for himself and his son, in favour of Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch, who, on March 16, also renounced supreme power pending the summoning of a National Assembly on a basis of universal suffrage to establish a form of government and framed on the fundamental laws of Russia. In the meantime an appeal is issued to the nation to submit to the authority of the provisional government.

The programme of the present government, in this most crucial internal and external crisis for Russia, comprises the correction of all previous defaults, and an assurance of order and preparation of conditions to enable the sovereign desire of the people to freely manifest itself in the future.

The Government assumes all previous international agreements and, guided by democratic principles, will contribute to the liberty and development of good relations between all nations.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Petrograd, Mar. 18.—The Government has telegraphed to its representatives abroad, stating that the Government, which assumes power at the moment of the gravest external and internal crisis in Russian History, is fully conscious of its immense responsibility. It will apply itself first to repairing the overwhelming errors and quickly ensuring order and tranquillity in the country and making final preparations that the sovereign will of the nation may be freely pronounced on its future lot.

In regard to the foreign policy, the Cabinet will remain mindful of the international engagements entered into by the fallen régime and will honour Russia's word, and carefully cultivate relations uniting Russia and other friendly allied nations.

The Government is confident that these relations will become even more intimate and solid under the new régime in Russia, which is resolved to be guided by democratic principles and the respect due to small and great nations, to the liberty of their development and to the good understanding between nations.

The Government again lays emphasis on the declaration that Russia did not will the war, but was the victim of pre-meditated aggression. She will continue to struggle against the spirit of conquest by a predatory race aiming at the subjection of Europe to the intolerable shame of the domination of Prussian militarism.

Faithful to a pact which unites her indissolubly to her glorious allies, Russia is resolved, like them, to assure to the world an era of peace at all costs—peace on a basis of stable national organization, guaranteeing the respect for right and justice. She will fight on their side against the common enemy until the end, incessantly and unfalteringly.

The Government will devote all its energies to preparation for victory and will apply itself to the task of repairing as quickly as possible the errors of the past which hitherto have paralyzed the aspirations and self-sacrifices of the Russian people, firmly convinced that the marvellous enthusiasm of the whole nation will multiply its strength ten times to hasten the final triumph.

Petrograd, March 18.—The provisionary government, which is temporarily assuming supreme rights on behalf of Grand Duke Michael, pending the organization of the national representative assembly to be elected for the settlement of the new form of government, is gradually executing its work of the formation of the new Government. Order is being speedily restored in Petrograd and the newspapers resumed their regular appearance to-day. The street railways will be running as soon as the damaged lines are repaired and all factories are expected to commence operations again. There are still signs of disorder among garrison forces, but the morale of the troops will be re-established before long.

All reports from the front, bringing echoes of the revolution among the troops in the front, are highly encouraging and favourable to the revolutionists. The movement advocating a republican form of Government is strongly supported and gaining ground. The business of provisioning has been transferred to local and municipal assemblies, which are exercising supervision of the entire stock of foodstuffs arriving in Petrograd and distributing them among the citizens at ordinary market prices. About 8,000 volunters are detailed in Petrograd and Moscow, and are maintaining order. The situation is still grave.—"Asahi."

London, Mar. 18.—The Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch, in his declaration, said, "I will assume the regency of Russia until the constituent assembly decides on the form of the government to be adopted, and if chosen I will ascend the Throne of the Russian empire."

The revolution in Russia has been welcomed in the business and financial circles in London, with the result that the rate of exchange of Russian money has regained its normal tone.

The Washington correspondent of the "Times" wires that the American people have been given a very deep impression by the revolution in Russia. They are sincerely gratified under the impression that the revolution has upheld the spirit of liberty and promoted the interests of the Allies. Order has been restored at last in the Russian capital and the streets have become quiet, says a dispatch from Petrograd.—"Asahi."

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, March 19.—The Provisional Russian Government issued the following manifesto, in the morning:

"The great deed accomplished by the Russians has upset the old régime and a renovated Russia has been born after long years of strife. The national forces were inspired by the October 1905 manifesto, which promised Russia constitutional liberties never realized, and the first and second Dumas were dissolved. The Government being impotent to crush the national will decreed on June 3, 1906 that it would suppress part of the legislative rights granted to the people, gradually suppressing them altogether in the following ten years. The country was again cast into an abyss of arbitrary administrative absolutism and all attempts to make power listen to reason were in vain. Then, the great world war found our country in the face of moral decadence of power. Disunited from the people power was indifferent to the destinies of the country.

"The heroic efforts of the army and appeals of the National Assembly, united in the face of a common peril, were powerless to unite the former emperor and government with the people. Finally, the people took the power into their own hands and, by a revolutionary movement, created a Provisional Government, whose sacred aim is to lead the country along the luminous path of civil organisation.

"The Provisional Government is sure the patriotic spirit, which the people manifested in the upheaval, will also inspire the brave soldiers on the field of battle. The Government will do its utmost to conduct the war to a victorious end and will faithfully observe all international alliances and treaties.

"It will consider its first duty is to afford the people the possibility to elaborate the future régime and fundamental laws by summoning an Assembly based on universal suffrage together with representatives of the brave army. Prior to the convocation of the Assembly, the Government will facilitate all citizens bringing into evidence their needs in order to assure their spiritual wants, and is convinced of the entire support of the people to this end."

HOW THE TSAR ABDICATED

Harbin, March 20.—The executive committee of the Duma and the members of the provisionary government had audience with the Tsar at Ruskoff, between Petrograd and Riga. General Ruzusky, the Commander-in-Chief of the North Army, M. Frederic, ex-Minister of the Household, and M. Narieshkin, Chief of Board of Ceremonies, were in attendance. The representatives of the new Government submitted to the Tsar the particulars of the events in Petrograd and explained the uselessness of sending troops from the front to the capital because all troops coming to Petrograd would join the new Government. They told him that the provisionary government had decided to order all troops coming to the capital to return to their posts. The Tsar asked what he had better do, to which they replied that the Tsar should quit the throne. After this brief conversation, the Tsar of all the Russias said that he could not part with his son and would accordingly abdicate in favour of his brother Grand Duke Michael, and saying that he would retire from his exalted position in favour of himself and his son signed his name on the document produced by the representatives of the new Government.—"Asahi."

PARIS PRESS PLEASED AT NEWS FROM PETROGRAD

KOKUSAI-HAVAS

Paris, Mar. 18.—The news of the changes in Russia is being received favourably by the French press. "Le Journal des Débats" says: "France has nothing to fear at new men coming into power. On the contrary, she has much to hope from them." "La Liberté" says: "A new era opens for the Allies, who, we are sure, will know how to avoid excesses contrary to those from which by energetic efforts they have just freed themselves. In the past six days the shouts of the revolutionists in Petrograd were accompanied by cries of 'Long live France'; 'Long live England.' That is to say the new government is heart and soul with the intimate maintenance of the Entente, and the intensive pursuit of the war. We could not wish for more nor better signs."

The Paris edition of the New York "Herald" says: "With all the Allies, the new government in Russia will receive a most favourable welcome. To our enemies it means war to a finish. They boasted they could, through their intrigues, drive Russia to a separate peace, but we learn that the revolution was made among the cries of 'Long live France'; 'Long live Great Britain.' German influence is ruined for ever in Russia in this new world which is just beginning."

M. Polybe, in "Le Figaro" writes: "So many great events accomplished within a week. The purest of revolutions and one of the most magnificent events of History. And what a defeat to Germany! After the Marne, Neva! After Verdun Moscow!"

"Le Temps" says: "Russia enters upon a new era, which will be salutary to her, and will give her plentitude means of action. Russia has already shown her prodigious facility for adaptation. With her face to the enemy, she will know how to adapt herself to reforms which her safety requires; and how to forge new arms while fighting."

The French press sees the Tsar's disappearance from the political scene with a certain feeling of grief, and recalls the services rendered by him to the Entente cause, and the great initiatives taken by him in the past, and foremost of all at The Hague Congress.

The French press is unanimous in commenting favourably on Russian events. M. Alfred Capus writes in "Le Figaro": "No doubt is possible regarding the nature of the revolutionary movement. It is national and patriotic in its origin as well as in its outcarrying. All men suspected of having endeavoured to hamper intensified war are violently set aside. Germany will have thus awakened up in all races the powerful instinct of conservatism. She will succumb through unanimous revolt."

M. Gustave Herve in "La Victoire" says: "What new forces there will be for the Russian Army, which, henceforth will have behind it modern, honest, patriotic administration able to supply profusely material and ammuniton! And what enthusiasm in its ranks, when officers and soldiers will feel over them the great enlivening breath of liberty!"

WASHINGTON TAKING STEPS TOWARDS WAR

Washington, March 20.—Many steps have been taken to get ready for any emergency arising out of the submarine menace. President Wilson has ordered the Navy Department to expend $115,000,000 to speed up the naval construction. The first and second classes at the Naval Academy will be graduated at early dates to provide 374 additional naval officers.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, March 20.—In view of the ruthless sinking by German submarines of the three American merchantmen, it is unofficially admitted that a state of war virtually exists between America and Germany. Technically the United States remains in a position of armed neutrality.

President Wilson contemplates calling an immediate session of Congress to receive his Address requesting authority to adopt aggressive measures against the enemy submarines.

Merchantmen are already arming for defense. The next move must be to send out warships to search for submarines and clear the trans-Atlantic lanes.

San Francisco, Mar. 20.—It is reported that President Wilson has decided to take drastic offensive measures against Germany and is now preparing to do. He has called for tenders for the speedy construction of 200 motor-boats and submarine-destroyers. Secretary Lansing stated that the American-German relations are now at a most serious crisis.

Unfounded rumours say that revolutions are about to break out both in America and Canada. It appears that these groundless rumours have come from somewhere in Berlin, but where these fabrications originated can not be ascertained clearly.

According to a dispatch from Washington, munition factories in the States are feared to refuse to grant priority to government orders placed with them and also to demand unreasonable prices.—"Nichinichi."

THE LUSITANIA ATROCITY

KOKUSAI-HAVAS

Paris, Mar. 18.—The "Journal de Geneve" has the following remarks anent the breach of diplomatic relations between China and Germany: "Germany was foremost in the foreign trade with China. The latter was one of the three great exotic territories, over which Germany had dreamed to establish domination. Morocco and Asia Minor were the others. And now America is endeavouring to utterly destroy Germany's last ambitions outside of Europe. The torpedoing of the Lusitania has produced terrible consequences which nobody in Berlin had been able to foresee."

On March 14, the editor of the "Koelnische Volks Zeitung" wrote: "If China ranges herself on the side of the Entente, it will have great economical importance. Considerable German assets will be lost. The object at stake is to strike a mortal blow at our commerce."

New York, Mar. 19.—The railroad strike has been declared off. The railroad managers, early this morning, authorized the mediators appointed by President Wilson to make whatever arrangements were necessary with the railroad Brotherhoods.

Their decision was precipitated by the news that three American merchantmen had been sunk by submarines.

Later.

The railroad agreement has been signed by the managers and representatives of the union men. It grants an eight hours' day. Most of the provisions of the Adamson Law stand even if the Supreme Court declares the Law unconstitutional.

THE REVOLUTION IN RUSSIA

Since the outbreak of the present war, many internal disturbances have happened among the Entente powers, but they were not so serious as the recent revolution in Russia. The revolution in Russia did not break out spontaneously, says the "Yorozu". The Russian public has desired the absolute destruction of the German militarism ever since the beginning of the war, but among the Peers, officials and others, there were many who were pro-German. It was because of the pro-German elements in Russia that the independent peace conclusion between Russia and Germany has been so often discussed.

The peers and the public have been always standing for two different principles, and the situation became very dangerous. At the end of 1916, a certain pro-German Russian killed an anti-German Russian, and M. Protopopoff, the Minister of the Home Affairs shielded a pro-German offender. These facts angered the public of Russia, and even a movement to oust the pro-German cabinet members was started by Parliament.

However the group of the Peers made M. Protopopoff remain in his position, despite the fact that the Minister of the Home Affairs was the centre of criticism by the public, and appointed Prince Golitzin as the Premier. Consequently the majority of the public began to entertain a deeper hatred against the Cabinet.

Uneasiness and small disturbances were seen everywhere in Russia, and the Government tried every means to suppress the public. When the Parliament was recently opened, the Government was unable to suppress the opposition and was obliged to close the session.

The "Yorozu" says that detailed news of the revolution has not reached Japan, and it is unable to predict the effect of the revolution upon the future of Russia, and the present war, but the paper believes that as the Parliamest and the Army are the chief factors of the revolution and their object is to destroy the pro-German Cabinet, it is undisputable that the revolutionary party is powerful. Judging from the fact that the Ministers of the Cabinet had been placed in prison, and the Army has taken possession of the Palaces, it is evident that the revolutionary party is winning its end.

On the other hand, if the revolution fails. the peace obtained by the government will be for only a short period, and before long more revolutions will follow. The victory of the anti-German revolutionists will make the Russians more firmly determined to win final victory in the present war, and will be favourable for the Russian campaign.

The "Yorozu" says that the political situation of Russia is difficult for foreigners to understand and in the past revolutions and changes of conditions have happened most unexpectedly, but the present revolution is different from similar events of the past. The majority of the Russian people, and especially those living in the districts near the German border have a deep hatred for the Teuton race, and the cause of the present war being a conflict between the Teutons and Slavs, it was commonly believed that as long as the war continues, there will be no revolution in Russia, but the pro-German officials did not realize this condition and endeavoured to obtain their personal gains, bringing the present revolution upon themselves and the nation.

The paper regrets that the Imperial Court of Russia is reported to have been attacked by the revolutionists, but it believes that it was merely a plot used in order to destroy the pro-German power. The "Yorozu" is confident that the general public of Russia has no enmity against the Imperial Court.

However, the happening of the revolution at this moment is regrettable, and Germany may attempt an attack on Russia while the condition in Russia is not settled, but as Germany has not yet started such an attack, it is not likely that the German forces will attempt to take the opportunity to enter further into the Russian territory. But the paper thinks that it will be necessary for Russia to be well prepared for any attack from Germany.

The Japanese Government is not regarding the revolution as a serious affair, but the "Yorozu" declares that the present Russian revolution should not be slighted, and if the government maintain such an opinion, they will some day regret it. Since Russia joined the Entente, the love of freedom and justice has been greatly developed among the Russians, and it is a tendency which cannot be forgotten by any.

The "Jiji" in noting that the Russian Emperor has abdicated and the new government is now being organized in Russia, says it is not proper at this moment to discuss the causes of the revolution and criticise the recent movement in Russia. However the paper hopes that as Russa is one of the important factors in the present war, the new government will be speedily organized and peace and order restored throughout the country as early as possible.

Whatever cabinet governs the country, and whatever class of people controls the government is not important to Russia at this grave moment. and the foremost question for the country is to keep up the military campaign against Germany even though the internal disturbances and troubles confront the nation and public.

The "Jiji" says that there are two problems which the Russian government should give their utmost attention at the moment of the change of the political situation. The persons who organize the new cabinet should at once endeavour to restore peace and order in the country, but the most important work at the beginning, is to satisfy the populace of Russia, by distributing food equally to all people. The scarcity of food in Russia has been one of the grave problems of the country recently, and it was the direct cause of the present revolution. Not only is food scarce in the country, but the proper means of transportation to distribute it equally to all parts of the country, is not yet established in Russia, and while in one locality there is an over production, in the other, the people suffer from inability to obtain food.

The new government should endeavour to enable the import of food stuffs from other nations and construct railways and other means of transportation to carry food. If the new government fails to satisfy the people by giving them sufficient food equally throughout the nation, another disturbance will surely arise before long, and if such a revolution starts again, it will be more fierce than the one Russia had a few days ago. Consequently, the "Jiji" declares that the problem of distributing food to the people is one of the most important questions to be solved at once by the new government.

The next item that the "Jiji" regards important in the present situation of Russia, is the possibility of the rise of the reactionists. However the paper hopes that those bureaucrats who have been thrown down from their seats of power by the revolution, will not take any reactionary movement recklessly, considering the national situation and the effect of such an action in the development of the European war.

History tells that in almost all cases of revolution, there rises the reactionary movement. The bureaucrats who enjoyed power in the Russian Court and Government for many years, have been thrown down, and many of them have been imprisoned, in the present disturbance, but it does not prove that the power and influence of these bureaucrats has been totally destroyed. They might cause a great reactionary movement to regain their power and position, and when such a movement is started the pro-German elements in Russia will back the movement. Whether such an attempt will succeed or not, it will cause another disturbance in Russia, causing riotous disorder throughout the nation, and such a condition will be not only regrettable for the sake of Russia, but will be disadvantageous for the Entente powers.

Even though the Bureaucrats have such an ambition and influence to cause the reactionary movement, the "Jiji" hopes that they will stop to consider the benefit of Russia and the Entente powers, and will not attempt another disturbance. Their ambition and hopes should be held until after the end of the present war, which is the first problem of Russia.

TSAR WILL RULE AGAIN?

However, the "Tokyo Asahi" does not believe that the public of Russia will end the reign of the Romanof family, and thinks that the Tsar Nicholas II will again rule the country.

The national character of the Russian people is characterized by its extremeness, and they are unable to take a middle course. At all times and in any events, their opinion is clearly defined, although there is a tendency that often they go too far.

The "Asahi" considers that the abdication of the Tsar was not made merely for a personal abdication, but was in order to destroy the pro-German influence in the court. When the pro-German influence in the court is destroyed by the revolution, and a new cabinet is organized to protect the freedom of the people, there is no reason why the Russians should desire the ruin of the Romanof family. The paper believes that merely from the telegraphic report of the abdication of the Tsar, to judge that the reign of the Romanof family has ended, is premature. The paper has never heard from the mouth of the leaders of the revolution and the central figures of the new cabinet that they desired a change of the form of the Government.

The news that the ruler of the future will be selected by election, may sound strange to the people of other nations, but the custom of electing the ruler is not new to Russia. The Emperor Romanof, the founder of the Romanof family was elected by the public as the ruler of the nation, 305 years ago at Moscow. Those who judge that the President of the Republican Government will be elected, from the report that the ruler will be elected do not know the history and customs of Russia.

As Moscow which has been regarded as the centre of the Great Russian principle, was the headquarters of the recent revolution, the change of the form of the Government is against the desire of the revolutionists. The "Asahi" hopes that England, France and Italy will help Russia to end the present revolution peacefully and successfully.

WELCOME TO CHINA'S ENVOY

The metropolitan newspapers extend their welcome to Mr. Wang Tah-sieh, the special envoy from China bearing the message of friendship from the President of the Chinese Republic to H.I.M. the Emperor. The "Tokyo Asahi" says that the despatch of such a special envoy from China to the Imperial Court signifies the friendly relations between the two countries, and Mr. Wang should be welcomed with the highest courtesies as not only does he bring the message of the President to the Imperial Court, but he has been long a devoted friend of Japan.

The Japanese are rejoicing to receive Mr. Wang, and the Imperial Court, the City of Tokyo and the public have planned an elaborate programme for his reception. The paper hopes that this friendly attitude of Japan and China towards each other should be kept even after the conclusion of the present war. When the war ends and the peace terms are discussed, it is evident that many troublesome diplomatic questions will arise in China, and it is hoped that at that critical moment, the relations between Japan and China should be kept as to-day.

Many envoys and messengers have been exchanged between Japan and China in the past, and they have been all envoys of peace. But the mission of these peace envoys should not be restricted to the mere expression of good will and friendship. True friendship means the assistance of the other when difficult diplomatic disturbance happens, and the sending of peace envoys means far more than mere congratulation and expression of good will.

The apparent mission of the peace envoys is to pay respect of one nation to the other, but the "Asahi" says that the envoys should study the sentiment and hopes of the people of the other nation in order to bring the sentiment and idea of the two nations into one and the same channel.

At the present, the situation between China and Japan, makes it absolutely necessary that the people of the two nations should know each other, and cooperate in their works. The paper hopes that the mission of Mr. Wang will touch upon these points, and he will endeavour to bring the two people much closer in friendship. When the official reception of Mr. Wang is ended, the paper hopes that he will meet every class of the Japanese public and study the opinions entertained by the Japanese public regarding China.

If the coming of Mr. Wang results only in the mere exchange of courteous words, the despatch of the envoy will be meaningless.

CHINA MAKING PLANS TO DEAL WITH GERMANS

China severed diplomatic relations with Germany on the fourteenth but it is believed that it will take some time before she will declare war. Dr. Sun, Mr. Hun and others who opposed the rupture of diplomatic relations, are reported to be keeping quiet since the decision has been passed by the Senate and the House of Representatives. However, it is believed that when the problem of declaring war against Germany comes up for final discussion, there will again arise a strong opposition, and consequently there will be many difficulties to be overcome before deciding to join the Entente.

What attitude China will take towards Germany and the German merchantmen now that she has severed diplomatic relations, is the problem that is confronting the Chinese Government. The Chinese Cabinet may have decided upon the measures to be taken after the rupture, but no information has been received as to the future attitude of China.

There are at present about two thousand Germans in China, and as it is customary to allow harmless and peaceful people, who have no connection with politics and military affairs to reside in the country under the similar conditions, such Germans will be allowed to reside in China.

But there are many Germans who are employed by the Chinese Government, and it is not yet fully decided what China will do with these Germans. A report states that the German Customs Collectors and Assistant Collectors will be asked to resign, but those holding the minor positions in the Customs service will be only placed under surveillance. It is believed that the discharge of the entire German employees in the Customs service will cause no small difficulty in the handling of the Customs affairs, and the Chinese Government intends to discharge these employees when proper preparations have been made to replace them with others.

The Te-Hua Bank will be allowed to continue its business for some time. Even in Japan it was only last September that the German Bank in Yokohama was finally closed by the Government after two years since the beginning of the war. The immediate suspension of the bank will cause financial difficulty both to the Government and to the public, and it is unlikely that the Chinese Government will close the bank for some time.

The six German ships at Shanghai were placed under guard of Chinese sailors as soon as the rupture was decided upon to prevent sabotage and unless the Germans attempt destruction, the steamers will not be confiscated until the declaration of war is made.

The Chinese Government has decided to take over the German Settlements in China at once, but there are several obstacles against enforcing the resolution immediately. According to the treaty made after the Boxer trouble, the Chinese Government is not allowed to send the Chinese troops within twenty Chinese miles of the Tientsin settlements. In order to take over the German settlement at Tientsin and keep it under Chinese control, it may become necessary to send Chinese troops. The Chinese Government has been desiring to change the terms of the treaty, and it is probable that it may propose the change of the treaty to the Entente powers.

The German Consuls in China have right to conduct trials of German subjects, and it is still doubtful whether the Dutch consuls which look after the German interests in China will succeed to these. The Chinese Government is now seriously studying the problem, as two opinions are expressed on the subject.

The Government at Peking is considering the steps to be taken in future, and the details of the policy are not yet decided upon . But even when the entire policy is decided, it may not be able to carry out all the plans at once. It is not likely that even though the rupture of diplomatic relations has taken place, the attitude of the Government towards the Germans residing in China will take a sudden change. However, the spiritual effect of the severance with Germany will be great, and the general conditions will make China join the Entente before long.

TROUBLE IN THE WIND AT MUKDEN IS REPORT

A Mukden dispatch says that General Chang Tsuo-lin, the Military Governor of Mukden, during the night of the 18th secretly called out 4 infantry battalions, 2 cavalry squadrons, an artillery battery with 4 field guns and 4 guns of smaller calibre, and a commissariat train, and ordered them to march on Hsinmintung. It is rumoured that the Peking Government had ordered Military Governor Chang to dismiss General Tang, Commander of the 53rd Division, in accordance with the terms of the settlement of the Chengchiatung affair agreed upon recently between Japan and the Chinese Government. General Tang is, however, not willing to obey the commands of the central government and intends to revolt against the Central Government. General Feng, the Commander of the 28th Division, is determined to assist General Tang against the Military Governor. Hence this mobilization.

Another Mukden dispatch states that the situation in Hsinmintung has begun to assume an alarming aspect with signs of disquiet since the morning of the 19th. The Japanese residents of the place have all withdrawn and taken shelter in the Japanese post office. General Tang, the Commander of the 53rd Division, has withdrawn from his official residence and settled down in the vicinity of the Japanese Consulate with his troops. The authorities of the Japanese Consulate acting on the order of the Consulate-General at Mukden, requested General Tang to leave the place and go elsewhere. General Tang is collecting carts and wagons, perhaps for the purpose of withdrawing in the direction of Heishanhien after plundering the city of Hsinmintung with his troops. Owing to the turbulent situation, the Japanese Consulate-General at Mukden dispatched a party of police under Sergeant Miyagi to Hsinmintung on the night of the 19th. The Military Governor of Mukden has mobilized 4 infantry battalions, 3 cavalry battalions, 3 mountain and one field artillery battery with 6 guns. These troops were to fall in on the bank of the Chulieuho and were expected to march on Hsinmintung in the afternoon of the 20th.

In this connection a well informed authority says that the origin of the trouble between Military Governor Chang Tsou-lin and General Tang, the Commander of the 53rd Division, which according to the above dispatches seems to have reached a climax and nearly resulted in an armed clash, originated in the collision between the troops of the 28th and 53rd divisions and the police authorities of the military governor's office at Mukden, who are always at variance with each other. Efforts of the Central government and some influential mandarins in Peking at conciliating the contending parties have all proved futile, and the situation has since gone from bad to worse. General Feng, the Commander of the 28th Division, some time ago left Mukden and went to his divisional headquarters at Kuangning with his staff officers and was planning a revolt against the military governor of Mukden. General Tang, also displeased with the measures of the military governor, sent his family to his native place and coming to Hsinmintung was secretly contemplating a revolt against the military governor, keeping in communication with bands of mounted bandits. It is said he had decided to make an attack on Mukden at the first available opportunity.

The opportunity has come through the order of the Peking Government, which ordered the military governor to hand General Tang the order of dismissal as a means to atone for his responsibility in connection with the Chengchiatung affair. Military Governor Chang, acting on the order of the Central Government, handed General Tang the order of dismissal, when the latter stood in revolt with the troops under his command. As the troops of the 28th Division under the command of General Feng and a large number of mounted bandits are giving support to Tang and his mutineers, it is thought that the task of quelling them will be no easy task. According to a later dispatch the troops under General Tang have commenced looting the city of Hsinmintung and many Chinese, both officials and private, are fleeing by train from the city to Mukden.

MR. KATO HAS GOOD TIME NOW

A story of a wounded Japanese volunteer in England on whom a shower of friendly sympathy has been poured is sent to the "Jiji" by its London correspondent. This, remarks the "Jiji," once more shows how much our ally appreciates the services of the gallant Japanese volunteers of whom there are now not many on European battlefields.

"Some time ago," writes the "Jiji" correspondent, "a certain lady at Nottingham wrote to me about a Japanese volunteer at the garrison hospital there which she had visited a few days before. She told me that the Japanese soldier cannot speak even a single word of English so that not only were surgeons and nurses prevented from attending satisfactorily to his wants, but the volunteer himself was tormented with ennui. The lady who sent me this letter is practically a stranger to me: she is only a friend of my hostess. Therefore it is the more apparent how greatly she sympathized with the Japanese volunteer placed in this awkward situation in a foreign hospital. After many lines of information, she suggested that I should do what I thought proper to make my wounded fellow countryman a shade happier.

"Moved by fellow-feeling I at once wrote to the anonymous Japanese soldier at the Nottingham garrison hospital, and there was an immediate response to my inquiry. The career of this wounded volunteer which remained unknown to the hospital and others has been explained at last. First of all, his name is Kensei Kato, age about 40. The life of this veteran soldier has been eventful. By profession he was a priest in a certain Buddhist temple, and in the Russo-Japanese war he fought as a private on various fronts in Manchuria. Mr. Kato returned home in triumph from the battlefield, but soon he had the misfortune to lose both his parents and wife.

"He abandoned the priesthood out of despair, it is said, and some eight years ago left Japan for Canada as a solitary immigrant. It is not necessary to tell how the years passed for him in Canada, but when the present war broke out he, on a sudden, joined the Japanese volunteer corps in Canada and was eventually sent to the front in Europe. He participated in historic battles in the Somme theatre of war, where he was wounded. Mr. Kato who has practically recovered from the wounds has been recently removed to Nottingham to a Canadian hospital, and since I wrote to him first he has sent me many letters which are in themselves his autobiography. I have translated into English various interesting passages from his letters and sent them to the hospital, where he is now being cared for. These translations, says Mr. Kato, have caused surgeons and nurses to understand him clearly and he thanks me for more friendly and cordial treatment being accorded him in the hospital now.

"A few days ago London papers printed stories about this Japanese volunteer, and this has made Mr. Kato more popular, for since his story appeared in the papers, invitations to dinner, tea and what not came to him in showers from various quarters. Many ladies and gentlemen have called on him in the hospital with presents to inquire after his health. This kindness has deeply impressed Mr. Kato and made him convinced of English hospitality and sympathy. I myself have met him several times and to my eyes he is always a man possessed of a calm and resigned spirit. The English language is still a Babylonish jargon to Mr. Kato but despite this he manages to amuse his host or hostess at a tea party or dinner party given in his honour. He is very anxious to return to the fighting at the front."

TOKYO A.F.C. AND NORMALS DRAW

For the third time this season the above teams have played a full 90 minutes at soccer, without arriving at any decision. On the other occasion of their meeting, Tokyo A.F.C. won by 4-3. We apologize for the error in last issue which gave the victory to the School.

Wednesdays game was just as close as the previous ones and quite exciting from start to finish. The School certainly had all the luck and a partial referee on their side, which went a long way towards saving them from defeat. In the first four minutes, a long shot was fumbled by Duer and put the school one up. But this put Duer on his metal and he made no more mistakes afterwards, getting his side out of a hole on every opening. After 20 minutes play, Wood kept up his average by scoring a goal for the visitors. This put a lot of heart into the team and the Tokyo A.F.C. forwards kept up the pressure and bad shooting alone saved the School. Just on the stroke of half time, Wood again had the goal at his mercy, but the referee blew his whistle for the interval! In the second half, the visitors had all the best of the game, but failed to get past the opposition though on another occasion Wood was pulled up for offside with no less than four men between him and the goal not to mention the ball having gone to him off a school player. We mention these two instances only as showing what a partial referee can do to put players and onlookers in a bad temper. In this case the whistle was never sounded until Wood had got past three of the players and only had the goalie to beat.

MR. TOYOHIKO MAKINO MEETS DEATH IN RIOTS

Mr. Toyohiko Makino, representative of Takata Shokai, at Petrograd was shot and killed by a stray bullet on the morning of the twelfth. The details of the accident have not yet reached Tokyo, but according to the Takata Shokai office, it is believed that Mr. Makino was probably at some official headquarters or in the vicinity on the morning of March 12th, when he was hit by a stray bullet.

Mr. Makino had been stationed in Russia since the beginning of the European war, and handled many war orders from the Russian Government. It had been his daily custom while in Petrograd to visit the Government offices on business affairs, and he was on his usual round of calls, it is said, when he found himself within the battle scene of the revolution.

Mr. Makino was thirty six years old, and a graduate of the Tokyo Higher Commercial School. He leaves his parents and two daughters to mourn his loss.

LEAGUE FOOTBALL

It was some minutes past the arranged time when Mr. Deveson blew his whistle for the start of the League match between St. Joseph's alumni and the Tokyo A.F.C. on the 17th. The game was played on the grounds of the Y.C. and A.C. in Yokohama, kindly lent for the occasion. A very fair attendance was present, including many ladies. The Tokyo team were without Wood, Klingen and Heaslett, Slater, Aveyard and Kinnes taking their places. The School team had a full side on this occasion and were considerably stronger than when they played Tokyo last time and suffered defeat by 2-1. On this occasion not a goal was scored on either side so that there is still some uncertainty which team will win the cup for the year. At present writing we believe Yokohama C. and A.C. have one more match to play in the League. If they win that the ultimate destination of the cup will depend upon which Club has the better goal average between Yokohama and Tokyo.

The game of Saturday was at no time particularly exciting until the last ten minutes when Tokyo on many occasions seemed certain to score. Two good chances were missed in the first half by the Tokyo forwards and the Goddess of Football appeared annoyed, as after that neglect, the visiting quintette could do nothing right. At no time did the school forwards cause Duer much anxiety and after half time Tokyo had by far the best of the game. The forwards, however, had a day off and that is all that need be said.

The teams played as advertised and, as noted above, Mr. Deveson officiated as referee.

COMING BASEBALL

Negotiations have gone on successfully and the talk of the coming of the University of California has been realized. The Keio University manager says that the team is expected to leave San Francisco in the early part of May arriving in Japan about the latter part of the same month. The team will play about eight games in this city and then proceed to Osaka where another series will be played between the Keio University. The Berkeley team is one of the strongest collegiate aggregations on the Pacific coast and a tough tussle is expected. The Keio University has already played two games against the Californians; one in 1911 when the Keios won and another in 1914 when the Keios lost after a hard struggle for thirteen innings the score being 3-2.

This trip is the first of the University of California and in return it is expected that the Keios will make a visit sometime next year. The year will be a busy one for the sporting world of Japan. Just about the time of the arrival of the Californians the Far Eastern Olympics will be taking place. The Keio University has declined to enter the meet and instead is inviting the above named team. Autumn awaits with another treat to the fans here with the combination from Missouri University, one of the strongest in the Middle West. The team will be invited by the Meiji University. Negotiations have not been completed but it is expected that matters will be arranged satisfactorily.

We have received the following notification from the Superintendent of Foreign Mails:—Notwithstanding Germany's declaration of indiscriminate attack by U boats upon merchantmen since the 1st of February, the despatches and arrivals of the Siberian Mail still continue undisturbed.

However, delay or irregularity is inevitable in the present situation. The latest arrival took 33 to 48 days from London or Paris. This suggests itself that there is little difference between the Siberian Mail and the American Mail in respect of the time occupied in transmission.

An office for examining any new inventions before application for patent rights is formally filed with the Patent Bureau of the Home Department will be established shortly. The plan for this purpose has been of long standing but has only recently come to receive support from the Government authorities.

Two offices of this kind it is reported will be established, one each in Tokyo and Osaka and will undertake to examine new inventions to prove their usefulness and perfectness for the purpose of making suggestions to the inventors as to the points to be improved upon. The new institutions, it is said, have been promised Government subsidies for their maintenance.

HOW CHINA CAN DEAL GERMANY'S DEATH-BLOW

Now that China has severed her diplomatic relations with Germany the next step she has to decide is the declaration of war on Germany and siding with the Entente Powers. The question whether China will stop at breaking with Germany without going the length of declaring war, as in the case of the United States, or whether she will declare war on Germany and actively side with the Entente Powers still remains unsettled, latest informations from China casting no light as to the development of the situation. The question has apparently made no progress yet towards final settlement, perhaps owing to the dissension of views and opinions on the subject, which has since evoked many pros and cons among Chinese statesmen and politicians in and outside the government. Dr. Sun Wen, Mr. Tang Shao-yi, Dr. Wu Ting-fang, the Foreign Minister, and other influential statesmen are known as strongly opposed to the idea of China's taking such a strong stand as to declare war on Germany and to assume openly a hostile attitude by identifying herself with the Entente Powers. Such measure they think will involve China into a disastrous vortex of war, and only serve to plunge the republic into a serious national calamity and eventual ruin, and according to their opinion, it is more for China's welfare and happiness that she should stop at merely severing diplomatic relations with Germany after the example of the United States. This is believed to be the opinion shared by Dr. Wu Ting-fang, the Foreign Minister, who is reported to be strongly determined to retire from the portfolio of foreign affairs, supposedly because of the difference of his opinion which is not in accord with that now gaining ground among the members of the cabinet and other influential statesmen. True, the opinion of most of the influential Chinese statesmen, both in and outside the government, is inclined in favour of China's joining the Entente Powers as a participant in the war. According to one version, China hesitates to make up her mind about the question, because she is doubtful of the true intention of Japan and is under the vague apprehension that Japan does not like China's joining the Entente Powers and will oppose her participation in the war as she did the year before last. Still the trend of the development of the situation tends to indicate the unavoidability of her going a step further and taking the measures already decided upon, though informally.

In the event of China's practically joining the Entente Powers and declaring war on Germany, which from all indications seems to be but a question of time, the German gunboats Fatherland and Otter, detained at Nanking, and the gunboat Tsingtao, detained at Kuangpo near Canton, will no doubt meet the same fate as the German warships Prinz Eitel Friedrich and Kron Prinz Wilhelm, which have been detained on the Atlantic coast of North America since the outbreak of the war. (A Hongkong dispatch reported that a few days ago the crew of the gunboat Tsingtao at Kuangpo attempted to blow up the ship with some explosives, and the engine room has been completely wrecked). At the same time, the Japanese warships Toba, Sumida and Fushimi, which were interned at Shanghai soon after the outbreak of war between Japan and Germany, will be armed and detailed in the South China waters and particularly on the Yangtze-kiang, for the protection of Japan's trade interests and the lives of Japanese residents in those regions, for which purpose three warships belonging to a certain standing squadron in home waters will be dispatched to those waters as reinforcements.

China's participation in the war as a member of the Entente Powers will spell doom to the fate of the German influence deeply implanted in various parts of the republic and will clear the track for the establishment of the rights and interests of the Entente powers and especially of Japan, in economical interests in particular. One scarcely need dwell upon the immense field of activity of German commerce and industry in China, which is too well known to make especial mention of here. First of all, the rupture between China and Germany will sooner or later result in the driving away of German influence in China's administrative affairs, in which hitherto the Germans held an important part and preponderant sway. The number of Germans employed in various departments of the Chinese government is very large. Though no accurate calculation is available, according to the latest investigations, the German officials in the service of the Chinese government comprise 5 military officers, 39 civilians, 202 Customs officials, and 90 other officials including mining engineers, railway experts and salt administration officials, making a rough total of 336. Of course, the above figure does not come up to the exact figure there being some decrease owing to the fact that some of the number have since left the government service, this being especially the case with military officers. Among the number given are included Major Jinkermann, formerly adviser to the President's office, and Captain Breihoffel, formerly instructor of the army officers' training school, who both decamped from China and escaped into India and Turkestan or Turkey some time ago. Again among the Customs officials, some were arrested by the Japanese army in the Tsingtao campaign and are detained in Japan as prisoners of war. Except those few absentees, the above figure is the nearest approach to the exact figure that obtains. The greatest percentage of the German officials employed in the government service of China is found in the maritime and other customs offices, where even at present there are numerous Germans whose numerical superiority by far surpasses the number of other alien employes and ranks only next to the Chinese officials. Such being the case, if the service of those Germans are dispensed with and they be replaced by Japanese and other nationals it will open up the way for the advancement of interests of foreign powers other than Germany in Chinese administrative affairs, in which Japan will also have a proper share. This is one of the good effects to be brought about by China's joining the Entente Powers in the war, and this cannot but add to the good and interests of the Entente Powers and securing their foothold in China, in political significance. As regards the disposal of the German settlements in Tientsin, Hankow and other places, the matter will be decided at China's own discretion and no foreign countries have any right to meddle in that respect.

To sum up, the only way to crush German commercial superiority in China, in which Germany is no second to any foreign power and is destined to attain further and greater development, is to destroy the foothold of German economic activity in China at the present moment, for which purpose China's participation in the war on the side of the Entente Powers will offer a fair opportunity, an opportunity never to be missed and never to be regained if missed. Should China join the Entente Powers, she will at once become party to the resolutions of the allies' economic conference at Paris and hold herself bound by the resolutions passed by the conference. In which event China will take measures to positively bring upon Germany all economic pressure by prohibiting the trading and communications of Chinese with Germans. China can stop the payment of the balance of the Boxer indemnity amounting to 145,500,000 dollars to Germany and Austria, and the payment of political, railway and industrial loans due to Germany to the total amount of 264,040,000 dollars, or suspend the business of the Deutsch-China bank which has been actively carrying on various investments in Chinese commercial and industrial enterprises with a capital of 7,500,000 taels since 1889, or adopt a tariff war policy on Germany. By adopting these and such measures of economic pressure, China will be able to annihilate all German commercial and economic influence so strongly implanted in China. Over 230 German commercial establishments in various parts of China including many large German trading firms in Shanghai, Tientsin, Hankow and other places, will thus be doomed to bankruptcy and compelled to close their doors, leading to the final wiping out of the far-reaching German commercial system and organs in the entire length and breadth of China.

Germany has hitherto, prior to the outbreak of the present war, been the chief supplier of arms and ammunitions to China, which trade Germany has all but monopolized for many years. Even since the outbreak of the war, quite recently Germany has supplied China with Mauser rifles, Krupp quick-firing guns, Marsin mountain guns and Maxim machine guns and other firearms, together with ammunition. The quantity of the guns and ammunitions supplied by Germany has been by no means insignificant, the value of the supplies amounting to upward of 3,000,000 yen for the three years between 1911 and 1915, and adding to that figure the quantity of the ordnance secretly supplied and, therefore, not included in the customs returns the total will exceed 5,000,000 yen. The following comparative figures of the arms and ammunition supplied to China by Germany and Japan between 1910 (The year when the first revolution broke out) and 1913 is taken from the annual report of the Chinese Maritime Customs:

	Imported from Germany. Yen	Imported from Japan. Yen
1910	2,279,000	143,000
1911	1,432,000	1,103,000
1912	4,536,000	1,959,000
1913	5,204,000	589,000

As may be seen from the above Customs returns, the imports from Germany have been on the increase year after year, showing by far the greater disparity over the figures of the imports from Japan. Of

CHINA SHOULD AT ONCE DECLARE WAR ON HUNS

Mr. Liang Chi-chao, one of the leading figures in political circles in China, whose utterances on home politics are of weighty importance re the present political situation in China, published his opinion touching the Chino-German relation in the Peking press on March 26. Mr. Liang Chi-chao strongly advocates the necessity of China's declaring war on Germany, which drastic measures he urges shall be promptly taken for the maintenance of China's prestige and to save her national dignity. The purport of his article published in the Chinese press may be summarised as follows:

Some people are of the opinion that China need not declare war on Germany comparing her relations with Germany with those between America and Germany. But this is a mistake, as the relations between China and Germany are quite different. In the case of the United States, the declaration of war against Germany will at once lead to the actual fighting or the commencement of armed hostilities between the two nations, and therefore America must finish all warlike preparations prior to declaring war against Germany. Quite different is the case with China. Even if China declares war on Germany, no armed hostilities necessarily follow between the two countries.

Whereas the United States feels no inconvenience for the control of the Germans residing in her domain because of the absence of any German settlements or extra-territoriality, quite the reverse is the case with China which feels no small inconvenience to control the Germans owing to the existence of such obstacles as extra-territoriality and settlements. This is one of the reasons why China must declare war against Germany without stopping at the mere rupture of diplomatic relations. Moreover, Germany's reply to China's note of protestations against her declaration of unrestricted submarine warfare was couched in very arrogant and haughty terms. Not only did Germany insult China's dignity in her reply to China's note, but she also disregarded China's kindly advice by ignoring her protestation and carrying out her threats of unrestricted submarine warfare. This forms another reason why China is called upon to declare war on Germany.

China must declare war against Germany and act promptly in doing so. The view that China had better declare war on Germany after the Entente powers have recognized her counter-proposals for siding with them in the war is a gross mistake. The opportunity should not be missed. China need to declare war against Germany for no other purpose than for the great cause of humanity, the cause of international law and the cause of justice. As to the question of the customs tariff revision, though it is a question of grave importance to China and her cherished desire, it must not be confounded with the question of the declaration of war, but it should be proposed and submitted to the consideration of the powers concerned at some proper time, when opportunity offers itself. In case China declares war on Germany, she must also take the same attitude towards Austria as a matter of course. It is not only the height of absurdity but also a source of great danger to China that she would maintain diplomatic relations with Austria after breaking with Germany. An instance has been exemplified quite recently by the German intrigue in Mexico, which too well explains the great danger of keeping up the status quo with Austria.

course, during the war Germany will not continue the supply of arms and ammunition, but it is quite patent that after the present war comes to an end Germany will again take up the remunerative traffic in military supplies.

Not only in the supply of arms and ammunitions, but also in the supply of electrical, railway, and other mechanical and engineering supplies, as well as hardware, metal manufacture and sundry goods, Germany has occupied a very prominent position in the trade with China, holding the first place in some goods and second place in the rest where she was outwitted by another foreign power. Without going to the length of showing the figures in the customs returns, let it suffice here to say that in the import trade of China, Germany has taken about 7/100 of the total volume of her import trade. To be more precise, about 27 years ago the volume of Germany's trade with China, both exports and imports, was something like 37,700,000 marks (18,900,000 yen) while the figure swelled to 204,200,000 marks in 1912. In fine, Germany has held the seventh place in the export trade with China and the fifth place in import trade, but it is quite apparent that German trade influence in China is or rather has been on the steady increase, and is destined to attain further increase and development in future. If efforts be made to check this rapid growth of German commercial influence, at the present moment, and thus nip the future preponderance of German commercial and economical influence in China in the bud it will surely add, in no small measure, to the development of Japan's trade opportunity with China.

THE ALLIES AND CHINA OPEN NEGOTIATIONS

It is learned on good authority that the negotiations re China's siding with the Entente Powers in the war are going on and making due progress between the ministers of Great Britain, Japan, France, Russia, Italy, Belgium, and Portugal on the one side and Dr. Wu Ting-fang, the Chinese Foreign Minister, on the other, in Peking. Meanwhile the Chinese Government has opened negotiations with the Entente Governments through the Chinese Ministers accredited to those countries regarding China's counter-proposals or conditions for her participation in the war on the side of the Entente Powers. Mr. Chang, the Chinese Minister in Tokyo, it is said, is carrying on negotiations with the Japanese Government on the same subject by order of his home Government. The Chinese proposals, covered by the pending negotiations between the Japanese Government and the Chinese Minister, seem to include the payment of the balance of the Boxer indemnity, the cancellation of the treaties or agreements between Japan and China that are conducive to China, or are thought as such, and the increase of the Chinese custom tariff. As regards the postponement of the payment there seems to be no particular objection on the part of the Japanese Government, nor again does there seem to be any great difficulty relative to the partial nullification of some treaties between Japan and China, which are believed to leave room enough for amicable settlement.

But what proves to be a standing block to a satisfactory solution of the negotiations is the question of the customs tariff revision. At first, the Chinese Government proposed an increase of 1½ per cent., namely an increase from 3½ per cent. to 5 per cent., but when the Entente Powers showed an intention of agreeing to China's proposal, the Chinese Government seized the opportunity and quite recently proposed an increase of 4 per cent., with the apparent intention to propose the abolition of the reduced tariff rate and the likin tax according to the provisions of the Anglo-Chinese treaty of 1902 and propose a further increase to a 12 per cent. standard in future. This will have grave bearings upon the interests of Japan as well as all powers interested and seriously menace the economic interests of those powers. In these circumstances, it is observed that the powers will not easily consent to the proposal of the Chinese Government.

JAPAN RECOGNIZES RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT

The Japanese Government on Tuesday night sent telegraphic instructions to Viscount Y. Uchida, the Japanese Ambassador in Petrograd, to notify the Russian Foreign Office that Japan formally recognizes the new Government of Russia. The decision was reached at the regular Cabinet meeting on Tuesday. The text of the notification to Russia was made public on Thursday.

M. Krupenski, the Russian Ambassador, when he visited the Foreign Minister Viscount I. Motono recently assured Japan of the new Russian Government's desire to continue to maintain the existing friendly relation with Japan and renewed its pledges to live up to the treaties concluded, in the past between the two nations. The Russian Ambassador also reiterated that Russia, under the new government, would not in the least change her unshakable determination to co-operate with the Allies until they had attained their final aims in the present war.

Foreign Office officials when interviewed on Wednesday minimized the importance of the reactionary movement reported to have arisen against the new Government in Russia. Though the scheme to establish a republican form of government is regarded by the officials as rather too radical and running counter to the actual condition of affairs in Russia, the present Government is thought able to maintain itself on a secure foundation, at least until the convocation of the Constitutional Congress which in the near future is to decide the question of the form of government. Great Britain, France, Italy, the United States, and Japan, in extending recognition to Russia, are supposed to have made a critical survey of the situation in Russia that justify them in the confidence that the new Government will be able to lead the nation along the right paths without being hampered by any reactionary obstacles.

POPULAR ORATOR FEARS FOR JAPAN'S PRESTIGE

Amidst the din and turmoil of the electioneering campaign in which the country is now envolved many interesting incidents are daily reported from the provinces with the gradual approach of the election day fixed for April 20th. Among them cases of violation of the election law and incidental regulations for the control over the election campaign prominently figure, many canvassers and franchiseholders having been prosecuted or arrested in various provinces. Some of them have been brought under the clutch of law on account of the infringement of the regulations for the control of the election campaign on the charge of having treated others or having been treated to lunch or dinner or having sent or received some petty presents, which acts are regarded as constituting cases of bribery and subjected to rigorous prosecution by the faithful servants of the law. Quite remarkable is an incident which occurred at the town of Ibimachi, Gifu prefecture, on Friday afternoon, and which probably involved the loss of a precious human life through the old fashioned custom of harakiri. It was committed by a patriotic policeman as the result of sudden emotion and an outburst of patriotic zeal.

Mr. F[illegible]ukai, the leader of the Kokumin-to party and perhaps the most popular politician of the day, who is touring for political purposes in that prefecture like many other leaders of political parties who are busy in various provinces to assist in the election campaign of the candidates of their respective parties, made a speech at a political meeting held at that town on Friday afternoon. The capability of Mr. Inukai as an orator and the strong power of his elocution are well known facts, which we need not dwell on here. The orator addressed a large assemblage of franchiseholders with his usual eloquence full of patriotic enthusiasm, and from the political pulpit poured forth impressive utterances and preachings mainly dealing with the diplomatic crisis of the empire and the imperative necessity of completing the national defense of the country

The speaker alluded to the question of the settlement of peace terms after the national struggle, and pointing out the weak diplomacy and unreliable stability of the present ministry he questioned with emphatic doubt whether the government was equal to the weighty task of properly steering the ship of state and successfully working out the destiny of the empire in such a delicate situation. Further he doubted whether the government would be able to maintain the dignity and prestige of the country in case Japan should be compelled to return Tsingtau and the southern islands now under her occupation as the result of the coming peace conference. He denounced the folly of the goverment and the two hostile parties, the Seiyukai and the Kenseikai who are eager indulging in useless political strife at the stake of the welfare of the nation, quite forgetful of the grave and critical situation the country would have to face before long. The audience was one and all moved and deeply impressed with the high sounding speech and strong reasonings of the orator. A young police officer who was present on duty, was so greatly impressed, it appears, with the patriotic enthusiasm embodied in the speaker's utterance, that he hastened back to the police station and suddenly unsheathing his sabre ripped open his abdomen. The policeman is reported to have been so badly injured that his life is despaired of.

MR. YOSHIMURA SPEAKS OF COMING EVENTS

Mr. Ryodo Yoshimura, of the Tokyo Phrenological Society, is a noted student of both astrology and craniology. On January 12 last year he predicted the demise of Francis Joseph, the late Austrian monarch, and eleven other happenings which prophecies have all proved accurate. For the "Yorodzu," one of the leading Tokyo papers, Mr. Yoshimura has augured the development of the situation in Europe, China and Japan in 1917.

To cite some of his prophecies, he divines that if the Kaiser continues the present war of which there are no hopes for German final victory, calamities, disasters and what not will occur in Germany in rapid succession to bring him to ruin, but if he be convinced of his errors he will at least escape from ruin. The abdication of the Kaiser, however, is inevitable at any rate, according to the astrologist.

Next month President Wilson will act as a mediator between the Allies and Germany and there will come a gleam of hope for the restoration of peace. The Germanic allies will make some concessions in the discussion of peace. During June representatives of the belligerents will meet formally to discuss the peace question and August and September will witness the satisfactory acceleration of the restoration of peace in Europe. The greatest war the world has ever seen will thus in all probability come to a close before the end of September, 1917.

In China, serious internal disturbances will break out probably in August or September, as the result of which sympathizers with the former Manchu court will gradually grow in power. The restoration of the Manchu Dynasty to the throne of China will be on the lip of many Chinese politicians, who will gradually come to advocate the restoration, and in December a great change will take place in the form of the Government of China. The evergreen question of the Sino-Japanese intimacy will be materialized only after this.

The relations between Japan and Russia will grow in cordiality and friendship, and another agreement binding the two powers will come into existence within this year, as the result of which the whole of Saghalien Island will be ceded to Japan by Russia.

In the political world of Japan collisions will take place between the Government and the House of Representatives with the result that the Kensei-kai, the majority party, will irremediably suffer. The tide of the political sea therefore will turn in favour of the Government parties. As to the result of the parliamentary General election to be held in April 20, the Seiyu-kai party will come out victorious with the consequent decrease of the Kensei-kai M.P.'s. The Kokumin-to party will increase the number of its parliamentary members as the result of the election.

In conclusion Mr. Yoshimura predicts the appearance of two great statesmen in Japan in the near future. These statesmen will represent with great popularity and influence both the Japanese officialdom and non-officialdom, and will contribute toward manœuvring the barque of state satisfactorily after the conclusion of the European war.

SAGE OF WASEDA GREETS SALVATION OFFICERS

The nineteen Salvation Army officers from America, under Major Soltar, who are going to China to reinforce the Salvation army workers there and who arrived at Yokohama by the Empress of Asia, paid a visit to Marquis Okuma at his Waseda residence on Wednesday morning, accompanied by Colonel Yamamuro. The party was entertained with tea and refreshments, amid the early spring flowers abloom in the green-house. Marquis Okuma received the guests in person and welcomed the fighters of the spiritual world in his usual cheerful manner and bade them "bon voyage" to the field of their future labours in the following words:

"The great powers of the world are engaged in the war and the world itself is in a chaotic condition with the great international war. The situation bids to become worse and even the United States, known as the great lover of peace, is going to take up arms against Germany, and plunge herself into the vortex of the titanic struggle. At this moment, and in the midst of the echoes of war resounding in almost all parts of the world, it is a matter for great satisfaction as well as great joy to know that the youthful officers of the Salvation Army, which is the conqueror of the spiritual world, are going to China to start a great religious campaign in the vast fields of that country. It is, indeed, an admirable work and courageous attempt. The late General Booth, the great founder of the Salvation army, when commencing his noble work, selected the East of London as his first field. East London was at that time the darkest quarter of England. That you, the young officers of the Salvation army, are going to China to lead your campaign of religious propaganda is just like the early career of your great commander, who chose such a place as East London for beginning his noble work, and in doing so you are acting with the same spirit that guided your great leader."

The laudatory speech of the Marquis was followed by a short responsory address by Colonel van Groot, who in a few well chosen words cordially thanked the Marquis for his hospitality. The party took leave at half past eleven. They visited the Salvation Home for the Sick at Nakano in the afternoon. The party left for China on Friday departing from Tokyo station by the 4 p.m. train.

KOKUSAI-HAVAS

Paris, Mar. 19.—The German retreat, which had been started in only one sector of the Ancre, was transformed yesterday into a general tottering of the entire enemy forces along more than a 130-kilometre front from the centre. This freed 2,000 square kilometres of French territory within one day. Despite the brevity of the official communiqués, it is probable that the retreat has not come to an end yet.

The French having taken Nesle, the British joined them to effect with them an alignment and junction.

Along the whole front of attack, the cavalry and light detachments are pursuing the enemy with vigour and maintaining close contact with the German picked troops, who are employed to protect the rear of the fugitive columns.

The French movement, however, is being carried on methodically and cautiously, the more so because the German resistance is somewhat more marked than at the beginning, though it yields rapidly to the superiority of the French organization. Hence it is obvious that the enemy army, reduced to retreat, is morally diminished and on the verge of demoralization, which perhaps will prevent it from clinging, according to Marshal von Hindenburg's intent to the positions of Cambrai, St. Quentin and Loan. Be that as it may, the departments of the Oise and the Somme are on the brink of being entirely freed from any German presence.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 20.—The French advance north and west of the River Oise has carried them past Ham and Chauny, states the Paris communiqué of Monday. A cavalry force operating several kilometres north of Ham has captured a German convoy retiring in the direction of Saint Quentin.

The French advance at this point has attained a depth of thirty-five kilometres.

Detachments south of Chauny, operating east of the Oise, have reached the line of the River Ailette and Soissons. Northeast of Crouy advanced elements have progressed along the road to Maubeuge.

About twenty small towns and villages were liberated by the French during the day.

The pursuit of the Germans by the British forces further north continues, states Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig in his communiqué of Monday evening. The advance guard of cavalry is driving back the German rearguards, and during the day the British gained a depth ranging from two to eight miles. Forty more villages have been taken by the British.

Within the past forty-eight hours the British have pushed the Germans off something like 200 square miles of territory, writes Reuter's correspondent at British headquarters in France. What was intended to be an orderly retirement has developed into a rapid retreat, which the Germans are being considerably mauled as they go.

The British front, from Arras to Nesle, has now lost the character of a defensive line. The front has streamed forward in an elusive contour of open warfare. The latest news shows that the front from Arras to Peronne is swinging around to-day like the alteration in the position of the small hand of a clock when it is changed from 5 to 4:30 o'clock.

The Germans have fallen back behind Hendecourt, which is nearly ten miles south-east of Arras and only two miles from the main road to Cambrai.

A review of the situation on the western front shows that the question of where the Germans will make a stand against their pursuers is still unsolved, but indications seem to point to a line covering Cambrai, Saint Quentin, La Fere and Laon.

The Bapaume ridge was the last natural obstacle covering Cambrai. Miles of level agricultural country now face the British, but this does not imply that fortifications do not exist in this territory.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 20.—A dispatch from Reuter's correspondent at British Headquarters in France, on Tuesday morning, says: "Despite equinoctial gales and rain-squalls, we have made considerable progress. From the south of Arras, our front now runs from Beaurains, through Mercatel, Boirey, Becquerelle, Boyelles, St. Leger, Moiry, Vaulxvrauxcourt, Begnatre; Haplincourt, Barastre, Bois-le-Chelle, Etricourt, Moislains, Peronne to Doingt; thence along the Somme to Canizy in the neighbourhood of Ham. Our cavalry and infantry patrols are active everywhere east of this line.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 21.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Tuesday evening communiqué says: "Despite less favourable weather, we have made considerable progress on the greater part of the front of our advance. Southward of Arras and further, villages have been cleared of the enemy. We have now passed the general line from Canizy, Estrees, Enchausée, Narlu, Velu and St. Leger."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 21.—The French cavalry, north of the Somme, have advanced to the outskirts of Roupy, seven kilometres from St. Quentin. North-east of Chauny, the infantry have occupied Tergnier.

KOKUSAI-HAVAS

Paris, Mar. 21.—The so-called strategical, voluntary retreat of the Germans was in progress, yesterday, on a front of nearly 80 kilometres, under the terrible hammering of the French and British artillery.

The capture of Bapaume, by the British, marks the definite fall of the last line of the strongest German positions in front of the Cambrai plain. Bapaume is very important as it is the meeting place of the cross-roads to Arras, Peronne, Amiens and Cambrai. These roads being cut, the whole German salient south of Arras is endangered as well as the positions near Peronne, Chaulnes and Noyon.

Further south, the French have occupied all the villages, which have been strongly held for two years by the Germans between Roye and Lassigny. It is by far the most important success won by the French since the battle of the Marne.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 21.—On Tuesday evening, the French, in a brilliant attack, carried Chateau-de-Savriennois and the Village of Jassy, east of Ham. The French have occupied a general line from Ailette to south of Chauny. All positions reached have been solidly organized. Considerable progress was made at night north and north-east of Soissons and on the right and left of the Loan road. The French have taken ten more villages.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 22.—The French forced a passage on Wednesday morning, east of Ham, at two points on the Somme Canal. In the face of a vigorous resistance, they drove back the enemy from the outskirts of Clastres and Montecourt. The majority of the villages are burning in the region of St. Quentin. The French made progress north of Tergnier and gained considerable ground north of Soissons. There has been much fighting and several lively actions. The majority of the reconquered villages are in ruins.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 22.—Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his evening communiqué, says: "We advanced rapidly to the south-east and east of Peronne reaching points ten miles to the east of the Somme. We have occupied another 40 villages in this area. The enemy is developing a considerable resistance at a number of places between Nurlu and Arras, but his rearguards are steadily being expelled from their positions. Our progress continues."

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

New York, Mar. 23.—A Berlin message announces that an aeroplane, piloted by Prince Frederich Karl, the Kaiser's cousin, has not returned from a raid on the western front.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 23.—News from the British front reads:—"Heavy falls of snow are hampering operations, but our advance continues most rapidly on the Santerre Plateau, west of St. Quentin, and very slowly along a twenty miles' front south-east of Arras. The enemy resistance has been most active in the sector from Arras to Ypres. The latter is defended by a series of strong points.

"Between Ypres and Croiselles, a distance of 10 miles, the Germans are holding a series of machine-gun posts, but not much difficulty is anticipated in reducing these. In fact there is already a deep bulge eastward of here, reaching the large village of Beaurretzles-Cambrai, which we occupied on March 21. This carried our advance to a point 4 miles north of Ypres. It is reported that the Germans continue to carry off batches of young women in order to prevent the French employing them on munition work.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 24.—The French forces between the Somme and the Oise have carried out a completely successful offensive and the enemy, despite a desperate resistance, has been driven back on a wide front for a distance ranging from two to four kilometres north and east of the St. Quentin Canal, and north-east of Tergnier. The French pushed detachments as far as heights dominating the valley of the Oise, and the British drove off counter-attacks at Aisecourt-le bas, Beaumetz and Vraucourt and progressed in the neighbourhood of Ecoust and Croiselles.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 24.—A dispatch from Reuter's correspondent at British headquarters states that the worst possible wintry weather has almost brought the operations to a standstill. The Germans are offering more organized resistance, particularly along a line running north-north-west from Boisdesavy, three miles west of St. Quentin. It is clear that the Germans want to prevent the Allies from advancing with the same rapidity as hitherto.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 24.—Operations between St. Quentin and La Ferte have now developed into a battle along classic lines. The French, following on the heels of the retreating Germans, forced a passage of the Canal southwest of St. Quentin on Thursday. The Germans then turned upon their pursuers and savagely attempted to throw back the French who, however, not only held their ground but developed a great offensive on Friday, well clearing the Canal in their advance.

The weight of the French attack seems thrown into this region, where the battle line at present shows a sharp salient north of the Oise, pointing towards La Ferte. The fields about there have been flooded. This is probably due to the French progress, which likewise continues across Ailette.

The British also threaten St. Quentin from the north-west, through Vermand. Thus both the British and French armies are likely to participate in possibly the greatest open battle since the Marne.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 25.—Reuter's representative at Headquarters in France announces that during the past week 300 square miles of French territory, 200 towns and villages and 10,000 inhabitants have been restored to France.

Trench warfare has now ceased along 100 miles of the Allies' front, and has been succeeded by open fighting. In the meantime, the great salient from Beaurains to Le Translov has been absolutely flattened out. The Germans' swing back to the north has changed the line from convex to concave. The resistance of the enemy's rearguard is becoming more defined, running from Roupy, Holnon Wood, Vermand and Roisel.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Paris, Mar. 25.—North of the Somme on Saturday, the French drove back the enemy from the outskirts of Save, where he took up a position on a line in previously prepared trenches. The French, between the Somme and the Oise, following up their success, attacked and drove back the Germans a kilometre north of Grandesrancourt and Gebercourt. On the west bank of the Oise, between the suburbs of La Ferte and of Vandeuil, the French seized two advanced forts. La Ferte and its defences fell into French hands. On the east bank of the Arlette, the French made considerable progress and captured several villages, throwing back the enemy rear-guards from the forest of Concy.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 25.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Saturday evening communiqué says: "We occupied Roisel, seven miles eastward of Peronne. Strong enemy detachments attacked our positions at Beaumetz-les and Cambrai. They obtained a footing, but an immediate counter-attack drove them out. We made progress on a front of 1½ miles south-west and west of Econst-St. Mein, where we repulsed all attacks. We also moved forward northward of Boiry and Becquerable."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 25.—Reuter's correspondent at British headquarters in France cables that the British cavalry has occupied Ytres, eight miles east-south-east of Bapaume. Ytres has been a point of considerable resistance, standing on a plateau 135 metres high and commanding a fine sweep of gently undulating country north-east, toward Cambrai. Ytres also commands the branch railway from Velu to St. Quentin.

The occupation of this village and the entry into Roisel by the British cavalry are the only definite changes on the British front since March 24.

The French communiqué this afternoon says that the French have made progress Saturday night north of Grandes-Rancourt in the direction of St. Quentin. They also advanced appreciably north of Chauny along the east bank of the Ailette.

The French communiqué of Sunday evening states that the French continued their offensive from the Somme to the Aisne. The struggle was stubborn owing to the Germans' vigorous defence, but the French, inflamed by the sight of the destruction wrought by the enemy, everywhere drove back the Germans, who sustained heavy losses. The French threw back the enemy between the Somme and the Oise beyond the important position of Clastres, Essigny-le-Grand and Hill 121. A violent counter-attack debouching on the Essigny-Beay front was broken by the French fire. South of the Oise the French penetrated in the lower Cauey forest and reached to the outskirts of Tolembray and Coucy-le-Chateau.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 26.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Monday evening communiqué, says: "We captured Leconicourt northward of the Bapaume to Cambrai road and took prisoner thirty of the enemy. We drove off determined counter-attacks from the east and north-east. Our artillery dispersed a third attack. We made a bombing attack to the north of Beaumenlz."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 27.—The French artillery dispersed forces of the enemy gathering between Denay and Orvillers. The French have made important progress in the lower Coucy forest and occupied Tolembray and La Feuirle, notwithstanding the difficulties of the terrain and the vigorous resistance of the enemy. North of Soissons, in the region of Oregny, progress has also been made.

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

London, March 27.—Reuter's correspondent with British Headquarters in France, under date of March 23, writes:

The principal news of the past 24 hours on the western front is that the weather has been of the worst possible wintry type, with the result that it has almost brought field operations to a standstill.

More definite resistance is being offered by the German rear-guards as they are pressed back by our advance. It is clear they want to delay us from continuing to progress as rapidly as we have done since Saturday. Whilst some cavalry skirmishes are reported and trifling affairs between reconnoitring parties, there is no appreciable change in the situation since yesterday, beyond the tendency of the enemy to render resistance to which I have already referred.

All behind our newly advanced front, the most tremendous activity continues, both in the movement of troops and the construction of, and repairs to roads and railways. So far, about 10,000 inhabitants have been left behind by the Germans during their retreat. They are mostly elderly or very young people. Young women between the ages of 17 and 35 are being sent to the fortress at Maubeuge as the Germans say if they were left behind they would make munitions for the French. So they are keeping them to make munitions for themselves.

ON THE RUSSIAN FRONTS

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Mar. 20.—Firing and reconnaissances continue on the Western and the Rumanian fronts. The enemy south of the Naroch Lake made a gas attack.

Caucasus front. South of Bana the Russian troops repulsed the Turks from a range of positions. They retreated in the Pendjevin direction. In the Kermanshah direction the Russian troops pursued the Turks, dislodging them from their positions and seizing Harunabad 30 kilometres south-west of Kermanshah. Fifteen kilometres west of Ognat the Russian scouts, having dislodged the Turks from their positions, seized the village Varabi, capturing cartridge and handgrenade stores. In the Sakkis direction, the Russian troops, in spite of the huge snow masses dislodged the Turks from Suran, seizing this point. While pursuing the retreating Turks the Russian vanguards entered Bana. The Russian troops are advancing under the most difficult conditions. The passages dug out in snow of about 7 feet deep are soon filled up again by the raging snowstorms. The troops have to pass the night in snow holes. In the Sivas direction, 25 kilometres south-west of Kalkit, Russian vanpost repulsed by fire and bayonet the advance of Turkish scouts.

A Turkish column, consisting of two battalions with 6 mountain-guns and 3 squadrons, was under the pressure of the Russian cavalry retreating from Senne to Kermanshah, but was met by another Russian cavalry detachment and turned in disorder into the mountains in the western direction, no road existing in this place. The pursuit north-west of Kermanshah continues. The bridge near Maidesht, west of Kermanshah, was seized by the Russian troops in an undamaged state.

London, Mar. 21.—The Russian official communiqué reads: "While pursuing the Turks in the direction of Sakkiz, we entered Turkish territory. There is great reconnoitring activity on the western front."

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, March 23.—On the Western front, in the direction of Lida, in the region of the river Berezina, near the villages Saberezina and Potashnia the enemy succeeded, after a strong artillery preparation, in occupying the Russian positions but by a skilful counter-attack, the Germans were driven out of the village Potashnia.

Northwest of Brody, in the region of Baldury, the enemy attacked the Russian positions but after fierce fighting was compelled to withdraw.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Mar. 23.—Western front. Caucasus front. A Russian scout detachment penetrated surreptitiously into the enemy's trenches near Hatvan, on the south-western bank of the Van Lake, and seized by a daring rush, a detachment of 3 officers and 18 soldiers with 2 machneguns. In the Pendjivin direction, the Russian troops opened fighting with the Turks, who had seized the southern bank of the Abishirvan river 10 kilometres north of Pendjivin. In the Kazrishirinsk direction, on the 16th of March, the Russian troops dislodged the Turks, after a fight of 16 hours, from their position near Shares and seized Arilabad 5 kilometres from Kerind. A fight with the Turks near Kerind is in progress. The road of the Turkish retreat is covered with abandoned carts, cartridges and corpses. On the rest of the front, the usual firing and reconnoissances are in progress.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Mar. 25.—Western front. Near Mojeiki, north-west of Postava, the Germans used poisonous gas, which caused no damage to the Russians. Firing and scout encounters continue on the rest of the western, and on the Rumanian front.

Caucasus front. In the Hanikin direction, the Russian troops on March 18 dislodged the Turks from the position near Harir and from the Simil-Kerind mountain summit. Fights with the Turks, who had occupied the positions, near Miantag, were going on on March 19th.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, March 25.—"In the Khanikin direction, on the Caucasus front, the Russian forces captured Kerind. The Turks, before abandoning it, had razed it to the ground and set fire to the ruins. The enemy withdrew to prepared positions near Harir. Firing is in progress on the rest of the front and the fleeing Turks are being pursued.

"Twenty kilometres west of Moinsohi the enemy attacked the Russian positions and under pressure our troops were forced to retreat to the next positions, 3 kilometres to the east.

MR. JOHN BUCHAN'S WEEKLY REPORT

London, March 23.—The movements of the armies in France during the past week have been of the greatest importance. Speculation is rife as to the meaning of the present German strategy. There are indications in the form of fires behind the lines that the enemy's retreat may go further than the Hindenburg line. The intention of the Germans is conjecturable, but it is possible that they may pivot on Lille. The pivot of their retreat is at present a point in the original line just north of Arras, and the swing of movement has naturally caused their retreat to be swifter. The depth of their retreat is greater at the southern end than at the northern. It is also natural that the enemy's resistance should be more vigorous. It is increasingly so at the northern end, and this has been fully proved. From the military point of view the destruction of roads and railways is permissible, but nothing can justify the wholesale destruction by the Germans carried out behind the lines. If there are any objects beyond mere savagery we must look for political motives. One of the most evident is that the Germans intend it as warning of what may happen to the rest of Northern France. Their retirement from trench system is comparatively a simple operation because the movement in trenches is very difficult to observe. Very possibly the German high command believed that the difficulties of advance in the circumstances would be so great that their troops could spread their retreat over a very considerable period of time, thus hampering the Franco-British offensive and enabling the Germans to regain an initiative. It is quite clear that the delay caused by their rearguard action is insufficient for their purpose indicated.

The situation in Mesopotamia and Western Persia has continued to develop most satisfactory. General Maude, the British Commander, gives the Turks no rest but continues to sweep the broken columns before him northwards from Bagdad up to the Tigris and north-eastward up to the river Diala. So far, every enemy attempt to stand before him has been instantly broken. The Turkish forces which were consequently compelled to retire before the Russians in Western Persia are in clear danger. The detachment of these Turkish forces which was unable to escape in time by road between Sinna and Kermanshah has been broken up and driven into the mountains. The main body is retreating in the utmost haste by the main pass leading down into the Mesopotamian plains.

RUSSIA HASTENS TO SET HER HOUSE IN ORDER

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, Mar. 21.—The Provisional Government has published a manifesto confirming the Constitution of Finland and decreeing its application in extenso. The manifesto grants, among other things, immediate, far-reaching political amnesty and also summons the Diet to meet shortly.

A Governmental Ukase, just published, reads: "Following the imperious dictates of the national conscience, in the name of justice and in commemoration of the definite triumph of the new regime founded on the rights of liberty, the Provisional Government decrees a general political amnesty."

The Provisional Government has been ordered firstly to consider what steps are to be taken with regard to the abdicated Tsar Nicholas and his spouse, who has been deprived of her liberty and placed in the Tsarskoie Selo Palace, and secondly to order General Alexieff to place at the disposal of the four deputies sent by the Duma to Mosileff, a detachment of troops to guard the person of the Emperor.

On March 22, the Minister of Justice, M. Kerenski, will publish a Ukase, abolishing the death sentence.

Washington, Mar. 21.—It is stated on high authority that the United States expects Great Britain, France and other nations to recognize the new Russian Government within a few days. After which the Washington Government has preparations ready for doing so.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Petrograd, Mar. 21.—The Provisional Government of Russia has proclaimed a general political amnesty and has also confirmed the granting of a constitution to Finland. The early convocation of a Finnish Diet is also provided for.

The Russian Government has increased by two milliard rubles the amount of notes the State Bank may issue.

The Government has ordered the former Tsar and Tsaritza of Russia to be deprived of their liberty and brought to the Tsarskoie Selo Palace. General Alexieff has been instructed to place a detachment to guard the former Tsar at the disposal of four members of the Duma, who are to be sent to Moghilev, where the former Tsar is now staying.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 22.—In the House of Commons to-day, following a Government motion of notice this resolution was adopted:

"The House sends the Duma its fraternal greetings, and tenders to the Russian people its heartfelt congratulations upon the establishment among them of free institutions, in the full confidence that they will lead not only to the rapid and happy progress of the Russian nation, but to the prosecution, with renewed steadfastness and vigour, of the war against the stronghold of autocratic militarism which threatens the liberty of Europe."

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, Mar. 24.—The Provisional Government has issued the following proclamation.

"The shaking of the basis of national economy during the war being liable to bring innumerable and irreparable calamaties to the country, the Government declares it will faithfully fulfil all pecuniary obligations contracted by the previous government. Namely: the payment of interest due for state loans; the settlement of Commercial and industrial contracts; the payment of Salaries and pensions of state officials and so forth. At the same time, it will collect rates and taxes as previously until the modification of the laws on a new basis.

"The Government recommends the state institutions to practise the strictest economy and guarantees efficacious control to further this. The war entails such heavy expense, that the Government cannot avoid certain rates, but the new fiscal systems will be elaborated and the Ministry of Finance will divide these rates according to the paying capacity of the different classes."

The Grand Duke Nicolas has been superseded in the supreme command of the armies by General Alexieff.

London, Mar. 26.—Advices from Petrograd state that the central committee of the parliamentary representatives of the constitutional democrats have voted in favour of a republican form of government for Russia.

The Russian Foreign Minister, M. Miliukoff, gave out a statement to the press representatives in Petrograd on March 22, in which he explains the unshakable determination of the new Government to continue the war against the Central Powers. The gist of the statement as it reached here yesterday is as follows:—

"The change of government does not affect the foreign policy of Russia in the least. The Allied countries have looked upon the political change of Russia with the confidence that it will help Russia to co-operate with more vigour in carrying on the war; and already Great Britain, France, and Italy have recognized our Provisional Government. My urgent duty is to secure trust in Russia's true conviction of the necessity to prosecute the present war. The ideals of the free Russia is common with the ideals of the Allies. Russia seeks no aggrandizement. Her object is to perform her national duty in securing freedom for the Slavic people under Austria's yoke in finishing the war, and in giving liberty to small nations. The Finland policy of the new Russia is its living example; the new Government will confer autonomy in a broad sense on Finland.

America did not like the old Russia but she has welcomed the free Russia. The American Ambassador to Russia has received instructions to recognize the new Government and Mr. Jacob Schiff, who was prejudiced against the old Russia now has cabled a welcome to the new Russia.

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, Mar. 27.—The new Minister of War, M. Goutchkoff has been three days already at the [illegible] He has not only visited the Staff Headquarters, but the regiments in the first line trenches, making speeches and mixing with the soldiers. Everywere he has been the centre of great ovations. The soldiers have unanimously replied to his queries that they will gladly die for victory.

HOW COUNT WITTE WAS RUSSIA'S SAVIOUR ONCE

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Petrograd, Mar. 22.—The "Bourse Gazette" announces that correspondence between the former Tsaritza and M. Protopoff, formerly Minister of the Interior, has been discovered, providing proof of the Germanophile tendencies of the late Government. The correspondence confirms the reports of the efforts and adherents of the old régime to conclude a separate peace with Germany.

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, March 26.—The "Bourse Gazette" writes that during the Russo-Japanese war, when the outlook for Russia was gloomy and internal troubles broke out, Tsar Nicholas and Kaiser Wilhelm elaborated a Russo-German offensive and defensive alliance against France. Tsar Nicholas showed the text to Count Witte, who was greatly alarmed and implored his monarch to destroy the document. The former Tsar did so.

The President of the Duma, M. Rodjianko, to-day received a delegation of troops from the active armies. The members declared that they will defend the Duma till the last drop of their blood. Each will watchfully serve the Provisional Government and will fight to the last man against the Germans. The Deputies of the Duma, who visited the front, have returned here bringing back the best impression. Discipline, they say, is perfect and the officers and men are closely united and swear allegiance to the freed Russia.

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, March 27.—Yesterday great manifestations occurred in the streets of this city, which was gay with flying banners inscribed with "Victory" and "Liberty," which words are indissolubly associated, as only victory can ensure the free development of the new internal régime. Irrespective of political opinions, the nation proclaims a war to a finish. This is being recognized not only at the front, where M. Goutchoff is visiting and by the reports of the Government delegates sent to the different armies; it is also shown by the patriotic élan of the troops and by their swearing allegiance to the new government. It is also manifested everywhere in the rear where all plants and factories, preparing war material started work a week ago more energetically than ever. Thus at some plants, on their own initiative, the workmen increased the working hours. Recruits have continued streaming into the barracks. Notwithstanding the revolutionary crisis, the daily drilling of soldiers commenced a week ago in every garrison in Russia, where all reforms have already been published by the new War Minister. They concern the internal life of the soldiers and consist in raising the moral personality of the soldiers by granting them more dignity than heretofore. Also they are free to elect their own officers. All these reforms have acted as a stimulant to the combative energy of the soldiers.

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, March 27.—The fundamental principles of the programme of the new government of Russia comprise the necessity of assiduous work and intensive organization. The absolute calmness with which the provinces have joined the provisional Government enabled all the state institutions to re-start work eight days ago.

The Telegraphs, Posts and Railways never for a moment ceased their functions. The number of trucks loaded daily surpasses the maximum attained by the old régime, thus avoiding victualling difficulties. All great state administrations have retained their technical personnel, thus ensuring the routine of political organisation.

In all the villages, the police have been replaced by the militia assisted by the local garrisons. The capital has completely re-assumed its ordinary aspect. Cabs are running and all theatres, concert halls, circuses and cinematographs have reopened. All banks are working and the Exchange here shortly re-opens and will liquidate a considerable amount of arrears. The Moscow Exchange is already open.

Simultaneously with the starting of factory work, all newspapers began to reappear regularly and new papers have been founded this week.

The Ministry is actually representing the nation and inspiring the people to recommence their ordinary peaceful operations, fully confident that the great reforms announced will be urgently fulfilled.

The Proclamation of a Constitution for Finland, violated by the old régime, the general amnesty and the abolition of national religious restrictions have been acclaimed with enthusiasm as the best proofs for Russia's great future.

SITUATION DESPERATE IN GERMANY, IS REPORT

Amsterdam, Mar. 22.—Reports of great rioting in Berlin in connection with the scarcity of food have reached here. The regiments stationed on the frontier have left for Berlin to maintain order.

The "Breslauer Volkswille," which by this time has probably been suppressed for its temerity, publishes the following details of this case:—

Thousands of petitions are received daily at the Chancellery of the Crown Princess from soldiers' wives who have been waiting—and waiting in vain—for their long overdue share in the War Babies' Charitable Fund, which is under the administration of her Imperial and Royal Highness.

Insult is added to injury by the fact that a certain enterprising firm has contrived to act as intermediary between the Princess and the petitioners, many of whom now receive, instead of the hoped for money, the following letter:—

"High honour and recognition has befallen our children's patent food through the here-reproduced communication on the part of the Crown Princely Court Marshal's Department:—

"Court Marshal's Office of his Imperial and Royal Highness the Crown Prince of the German Empire and of Prussia.

"At your request the Court Marshal's Office declares that . .'s children's food has been largely used by the children of their Imperial and Royal Highnesses the Crown Prince and Princess, with the very best results."

The receipt of this document naturally aroused anger and indignation among the women, who, instead of procuring from the special children's fund the support to which they are properly and justly entitled, are tricked by an advertising manœuvre.

References to this unsavoury subject in other papers have been rigorously cut out by the censor, only the headings being left to indicate the subject-matter and the rest of the columns being left blank, save, in two cases, for a signature. All that can be said for certain is that about £150,000 which should be available for the sustenance of the starving children of the Kaiser's soldiers has mysteriously disappeared.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, Mar. 22.—The byelection in Potsdam, to select a successor for Herr Karl Liebknecht in the Reichstag, has resulted in an overwhelming victory for the Socialist candidate Mohring, who has been for a long time under preventive arrest.

Vorwaerts, the Socialist organ, referring to Russia, says that it would be a dangerous mistake if equal suffrage is not introduced into Prussia during the war.

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

London, Mar. 23.—Reuter learns that news has been received in London from an absolutely authentic source to the effect that the situation in Germany is becoming "daily more desperate." The position is painted in the blackest colours, and one reads that persons, who have come out of Germany declare that in consequence of the food question alone, the country cannot hold out much longer.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, Mar. 23.—Following the recent statement in the Prussian Diet that the grain stocks are less than generally believed, it is now announced that the bread ration will be reduced by one quarter from April 15.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 24.—German papers comment despondently on the increased hardship caused by the reduction of the bread ration. The "Koelnische Zeitung" bitterly complains of the conduct of the wealthy and expresses contempt for the common soldiers carousing while hollow-cheeked and under-fed children beg at their doors.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Rome, Mar. 24.—Private reports from Germany state that the internal situation is grave and causing serious apprehension. The Government has proclaimed a state of siege in all principal towns owing to the riots. Attempted risings have occurred almost everywhere. Even in Berlin the population is threatening to demand the end of the war. Somewhat similar reports come from Amsterdam, which, however, it is impossible to confirm.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, March 25.—A bitter debate has taken place in the Reichstag on the food question in Germany.

Herr Kumert, a Socialist, denounced the Kaiser and Bethmann-Hollweg as the originators of the war. He compared the German reactionaries to the late régime in Russia and declared that he would be delighted if the same progress were made in Germany as had lately been made in Russia.

At this point the speaker was called to order by the President of the House.

Herr Koch, another Socialist, complained of the "terrible underfeeding" of the population, while still another, named Diltmann, declared that the Government, as well as the workmen, is collapsing under hunger. There was great commotion.

WHY AMERICAN RELIEF COMMISSION IS RECALLED

Washington, March 26.—The State Department in announcing the withdrawal of the American Relief workers in Belgium who will be replaced by a joint neutral commission, gives the following explanation.

"In view of the fact that several relief ships have recently been attacked, without warning, by submarines in flagrant violation of the solemn engagements of Germany, this Government is no longer warranted in leaving Americans in territory under German occupation."

TO BOOST EGYPT'S TRADE

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 21.—Sir Albert Stanley, President of the Board of Trade, announced to-day that steps have been taken to establish an organization called the British Trade Corporation. It will be given a charter and its principal object will be to facilitate and establish trade in Egypt. A bank will be connected with the existing banks for the purpose of developing British trade abroad.

AMERICO-GERMAN CRISIS FAST REACHING HEAD

Washington, Mar. 21.—The Navy Department has asked the Navy Yards to submit estimates for and state the number of submarine chasers they are able to construct quickly, as the construction of several hundred is contemplated.

Already sixty-four have been ordered in the Navy Yards at New York and New Orleans.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

Washington, Mar. 22.—President Wilson has called Congress to assemble at an extra session on April 2. The President has proclaimed that "a grave question of national policy" compels the calling of an extra session. It is generally believed that it is for the purpose of asking Congress to take action regarding the state of war which admittedly already exists between the United States and Germany.

The President will undoubtedly lay before Congress an account of the German submarine aggressions. Congress is then expected to declare that a state of war has existed for some time. While not a technical declaration of war, it is practically the same thing.

A sufficient sum, perhaps $500,000,000 will be voted to the President to take further steps for the protection of American interests on land and sea. The Entente diplomats received the information that the extra session had been called a fortnight sooner than expected, with acclamation, believing that it presaged the entry of the United States into the great war.

Washington, Mar. 22.—Governor Harding of the Federal Reserve Banking Board, in an address here to-day advocated that the United States should lend a credit to the Entente to the extent of a billion dollars, taking as security a simple Anglo-French obligation note.

New York, Mar. 24.—The Associated Press correspondent at Washington says the Government has decided that steps to meet the situation with Germany shall include preparation for effective and aggressive warfare, in addition to measures being taken for the protection of shipping. It was learned after the Cabinet meeting that there had been no decision as to whether any proposal to send military forces to Europe shall be made, but both the army and the navy, as well as the industrial resources of the nation, shall be made ready for any demand.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 24.—A dispatch from Washington states that the United States Government has decided that its steps to meet the German situation shall include preparation for effective, aggressive warfare, in addition to measures looking toward the protection of shipping.

The Government is undecided whether to send an army to Europe, but its entire army, navy and industrial resources will be made available to meet any demands.

The first step of the United States is expected to be that of supplying money to the Allies.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

Washington, Mar. 25.—After a Cabinet meeting it was learned that the Government is preparing to take vigorous action once Congress has declared that "a state of war" exists with Germany.

One of the first steps under consideration is to supply the Entente Powers with loans and credits in the United States.

Preparations are also being made to speed up the manufacture of war-materials.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, Mar. 25.—The United States has refused to accept the German suggestion to amend the Prussian-American Treaties, Germany's object being to extend the mutual exemption of merchants in the case of war to general exemption.

It has been decided to withdraw the members of the American Relief Commission to Belgium. They will be replaced by neutrals. The American Minister to Brussels goes to Havre.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

Washington, March 26.—Through Dr. Paul Ritter, the Swiss Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to America, the State Department has informed Germany, that the United States declines to extend the existing treaties with Germany, as requested by the Kaiser's Government on February 17.

The following two messages, published at the time give full particulars of Germany's request:—

I

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, Feb. 14.—It is reported that on the eve of the departure from Berlin of Mr. Gerard, the American Ambassador to Germany, the German Government requested him for the renewal of the clauses pertaining to the protection of American and German subjects and vessels after the outbreak of war, as provided in the clauses of the Americo-Prussian treaties of 1799 and 1828. With regard to these the American Government some time ago applied to Germany for the cancellation of the treaty stipulations relative to the enforcement of the new American Seamen's Law. Mr. Gerard having refused to entertain the request of the German Government, the German Government has applied direct to the American Government to discuss the matter through the Swiss Minister together with its new proposal re submarine warfare.

II

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, Feb. 18.—It is officially announced that the United States regards the Treaty of Prussia of 1799 as still being in force. This Treaty promised protection to the respective subjects and property of Prussia and the United States in the case of war. The American Government has already proclaimed that German ships will not be seized or used by the American Government in case of war.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

Washington, Mar. 27.—Fourteen regiments of the National Guard in various states have been called up to protect industries from domestic disorders in the event of hostilities. President Wilson has signed an order increasing the personnel of the Navy from 62,000 to 87,000.

CHINA MUST NOW TAKE THIRD STEP, IS OPINION

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

Peking, Mar. 22.—The necessity of China taking a third step very soon, in order to avoid complications, is already becoming evident. It is understood that the Dutch Minister, on the grounds that the German still enjoy extra-territoriality, claims that he is entitled to take charge of German consular rights, and is sending Dutch officials to various parts to watch German interests.

On the other hand, the Chinese Government, while anxious to protect German subjects' property, contends that Germans no longer enjoy special privileges, and the officials appointed by the Dutch Legation cannot be recognised.

Shanghai, March 16.—Yesterday was a great day for discussion of probabilities, and many amateur prophets have ventured forecasts as to what is to happen when the various German consuls in China are presented with their passports.

What is to become of the consuls after they get their passports? That is the most common question, and the natural answer is "Java," as the Netherlands Indies are the nearest neutral territory. Wherever they may go, how are they to get there? On what steamers? Will the special privilege of "safe custody" allow the German Minister to travel to the Fatherland via Siberia or America? Shanghai is unique in being an international self-governing Settlement,—will the German consul here be served with passports like his compatriots in other places where the concessions are not international? If China goes a step further and a state of war between China and Germany comes about,—will the Germans in the Settlement be interned by China along with those of other ports? Would the Municipal Council, representing interests still neutral—an international governing body—permit China to intern Germans now in Shanghai? If not,—what about China's sovereign rights here?

These are a few of the unanswered questions, and some of them will probably remain unanswered, for a time at least. As there is reason for thinking that Holland is to look after Germany's interests here, the view that the German diplomats will go to Java seems a reasonable one—how they are to get there is another thing. A Dutch steamer might be sent for them without great difficulty as the Dutch mail line has already begun to run from her colonies to San Francisco and the Panama Canal via Japan, in fact the first ship touched at Japan ports only last week. Whether Java would relish receiving her new guests does not enter into the discussion.

Some hold the opinion—and it is not altogether an unreasonable one—that the international character of Shanghai will be considered and that the Consul-General here will not be asked to leave at all; that the Settlement will be as a neutral country in which civilian enemy subjects may reside so long as they behave themselves. International law does not interfere with the liberty of enemy civilians so long as they go about their usual peaceful vocations, but is there any international law left in these days of new precedents? If a state of war develops and China demands, say, certain military Germans, can the Settlement give them up? Has China the right to make the demand? At first thought it might be said she has, but has she? The Settlement refuses to surrender to China her own nationals who come here as political refugees.

Yet there is a precedent on the other side, in China's favour. During the China-Japan war in 1894 Japanese interests here were looked after by the United States. Two Japanese were arrested in the Settlement, or possibly in the French Concession, and China, claiming they were spies, asked for their surrender, for punishment by China as spies, the penalty was beheading. Mr. T. R. Jernigan, then American Consul-General here, refused to give them up. Peking took the matter up and finally the State Department at Washington ordered that the two Japanese be handed over to China on the guarantee of the Chinese Minister at Washington that the men would be properly tried. It was said afterwards that the two were taken to Nanking and beheaded without trial but that is aside from the point. It certainly would not happen now.

If China and Germany were at war, would the Germans here in the Settlement be interned? That is a question that only an International lawyer can answer, and perhaps he could not as there is no other such thoroughly international territory as this,—there are no precedents.

Later.

A total of 32 National Guard Regiments forming 6 separate battalions have been ordered into the federal service for protection of property in the event of internal disorders.

CARRANZA GETS RAP OVER KNUCKLES FROM U.S.

Washington, March 21.—The American Note to Carranza, President of the Mexican Republic, has been published.

It declines, on the ground that it would be discriminating and unneutral, for America to participate in his proposed conference of neutrals looking to the enforcing of peace in Europe through a cutting off of exports to the belligerents, and calls attention to the hopelessness of the idea of bringing about peace at present.

The Note continues:—

"To render the situation more acute, the Government of the United States has unearthed a plot by the Government dominating the Central Powers to embroil not only the Government and people of Mexico, but also the Government and people of Japan in a war with the United States. Although at the time the plot was conceived the United States was at peace with Germany, German officials and subjects were abusing the privileges freely accorded them on the soil of the United States."

VON HINTZE AND PARTY LEAVE PEKING AT LAST

Peking, Mar. 21.—It is understood that the German Minister to China, Admiral von Hintze and his Staff will leave Peking for Shanghai on March 24, in order to board the Dutch Steamer Rembrandt, from Batavia, at Woosung. Thence the party will proceed to America, viâ Nagasaki and Honolulu. The Foreign Office here has applied to the allied Legations for safe-conduct.

The Imperial Japanese Government was some time ago requested by the Chinese Government to give consent to the passage of the German Minister in Peking and members of his staff, who are returning home on board a Dutch steamer by way of Japan and America. The Imperial Government, after consulting with the authorities of the Governments of the Entente Powers, has given its consent promising to give a safe conduct to the German Minister and the members of the Legation staff and the German consular officials.

Marquis Komura, chief of the Chinese section in the Foreign Office, is quoted as stating that there being but two routes available for the return home of the German Minister, namely one by taking the Siberian route and the other the route through the Indian Ocean and through Turkey, negotiations were first made by the Chinese Government with the Russian Government for giving facilities on the Siberian railway to the homeward passage of the Minister and his staff, but the request was refused by the Russian Government because of the shortage of accommodation on the line which is not equal to the transportation of so large a party consisting of the Minister, members of the legation and members of the consulates at various places, numbering over fifty in all. The other route could not be availed of owing to the lack of available steamers at present. Steamer service is available as far as the Netherlands India, but the line does not go beyond there. It being thought undesirable to send the German Minister and his staff to the Netherlands India and have them detained there, and moreover it being contrary to their wish, it has been finally decided to send them back by way of America. As the direct voyage from China to America cannot be undertaken owing to the inconvenience for the supply of fuel and water the steamer has decided to call at Nagasaki or Kobe or Yokohama according to convenience. The party will go to Shanghai by train and embarking there will sail for Japan direct. At the port where the steamer calls the government will give assurance for the safety of their lives and property, but as the regulations for the control of the enemy subjects are to be enforced against them they will not be permitted to land. According to circumstances, they may be conveyed from Shanghai by a Japanese steamer to the Japanese port whence they will be sent to America on board an American steamer.

[It would appear evident from the telegram, and from the statement attributed to Marquis Komura that the consent of Washington has already been obtained though no mention of the matter is made. Ed. J.T.]

New York, Mar. 23.—A wireless message from Berlin announces: "The German Admiralty reports the return of the Moewe from a second cruise during which her commander captured 22 steamships and five sailing vessels."

The Associated Press, in commenting on the incident, says this is the first identification of the vessel operating in the South Atlantic in January.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, Mar. 24.—A message from Berlin states that the auxiliary cruiser Moewe has returned home after her second cruise in the Atlantic. She is said to have accounted for 183,100 tons of shipping, comprising 22 steamers and 5 sailing vessels. Eight steamers are said to have been armed. The Moewe brought back 593 prisoners.

Since the establishment of the Republic, the interpellation points out, the pre-war military appropriations only formed 26 per cent. of Germany's expenditure and 19 per cent. of Japan's. It concludes by saying that while the Government declares its plan for the disbandment of the troops, the military expenditure is yearly increasing.

FRANCE PAYS TRIBUTE TO JAPAN'S EFFORT

KOKUSAI-HAVAS

Paris, Mar. 26.—The committee of "L'Effort de France et ses Allies," organized at Sorbonne yesterday a great manifestation in honour of Japan, in the course of which a lecture was delivered by M. Paul Labbe. The speaker dwelt upon the wonderful assistance of the Japanese Red Cross units in Paris, London and Petrograd.

M. Stephen Pichon, who occupied the chair, recalled the great part played by Japan in the war and the great conflicts in which Japan's military power had affirmed itself brilliantly and dealt decisive blows in the Pacific and in China waters.

The Japanese Ambassador, Mr. Matsui, who was also present, declared that Japan having adhered to the London pact on September 4, 1914, would, under no circumstances abandon the great nations now fighting for the same ideal. National sentiment and the real interest of Japan, he said, are with the Allies. "Once her word is pledged, Japan does not hold her engagements as scraps of paper. Japan will multiply her efforts until the final victory is won."

Paris, March 23.—At the auditorium of the Sorbonne University here yesterday a lecture meeting was held. M. Pichon presided and Mr. Matsui, the Japanese Ambassador to Paris, also attended the meeting. In a lecture entitled "Japan's part in our victory" the speaker said, "Japan has accorded us not only valuable military assistance but also financial and maritime assistance. At the time of the battle of the Marne Japan kindly placed at our disposal guns and cannons which she had ordered from the Creusot factory. Moreover she has done a great deal in the protection of merchantmen and the maintenance of the safety of the sea since her occupation of the South Sea islands." In conclusion, the speaker paid a high tribute to Japan's "great" moral and material power, and touching on points of resemblance between the character and thought of both Japanese and French emphasized the necessity of promoting the relations between the two powers.—"Asahi."

SAKE WARNING FROM RUSSIA

The revolution in Russia shows the extensiveness of the possible effect of the present European war upon all nations of the world, and the possibility that other nations may be also effected by the war in the similar manner, says the "Yorozu". The paper believes that the Russian government failed to understand the public and especially the effects caused upon them by the war, and other nations which do not respect the wish of the people, may receive a similar effect from the present war, if their governments do not pay proper attention to the wish and condition of the public.

The revolution in Russia was expected, but it was never imagined that it would be carried out so speedily. In Russia, there are two classes of revolutionists, and one group is the followers of the late Count Tolstoi, and although they preach revolution, they do not expect actual revolution, and the other group is composed of ardent advocaters of revolution, who are willing to sacrifice themselves for the cause. The Russian people, excepting, Bureaucrats, Court followers and the ignorant public, belong to one or the other class.

Under the oppression of the Government, these revolutionists, had not been able to find their opportunity. But since the beginning of the present war, the Teutonic people in the Russian Court and the Bureaucrats who are pro-German, tried to prevent the Russian Military campaign. Further more they paid no attention to the lack of food and the increase of the cost of living, which made the general public suffer exceedingly, and they disregarded the measures proposed by the Duma to relieve the situation. The result of these conditions was the uprising of the entire public, and the Army has joined the revolutionists and the revolutionary campaign has been successfully carried out.

The new Cabinet of Russia has the support of the whole populace of Russia, and it has already started to solve the food supply problem, and the public has now nothing against the Government. The question whether the Romanof Family will still rule the country or not, cannot be answered at this moment, but the "Yorozu" declares that the Grand Duke Michael will be the reigning Tsar, as the Grand Duke has a good reputation among the people and when the administrative power is given to the Duma, there is no necessity to oppose a Romanof Ruler. However whether the Romanof family be deprived of power or not, will remain with the people of Russia.

The paper says that there is no doubt that the Russian revolution will affect other nations. Germany has been hard hit by the change of the political situation in Russia. The political change of Russia was brought about for the sake of the war for freedom and justice. The "Yorozu" hopes that the public of Japan will study the Russian revolution and realize the extensiveness and importance of the effect of the present war upon all countries of the world. The revolution of Russia has given a great lesson to many statesmen, and when the government sees only the material change caused by the present war, and does not understand the true wish and condition of the people, it may result in a regrettable outbreak. For the sake of the Entente powers, the paper is glad that the revolution in Russia was so successful.

EXPECT MORE REVOLUTIONS

Revolution is a byproduct of long wars, and if the present European war continues for many years to come, more revolutions will happen in the belligerent nations, declares the "Tokyo Nichinichi".

The recent revolution in Russia was caused by the intention of the people to destroy the pro-German influence, and their disappointment with the progress of the Russian campaign against Germany. However the revolutionists are not satisfied with the destruction of the pro-German elements in the Russian Court and Government, but are now trying to change the form of the Government. During the Russo-Japanese war, the repeated defeats of the Russian forces made the Russian people uneasy, and a revolutionary movement was started. The consequence of the revolution was the change of absolute monarchism to constitutional government. Again recently a revolution has broken out in Russia, and it seems that at least with Russia, the revolution is the inseparable byproduct of war.

The aim of the revolutionists, is without any doubt, to destroy the German forces as soon as possible, and the Russian public desires to destroy the old political institutions, and to bring the entire Army and public against Germany. But the paper believes that the task will be a difficult one. The oppressions from outside often enable the people to exert their efforts for one purpose, and the paper hopes that the Russians will succeed in organizing a stronger force against the Germans, and carry out the aggressive campaign backed by the entire populace.

Although many opinions have been expressed that revolutions are generally started by the people for the reformation of the political conditions, the "Nichinichi" declares that almost all revolutions in the past were brought about by material causes. The French revolution is said to have been the outbreak of free and democratic thoughts, but the paper says that the harvest of the year in France was so scarce that the people suffered from hunger, which led to the rioting that developed into the revolution. The freedom and the right of citizens were merely used as the platform of the revolutionists, and the real cause of the revolution was the material dissatisfaction of the people. In the recent revolution of Russia, the scarcity of food and high cost of living were the main causes. While the Russians were dissatisfied with the progress of the Russian campaign which was not even able to drive away the enemies out of her own territory, the public recently suffered from the difficulty to obtain sufficient food and the high cost of living. This condition led to the outbreak of the revolution.

Such a condition, says the "Nichinichi" is prevailing in many of the belligerent nations, which are all suffering from the heavy loss of men, the heavy burden of war expense, the suspension of traffic and the lack of food. Germany and Austria are suffering most, but the Entente powers are not free from such difficulties. These material dissatisfactions of the people will effect the political and social conditions, and when it breaks out, it will become a revolution.

The longer the present war continues, similar revolutions will break out among the belligerent nations.

THE TOKUGAWA CAMPAIGN

Prince Tokugawa, recently visited the poor quarters of Osaka to personally investigate the conditions of those people and to give them words of encouragement. Prince and Princess Tokugawa, also visited the poor districts of Tokyo sometime ago, and made a very good impression upon the people of the poor districts, says the "Hochi".

As the world progresses, the difference between the rich and poor is becoming wider, and the rich despise the poor and the poor envy the rich. As their social circumstances and material conditions differ, it is impossible to have a thorough understanding between them, and many social and economic problems arise from the misunderstanding between the two classes of people.

The poor is also a part of the populace that makes the nation, and they should not be slighted, and it is the duty of the rich and the educated to lead the poor. There are many organizations established for the purpose of leading and enlightening the poor, but the paper says that the works of such organizations lack the personal touch and interests which influence so deeply the recipients of the kindness.

The paper advises the Peers and rich who have leisure moments to devote themselves to the task of leading and educating the poor, following the good example set by Prince Tokugawa. If the Peers and the rich personally visit the poor and comfort them, not only will the poor feel deeply grateful for the kindness, but the impression made upon them by their benefactors will be more valuable.

There is unfortunately a strong voice cursing the peers and rich in the district of the poor, and there is no way to prevent any such outburst, except the personal and intimate understanding of one another. The gratitude the poor feel at the personal kindness of the Peers, will surely soften their enmity and hatred of the Peers and the rich.

To bring perfect harmony to the community, the work of the Peers among the poor is essential, and the "Hochi" hopes that the Peers and the rich of the country will follow the example of Prince Tokugawa, and will interest themselves personally in the welfare of the poor and distressed.

THE LATE MR. GUTHRIE

The Navy Department officially announced on Wednesday that the cruiser Azuma will be despatched to the United States to carry the body of the late H.E. Mr. George W. Guthrie, the American Ambassador to the United States. But the date of the departure of the warship has not yet been decided.

The announcement of the Navy Department says that the Japanese Government desired to express the sympathy of the Japanese Government and public for the death of the American Ambassador and to convey the remains of the late Ambassador on a Japanese warship. The Government had also asked the Washington authorities that in the event of the acceptance of the proposal to have the body of the late Ambassador conveyed to the United States on a Japanese warship, the United States Government will make an exception to the neutrality regulations regarding the coaling and other necessary preparations for the warship at the American port in the discharge of her mission.

The Japanese Government has received the consent of the American Government to the proposal and the cruiser Azuma has been selected for the mission.

When the body of the late Ambassador is carried on board the cruiser, a detachment of marines will furnish a Guard of Honour.

Upon the departure of the warship bearing the body of the late Ambassador, a salute of nineteen guns will be fired.

As soon as the preparations on board the cruiser Azuma are made for the trip, the vessel will proceed to Yokohama there to await the convenience of the American Embassy and Mrs. Guthrie.

One of the warships, it is expected, of the U.S. Asiatic Fleet now at Shanghai, will soon reach Yokohama to be present when the Adzuma sails on her sad mission. The report that an American warship would escort the Adzuma is discredited.

Mrs. Guthrie, widow of the Ambassador, it was learned at the American Embassy yesterday, will take passage by one of the steamships leaving Yokohama about the same time as the Japanese warship and will be in San Francisco a few days ahead.

A dispatch from San Francisco to the "Asahi" states that the Chamber of Commerce at Los Angeles, California, has applied to the Japanese Consul at San Francisco to be allowed to extend a welcome to the officers and crew of the Japanese cruiser Adzuma, during the vessel's stay in port.

ENGLAND'S SHIPPING LOSSES

According to the statistics made by the Department of Communications, since the beginning of the European war England had lost 903 steamers, totalling 2,674,679 tons, by the end of 1916. The number of ships lost is barely more than one-tenth of the total ships of England.

Of the 903 steamers lost, 748 vessels with a total tonnage of 2,230,431 tons, were sunk, and 61 ships with 239,931 tons were damaged. Eighty ships, aggregating 171,603 were confiscated by Germany, nine ships with 12,496 were confiscated by Turkey, and five vessels with 20,218 were confiscated by other allies of Germany.

COMMERCIAL MAGNATES FEAST MR. WANG TAH-SIEH

Mr. Wang Tah-sieh, the Chinese special envoy, who had a very busy programme on Saturday last when he was the guest of honour at luncheons and receptions given him by the Tokyo Chamber of Commerce, the Tokyo Business Men's Association and the Japan-China Association (Nikka Kyokai), was also the chief guest at a dinner given by the Japan Foreign Trade Association at the Seiyoken, Tsukiji, in the evening of the same day. Besides the envoy, the members of his suite, Mr. Chang Tsuo-hsiang, the Chinese Minister in Tokyo, and many prominent officials of the Foreign Office and leading traders and bankers of the city were present as guests. Mr. Kenzo Ikeda, the president of the Association, made a speech welcoming the envoy in a few well-chosen words.

Mr. Wang, the chief guest, made a reply in which he dwelt on the importance of realizing closer friendship between Japan and China, saying that the peoples of the two neighbouring countries should not rest satisfied at merely discussing the necessity of closer relationship between the two nations as hitherto, but should strive to materialize that much coveted theory. The need of the present day was fact and not the theory.

The question of promoting friendly relationship between Japan and China had been fully discussed in the past and its importance was well recognized by peoples of both countries, so that steps must be taken for making the much talked of theory a realized fact. Referring to commercial traffic between the two nations, the envoy stated that the international trade could be compared to veins of blood in the human body, by which means warm friendship between the two nations concerned could be nurtured and promoted. The development of the trade between Japan and China was the important key of cementing the bond of friendship between the two peoples for which purpose it was desirable to form an association of leading traders and business men of the two countries aiming at the advancement and development of the international commerce between Japan and China. The envoy concluded by expressing his wish to realize the closer friendship between the two countries by fomenting closer commercial relations between the two nations and placing the mutual economic interests on a stronger and closer basis. The meeting was a success being attended by a large number of the members of the association representing banking, trading and industrial community in Tokyo.

The businessmen of Tokyo held a theatre party in honour of Mr. Wang Tah-sieh and party at the Imperial Theatre on Sunday. To the regular programme for March, a special dance by the actresses was performed in honour of the guests.

Baron Kondo, Baron Okura and Mr. R. Toyama and others representing the businessmen of Tokyo, acted as the hosts of the day. During the intermission, a banquet was held for the invited guests, when Baron Kondo spoke on behalf of the hosts and said that the coming of Mr. Wang as the special Envoy of the Chinese Republic, bringing the friendly message of the Chinese Government and people to the Japanese Imperial Court and the public, was the proof of the amicable relations between the two nations.

Mr. Wang responded to the address of Baron Kondo, and said that he deeply appreciated the courtesies extended to him and his party by the Imperial Court and the Japanese public, and he was pleased to take back to China the pleasant impression of the good will of the Japanese towards China.

Among those present were Marquis and Marchioness Komura, Viscount and Viscountess Kiyoura, Count S. Tokugawa, Count Terauchi, General Oshima, Baron Den, Minister of Communications, Mr. Matsumuro, Minister of Justice, Mrs. Matsumuro, Mr. Nakashoji, Minister of Agriculture and Commerce.

COMING W. C. T. U. CONVENTION

Madame Kaji Yajima has lived to see the coming of the twenty fifth National Convention of the Japanese Women's Christian Temperance Union, which she herself founded thirty years ago. And as President, she expects to attend all the sessions, which, at 85, she is able to. The place of the convention this year is in Tokyo at the Friends' Girls' School, 30, Koun-cho, Mita, Shiba, where the first session will be held on Saturday evening, March 31st. At this time the delegates from all over the Empire will be welcomed.

The next day, Sunday the 1st of April, is to be devoted to the dedication of the beautiful new National Headquarters building, at 46 Sanmachi Sanchome, Akasaka. This building is another of Madame Yajima's dreams which she has lived to see realised. At the service beginning at 1 p.m. one of the interesting events will be the unveiling of a bust of the founder, who so well deserves a permanent place in the building which is now her home. That evening will also see a service at the Headquarters in memory of those members and officers who have died during the year.

On the morning of the 2nd of April the first business session opens at the Friends' Girls' School, but the afternoon session will be held at the Rescue Home (Ji-Ai-Kan) in Hyakunin-machi, Okubo. Here the Foreign Auxiliary of the W.C.T.U. in co-operation with the Japanese conduct one of the most valuable branches of the work. The scene changes again in the evening, for a large banquet is to be held at the Tsukiji Seiyoken, at 6 o'clock in commemoration of the 50th Anniversary of the City of Tokyo and of the 25th National Convention of the W.C.T.U. To this, leading Government and educational officials are invited, and all interested, both men and women, are cordially urged to be present. Tickets for those not delegates are 1.50 yen.

But the banquet is not the only session of the conference to which men are invited, for on Tuesday, the 3rd, after a morning at the school devoted to business, the conference will adjourn to the auditorium of the Higher Commercial School, Nishiki-cho, Kanda. Prominent Educationalists and all the Primary teachers of the city are invited to this meeting to consider Purity instruction in the schools.

An evening session devoted to business, held at the school in Mita, and a morning and afternoon one the next day. Wednesday the 4th will close the conference, which to one who understands Japanese, will be well worth attending from start to finish, and to one who does not, will offer, at any of the sessions, a glimpse of what energetic, business-like, Christian Japanese women can do.

ENGINE-DRIVER MEETS DEATH IN TUNNEL

While a freight train was passing through the Karuizarwa Tunnels on night of the 22nd an engine driver was suffocated to death by the smoke of the engine which filled the tunnel, and another driver and two firemen were made unconscious by the smoke.

The freight train No. 171 made up of twelve cars pulled by two engines neared No. 17 tunnel about nine o'clock at night, when it was found that the water in the boiler of the first engine had run down, and it became impossible to pull the train. Water was eventually obtained and the train started again, but while passing Tunnel No. 21, the drive wheels continually slipped, and the train made little headway.

The slow progress through the tunnel, and the efforts of the firemen to make sufficient steam to pull the train, filled the tunnel with heavy smoke from the crude oil used as fuel. The engineer of the first engine became unconscious, and the engineer of the second engine took his place. But before the train had proceeded any further, the second driver also succumbed to the smoke and fell unconscious.

The firemen of the two engines managed to work the engines, but before the train passed the tunnel No. 26th, Gentaro Furukawa, the driver of the first engine died. When the train reached Karuizawa early yesterday morning, several hours behind schedule, the remaining fireman also fell unconscious.

It is said that this is the first accident of the kind that ever happened in Japan, and the authorities of the Imperial Railways were at once despatched to the scene to ascertain the cause of the accident. Several years ago oil was substituted as fuel on the engine pulling trains through the tunnels, and it was thought that oil would be much safer than coal. The chief reason for using oil as fuel was to prevent the occurrence of such an accident.

THE NEW FACTORY LAW

Among the exhibitions, given under the auspices of the Fukushima Spinning Company, of articles and compositions by the 1,137 girls in the employ of the factory, a composition written by a girl of fifteen was found dealing with the Government's Factory Act. It reads:

"It was in September last year that the Factory Law was promulgated for the sake of us workers. The employers and employes in Japanese factories have always lacked public spirit; the employers have always wanted more labour than what they could pay for at the same time, and the employees have always tried to escape as much work as possible. This trend has brought about a harsh and severe supervision from employers. When once a worker become ill he is immediately dismissed without any compensation so that much suffering has been caused. Our Government have long made a study of the case and have finally taken steps which appeared in the form of the Act passed lately.

"But there still remains that habit of trying to shirk work on the part of labourers and the over-stepping of the regulations by the employers; such a tendency bodes ill for both sides. It is moving contrary to the spirit of the Government who have looked to protect workers. If the Government protects us it is up to us to live up to our contract."

TOKYO'S NEW HEAD POST OFFICE IS READY NOW

On April first, the Central Post Office of Tokyo will move to its new building in front of the Tokyo Station. To place the Office at the centre of the city and near the Tokyo Station, a new building was planned as soon as the station was constructed, and it is now ready for occupation.

Although the new Central office will be officially opened on April first, the Parcel Post department of the Central office, moved to the new building on March 15th.

The new building is equipped up to date, and every convenience to facilitate the handling of mail, has been installed. The main feature of the building, is the installation of an electric car line from the basement of the building to the platform of the station. The electric car to convey mail matter from and to the station platform will pass under the street, and on arrival at the station, the bags will be carried on elevators to the platforms. This feature will greatly facilitate the speedy despatch and distribution of mails.

An excellent lighting system has been installed to give every room in the building comfortable and clear light, day and night. The new post office is in one sense the model post office in Japan. On March 28th the new building was thrown open for the inspection of the invited guests.

UNCLE SAM DOUBLES POLL TAX

Steamship companies of Japan have received notice from the United States Government that the poll tax levied upon foreigners entering the country will be increased to eight dollars from May first. The poll tax was formerly four dollars but according to the report received those who are under sixteen years of age will not be taxed, although formerly even a baby was taxed four dollars.

The details of the new regulation have not reached Japan, but the steamship companies which run their ships to the United States will hereafter collect eight dollars from every passenger booked to the United States. It has been customary for the steamship companies to collect the poll tax from the passengers and hand them to the United States authorities.

The passengers who leave for the United States on board the O.S.K. steamer Mexico Maru on April 14th will be the first to pay the increased amount.

CHINESE OFFICERS COMING

The Chinese Government has decided to send seven picked army officers to this country for the prosecution of military studies. They consist of three sub-lieutenants of cavalry and four sub-lieutenants of infantry, the former will matriculate at the military cavalry school at Shimoshizu and the latter at the infantry school at the same place. The officers will arrive during this month to enter the respective schools from the beginning of the new term that opens early next month. The Chinese Government has further decided to send about 30 army officers to this country for similar purposes in December next. Most of them will enter the military cadets school and the military artillery and engineering college at Ichigawa, a few of higher rank are to be admitted to the military Staff College, where they will receive training in advanced military science required for staff officers.

SCIENCE LABORATORY TO BE ERECTED SOON

The permission for the establishment of the Scientific Laboratory was issued by the Minister of the Department of Agriculture and Commerce on March 22nd, and the actual preparation for the establishment of the Laboratory will be commenced at once.

Baron Shibuzawa has just returned from a trip through the western parts of the country where he went to solicit contributions to the Laboratory, and more than one million yen have been already promised. The Japanese Government will give the Laboratory a subsidy of two million yen, and the Imperial Court has conferred the sum of one million yen towards expenses.

It is reported that H.I.H. Prince Fushimi will be appointed President of the Laboratory, and as one of the two Vice-Presidents, Baron Shibuzawa will be named, but no one has been selected to occupy the chair of the other Vice-Presidency.

Dr. S. Sakura, Dean of the College of Science, Tokyo Imperial University is reported to be named as Director of the Laboratory. The site for the Laboratory is not yet decided, but a report says that the laboratory will be probably built at the site of the former power warehouse of the army at Meguro.

YAMAHIKO STRUCK OFF

The destroyer Yamahiko (268 tons) will be struck off on April 1 owing to age. The destroyer was formerly a Russian ship and was captured by the Japanese navy in the Russo-Japanese war and placed in active service on October 19, 1905. She is a third class destroyer, with a speed of 23 knots and carrying 2 3-inch guns and 4 3-pounders, and was built at the Russian navy yard at Koulpinoisshowsky.

NEWS & NOTES

The Women's University at Mojiro will hold the graduation ceremony to-day.

The opening of the Asano Dock Co., Tsurumi, will be celebrated at 2 p.m. to-day.

A new telephone exchange office will be erected at Koishikawa, and will be opened for business from October.

The establishment of the Kanagawa branch of the Japan Weights and Measures Association was celebrated on last Sunday in the local Kencho.

Easter Day Services will be held to-morrow (Sunday) at the Church of the Transfiguration Nikko by the Rev. Dr. Geo. Wallace of Tokyo.

The construction of the Atami line of the Imperial Railways will be started in the early part of this month. The work will take six years, and twenty three tunnels will be bored, the longest of which will be four miles and 50 chains

The hospital attached to the Osaka Medical college, which was burnt down by fire some time ago, will be rebuilt at a cost of 700,000 yen. It is reported that the work on the new buildings will probably be started in this month.

A movement is on foot for the establishment of an Oriental Trust Guaranty and Exchange Co. with American and Japanese capital. The promoters are reported to contemplate opening an exchange in Shanghai forthwith.

Mr. N. Saigo and two others have formally applied to the Municipality for the establishment of a music hall in the Yokohama Park. They propose a small admission fee for five years, in order to recover the 20,000 yen required for the buildings.

Another proposal made by an American resident in Yokohama for the boring of a tunnel between Moto-machi, Yokohama, and the neighbourhood of the Kirin Brewery, Bluff, was informally referred to the Municipal Council by Mayor Ando. This scheme would certainly be for the benefit of public communication.

The Tokai Steel Works is now expected to be established somewhere in Kansai district. The site of the said works was recently selected at Hiranuma-cho, Yokohama, but Tokyo capitalists are said to have prevailed upon the shareholders in Yokohama for the transfer of the site, on the ground that coal and labour are dearer in Yokohama than in Kansai district.

The abolition of the tipping system on the Japanese Imperial railways and the establishment of a system at the stations of providing tickets to passengers who require the services of red-caps bearing the amounts of charges for carrying luggage and parcels for them are now contemplated by the railway authorities. The problem under the first head has been a subject to which the railway authorities have been paying special attention.

Hitomi Kawakami, who murdered the Rev. William Alexander Campbell and Mrs. Campbell at Karuizawa on the night of July 16 last year and was sentenced to death was executed on the 29th ullt. at the Tokyo Prison. It is said that when asked by the authorities whether he had any will to leave, the culprit replied in the negative. He expressed deep repentance for the crime and met his death bravely.

One hundred and eight steamers with an aggregate tonnage of 291,774 tons were sunk by German submarines during 19 days commencing March 1, according to the latest investigation made by the Tokyo Marine Insurance Co. Shipping of 15,000 tons was daily lost on the average. To classify the victims by nationality they were:—British 46; Italian 5; French 7; Norwegian 27; Swedish 1; Greek 4; Spanish 2; Danish 2; Dutch 1; Japanese 2; Russian 2; American 5; Persian 1; Portuguese 1 and unknown nationality 2.

For wireless message between Japan (through the Funabashi Station) and Hawaii and San Francisco and vice versa, the authorities concerned recently gave permission for the use of the following codes, provided that the name of the code used be stated in each message:—A.B.C. Code, 4th and 5th editions, Bentley's Complete Phrase Code, Lieber's Standard Telegraphic Code, Scott's Code and Western Union. In addition to the above, it is now announced that the A.B.C. Code, improved 5th edition, and Excelsior's Code may be used for wireless messages as mentioned above.

The Imperial Railway Bureau has decided to make a survey of a route selected for the proposed Osaka Harbour Railway. This will be welcome news for many people. The authorities hoped to purchase the necessary land within this fiscal year, but it is very doubtful if they will be able to do so as there are only a few days of the fiscal year left. The cost of construction of the railway, Y.9,297,000, has been already approved by the Diet. The line will connect Imamiya with the Harbour Works; three iron bridges will be constructed to span the Shirinashigawa, the Kizugawa and its tributary. The Osaka Municipality now intends to push on with the work of improving the Harbour.

From the first of this month greater facility is provided for giving the alarm of a fire by telephone to the fire brigade headquarters in the Metropolitan Police Board of Tokyo or to any of the fire brigade branch offices scattered over the city. The Tokyo city authorities have instituted a new system of telephone service by which any one, who has noticed the outbreak of a fire, may report to any telephone exchange office in the city and the telephone girl who received the report will inform the same without loss of time the nearest fire brigade office in the city with which the telephone exchange office has been specially connected. The wire for this purpose will be kept always disengaged, ready for use at amoment's notice.

No private wireless stations are found at present in Japan, where the wireless telegraph service is a State enterprise, but at least two private stations will shortly be established in Tokyo. The Oki Company in Shiba and the Annaka electric works in Shibuya, some time ago, filed applications with the Department of Communications for permission to build private wireless stations according to provisions of the wireless telegraphic law, and the applications have just been granted. The work on these authorized new stations will be started soon, but they will not handle any public communications being only used for the experiment of various wireless instruments. The Japan radiograph apparatus manufactory is reported to have applied to the authorities for the same purpose.

A general meeting of the Dai Nippon Silk Association takes place in the Yokohama Park at 2 p.m. this afternoon. The selection of Yokohama as the present rendezous is in consideration of the establishment of the Yokohama branch of the Association, and of the fact that Yokohama's silk exports last year broke the records by 260 million yen. Among those, who are expected to deliver congratulatory addresses, are Marquis Matsukata, Baron Shibusawa, Governor Ariyoshi, Mayor Ando, Mr. Ch. Bastin doyen of the Consular Body in Yokohama, Mr. Alex. Cumming, President of the Foreign Board of Trade, Mr. K. Otani, President of the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Ed. Bosshart, representing foreign exporters, and Mr. I. Wakao, representing Japanese exporters.

RELATIONS BETWEEN ENTENTE AND CHINA

The Entente Governments, including Japan, are waiting for China to make her international attitude clear and definite before they will give consent to China's proposition to open negotiations on the raise of her customs duties, the postponement of the Boxer indemnity payments, and the revision of the treaty forbidding Chinese soldiers to enter the foreign concessions in Tientsin. China has stopped at the point of severing diplomatic relations with Germany, and has since been procrastinating before going any further.

In disposing of the Germans in China, she is showing much hesitation. Though almost all the German consuls in the various cities have now flocked to Shanghai to take passage from there to the United States, many secretaries or other members of consular staff are being left to be stationed to assist the Dutch to protect the German interests, apparently with the consent of the Chinese authorities. Of more than fifty Germans in the service of customs offices less than twenty have been discharged. Besides, China has not done anything vis-à-vis Austro-Hungary, the German ally. These facts all go towards preventing China from being able to formally approach the Entente Governments with the request to take up the discussion of her demands. All the rumours hitherto that had it that China had presented her counter-proposals to the Entente ministers in Peking were denied by the Foreign Office here yesterday.

It is understood that until after China has proved sincere and earnest in clearing her ground of Teutonic influence, the Entente Governments are going to watch the course of events, listening to no proposals by China even should she present them.

To this indecisive attitude on the part of China, a high official of the Foreign Office ascribed the reason for the delay of the American bankers' decision to participate in the Five-Power-Loan to China. Negotiations over this matter have been in progress for several months in New York, but do not seem to assume any definite form. Information is to hand indicating that the American International Corporation of New York and the Continental Commercial Bank of Chicago perfected an understanding between themselves to take up the American share of financing the Chinese Government. These great financial institutes of America are ready to take part in the five Powers' scheme even, it is reported, in spite of the recent reiteration of Secretary of State Lansing's that the U.S. Government has not altered its policy not to back up any political loan to China. American financiers like British financiers, are beginning to learn to carry on their foreign investments without being backed up by the Government. What is causing them, therefore, to delay in their decision on the present loan is China's vagueness in determining her course against Germany. For should she actually join the war on the side of the Allies the probabilities are that she would successfully secure the consent of the Entente Governments to raise her tariff rate to 5 per cent. ad valorem, and to the postponement of the payment of the Boxer indemnity. This would increase her annual revenue by thirty or forty million yen, making it unnecessary for China to obtain a loan.

THAT HUN PLOT TO INDUCE JAPAN TO BETRAY ALLIES

Washington, Feb. 28.—The Associated Press is enabled to reveal that Germany, in planning unrestricted submarine warfare and counting its consequences, proposed an alliance with Mexico and Japan to make war on the United States if this country should not remain neutral.

Japan, through Mexican mediation, was to be urged to abandon her allies and join in the attack on the United States. Mexico, for her reward, was to receive general financial support from Germany, reconquer Texas, New Mexico and Arizona—lost provinces—and share in the victorious peace terms Germany contemplated.

Details were left to German Minister von Eckhardt in Mexico City, who by instructions signed by German Foreign Minister Zimmermann, at Berlin, Jan. 19, 1917, was directed to propose the alliance with Mexico to Gen. Carranza and suggest that Mexico seek to bring Japan into the plot.

These instructions were transmitted to von Eckhardt through Count von Bernstorff, former German Ambassador here, now on his way home to Germany under safe conduct obtained from his enemies by the country against which he was plotting war.

Germany pictured to Mexico, by broad intimation, England and the Entente Allies defeated; Germany and her allies triumphant and in world domination by the instrument of unrestricted submarine warfare.

A copy of Zimmermann's instructions to von Eckhardt, sent through von Bernstorff is in possession of the United States Government. It is as follows.

Berlin, Jan. 19, 1917.

On Feb. 1 we intend to begin submarine warfare unrestricted. In spite of this, it is our intention to endeavour to keep neutral the United States of America.

If this attempt is not successful, we propose an alliance on the following basis with Mexico: That we shall make war together and together make peace. We shall give general financial support, and it is understood that Mexico is to reconquer the lost territory in New Mexico, Texas and Arizona. The details are left to you for settlement.

You are instructed to inform the President of Mexico of the above in the greatest confidence as soon as it is certain that there will be an outbreak of war with the United States and suggest that the President of Mexico, on his own initiative, should communicate with Japan suggesting adherence at once to this plan.

At the same time offer to mediate between Germany and Japan.

Please call to the attention of the President of Mexico that the employment of ruthless submarine warfare now promises to compel England to make peace in a few months.

(Signed). ZIMMERMANN.

The document has been in the hands of the Government since President Wilson broke off diplomatic relations with Germany. It has been kept secret, while the President has been asking Congress for full authority to deal with Germany, and while Congress has been hesitating. It was in the President's hands while Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg was declaring that the United States had placed an interpretation on the submarine declaration "never intended by Germany," and that Germany had promoted and honoured friendly relations with the United States "as an heirloom from Frederick the Great."

Of itself, if there were no other, the document is considered a sufficient answer to the German Chancellor's plaint that the United States "brusquely" broke off relations without giving "authentic" reasons for its action.

It supplies the missing link to many separate chains of circumstances, which until now have seemed to lead to no definite point.

It sheds new light upon the frequently reported but indefinable movements of the Mexican Government to couple its situation with the friction between the United States and Japan.

It adds another chapter to the celebrated report of Jules Cambon, French Ambassador in Berlin before the war of German's world wide plans for stirring strife on every continent where it might aid her in the struggle for world domination which she dreamed was at hand.

It adds a climax to the operations of Count von Bernstorff and the German Embassy in this country, which have been coloured with passport frauds, charges of dynamite plots and intrigues the full text of which never has been published.

It gives new credence to persistent reports of submarine bases on Mexican territory in the Gulf of Mexico.

It takes cognizance of a fact long recognized by American army chiefs, that if Japan ever undertook to invade the United States it probably would be through Mexico, over the border and into the Mississippi Valley to split the country in two.

It recalls that Count von Bernstorff, when handed his passports was very reluctant to return to Germany, but expressed a preference for asylum in Cuba.

It gives a new explanation to the repeated arrests on the border of men charged by American military authorities with being German intelligence agents.

Last of all, it seems to show a connection with Gen. Carranza's recent proposals to neutrals that exports of food and munitions to the Entente Allies be cut off, and an intimation that he might stop the supply of oil, so vital to the British navy, which is exported from the Tampico fields.

What congress will do, and how Members of Congress who openly have sympathized with Germany in their opposition to clothing the President with full authority to protect American rights will regard the revelation of Germany's machinations to attack the United States, is the subject to-night of the keenest interest.

Such a proposal as Germany instructed her Minister to make to Mexico borders on an act of war, if, actually, it is not one.

No doubt exists here now that the persistent reports during the last two years of the operations of German agents, not alone in Mexico but all through Central America and the West Indies are based on fact. There is now no doubt whatever that the proposed alliance with Mexico was known to high Mexican officials who are distinguished for their anti-Americanism. Among them are Rafael Zubaran, Carranza's Minister to Germany, and Luis Cabrera, Carranza's Minister of Finance.

It is apparent that the proposal had taken definite form when Zubaran returned to Mexico City from Berlin recently. His return from his foreign post was covered by the fact that Carranza had called in many of his diplomats for "conferences." Some time before that, Cabrera while still at Atlantic City in the conferences of the American-Mexican joint commission, had suggested in a guarded way to a member of the American section, that he regretted that the commission had not succeeded fully in settling the difficulties between Mexico and the United States, for, he said, he had hoped it might continue its work and make peace for the world.

When pressed for some details of how the commission could restore world peace, Cabrera suggested that the American republics controlled the destiny of the war by controlling a large part of its supplies. Mexico, he intimated, might do her part by cutting off exports of oil. The American commission dismissed his ideas as visionary.

Almost coincident with Zubaran's return from Germany, Cabrera returned to Mexico City, open in his expressions of anti-Americanism. Zubaran, before being sent abroad, had represented Gen. Carranza here while the Niagara mediation conferences were proceeding, and was no less avowedly anti-American than Cabrera.

Meanwhile, Baron von Schoen, Secretary of the German Embassy here, was transferred to the legation in Mexico City. No explanation could be obtained of the reason for his transfer, and such investigation as was possible failed to develop. Why a secretary from the United States should be sent to the German Legation in Mexico.

Baron von Schoen's association with the moxes, if any at all, does not appear. The only outward indication that he might have been connected with them is found in the fact that recently he had been detached from the German Embassy in Tokyo and was well acquainted with the Japanese Minister in Mexico City.

Carranza's peace proposal was openly pronounced an evidence of German influence in Mexico by officials here, who declared it was intended only to embarrass the United States. Then, apparently, some influences showed their effect on the course of the Mexican Government, and on Feb. 25 Cabrera, the Minister of Finance, issued a statement describing the "amazement" of the Mexican Government that the American newspapers should have interpreted Gen Carranza's proposal to cut off exports of munitions as a suggestion that he might cut off shipments of British oil. They were, Cabrera declared, "entirely groundless," and that feature of the situation ended. There was an intimation that Germany's astounding proposal that Japan turn traitor to her allies had been answered by Tokyo.

Count von Bernstorff's connection with the plot, further than serving as the channel of communication, is intensified by the fact that the German Embassy here was not merely the medium of delivering a message in this instance but was really a sort of headquarters for all the German missions in Central and South America.

The German Naval Attache, Capt. Boy-Ed, and the Military Attache, Capt. von Papen whose recall was forced by the State Department because of their military activities in this country, also were accredited to Mexico and between the outbreak of the war and their departure from this country made at least one visit there.

For months many naval officers here have believed that the mysterious German sea raiders of the South Atlantic must have found a base somewhere on the Mexican Coast and that such a base could not be maintained without the knowledge and consent of Mexican officials. Last November the British Charge at Mexico City presented to the Carranza Foreign Office a notification that if it was discovered that Mexican neutrality thus had been violated, the Allies would take "drastic measures" to prevent a continuance of that situation.

In a note almost insolent in tone Foreign Minister Aguilar replied to the charge that, in effect, it was the business of the Allies to keep German submarines out of Western waters, and that if they were not kept out, Mexico would adopt whatever course the circumstances might commend.

To German influences also have been attributed in some quarters the vigorous steps taken by the de facto Finance Minister to force loans from the Banco Nacional and the Bank of London and Mexico, owned by French and British capital. The institutions were closed by the Mexican officials and some of their officers imprisoned and held for weeks despite repeated protests by France, Great Britain and the United States.

Reports of German machine gunners in the Carranza army also have been persistent, although the relative importance of that to the proposed alliance is not fully established. It is recalled to-night, too, that last November, when the Mexican-American Joint Commission was making its futile effort to adjust the difficulties between the two countries, the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador at Mexico City, Count Kadman Kama Voikanya, made a trip to the United States on what he described as a secret mission.

A suggestion interpreted by some officials as an indication that Germany might have made approaches to Mexico at that time was made by Cabrera in an address at Philadelphia on Nov. 10.

"The foes of the United States will certainly assume to be friends of Mexico," said Cabrera, "and will try to take advantage of any sort of resentment Mexico may have against the United States. Mexico, nevertheless, understands that in case of a conflict between the United States and any other nation outside America her attitude must be one of continental solidarity."

It has been an open secret that Department of Justice agents in their investigations of plots to violate American neutrality by setting on foot armed expeditions in Mexico more than once have uncovered what appeared to be trails of the German Secret Service. A few days ago Fred Kaiser, suspected of being a German agent, was arrested at Nogales on charges brought under the neutrality statutes, Department of Justice agents declaring he had attempted to obtain military information on the American side of the border and had cultivated the society of American army officers with an apparent intention of promoting those efforts.

The full extent of the evidence of Germany's plotting against the United States, gathered by the American secret service, may become known only according to the course of the future relations between the two countries. It is known that much evidence of the operations of the German Embassy and persons who were responsible to it never has been permitted to come out, because officials preferred to guard against inflaming the public mind in the tense situation with Germany. The public amazement which a full exposition of the evidence in the hands of the Government could cause cannot be over-estimated.

SPRING HAS COME ONCE MORE TO BRIGHTEN US

The "Winter is past and the voice of the turtle dove is heard in our land." Only yesterday all was bleak and dreary, and no Sedan flower smiled on the roadside, but the Spring Zephyr has returned and is again with us bringing burning peach blossoms and cherry flowers to adorn and doubly embellish the fondly called "Flower Land of the East" with the charming floral beauty and the balmy air of the eastern mid-spring. Death prevailed over the world only yesterday and all nature seemed to be indulging in its weary long winter sleep with no sign of life, but at the gentle touch of Zephyr's hand, life has returned to the earth and its offspring. Yes, life was in the earth and it only wanted her gentle and soft touch to bring nature to life and make it green once again. In a few days more Tokyo, nay the whole length and breadth of our fairy-land, will be a-burning in the full swing of floral beauty and under the sway of cherry flowers, so emblematic of the spirit of the nation and land of the Rising Sun or the Cherry Land of the East.

Commencing with present week Tokyo and all leading cities and towns will witness most lively scenes as is usual in this season of the year. It is a well known fact that no people on the earth are so fond of flowers as the Japanese, the cherry flower viewing forming the greatest event of the year to Japanese and the annual event is the greatest pleasure to them. By flower viewing is usually meant an outing of a family or a group of friends, bent on cherry flower viewing, into the popular flower resorts in and out of the city, and it is a fashion for aristocratic circles or those who can afford to do so, to make a distant excursion to Yoshino, the well known historic resort in Yamato province, near Nara, and to pay a round of visits to the noted flower resorts about Kyoto, such as Higashiyama and Arashiyama, not only from the neighbourhood of Kyoto or Osaka, but from Tokyo or other distant places. For the ensuing few weeks Tokyo and vicinity will witness an immense concourse of people streaming into Uyeno, Mukojima, Asukayama, Koganei and along the bank of the Arakawa on the upper stream of the Sumida River to view the beautiful sight of cherry trees there in full bloom. Even those at the bottom of the social ladder, who usually lead a hand-to-mouth existence, never grudge a day or two for themselves to spend in flower viewing at this season of the year. We stand apart from those affected "sober" people, who would complain or pretend to complain about the nuisance of the clamorous, noisy crowds, who, as they would have it, spoil the pleasure the floral beauty affords. On the contrary we would endorse such merriments for the sake of the common weal, and especially among the lower classes, who pent up by their busy, tiresome daily drudgery year in and year out, eagerly look forward to this annual floral fête, which returns only once a year, with ever longing wishes to give vent to their sense of relaxation. All work and no play is proverbially admitted to make Jack a dull boy. Human nature displays its best side when under influence of nature, and of all floral offsprings of nature the cherry flower in its pure beauty and in its peculiar beauty, so characteristic of the national traits of Japan, appeals to every rank and every social strata alike. It is the flower of freedom and liberty, never to be monopolized by the nobility or by the rich or by poets, but to be enjoyed by all men of all classes. Before nature all men, whether of obscure origin or of distinguished birth, are all her children, and nature has created the earth and all its environments for the use and pleasure of her children. And in flowers, yes only in flowers, we see and recognize the embodiments of the idea of nature fully displayed, and to its best advantage. The immortal Saigyo, the most sober of all Japanese priest poets of old, has sung:

Negawaku ba
Hana no moto nite
Haru shinan,
Sono Kisaragi no
Mochizuki no koro.

(Ah, let me die in Spring time,
When the moon is full on high,
And the fragrant cheery blossoms
Fall upon me where I die.)

The ode, immortal as is the name of its author, and short as it is, well illustrates the national sense of the love of flowers of the Japanese people. The passing beauty of the cherry flowers, emblematic of the "heart of Japanese," will never wait for those indolent stay-at-home travellers, who are too weary and idle to go out and enjoy the full display of the beauty of the flora, which is proverbially known to last for only three days in its prime, later to give place to the equally beautiful wistaria, azalea, peony, sweet flags and divers other floral guests of the season.

Prompted by the genial weather of the past few days the cherries at Uyeno, Mukojima, Shiba Park, and Asukayama have begun to bloom, putting on an air to beckon the flower-loving people with their sweet smiles, fragrant with their floral offsprings as if to welcome the return of the happy Spring. Though the season is still too early for the prime of the floral beauty at Asukayama, Koganei and Kumagai, the flowers at Uyeno and Mukojima will be at their best next Saturday and Sunday, when these resorts will witness floods of humanity streaming in from all quarters and will present to the eye a very lively and enjoyable sight except the prevalent indulgence in saké, nay a Japanese crowd is proverbially good-natured and never more so than when in its cups. Koganei is one of the prettiest spring resorts in the suburban quarters of Tokyo and noted for its cherry groves; it is practically a long small struggling village with a swift narrow stream running through it for some 3 or 4 miles. The surrounding country is, however, low and rather uninteresting, but the cherries which are mostly two or three centuries old, and are the giants of their kind and enormously productive of flowers, make up for whatever lack of beauty there is elsewhere. The floral bank of the Arakawa, on the upper course of the Sumida, and Kumagai, in Saitama, which lies on a still higher reach of the same river, are all noted for their ancient and magnificent cherry trees, and moreover, the surrounding country-side affords a lovely landscape with the enchanted view of the mountain ranges of Musashi, Sagami and Hitachi soaring in the clear azure sky in the distance beckoning, as it were, through the window of the railway car, while the boundless stretch of barley fields with peach trees a-blooming and golden sheets of rape flowers intermingling here and there greet the eye on left and right as one passes in the train.

IMPROVE TOKAIDO LINE AT ATAMI SECTION

The construction of the railway tunnels on the Atami section of the Tokaido line, which on its completion about six years hence will replace the present line via Gotemba, is to be started early this month. To commence the work of the excavation of the railway tunnels on the new line, Mr. Tomita, the director of the Atami line construction office of the Railway Board, accompanied by Mr. Takiyama, engineering expert, and other officials and engineers, started for Atami a few days ago. Two latest machines for the boring of the railway tunnels which had been ordered from America have recently arrived at Yokohama and will be shortly conveyed to Atami. According to the chief expert, 23 tunnels are to be built on the line the longest tunnel being one to be excavated through the side of Tannayama, which traverses the foot of Mounts Higane, Kurodake and Takijiyama, belonging to Hakone Mountain range, and extends for a length of 4 miles 59 chains (about 26,000 feet), and therefore the longest railway tunnel in this country, being 1 mile 50 chains longer than the Sasago and Ikoma tunnels on the Shinetsu line, which are 3 miles in length. It is the tenth longest of the railway tunnels of the world being about one-third of the length of the Simplon tunnel, Switzerland, the world's longest railway tunnel.

The work of the construction is not so difficult as experienced in the excavation of the Sasago tunnel, which took about 8 years for the construction of single line. The nature of stratum is rather hard as the mountains belong to the Fuji volcanic belt and the land consists of Andesite rocks, which offers great convenience to the work of excavation and is no difficult work to bore through with the excellent boring machines of latest fashion. The Tanna tunnel will be of double tracks and as the work of construction is be started from both ends at the same time the work of boring is expected to be finished in three years and the construction of the tracks will require another three years so that the completion of the railway tunnel will take full six years. Of the total estimated expenditure required in the construction of the new railway line, amounting to 25,000,000 yen, about 15,000,000 yen will be expended in the construction of the 23 tunnels on the section, the average cost of construction per mile between Odawara and Numazu (30 miles) being 880,000 yen and the average cost for the tunnel being 350 yen per foot. The new line will have no sharp inclines as on the present Gotemba line, and the track within the tunnels of the new line will be made straight. Both in the number of tunnels and the length of the tunnel at Tannayama the new line will rank the foremost in the railway lines in the Far East.

ON THE FRENCH FRONT

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 27.—Reuter's representative at British Headquarters in France, under even date, telegraphs: "The British have occupied the large village of Longavesnes, the possession of which greatly improves our line between Roisel and Nurlu. They have also taken Equancourt, situated to the north of Nurlu."

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

London, Mar. 27.—Reuter's correspondent at British Headquarters in France, under date of March 27, telegraphs:

"Notwithstanding the continuance of adverse weather conditions, there has been considerable activity during the past 24 hours along the stretch of the western front, whereupon the eyes of the world are now fixed.

"The taking of Lagnicourt, referred to in last night's communiqué, straightens our line between Beaumetz and the outskirts of Croiselles, the sector of our advance which the enemy continues to dispute more vigorously than elsewhere. The enemy evidently regarded this position as one of importance for his covering forces to hold, as a determined counter-attack, in considerable strength, developed during the afternoon from the direction of Quesot.

"Our troops, however, were able to successfully defend all their gains, and the attack presently died away. Later in the day, an attempt to recover the place was renewed, but by this time some of our field-guns had been brought up in support; and when the Germans moved out into the open, preparatory to trying to rush our position, they met with a burst of shell-fire that speedily dispelled them. Altogether Lagnicourt has proved quite a costly little spot to the Boches. Yesterday, the enemy made another effort in considerable strength to capture a large farm north of Beaumetzles and Cambrai. After offering a stout resistance, our men fell back upon the village. They were not long before returning with reinforcements, however, and although the Germans were well-supplied with bombs and fought hard, they were presently driven out again, having suffered heavily from the great superiority of our own grenade throwers.

"The village of Longavesnes was captured by our cavalry yesterday. Its position in our hands greatly improves our line between Roisel and Nurlu."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 28.—The French on Tuesday, south of the Oise, followed up their success, by capturing all the lower forest of Coucy and the villages of Babisis, Veucevil and Coucht-la-ville, reaching the western outskirts of the forest of St. Gobain. The French, north of Soissons, made important progress north of Neuville, Surmangival and Leuille.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 28.—The French afternoon communiqué says:—"We continued our advance in the lower forest of Couchy, of which we have occupied the entire northern position. The enemy has been driven beyond the Barisis-Servais line.

"In a brilliant night attack, we carried the village of Couchy-le-Chateau, south of the forest and north of Soissons. We also captured a farm north-west of Margival and a point d'appui, which was strongly held by the enemy."

The German communiqué says: "Our reserves, between the Oise and Couchy-le-Chateau, gave way before a threatened encircling movement."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 28.—Reuter's correspondent with French Headquarters at Soissons, under date of March 26 writes:—The plateau Crouy, up the southern side of which the French are fighting their way in the teeth of fierce opposition, is the south-eastern projection of the vast Laon plateau. The French are steadily driving the enemy from position to position. The wilderness of mud has disappeared and men and guns advance over fields taking cover on the lines of wars of a decade ago. The frequent fusilading shows that the rifle has come into its own again.

The brilliant capture by the French of the "Red Bridge" over the ravine on the Maubeuge road, gave them the key to the whole Crouy plateau. The French are also pressing forward on the left in the vicinity of Marival, and on the right in the vicinity of Vregny. Every gain is followed by a counter-attack in which the Germans are recklessly and fruitlessly sacrificing men.

KOKUSAI-HAVAS

Paris, March 28.—Marshal von Hindenburg was greatly mistaken if he imagined that the destruction carried out by his soldiers in all territory which they have abandoned, would prove an obstacle in the path of the French and prevent them from being accompanied by their artillery and followed by their baggage. Roads have been repaired and artillery and munitions have followed the infantry methodically so that when the Germans have tried, in the last two days, either to take up the offensive again or resist, they have suffered vigorous rebuffs. The French advance has, therefore, continued and considerable progress has been realized on two capital points at the front. The first is southwest of St. Quentin, where the Germans were thrown back to within a league of the town, and secondly on the Oise, where the French captured Coucy-le-Chateau.

Although the Germans told these people countless lies to demonstrate how invincible they are, the people had a pretty good general knowledge of the true state of affairs in the world beyond the German lines. They say the German soldiers have been talking a good deal, especially latterly, and in spite of all efforts to conceal the truth from them, it is surprising how much they appear to know. People say they could almost gather the progress of the battle of the Somme by the change of demeanour of the Boches, who made no secret of their apprehensions at the prospect of facing another great British offensive this year. One possible reason for this retreat, which may well be the bugbear of the German High Command is the question as to whether they could get their men to face any such possible continuation of the attack.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 29.—A telegram from Paris reports that the Germans have evacuated St. Quentin. They are burning villages for miles behind their present lines, indicating a renewal of the retreat.

According to news from the Belgian forces, the Germans are also destroying the country in the vicinity of Ghent, Bruges and Zeebrugge, implying a retreat there also.

St. Quentin, a town in the French dep. of Aisne, on the Somme, 95 miles NE. of Paris and 33 S. of Cambrai The church of St. Quentin is a fine Gothic structure, dating from the 12th to the 15th century. The town-hall (15th-16th c.) is also a fine specimen of Gothic. The town is a centre of cotton industries which give employment to 130,000 hands in the making of calicoes, tulle. cretonnes, jaconets, muslin, merino, cambric, and gauze. Embroidery is largely prepared, and machinery, hats, paper, sugar, soap, and beer are manufactured The population is about 55,600. The Spaniards and an English contingent inflicted a crushing defeat upon the French in 1557. Shortly afterwards the town, after a brilliant defence by Coligny, capitulated to the Spanish army. In 1871 the Germans routed the army of Faidherbe here.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 29.—Cavalry, which continue to play a big part in the British advance on the western front, have captured two more villages. Since Tuesday, the British have pushed on along a 5-mile front between Longavesnes and Equancourt over a distance of 3,000 yards.

Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig in his Wednesday evening communiqué, says: "The cavalry have captured the villages of Villersfaucon and Saulcourt. We drove off an attack on Equancourt, inflicting considerable losses on the Germans. We have established ourselves at two points on the road between Doignies and Lagnicourt and made progress southward. Westward of Croiselles we met with strong resistance."

Reuter's representative at French headquarters says that the full atrociousness of the Germans in the evacuated territories is only now appearing. They not only broke open the vaults in the church-yards and used them for machine-gun shelters, but systematically pillaged the graves of the well-to-do to give them the lead linings from the coffins, and possibly the ornaments and jewels, if there were any. In several cases, the cemeteries were broken up and the remains of the dead scattered about, rubbish and filth being thrown into the graves.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, March 29.—Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Thursday communiqué, says: "After a sharp fight, we captured the village of Neuville Bourfouval. The enemy lost heavily."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 31.—The French, south of Ailette, made a successful attack on the enemy's position on the front Neuville-sur-Angival to Vregny, making considerable advance.

Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig announces: "We captured Heudecourt and made considerable progress east of it. We also are in possession of Martevillevermand and Sovecourt. The British artillery forced the enemy to retire from St. Emilie, which is now in our hands. We have, in addition, captured the villages of Jearncourt, Hersdelly and Hesbecourt. We captured posts in the neighbourhood of Otnonst St. Mein and Henin Siesajeud, after killing or capturing the whole garrison."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 31.—Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig in today's communiqué reports that the British have occupied the villages Ruyaulcourt, Sorel-le-grand, and Fins, and gained ground after sharp fighting in the neighbourhood of Headecourt.

The French north-east of Soissons have progressed in the Uregny-margival section, and ejected the enemy west of Maisons de Champagne from the trenches in which he gained a footing on March 28.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 31.—Reuter's Headquarters, telegraphing on Saturday afternoon said: We made considerable progress to-day, weakening and substantially deepening the bulge towards St. Quentin and biting into the enemy defenses between Croiselles and the Bapaume to Cambrai road.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, April 1.—Reuter's representative with British Headquarters in France, telegraphing this afternoon, says: "We are still advancing. The enemy opposition is weaker along the southern part of our new front. Consequently we have made the biggest advance in this sector, while from Beaumetz to Arras every gain was the result of hard fighting. We have seized a hill which brings us within four miles of the Cambrai to St. Quentin road, while further south our advance has reached a point barely four miles from the centre of St. Quentin."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Paris, April 1.—An expert commentator writes in the press: "We have reached the celebrated Lindenburg line. We will now pause in our operations until our new positions are consolidated and the weather improves."

KOKUSAI-HAVAS

Paris, April 1.- The French communiqués after speaking of the surprise attacks, and of the "coups de main" carried out on enemy lines generally resulting in the destruction of a fortified outpost, or the taking of a few prisoners, remark that the French excel in this kind of work in which they make use of their qualities of initiative, deftness and calmness.

The story of one of these little expeditions that took place quite recently in Argonne, in the famous Grurie Wood, where so much fighting took place in the first two years of the war, has been related by an eye-witness. We read:

The business was entrusted to a very young lieutenant in command of two subalterns, a sergeant and 35 men. The little band set out at sunset, and the enemy was taken by surprise and made only a faint resistance. A machine-gun that threatened to attack us obliquely was immediately silenced.

Grenades burst in dug-outs, green firework signals spouted in anxiety, a few revolvers went off in the earth-work; then a moment later, our men came back at the run, more numerous than when they left, driving a bunch of Germans before them. The whole manœuvre had lasted about 20 minutes. The result for the French was some twelve prisoners not counting twice that number killed and wounded. The cost to us was a few scratches only.

The Germans, who boast they have organized everything, have applied the division of labour to war and also have created attacking force "battle specialists" who are carefully reserved for operations on a large scale. The remainder is suitable only for doing full work and bearing the brunt of it.

With the French, everyone fights, everyone attacks and takes his share of the labour and honour.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, April 2.—The British are now within sight of the spires of St. Quentin, where the Germans have begun to loot the museums, picture-galleries and other works of art. The town is already ruined by fires and explosions. The strength of the St. Quentin position can be judged by the fact that it is defended by ten separate belts of barbed wire and well-protected from the rear. The enemy is using a new field-gun, which outranges its predecessors by 2,000 yards. He is also employing light guns drawn by a pair of horses. There are numerous traces of the effectiveness of the British gunners, and one graveyard contains 2,000 graves.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, April 2.—The French have captured several systems of trenches and strong points east of Neuville-sur-Margival. The enemy, after a vigorous defense, was driven back to the outskirts of Vauzillon and Tauffaux. He suffered heavily; we captured 108 prisoners and four machine-guns.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, April 2.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Sunday evening communiqué, says: "During March, we captured 1239 German soldiers, sixteen officers, three field-guns, twenty-five trench mortars and sixty machine-guns. From January to March our captures numbered 4,600.

"On Sunday morning, we occupied Savy, four miles to the west of St. Quentin. There was considerable fighting, and we inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy. In the afernoon, we took possession of Savy Wood, one mile to the west of the village. We captured Vendelles on Saturday night and Epehy and Peizière on Sunday morning, making progress north-west of Croiselles."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, April 2.—Reuter's correspondent at Headquarters telegraphs: "We have made another important advance in the northern sector and carried by assault the desperately defended town of Croiselles and also Longette, besides the stubbornly contested village of Doignies. The British force, advancing from the direction of Vermand captured successively the villages of Villecholles and Attily, so that our line now forms an arc around the upland on which Bois d'Hornon is situated, about half a league north and west of Savy. Nearly four hundred killed or wounded Germans were picked up after we had occupied Savy."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, April 3.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Monday evening communiqué, says: "We have made substantial progress at numerous points. Northeastward of Savy, we carried by assault the villages of Francilly, Elemycy and Holnon. We captured six field-guns and are now within two miles of St. Quentin.

"We have captured St. Quentin Wood, Villecholles and Heudecourt and have established posts at Templers-le-Guerard and Vequelette farm. Two miles eastward of Heudecourt, we attacked and captured a series of strongly held positions on a front of ten miles. They formed part of the advanced defenses between the Bapaume-Cambrai road and Arras. During this operation, in which the enemy offered determined resistance and suffered heavy casualties, we captured the villages of Doigmies, Louverval, Noreuil, Longatte, Ecoust-St. Mein and Croiselles, taking 182 prisoners. Our artillery broke up all counter-attacks."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 28.—The Russian official communique reads: "The enemy attacked us on the west bank of the river Shara. The second attack was accompanied by asphyxiating gases which compelled us to fall back to the east bank."

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Mar. 28.—Western front. The enemy artillery has developed near Postava a more than usual lively activity. Southeast of Baronovichi, the enemy, after an artillery and minethrowing preparation attacked the Russian positions on the western bank of the Shara. The first attack was repulsed but by the second attack, in which gas was used by the enemy, the Russians were pressed back to the eastern bank of the river. East of Baranovichi and northeast of Kimpolung two enemy aeroplanes were brought down and the aviators taken prisoner.

Firing and reconnaissances continue on the Rumanian and on the Caucasus front.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, March 29.—Western front. The Germans after an artillery preparation attacked the Russian positions east of Illuxt, but were repulsed. A German attack north-west of Postava was also repelled. In the night before March 27, the enemy after an artillery preparation, attacked the Russian positions near Bogushe and succeeded for a time in seizing a part of the Russian trenches, but by a Russian counterattack the front was reestablished. On the Stohod near Borovno, the Russians performed a gasattack. Having blown up a subterranean gallery East of Berezin the Russian scouts rushed into the enemy trenches and took 20 Germans prisoner. A German cuirassed train fired at the Russian positions east of Korosmezo.

Rumanian front. South of the river Zabaniosh, the Russian troops are fighting for the positions, which were given up on March 23. South of the river Usa, 20 kilometres south-west of Moineschi, the enemy attacked the Russian positions and seized a part of them after a stubborn fight. The advance of small enemy's parties along the railway Focsani to Mereschi has been repulsed.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, March 31.—Western front. Twenty kilometres south-east of Baranovichi near Colodovichi the Russians in the night before March 29 performed a gas attack; in the meantime the artillery was attacking the enemy's trenches with chemical shells. Near Martynovka on the Oginsky Canal, the enemy attacked the Russian positions developing a strong artillery fire. He succeeded in entering the Russian trenches, but was repulsed by a counter-attack and took to flight into his trenches. Unimportant German attacks north of Illuxt and in the Postavy region have been repulsed. South of Pogaichi a German aeroplane was knocked down and the aviators, two German officers, taken prisoner.

Caucasus front. Firing and reconnaissances continue also on the Rumanian front. The Russian artillery fired successfully on the German monitors, which tried to approach Galatz.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, April 1.—Western front. North-west of the Kapul mountains Russian scouts scattered a number of enemy detachment. After a bayonet encounter 2 officers, one sergeant and 16 soldiers were taken prisoner. Near Kirlibaba, the Austrians, about 3 companies in strength, with the support of artillery attacked the Russian positions. They succeeded, after repeated attacks, in entering the Russian trenches, but were dislodged by counter-attacks and the front was re-established. Firing continues on the rest of the front.

Rumanian front. The advance of the enemy south of Jacobeni and Valeputna was repulsed by artillery fire.

Caucasus front. The Turks 25 kilometres south-west of Giumishhan unsuccessfully attacked the Russian positions. On the rest of the front firing and reconnoissances continue.

A Russian aeroplane detachment has been dropping bombs on the harbour, the docks and the vessels at Braila.

ON THE ITALIAN FRONTS

London, Mar. 25.—The Italian communique to-day reads: "On the Trentino front, artillery action was hindered by weather conditions. Constantine the Great, who rebuilt the town, made it the seat of a bishop. The modern Guzzeh is a collection of mere villages, its only building of interest the great mosque. Pop. 25,000.

PRESIDENT WILSON ASKS WAR AGAINST HUNS

New York, Mar. 30.—An Associated Press wireless message from Berlin quotes Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, in his speech in the Reichstag to-day as declaring that Germany never desired war with the United States and does not do so now. The submarine policy of Germany, says the Chancellor, is necessary for the defense of the country. If America considers she has a just cause for war, Germany will not bear the responsibility alone.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 30.—Speaking in the Reichstag to-day, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the Imperial German Chancellor, referred to the forthcoming extraordinary session of the United States Congress whereat the "question of war or peace between us will be decided." He declared that Germany never had the slightest intention to attack the United States and does not desire war with America to-day. The renunciation of the repeated request of the United States for Germany to abandon unrestricted submarinism was due to England's intensified blockading of Germany. Germany, he added, would not have to bear the burden of responsibility if America regards the refusal as a reason to declare war on Germany.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, Mar. 31.—At the Cabinet's final sitting before the special session of Congress on April 2, various members submitted their reports of the steps taken to prepare for war. These showed that everything possible had been done to co-ordinate the country's resources. The general impression is that America is about to take an active part in the war, the speech of the German Chancellor being the last straw.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar 31.—In the Reichstag, Herr Zimmermann, the Foreign Secretary, replying to the Socialist Haase's criticism with regard to the embitterment of Germany's relations with the United States stated that he had instructed the German Minister to Mexico to take steps to negotiate a Mexico-Japanese alliance directed against the United States, but these instructions were to come into operation only if the United States declared war on Germany. Carranza would not yet have learned of these instructions if the United States in an objectionable manner had not published them. The cause of the leakage was being investigated.

After complaining about the hostile attitude of the United States Herr Zimmermann proceeded to defend the endeavour to enlist the support of nations notoriously antagonistic to the United States.

When he thought about a Mexico-Japanese alliance he had been guided by the consideration that German troops already have to fight a superior enemy force.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

Washington, April 2.—President Wilson appeared before Congress to-day, and asked Congress to declare that a state of war was existing between the United States and Germany. He said that war with Germany involved practical co-operation with the Entente, including liberal financial credit. He urged the raising of 500,000 men for universal military service, but made it clear that he desired no action to be taken against Austria or other nations.

He said: "We are about to accept the gage of battle with this natural foe of liberty, and shall, if necessary, spend the whole force of the nation to check and nullify its pretensions to power. We are prepared to fight thus for the ultimate peace of the world, the liberations of its peoples, [the Germans included]; for the rights of nations great and small and the privilege of men everywhere to chose their way of life and obedience. The world must be made safe for democracy and its peace must be planted upon the trusted foundations of political liberty."

After the delivery of the President's address, a joint resolution declaring that a state of war exists between the German Government and the Government and people of the United States was introduced. It declared that the recent acts of the Imperial Government of Germany were acts of war. The resolution authorized the President to "take immediate steps to put the country into a thorough state of defense and exert all its power and employ all its resources to carry on the war against the German Government and bring the conflict to a successful termination." The matter was then referred to the Foreign Affairs Committees of the respective Houses.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

New York, April 2.—President Wilson, in his address to Congress, said that one of the things which had served to convince the United States that Prussian autocracy could never be America's friend, was its criminal intrigues against American unity.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

Washington, Apr. 2.—President Wilson's address before Congress which is expected to be delivered to-day will immediately be telegraphed to the American diplomats abroad. It is understood that foreign governments, on receipt, may assume, so closely does it approximate the recognition of a state of war, as necessity dictates, the issuing of neutrality proclamations.

Mr. Henry D. Flood, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs in the House of Representatives, has prepared a resolution declaring that a state of war exists between the United States and Germany; that the President be authorized to take immediate steps to put the country in a thorough state of defense and exert all its power and employ all its resources to carry on the war and bring the conflict to a successful termination.

The Congress will meet to-day in extraordinary session to decide the question of war with Germany.

The re-election of Mr. Champ Clarke as speaker is probable, signifying Democratic control in the House of Representatives. A later message says that the Democrats re-elected Mr. Clarke by 217 votes to 205.

President Wilson has sent his address to the public printer. Resolutions have already been drafted declaring that a state of war exists in expectation of the President's recommendations. An extraordinary wave of patriotic fever is sweeping over the city. Flags are floating from windows, men and women are wearing miniature flags on their coats and children are carrying flags to school.

A delegration of pacifists to-day called upon Senator Lodge, the ranking Republican in the Senate on the foreign relations committee, and importuned him to vote against war. Senator Lodge, in reply, declared that he would vote for war if the President recommended it. One of the pacifist delegates then proceeded to assault Mr. Lodge, who promptly floored his opponent.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, April 2.—The population is on the tiptoe of expectation awaiting President Wilson's message to Congress to-morrow. Messages from patriotic societies are pouring into White House in support of the President. Special trains are being run to this city, carrying war delegations. The pacifists are equally busy advertising wholesale in favour of arbitration.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

New York, Apr. 3.—Newpapers in the United States, irrespective of their political affiliations, unanimously support President Wilson's declarations. The "Tribune," a Republican organ, finds no praise too high for the words and purposes of the President. The "Sun" rejoices that the country has found a leader ready to lead in the direction of duty towards the common interests of humanity.

The Chicago "Herald" says that beyond doubt the vast majority of the people are with the President heart and soul.

These are typical of the comments everywhere. There were remarkable scenes of patriotism when the news of the Address by the President were circulated in the city. Mr. Gerard announced the President's declaration from an opera box in one of the theatres, when the throng rose as one man and cheered frantically. There were similar scenes in other theatres and restaurants and impromptu parades through the streets.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

Washington, April 3.—The administration's resolution declaring that a state of war exists with Germany was introduced into both Houses to-day. Consideration of the matter was postponed until to-morrow.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

New York, April 3.—A despatch from Mexico City says that President Carranza has sent an announcement to the Presidents of Ecuador and Colombia States, of his government's acceptance of the former's proposal for a meeting of the representatives of the American nations. The alleged object of the proposed meeting is said to be the bringing to a close the European war. Recent rumours, from various Mexican and border sources of late, seemed to indicate that Mexico, in the event of war between the United States and Germany, would favour the latter

Washington, April 3.—The Navy Department announces that steps have been taken looking towards a working agreement between the American Navy and those of the Entente. They will be put into execution as soon as possible after Congress passes the necessary legislation. After the Cabinet meeting it became known that plans had been considered to raise a large war loan by popular subscription. It is understood that a Bill, authorizing this step, may be soon submitted to Congress.

The graduation of the cadets from West Point has been ordered to take place on April 20, partly to meet the deficiency of officers in the army.

gard to the international situation. After briefly reviewing the submarine controversy with Germany, he pointed out that the present submarine warfare was a warfare against mankind, that in view of developments armed neutrality is worse than ineffectual and is only likely to produce what it was meant to prevent: that the American people cannot choose the path of submission and are arraying themselves against wrongs which cut to the very roots of human life.

With a profound sense of the solemn and even tragical character of the step, he advised the Congress to declare the recent course of the German Government to be in effect nothing less than war against the government and people of the United States and proposed that it take immediate steps to put the country in a thorough state of defense and employ all its power and resources to bring the German Empire to terms and end the war. This, he said, would involve the utmost practicable co-operation in counsel and action with the Governments now at war with Germany; the extension of financial credits, material aid and addition to armed forces of at least five hundred thousand men upon the principle of universal military service. Legislation along these lines would be promptly introduced.

The President then continued: "We have no quarrel with the German people but only with the autocratic government which has brought on the present situation. The world must be made safe for democracy which seems to be in the balance. We have no selfish ends to serve. We desire no conquest, no dominion. We seek no indemnities for ourselves, no material compensation for the sacrifice we shall freely make. We are but one of the champions of the rights of mankind."

The following joint resolution was immediately introduced and referred to the Foreign Relations and Foreign Affairs Committees which were to meet on the following morning for its consideration: "Joint Resolution Declaring that a State of War Exists between the Imperial German Government and the Government and People of the United States and Making Provision to Prosecute the Same.

"Whereas, the recent acts of the Imperial Government are acts of war against the Government and People of the United States, be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that the state of war between the United States and the Imperial Government which has been thrust upon the United States is hereby formally declared, and that the President be and he is hereby authorized and directed to take immediate steps not only to put the country in a thorough state of defense but also to exert all of its powers and employ all of its resources to carry on war against the Imperial German Government and to bring the conflict to a successful termination."

UNCLE SAM CALLS MORE MEN STILL TO COLOURS

Washington, Mar 28.—The War Department has ordered four more Militia regiments into the Federal service, and also called back into service six regiments out of the twelve recently returned from the Mexican border. These will be detailed for patrol duty.

NEW RUSSIA MAINTAINS EXCELLENT ORDER NOW

KOKUSAI-HAVAS

Paris, March 28.—Thanks to the energetic measures taken by the new Russian Government, order prevails throughout the country and a vigorous impulse has been given to the war organization.

The High Command has been re-organized along the same lines already adopted in France. It is now concentrated into the hands of a War Committee composed of the Ministers for War, Finance, Navy and Foreign Affairs. The General-in-Chief is administratively under the orders of the said committee, but retains full power with regard to the military.

The numerous addresses sent from the front to the new government are most convincing of the army's firm determination to pursue the struggle to a finish.

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, March 28.—The Guards' Volhynia regiment, whose intervention on the side of the people, decided the issue of the revolution, has organised a great manifestation for continuing the war until the end, declaring that it will gladly reinforce its brothers-in-arms in the trenches. This manifestation will be followed by others organised by the rest of the regiments of the Petrograd garrison.

The principle of the pursuance of the war until complete victory has been gained, has been unanimously expressed during the last two days, leaving no doubt of the intention of the army and people to strengthen by external victory the conquest of internal liberty. Even the most radical workmen confirm this necessity, stipulating only no annexations.

Perfect union of officers and soldiers is more marked than ever by the imposing manifestation which lasted until last night among officers, workmen and deputies in which there was fraternity of union. All were wearing military uniform and it was proclaimed that henceforward this same fraternity should exist. This resolution was enthusiastically welcomed by the soldiers, who embraced their officers.

Yesterday the Government delegates returned from the northern front and said that the enthusiasm of the troops for the continuation of the war was ever growing, the soldiers vowing not to abandon their national territory. Other delegates back from Revel stated that the naval officers were resolved to entirely support the Government to achieve victory. Also, they said, thanks to the elected committee of officers and sailors, the mutual fraternity was stronger than ever.

Similar news comes from Sebastopol, where, owing to the presence of mind of Admiral Koltchak, beloved by the sailors, the resolution was passed without a hitch.

The press denies the alarmist rumours exaggerating that there was certain friction in the Baltic Fleet. As a matter of fact, there were only 32 victims in the revolution and all vessels now are quite prepared as before to fight the enemy.

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, Mar. 29.—The entire Cabinet went to the Senate yesterday and solemnly swore the following oath of allegiance:

"In the capacity of a member of the Provisional Government emanating from the Duma I swear before the Almighty faithfully to serve the Russian people, to do my utmost to defend their liberty, rights, honour, and dignity; to observe in all actions the civic principles of liberty and equality; to suppress by all means at our disposal all direct and indirect attempts to restore the old regime; to take all measures to summon as soon as possible a Constituent Assembly on the basis of universal suffrage; and to transfer jointly with my colleagues the powers which I temporarily hold."

The Government has authorized the Dowager-Empress Marie to live in the Crimea provided she and the Grand Duke Nicholas, former commander-in-chief go there escorted by a commissioner of the Duma.

The erstwhile Minister of War, General Polivanov has been delegated to the Headquarters of the various armies for their entire reorganization, and the establishment of mutual relations with the Great General Staff. The Provisional Government will distribute posts according to competency, and will eliminate generals who have reached the age limit.

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, March 30.—M. Gouraland, Managing Director and M. Helfer, director of the Petrograd Telegraph Agency have retired. They have been replaced by M. Laviaghin and M. Nemanoff respectively.

Petrograd, April 1.—Prince Golitzin, ex-Premier, and M. Goremykin, formerly Premier, who were arrested during the revolution, have been released. Count Kokovtskov, President of the Russo-Japanese Society, and several members of the former cabinet who are now in incarceration will also be set free shortly.—"Nichinichi."

Petrograd, April 2.—Moderate elements of the Socialist and Democratic parties of Russia are urging the necessity of continuing to stand face to face with the foe with the spirit of the newly-won liberty so long as the enemy threatens Russia's forces, but members of these two political parties in general are desirous of an early restoration of peace without terms for indemnity and annexation of territory. Newspapers belonging to other parties, however, insist on the continuation of hostilities pending the day of final victory. "Nichinichi."

London, April 2.—The Parliament of Hungary has passed a resolution not to use the army for the restoration of the autocratic régime of Russia, says a dispatch from Budapest. It is of opinion that in Russia the despotic government authorities were responsible for the war which the nation in general little desired, so that Hungary must welcome the success of the Russian revolution. The press in Budapest have favoured the resolution of the Parliament.—"Nichinichi."

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, April 3.—General Rouzski, he Commander-in-Chief on the northern front has issued an order informing the army that the restoration of the old régime is now impossible and inviting officers and men to join hands and march against the enemy.

RUSSIA TO THE POLES

[OFFICIAL TO RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

The Russian provisionary Government has issued the following appeal to the people of Poland:

People of Poland! The old regime in Russia, the cause of our common servitude and of our disunion has just been upset for ever. Through her provisional government, invested with full power, the freed Russia hastens to send you fraternal greeting and calls you to a new and free existence. The old régime gave you hypocritical promises which it could, but was never willing to carry out. The Central Powers profited by the faults of the old régime to occupy and devastate your country. It is only in view of the struggle against Russia and her allies, that they have conceded to you illusory political rights which they will not extend to all the Polish people, but only to that part of Poland occupied temporarily by the enemy. They wish to purchase at this price, the blood of a people, who have never struggled for the maintenance of despotism. At this hour, the Polish army will no longer fight under the command of its secular enemy against the cause of liberty and for the dismemberment of its country.

Polish brothers!, for you also the hour of great decisions has struck. Free Russia calls you into the ranks of the fighters for the liberty of the peoples. The Russian people, which has shaken off the yoke of despotism, recognises equally the full right of its Polish brother people to decide its destiny in accordance with its own will.

The provisional Government, faithful to the agreements with its allies, faithful also to the common principles of the struggle against militant germanism, considers that the creation of an independent Polish Kingdom, consisting of all the regions inhabited for the most part by the Polish population, would offer for the future a sure pledge of a solid peace in new Europe.

Joined to Russia by a free union, the military state of Poland will offer a powerful rampart against aggressive currents of the Central Powers menacing the Slav nations. The Polish people, freed and united, shall determine themselves their political régime by expressing their wishes through the constituent assembly, which will be convoked in the capital of Poland, on the basis of universal suffrage.

Russia has faith that the peoples united to Poland by unbroken centuries of a common life, will thus obtain a solid guarantee for their civic and national existence.

It will be the duty of the constituent assembly of Russia to consolidate definitely the new fraternal union and to give its consent to the modifications of the territory of the State of Russia which are indispensable for the constitution of a free Poland, formed from all its three divisions disunited at this very time.

Accept then, Polish brothers, the fraternal hand that free Russia extends to you: faithful guardians of the grand traditions of the passed, uplift yourselves now to salute the new dawn of your history, the hour of the resurrection of Poland.

May the union of our sentiments and our hearts be able to anticipate the future alliances of our Kingdoms, may the ancient call of the messengers of your freedom recho with a new and irresistible force. Forward to the fray, side by side and hand in hand for our common liberty!

SPANISH PROVINCES AND CONSTITUTION

London, Mar 29.—Reuter's correspondent at Madrid telegraphs that the constitutional guarantees granted to all provinces in Spain have now been entirely suspended. Earlier despatches said that seditious appeals had been circulated among the people.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Madrid, March 29.—Martial Law has been proclaimed throughout Spain, owing to the serious economic and political situation.

The various provinces and communes of Spain are governed by the provincial and municipal laws. Every commune has its own elected Ayuntamiento, consisting of from five to fifty Regidores, or Conceales, and presided over by the Alcalde, at whose side stand, in the larger towns, several Tenientes Alcaldes. The entire municipal government, with power of taxation, is vested in the Ayuntamientos. Half the members are elected every two years, and they appoint the Alcalde, the executive functionary, from their own body. In Madrid and Barcelona he is appointed by the King. Members cannot be re-elected until after two years. Each province of Spain has its own Parliament, the Diputacion Provincial, the members of which are elected by the constituencies. The Diputaciones Provinciales meet in annual session, and are permanently represented by the Comission Provincial, a committee elected every year. The Constitution of 1876 secures to the Diputaciones Provinciales and the Ayuntamientos the government and administration of the respective provinces and communes. Neither the national executive nor the Cortes have the right to interfere in the established municipal and provincial administration, except in the case of the action of the Diputaciones Provinciales and Ayuntamientos going beyond the locally limited sphere to the injury of general and permanent interests. In the Basque provinces self-government has been almost abolished since the last civil war, and they are ruled as the rest of Spain. Notwithstanding the provisions of the Constitution pressure is too frequently brought to bear upon the local elections by the Central Government.

GERMAN RAIDER AGAIN IN SOUTH ATLANTIC

Rio de Janeiro, April 1.—The French barque Camboronne has arrived here with 285 British, French, and Italian sailors from the vessels sunk by the German raider in the South Atlantic.

The raider is described as a sailing vessel with a gasoline motor. The Cambronne met her 21 degrees west 7 south. She took twenty-two days thence to reach Brazil. The raider is armed with two guns of 105 millimetres and 16 machine-guns. She has three masts and is equipped with wireless telegraphy. She displayed the Norwegian flag until her prey was within reach of her guns.

Among the vessels reported sunk are the following:—Charles Gounod 3,100 tons; Rochefoicauld 3,050 tons; Antoinine 4,000 tons; Duplex 3,000 tons; Laxwisland 4,500 tons; Rohmgoth 5,500 tons; Hongarth and the Canadian schooner Perse 500 tons.

The Hongarth was en route to Plymouth with a cargo of grain. She disobeyed the order to halt and tried to escape. The captain surrendered after four of the crew had been wounded.

Telegrams from Rio de Janeiro report that the raider is the American barque Pass of Balmaba, 1,570 tons, captured by the Germans while on a voyage from New York to Archangel with cotton in 1915.

London, Mar. 31.—A message from Rio de Janeiro says that the French barque Cambronne has arrived there with 200, British, French and Italian sailors belonging to vessels sunk by a German raider off Trinidad. The raider is described as a sailing vessel with gasoline auxillary engine. She is probably one of the ships captured by the Moewe. The survivors state that many lives were lost in connection with the sinkings.

BRITISH REVENUE RETURNS

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, April 1.—The features of the British Revenue Returns are the income tax and the excess profits tax. The former amounts to £205,000,000 compared to £128,250,000 last year, and the latter to £140,000,000 in comparison with £140,000 last year. The total revenue is £70,000,000 in excess of the estimates, but the expenditure was £373,000,000 in excess of the estimates approximately. The total deficit is £1,624,685,128.

CHINA WOULD HONOUR MR. HAY

THE SOCIALISTS IN GERMANY

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Mar. 31.—The fact that the whole of the Socialists in the Reichstag voted against the Budget is variously commented upon. Some of the English papers regard the fact as a manifestation of a new anti-war movement, whereas others consider that it was a pre-arranged move designed to delude the Russian Socialists into offering peace. The latter hypothesis is supported by the fact that Herr Bethmann-Hollweg prior to his speech consulted the party leaders.

The Reichstag by a vote of 227 to 33 adopted a National Liberal motion appointing a committee of twenty-eight members to examine constitutional questions, especially with regard to popular representation in the Reichstag and the latter's relations with the Government.

New York, Mar. 30.—A Copenhagen message, says that the representatives of the Socialist parties in Germany and Russia are holding a conference at the Danish city. It is understood that the German Socialists have asked the Russian representatives to transmit the peace proposals made by the Germans, including their conditions, to the socialist headquarters in Petrograd.—"Nichinichi."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, April 1.—There were stormy scenes in the Reichstag on March 30. The Socialists amidst shouts of treason, declared that a republic for Germany was inevitable. They demanded larger powers in the Reichstag regarding the nation's foreign policy.

"VORWAERTS" ON WAR PATH

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, March 28.—The "Vorwaerts," commenting on the situation in Russia, continues to warn the German Government against "a new and dangerous enemy—namely the conviction among free peoples that they are defending the peoples' freedom." The paper again urges that the German people be given a greater share in the Government. The attitude of the "Vorwaerts" is significant in view of the fact that it is under Government control.

TAKING OVER VIRGINIA ISLANDS

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, April 1.—Mr. Lansing, Secretary of State, handed the Danish Minister to-day a United States' Treasury warrant for 5 millions sterling in payment of the Danish West Indies. Henceforth they will be known as Virginia Islands. Admiral Pollock, commanding the warship Hancock, has been ordered to receive the islands in the name of the United States.

POLES TO DETERMINE THEIR NEW GOVERNMENT

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Petrograd, Mar. 30.—Government has issued a Proclamation to the effect that the Poles themselves will determine the form of their new government at a constituent assembly, to be called shortly, based upon universal suffrage.

"HANDS OFF PRUSSIA," SAYS GENERAL KLEIST

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, March 30.—The Upper House of the Prussian Diet discussed electoral reform to-day, simultaneously with the Reichstag. General Kleist declared that the reform of the franchise would simply lead to a republic, and concluded by shouting "hands off old Prussia."

Count Roon said Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg's panegyric in the Reichstag was quite uncalled for. The Reichstag had only done its "damned duty." Voting war credits was the Reichstag's franchise which needed reforming, he concluded.

During the debate in the Reichstag on emergency taxation, a number of speakers urged the reform of the franchise and demanded an official assurance that Germany would not attempt to restore Tsardom in Russia. The Chancellor emphatically denied that the Kaiser was desirous of abolishing Russia's hardly won freedom or re-establishing Tsardom upon Russia's enslaved subjects.

He went on to assert that China's rupture of relations was the result of outside pressure, and said he was confident the old friendship with China would revive after the war when Germany would recover her trade in East Asia.

Referring to internal questions, he declared that the speeches in the Reichstag had not convinced him of the possibility of beginning a reform of the Prussian franchise. It was a serious matter to decide such a question while millions of men were in the trenches

The Reichstag adopted the emergency tax measure Both Socialist parties voted against it after a statement by Herr Bernsteine, emphasizing the hostility of neutrals towards Germany.

HERR BATOCTI ADMITS HARVEST OVER-ESTIMATED

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, March 29.—Speaking in the Reichstag, Herr Batocti the food controller admitted that the harvest had been over-estimated. The stock of pigs, he said, was insufficient also. Therefore, many more cattle must be slaughtered.

The increase of agricultural products was impossible owing to the shortage of labour and the transport difficulties. Herr Batocti urged all to recognize the seriousness of the situation.

A Socialist member declared that the deficiency in the harvest would prove to be 1,000,000 tons.

BETHMANN-HOLLWEG'S TRAP

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, April 1.—Nearly all the newspapers emphasize that Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg's references in the Reichstag to Russia are intended to entrap the liberal opinion in Russia in favour of peace.

The "Novoye Vremya" recalls that the Kaiser was always interfering in the internal affairs of Russia and had officials and even Ministers appointed. The journal says: "We want a peace which a new crowned German fool cannot disturb. The best means to realize this is for Germany to take her destiny into her own hands."

GERMANS MURDERING BELGIAN DEPORTEES

London, Apr. 1.—Reuter learns that the Belgian Government has received a number of letters written from Germany by an eye-witness describing the terrible fate of Belgian deportees in the various camps. Following are some extracts. One letter says:

"Here the fate of Belgian civilians is awful. The Germans are leaving them to die on a starvation diet and they are nothing but skin and bone. Yesterday, thirteen bodies were in the mortuary; this morning fourteen; this out of a total of 3,000 to 4,000 prisoners. If we are caught in the act of handing these unhappy people soup or other food, we are punished with five days in jail."

Another letter declares "the situation is becoming unbearable. The unhappy civilians die by scores. The total deaths for yesterday and to-day in this camp alone is seventeen. None of them die from illness. Every day two or three civilians are found dead in their suits. The doctors repudiate all responsibility. The deportees are no longer able to walk without help. The Belgian civilians are starving; they die at the rate of three a day. In another camp the deportees have devoured live rats. The treatment to which they are submitted is beyond all imagination."

A GRAVE ALLEGATION

Harbin, April 1.—The following startling news is believed to mainly account for the recent political revolution in Russia and the dethronement of the Tsar. It says that the Tsaritsa, in conspiracy with Frederics, the German spy, mixed a sleeping draught in her husband's wine. When the Tsar, after drinking the mixture, fell into a comatose condition the Tsaritsa produced some secret maps and important documents, and made the semi-unconscious emperor sign a written order giving directions for military operations to the army at the front, which was written by her own hand. The pseudo orders were issued to the army commanders at the front and at the same time the Tsaritsa secretly communicated the whole thing to the Germans in some secret code By chance one of the secret messages fell into the hands of ex-Foreign Minister M. Sazonoff and this lead to the discovery of the plot. It has been also revealed that the sad fate of the three Russian army corps which not long after the beginning of the war between Germany and Russia were defeated and annihilated by the Germans at Touff, was due to the intrigue formed by the Tsaritsa and the German spies in Russia. Part of these facts were disclosed by M. Kerensky in his speech at a sitting of the Duma while the former ministry was in power, but the speech was stricken off the records and kept in secret until now.—"Asahi."

London, March 28.—A Petrograd dispatch says that a patriotic wave is spreading over the whole of Russia. The government is making painstaking efforts for the restoration of peace and order, and the situation is fast improving.—"Asahi."

MORE PEACE TALK

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, Mar. 31.—The Austrian Foreign Minister in an interview in the semi-official Fremdenblatt states that "the central empires are ready to negotiate for a peace honourable to both our enemies as well as ourselves. Moreover, if negotiations fail, the war can continue." Coming after numerous reports of a new Austro-German peace move, this declaration is regarded as most significant.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Vienna, April 1.—The Austro-Hungarian press, following the lead of the Foreign Minister, clamours for peace, declaring that M. Czerinin's proposal offers an honourable settlement.

San Francisco, April 1.—The Peace Society of pro-German leaning put a full-page advertisement in all the papers here on March 30 agitating against an American declaration of war upon Germany. In their advertisement the anti-war agitators say that the power of women is now keenly required to avert the outbreak of war and that now that war mania is growing in the East they should rely on the opposition movement in Western States for the prevention of war. In this connection, however, about 5,000 ladies in social circles in San Francisco dispatched under their joint signature a telegram to President Wilson yesterday urging the President to participate in the great war for honour, justice, benevolence and humanity with a view to shortening the terrible conflict and saving the German people from the miseries and horrors of war.

A Californian Association has been organized by influential persons here in connection with the pending Americo-German situation. On March 3 about 100 influential people including Dr. Wilber, President of the Stanford University, Mr. Croker, millionaire, and judges, bishops and others, telegraphed to President Wilson to the effect that America should wage war against Germany and co-operate with the Allies. Dr. David Starr Jordan, honorary President of the Stanford University, is now travelling in the Eastern states for the peace movement, but the faculty of his University is opposed to him and on March 30 about 50 professors there telegraphed to the President that America should now back the Allies with all her financial resources as a state of war indisputably exists between America and Germany.

ITALY'S SHIPPING RETURNS

Rome, March 29.—For the week ending March 25, 57 merchantmen entered and 489 left Italian ports. Four Italian steamers, each under 2,000 tons and one sailing vessel were sunk.

SPRING-RICE EXPECTS WAR

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, April 3.—Mr. A. Bonar Law, speaking in the House of Commons to-day, said that Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador at Washington, had telegraphed that he expected Congress to give President Wilson authority to declare war.

ADMIRAL VON HINTZE HAS SAILED FROM SHANGHAI

KOKUSAI SPECIAL SERVICE

Shanghai, Mar. 28.—Admiral von Hintze, the German Minister, and a party totalling twenty-seven went on board the Dutch liner Rembrandt at Woosung at 5 p.m. yesterday. The vessel sailed for Nagasaki at midnight.

It is understood the German Consuls from Mukden, Nanking, Hankow and Tientsin are leaving for San Francisco, by a Dutch steamer which is scheduled to sail from Hongkong on April 5.

The Dutch steamer Rembrandt, with Herr von Hintze on board the German Minister in Peking, and party, including the Legation Staff, their families and others, twenty-seven in all, arrived at Nagasaki on the 29th ult. at 9 o'clock in the morning. Prior to this, on the 28th, a warship with several torpedo boats arrived from Sasebo naval station and after entering the port went outside the harbour to keep guard on the sea. Early in the morning on the 29th the warship met the Rembrandt outside and followed her into port, keeping guard all the time while the steamer was undergoing quarantine examination. When the quarantine was finished and the steamer came to its mooring, a steam-pinnace with the chief of the water police station and several police officials on board, went alongside the steamer. The police officials boarded the steamer and examined the passengers and inspected the ship. No one else was allowed on board the steamer, which was subject to strict surveillance all the while, with the warships standing near by. The steamer sailed for Yokohama on the 30th on her way to San Francisco via Honolulu. On departure from rescorted her.

According to the crew the party includes, besides the Minister, and Legation staff, a lieutenant of the army and a Chinese boy from the Legation. At San Francisco the party will land and taking the Canadian Atlantic Railway route will go to New York whence they will embark on another Dutch steamer for Amsterdam.

A widow of a former secretary of the German consulate at Nagasaki, who is living at Konyamachi, Nagasaki, and who is a Japanese (aged sixty), has a claim against the German consular authorities, having not received her pension since the outbreak of the war and besides she has found the payment of the perpetual lease rent for the land on which the German consulate is built and defrayed the wages of the Japanese servants of the Consulate for the past two years. Hearing that the German Minister at Peking was coming over to Nagasaki on his way home the old woman, who has been rendered poor on account of her liberal accommodations on behalf of the German consulate, wanted to see the Minister and appeal to him for the settlement of her credit to the German Government, but her application for an interview with the Minister was not granted by the Japanese authorities.

THE POLITICAL CAMPAIGN

It was believed that the political campaign before the coming election would prove fierce, but although the election day is only three weeks off, the situation has not yet become lively as expected, says the "Tokyo Nichinichi". The coming election has an important significance as it is the election following the dissolution of the Diet, and its result will effect largely the future development of the politics of the nation.

Judging from the present situation, the paper believes that the coming election will be nothing but a meaningless one. The Cabinet had depended upon the activity of the impartial candidates, but the public are not paying much attention to those candidates. Furthermore, the "Nichinichi" is afraid that the number of the people who will not cast their votes at the coming election will be much larger than before.

In Japan there are many who do not cast their valuable votes. The total number of the voters in the country is about 1,500,000 while there are fifty five million of people on the mainland of Japan. But among the voters there are many who do not realize the importance of their right and duty to vote for the candidates for the membership of the House of Representatives. In the past, about fourteen per cent. of the voters, did not cast their votes at elections. The right to cast his vote, is the important privilege and duty of the citizen, and if so many of the voters refuse to avail of the privilege the elections become meaningless.

It is said that the people who do not cast their votes at elections do not know the value of their votes, and do not realize the importance of their privilege, and consequently they are not eager to vote, believing that it is an useless trouble. But the "Nichinichi" says, that the cause of there being so many who renounce their rights of election is not only their ignorance; and one of the strong reasons for such a condition is the fact that the public do not place much confidence in the political parties now existing.

All political parties, the Kenseikai, Kokuminto, and Seiyukai have all their platforms and convictions, but the public believe that the platforms of these political parties are made for the benefit and interest of such parties themselves. When one party appoints candidates for the election, and opens an election campaign, the party only considers the interest and convenience of the party, and does not pay any attention to the desire or the circumstances of the voters. Such a method has made the public entertain ill feelings against the party.

Another reason why so many of the voters take no interest in the election is the presence of so many neutral candidates who do not belong to any of the existing parties. Such candidates have no definite political opinion and they cannot be trusted. The lack of confidence in the candidates is one of the main reasons why the voters do not cast their votes at the election.

Among those who advocate the revision of the present election law, there are some who desire to punish such voters who do not cast their votes at the election. But the "Nichinichi" declares that such a method will not be proper, as the casting of votes is the privilege of the citizens, and their liberty and free will should be always respected.

The Government, political parties and the candidates themselves are to be blamed for the existence of so many renouncers of the right of election.

ANTI-JAPANESE INTRIGUE

The "Tokyo Asahi" Seoul correspondent sends to his paper a report of the discovery of an anti-Japanese intrigue formed by some Korean malcontents and the arrest of the ringleader on March 3rd. According to the correspondent An Sho-seki, a Korean subject, aged 45, harbouring discontentment towards the Japanese rule in Korea and wishing for the restoration of the former Korean government, secretly formed a conspiracy against the Japanese administration. In 1889 he went to Vladivostok and joined a political association organized by a body of the Korean malcontents residing there. In August 1891 he came to Wonsan, Korea, as an emissary to inspect conditions in Korea by the order of the president of the association with which he identified himself, but seeing the impossibility of carrying out the attempt formed by the members of the association he later went back to Vladivostok. After the association was dissolved by order of the Russian authorities at Vladivostok, he wandered about the frontier between Russia and Korea for about five years leading an aimless life. Later he entered Chientao, the Chinese territory close to the Korean domain on the upper stream of the Yalu, and enlisted himself in another association formed by Korean malcontents taking refuge at Pitzuho, a city of Chientao, and was secretly engaged in a fresh anti-Japanese plot aiming at the overthrow of the Japanese administration in Korea with a number of his compatriots.

The plan matured and between the summer and autumn of 1915 they went to a village in Kirin province, China, and establishing their rendezvous in a Korean colony there organized an insurrection with a force of some eighty Korean malcontents. Provided with guns, revolvers and a quantity of ammunition they started on an expedition towards Tumengang with a view to attack the Japanese government office and its staff. While marching through the district along the river they were overtaken by a detachment of Russian cavalry and were repulsed losing about a half of the men. An and his followers were compelled to retreat and retired to the neighbourhood of Honchun where they established a new rendezvous storing arms and impedimenta there, and were waiting for another available opportunity to present itself for the carrying out of their scheme. While An was making preparations for a second attempt and carrying on negotiations with some Chinese for the support of his scheme, he was arrested by the Japanese authorities in the neighbourhood of Mosan, North Hamgyondo, on March 3rd. He was turned over to the gendarmerie station at Mosan and after examination at the gendarmerie station was sent to the public procurators' office at Chonjin on March 15th.

SMALL ENTERPRISES

Enterprises operated with small capital, on a small scale and with insufficient equipment, are not promising for their own development, and the existence of such enterprises will be disadvantageous to the development of the industry and commerce of the nation.

The present condition of Japan, the "Hochi" points out, shows that although there is a tendency for the organization of enterprises with large capitals and on a sufficiently large scale, enterprises operated under imperfect organization, are exceedingly large in number. It seems that small enterprises of all sorts will be established throughout the country in future. The paper believes that as far as the circumstances warrant, these small enterprises should be amalgamated, and should be operated under perfect administration, with sufficient capital and equipment to cause healthy development of industries.

To open a profitable market in the orient, South Seas, and other parts of the world, it will be necessary to have such enterprises amalgamated. The European and American nations, had their enterprises amalgamated under trusts, and it is natural that the tendency of trust-forming will be more active in these countries after the conclusion of the present war.

The "Hochi" is pleased to note that recently an amalgamation of several spinning factories has been discussed. These factories found that it will be profitable for them to join together under one organization, as they will gain in purchasing materials and machinery, and will be able to fill large orders from abroad, which the independent small factories were not able to accept.

The paper believes that Life Insurance, Fire Insurance, Sugar manufacturing companies, and other firms, will find it to their great advantage to amalgamate into larger concerns. The manufacturers of the articles for export will be able to give strict examination so that no inferior goods will be shipped to foreign countries, if they join together and form larger and better concerns.

The benefit to be obtained by the amalgamation of various factories and firms, is beyond any doubt. However there will follow a certain injurious effect by the organization of trusts, but if the Government and the public will keep a keen watch over the trusts, such effects could be eliminated.

To plan commercial and industrial development after the conclusion of the war, it is absolutely necessary that small and imperfect enterprises should be amalgamated, or else, they will be defeated by the trusts and larger organizations of other nations.

THE GERMAN RETREAT

No one has yet guessed at the object of the recent retreats of the German forces in the western front, says the "Yorozu." Some say that Germany is intending to withdraw her forces from the Western and use them in an attack on Petrograd, while others believe that Germany is planning a decisive attack on some part of the Western front.

If Germany is retreating in order to amass her armies on the Eastern front, it is not only an enormous task but a losing gamble, as the situation in the Western front is becoming so important that Germany is not able to withdraw such large forces as she expected.

The opinion that Germany is intending to attack Petrograd is unfounded, as it was clear many months ago that in the event of the advance of the British and French forces on the Western Front, Germany had to retreat, and the German armies had prepared for the necessary retreat. Also it is believed that Germany had become tired of trench fighting, and desired decisive open field fighting. She realized that by trench fighting, she would never be able to gain victory and conclude peace, and had determined to draw the enemies out of their trenches and fight in the open. At any rate, the recent retreat of Germany has been expected by both sides.

The future problem will be how far the German forces will retreat, and when and where the big open fighting will take place. But the paper says that it is important for the Entente forces to be careful not to be tricked by the German forces. The Entente forces should make every necessary preparation to make it impossible for the German forces to make an attack on Petrograd or on any special point in the Western front. Italy is expected to make an advance in the South, and the situation of the European war has become very interesting. Within two months, the paper believes, a decisive attack by the Entente forces will be made upon Germany from all sides.

ON CONCENTRATION

Concentration is the foundation of individual success, and a nation has also to depend upon the power of concentration to develop the country. The Entente powers are wonderfully concentrating the national power for the one aim of defeating the enemy, says the "Yorozu".

The British subjects understand the object of the present war, better than the people of any other nation, and England is consequently most powerful in the present war. While England is a nation where the individual right is highly respected, the individual rights and interests are being willingly sacrificed for the sake of the war. The conscription law was enacted, and all necessary factories were turned into munition and arm factories. Labour was placed under the control of the Government, and all other enterprises of individuals are now under Government supervision.

Even in France, the national powers have been concentrated equally well, although the French do not understand the object of the war as well as the British do. In Russia, it was impossible to concentrate the Government and people on the war, and the difficulty to bring together all powers in the country for the sake of the war, caused the recent revolution. Now the Government of Russia has changed, and it will undertake the concentration of energy.

The power of concentration is necessary for a nation not only at the time of war but even in the time of peace. The Government should have the full confidence of the people, and the reason the British public are eagerly bent upon the victory of the war, is because they have confidence in the Cabinet of Mr. Lloyd-George. Without such a Premier it is difficult to actuate any sort of concentration. Even in Germany the power of concentration is well proved, but recently the German public has begun to realize that the blind submission to the Government is not profitable for them. The power of concentration of a nation depends upon the Government which enjoys the full confidence of the people.

At present the preparation behind the gun is more important than the fighting lines, and if any Government desires to concentrate the power of the nation to obtain the victory in the war, it requires the confidence of the people, and such a concentration cannot be done by oppression.

In this respect, the Terauchi Cabinet is an obstacle to the development of the nation, and the Cabinet is unfit to concentrate the power, energy and faculties of the nation for any object.

THE FUTURE OF RUSSIA

It is natural that a republican Government will be established in Russia, says the "Tokyo Asahi" judging from recent developments in the country. The first notable step the provisional Government made was the release of the Jews, and recently the Government has officially announced to Poland that she should select any form of Government suitable to the condition in the country. This attitude shows, the paper says, that the new Government respects the right and liberty of the people, and this noble policy to free the Jews and to give self-Government to Poland, also proves that the Government to be established in Russia before long will be a republican one.

The greatest problem in Russia for many centuries was the racial question, and the Jew, the Pole, and the Finn are the three largest races inhabiting Russian territory. On the establishment of the provisional Government Russia solved this racial question, and not only freed the Jew but gave permission to the Polish parliament to select any form of Government for its own benefit.

The paper believes that this policy of the Russian Government towards Poland will cause dissatisfaction in German Poland, and the Poles under the German control will naturally desire similar freedom as given to their brothers in Russia.

The "Tokyo Asahi" is so far satisfied with the policy and attitude of the provisional Government, but the paper hopes that the new Government will at once solve the troublesome problem of passports in Russia. The regulations now in force in Russia regarding the requisition of passports for any traveller entering or leaving the Russian Territory, has not only prevented the development of the country, but caused no small inconvenience and difficulty to foreign travellers. Such a strict system governing the free travel of the people, was the product of the absolute Government which caused the organization of various secret associations and anti-Government organizations. To keep a watchful eye upon the activities of these organizations, it was necessary for the Government to restrict the right of travel of the Russian people.

Now, the old system of government has been demolished, and liberty has been given to all races in the country, and it is no longer necessary to restrict free travel. The people of Russia was almost unable to travel out of the country in the past, and it not only caused inconvenience but held the country from the possible development stimulated by intercourse with foreign countries. The paper hopes that the new Government will at once free the people to travel as they wish, and remove the present inconvenience and difficulty for all people, natives and foreigners, who desire to enter or leave Russian territory.

ONE VALUABLE VOTE

The election day is only twenty days off, but the "Jiji" is surprised to note that the political circle has been extraordinarily quiet. In the past history of elections, there was not a single instance when the month before election day, opened so quietly and without active political campaigns. It is believed that the Government has been so severely interfering with the activity of the campaign workers, that they are not able to work as they did in the past.

A booklet entitled, "One valuable Vote" has been distributed all over the country, and several hundred thousand copies of the booklet have been already sent to the voters of the country. Where the booklet came from nobody knows. The value of one vote is well-known to the voters of the country, and he who votes for his own benefit, for a promise or on account of the fear of the government interference, does not realize the value of the vote. The "Jiji" hopes that the voters of the country will realize the value of their votes, and cast them according to their own conviction and will, and not be directed by temporary gain or persuasion.

The Government has been interfering with the election with the intention to make the election just and above corrupt influence, but the paper says that the method of such a step should be well considered. First of all it is necessary to consider the condition, social and financial, of the people, in dealing with such affairs. There have been several cases when a mere serving of tea caused the arrest of voters and campaign workers as violaters of the election law. Such a step is not only illogical but cannot be understood. The paper hopes that the Government will pay more attention to the condition of the localities and the country when trying to interfere with the election.

RUSSIA'S FINANCIAL PROSPECTS

Anxiety is felt about the financial condition of the new Government of Russia, but the "Tokyo Asahi" points out that the fear about the financial difficulty of the new Government is groundless. The revolution has destroyed the pro-German elements in the Court and Government, and Russia will be able to adopt a decided policy against Germany, and the most important question for Russia now is its financial prospects.

At the beginning of the conflict, the war expenditure of Russia was 500,000,000 yen a month, and after two years of war, the expenditure increased to 670,000,000 yen a month. The total war expenditure spent by Russia up to the end of 1916 was 23,458,000,000 yen. The Russian Government obtained this large amount of funds by issuing notes, and floating bonds in Russia and abroad. The notes issued amounted to 7,800,000,000 yen while the total amount before the war was only 1,600,000,000 yen.

The increase of the circulation of notes caused the high cost of living, and the fall of the value of the Russian notes. The monthly war expenditure at the beginning of the war was only 500,000,000 a month, but recently it is reported that the amount has increased to 1,000,000,000 yen. This increase was of course, partly caused by the widening of the war zone, and by the large scale of campaign made recently, but partly by the decrease of the value of the notes and the increased cost of living. To remedy this condition, the Russian Government took the policy of floating bonds, and obtained 8,000,000,000 yen in Russia, and 9,400,000,000 yen in foreign countries.

By these methods, Russia has been able to continue the war campaign against Germany. But if the present war continues until the end of this year, Russia will require 12,000,000 000 yen more for war expenditure. The "Asahi" declares that there is no other way to obtain such a large amount of money than to float more bonds.

Regarding the lack of food supplies, the Japanese are mostly misinformed, says the paper, and the recent revolution should be judged as one caused mainly by the food scarcity. The actual condition in Russia is that in the northern parts of the country, the people are suffering from scarcity of food, but in the warm southern parts, the people have a superabundant supply of food. Only because the railway facilities being insufficient, the surplus production in the south, is not sent to the north which is in need. When the food is properly distributed, Russia will never lack supplies to feed her entire population.

When the food is equally distributed and the surplus is exported to other nations, the financial condition of Russia will have a brighter aspect, and the people will be able to subscribe to more bonds. With the increase of munition and arm factories and the wages of workers the pockets of the people have been fattened. Consequently the "Asahi" points out that it will not be difficult for Russia to float more bonds in Russia, and the future of the war finance of Russia needs cause no anxiety.

KIRI-HITOHA STAGED AT IMPERIAL

An unusually long programme is billed for April at the Imperial Theatre, which takes almost eleven hours to finish. The "Kiri-hitoha" the historical drama is in six acts and fourteen scenes, and it takes eight hours. The second piece, the "Sukeroku" is in one act, and two scenes, and takes more than two hours and a half. The theatre opens at one p.m. and closes at a half past eleven.

The "Kiri-hitoha" is written by Dr. Tsubouchi, and is one of Japan's greatest modern historical dramas. It is a wonderful play, and Koshiro, Baiko, Sojuro and other actors play their parts exceedingly well. It is an admirable play when one reads it, but when it is produced as it is on the stage, it is too long. If the play was condensed to, say, three acts, it would be a better attraction. The "Kiri-hitoha" was produced before at the Kabukiza and other theatres when it was shortened to make it appeal better to the audience. While the efforts of Dr. Tsubouchi to bring out his characters vividly before the audience, is to be appreciated, it cannot escape the criticism that the play is tediously long as produced at the Imperial.

The story tells of incidents immediately after Tokugawa Iyeyasu became the Shogun, succeeding Hideyoshi. While the wife of Hideyoshi, and Hideyori, his son, were still trying to regain the lost power, Katagiri Katsumoto, the faithful follower of Hideyoshi, was accused of conspiracy against the Toyotomi family, scheming against his own master. Katagiri is the chief character of the play, and Koshiro, the leading man of the Imperial Theatre plays the part.

In some part of the play, the side-incidents are so fully and minutely given that the audience are at a loss to know who is the principal character. Koshiro, Baiko, Sojuro and other actors are well supported by the actresses.

The second play is one of the most famous of the typical Japanese dramas, and in fact is one of the eighteen prominent dramas of Kabuki, selected by the Ichikawa family. To produce this play, it is necessary that permission be obtained from the Ichikawa family, and Koshiro, who plays "Sukeroku" the leading part, uses the costumes and other accessories lent to him by the Ichikawa family.

"Sukeroku" is the most difficult character for Japanese actors, and there is a certain prescribed model to be followed, and while Koshiro played the part for the first time, he did well in executing the difficult rôle.

In costume and stage arrangements, the play is the most typical of Japanese dramas. The opening scene, showing the picturesque entry of six "Oiran" dressed in the finest brocade costumes is really beautiful. The character of "Sukeroku" is one combined with the Samurai and Kyokaku spirits and in fact "Sukeroku" is a disguised Samurai, searching for a lost valuable sword. The drama is woven around this incident, and tells of various customs and unique happenings at Yoshiwara.

As it is played according to the established old execution of the play, visitors to the Imperial this month, will notice a marked difference between the "Sukeroku" and other old dramas usually played at Japanese theatres.

DIRECT APPEAL TO EMPEROR

At the meeting of the Privy Council held on March 28th, it was decided that a new regulation covering the method of the direct appeal by the people to H.I.M. the Emperor should be framed. The regulation will be officially sanctioned by His Majesty, and will be shortly published by the Cabinet.

The question of direct appeal has been discussed by the Government officials as well as the public for many years, and it seems that the Government, after a careful consideration of the subject, has decided to issue a regulation to make it possible for the people to make direct appeals to the Emperor.

By the thirtieth clause of the Japanese Constitution, the Japanese subjects are granted the privilege of making direct appeals to H.M. the Emperor, but no regulation was made regarding the direct appeal, and the clause has been void.

Since the Russo-Japanese war, many attempts have been made to make appeal to H.I.M. the Emperor, illegally and without any respect to law. When the association of the newspapermen of Tokyo desired to make an appeal regarding the Yamamoto Cabinet, it was made through H.I.H. Prince Fushimi, then Lord Keeper of the Imperial Seal.

These attempts have caused the government to draft the new regulation to allow the people to make appeals to H.I.M. the Emperor in a proper and lawful manner. The new regulation will describe in detail the method and manner by which the appeal should be made. Such appeals conforming with the regulations in spirit and manner, will be accepted by the Lord Keeper of the Imperial Seal and brought to the attention of H.I.M. the Emperor. It is believed that when this regulation is made, the illegal attempt to appeal to His Majesty will be stopped.

BOCCACCIO A SUCCESS AT OPERA COMIQUE

Realizing the progress made by the members of his Opera Comique company, Mr. Rosi, has adopted "Boccaccio" by F. V. Suppe, for production in April. The famous opera by Suppe is far more difficult than the pieces given at Rosi's Opera Comique in the past six months, and when the announcement was made that "Boccaccio" was to be given in April by the company, some doubt as to the ability of the company to perform it, was felt by the music lovers of Tokyo.

When the first performance of the opera was given on to the 15th, the able execution of the difficult opera by the company, surprised the first night critics. The singing part of "Boccaccio" is far more difficult than others already staged at Rosi's theatre, but every member of the company showed immense progress, and executed his or her part so well that in several cases encores were demanded.

Miss Hara as Boccaccio played better than ever, her voice sounding much fuller than in some of the past performances. Her part was well supported by other singers, to the delight of a most critical audience. Mr. K. Shimizu as Lotteringhi, the barrel-maker, had a part that suited him perfectly. He made the most of all the comic situations. But the most delightful thing to the audience was the fact that in "Boccaccio" Shimizu had the opportunity to use his voice fully. In past performances at the Royal although he always had the leading male part, his part consisted more of acting and speaking than singing. In "Boccaccio" he sings, in solos, trios and chorus.

Mrs. Inouye, as Fiametta, the daughter of the Prince, did well, despite the fact that in that rôle her songs were in a higher key than usual. On account of the higher key in which she sang, her voice in high places was small, but she has greatly improved in feeling.

Pietro, the disguised Prince, was played by Mr. Y. Katsura. The part suited him well, and his characteristic acting was well brought out in the rôle. It was regrettable, however, that he did not have many occasions to prove his voice.

Lambeltucio, the merchant, was played by Mr. Takata, and he and Shimizu, were the mainstay of the male parts, and the two, with their comically big noses, kept the audience laughing all through the entire evening.

The curtain rises on the street scene where the people of the village are seen singing on St. John's Day. Fellatelli, the book-peddler arrives, and tries to sell the new books by Boccaccio, but his announcement makes the people angry at the author and they declare they will punish him for writing books in which the people of the village had been characterized.

Lotteringhi, Lambeltucio and Scalza, appear on the scene, and begin to sing in order to awaken the daughter of Scalza.

When Boccaccio, enters the Church, he is followed by a mass of citizen. At the entrance of the church Boccaccio meets Fiametta, and the two sing a duet. Later Boccaccio makes his appearance disguised as a begger, and meeting Fiametta, the two again sing love duets.

Pietro is mistaken for Boccaccio, and is pursued by the people. The book-peddler again appears and the people overturn his cart and burns the books. Boccaccio comes on the scene and criticises the destruction of books. The people sing against the books, and Boccaccio and his friends sing in support of them. The chorus by the entire company at the end of the first scene was excellently done.

The second act shows the love scenes in the back yards of Lotteringhi and Lambeltucio. Duets between, Pietro and Isabella, and Boccaccio and Fiametta, are the features of this act. Lotteringhi, the barrel-maker, sings a bibulous song, hammering on his barrel, and received hearty applause. At the end of the Act, Fiametta was taken away from Lambeltucio. Boccaccio sings to Fiametta from behind the wall and the whole company join in bewailing Fiametta's departure.

The third act shows the scene in the Palace, where Fiametta was brought as it was found that she was the youngest daughter of the Prince. Pietro was to marry Fiametta, and in celebration of the marriage, he ask Boccaccio to write a comedy to be performed at the banquet. Boccaccio writes one telling of the past misdeeds of Pietro who finally consents to the marriage of Boccaccio and Fiametta, knowing the love between them. The act closes with an interesting and pretty finale in the form of a song and chorus by the entire cast which reflected much credit on the efforts of Mr. Rosi and Mr. Takeuchi.

CHINESE ENVOY WAS PLEASED

Mr. Wang Tah-sieh, the Chinese Envoy now on his way back to China after presenting H.I.M. the Emperor of Japan with the highest decoration in the gift of the Republic, sent a telegram of appreciation to Minister of Foreign Affairs Viscount I. Motono on the eve of his departure from Japan last Friday from Sannomiya, Hyogo Prefecture, which reads as follows :—

"For the courteous treatment accorded me by the Imperial House, as well as by the Government and people during my sojourn in your land and for the successful discharge of my honourable mission, I feel that thanks are due to your kind assistance. On the eve of departure for home, I feel ever grateful. Allow me to avail myself of this opportunity to express my respectful regards."

RALPH THAYER STANDS TRIAL

The first hearing of the public trial of Mr. Ralph Hoyt Thayer, charged with violation of the law for the protection of military secrets was held at the Yokohama District Court on Monday morning at 10 o'clock. Chief Judge Jimbo presided. Mr. Thayer, the accused, was present accompanied by Lawyer Hirasawa, his counsel, and wore a happy smile as he took his eat. Among the audience were in evidence Bishop McKim, of Trinity Cathedral, Tsukiji, and several Americans and a few Japanese ladies.

Public Procurator Wakabayashi read the charge against the accused and said that he, without permission of the authorities concerned, sought free access to the fortified zone of the Yokosuka naval wireless station, built on Kusanokiyama at Yokosuka for the purpose of national defense, about 5 o'clock of the afternoon of the 17th January, 1917, and the above stated act of the accused constituted a violation of the law for the protection of military secrets. After the Chief Judge had questioned the accused as to his name, age, calling and address, the court began to examine the accused as to the truth of the charge of the public procurator, when at the request of the authorities concerned the hearing was closed to the public and proceeded behind the closed doors for the reason of its being detrimental to the maintenance of peace and orde..

The examination held behind closed doors was concluded at noon. Lawyer Hirasawa, the counsel for the accused, asked the Chief Judge to summon at the next hearing Commander Fujii, the adjutant of the Yokosuka marine barracks, as a witness, the request being granted. The court closed shortly after noon. The next hearing will be held on the 13th at 10 a.m.

NEWS & NOTES

The general meeting of the Japan Red Cross Society will be held at Hibiya Park on May 2, 3, and 4th. It is reported that H.I.M. the Empress will probably attend the meeting.

The Kitasato Institute of Infectious Diseases has recently made a purchase of 7,000 adders with a view to obtaining poison. It is reported that one ounce of poison has been secured from each of these venomous snakes.

The Osaka Shosen Kaisha will shortly inaugurate a steamship service between Kobe and Christmas Island, a British island in the Pacific. The Manyei Maru, the company's steamer, is expected to be placed on this new line. The line is opened mainly in order to import phosphate from Christmas Island to Japan.

Orders for 4,500,000 lbs. of Kwantung salt have been placed with Japanese merchants in Dairen, says a dispatch to the "Asahi." The merchants, as well as the Russian Minister in Peking, are negotiating with the Chinese authorities as to the transportation of the ordered salt to Russia. The salt is reported to be for the Russian fronts.

The committee of the Privy Council on prevention of trade with the enemy, met on the 5th at the office of the Privy Council. Besides the committee, Viscount Motono, the Foreign Minister was present. The bill to prohibit trading with the enemy will be soon passed by the committee and will be brought to the regular meeting of the Council.

Tramcars in future will run at a somewhat reduced speed when they come to places, such as Ochanomidzu, Uyeno, Hanzo-mon, Shiba Park, etc., where there are many cherry-trees, so that passengers may enjoy floral views from the window at this time of the season. This instruction has been given to tram drivers by Dr. Okuda, mayor of Tokyo. His suggestion is warmly appreciated by many people.

According to investigations recently made by the Department of Communications, Japan at the end of February possessed 446 steamers over 1,000 tons, their aggregate tonnage reaching 1,423,318 tons. Of the number, the N.Y.K. accounts for 98 vessels totalling 455,676 tons, the O.S.K. for 57 vessels amounting to 190,136 tons, the T.K.K. for 11 vessels aggregating 94,916 tons and the M.B.K. for 11 vessels of 35,086 tons.

The Nippon Bijutsu Kyokai (Japan Fine Art Association) is holding one of its biannual art exhibitions at the Association's art gallery at Sakuragaoaka, Uyeno Park, from the 11th of this month till May 10th. Paintings, both old and new, as well as other fine art works will be exhibited together with the rare art works of the ancient master kept in the households of nobility and wealthy persons. The show will add to the attractions of the season of the park.

The new aerodrome under the control of the second military flying battalion which will be organized shortly at Kagamigahara in Gifu prefecture is all but finished. In connection with the opening of the ground it is understood that it is under consideration to carry out a direct flight from Tokorozawa to the new aerodrome by aviators of the flying corps at Tokorozawa of the fifth-term class. The journey will be broken at either Shizuoka or Hamamatsu for supplies of petrol.

Among the Japanese departures during March from Yokohama were 275 men and 147 women emigrants and 144 men and 65 women non-emigrants. Forty-seven men and 76 women emigrants and 13 men and 2 women non-emigrants were for Hawaii, while 26 men and 13 women emigrants and 6 men and 5 women non-emigrants went to Canada. The Japanese arrivals during the same month were 430 men and 162 women from America, 235 men and 178 women from Hawaii, and 55 men and 32 women from Canada.

The Tokyo Employment Office under the direction of the Tokyo Municipality has just published its 5th annual report, according to which it looked after 391 boys and girls last year. Most of them were over the age of 15 years and 86 per cent. of them were those from provincial districts. The report states that of these 391 boys and girls, there were a number of self-supporting students, but on the other hand many came up to Tokyo heedlessly in search of a livelihood apparently taken in by the honeyed words of men at registry offices. The office cared for them until there were suitable jobs for them, and also endeavoured to give work to juvenile vagabonds, of which there are many in Tokyo.

AMERICA AROUSED AT LAST

THE United States, according to Mr. Lansing, the Secretary of State, was on the "verge of war" with Germany last December. More than three months have passed since then, and the Republic at length practically recognizes that a state of war exists. To-morrow there may be a formal declaration of war. If the patience displayed by President Wilson in those several weeks was amazing, it was no more than in keeping with the policy he has pursued for the past two years. In the words of an American journal, by her invasion of Belgium and by her deliberate violation of the rules of civilized warfare Germany at the outset of the world war affronted every civilized nation, including the United States. In February, 1915, she threw down the gauntlet to every user of the high seas by her so-called war zone decree. In this she announced warfare against non-combatants and neutrals. To that decree the United States replied by declaring that in case of the loss of American lives or American ships the American Government would hold Germany to a "strict accountability." Germany chose to disregard that warning and destroyed American life, and did so with immunity. Then, with a deliberation attested by official announcement of her intention, Germany murdered over a hundred Americans and over a thousand other non-combatants in the shocking destruction of the Lusitania. Mr. Wilson did not do what he had said he would do.

The United States Government did not hold Germany to accountability, strict or otherwise. It protested however. Throughout the summer of 1915 Germany continued her war on non-combatants and neutrals. The list of her crimes on the high seas is too long to rehearse. It culminated in March, 1916, in the attack on the Sussex to the peril and injury of Americans and the death of other non-combatants who were travelling on that Channel steamer. Then, at America's warning, Germany gave a pledge not to do what America in the name of civilization demanded, but at least to refrain from being utterly ruthless. This pledge had a proviso which the United States rejected. On the eve of the first of February came Germany's repudiation of her pledge, and a proposal that America paint and navigate her vessels, according to Germany's command. This repudiation and insult strained President Wilson's patience to the breaking point. He broke off diplomatic relations with Germany. Even then there was no active step taken to protect American shipping. The President awaited an "overt act." Then followed the sinking of the Housatonic. That the Republic condoned. Then came the sinking of the Lyman M. Law. That, too, was condoned on the ground that (to quote the President's own words) it "disclosed a ruthlessness of method which deserves grave condemnation, but was accompanied by no circumstances which might not have been expected at any time in connection with the use of the submarine against merchantmen as the German Government has used it." The loss of the Lyman M. Law was followed by the sinking of the Laconia. In every respect except the arithmetical one of the number of lives lost the case of Laconia duplicated that of the Lusitania.

Thus far the American journal. Making an allowance for its somewhat critical tone, because of its political complexion, the summarization, we think, is free entirely from exaggeration or vilification. One almost wonders that Mr. Wilson has after all been aroused to taking any action. However, the great thing is that he has been aroused and most heartily we welcome it. If we were dubious before of the desirability of America's entry into the war, we now believe that it will contribute materially toward shortening its duration. In view of Mr. Wilson's utmost effort to avoid armed intervention and of his inexhaustible patience, the present turn of affairs is undoubtedly the strongest condemnation of Germany as the enemy of the whole civilized world. The indignant protests of the neutrals in Europe which they served upon Germany early last month, in the circumstances in which they are placed, is as good as the action which the United States now takes.

We notice that the American newspapers are elated with the President's declarations at the Congress on Monday and there is a wave of patriotic enthusiasm running over the country. Only we recall that the American press and people gave him a similar reception when he sent forth the "strict accountability" note. We ardently hope that the bringing the "German Empire to terms" will not be another case of a "strict accountability."

GREAT BRITAIN AND AMERICA

King George of Great Britain sent a message to President Wilson on April 6 congratulating him and the people of the United States on the action against the common enemy of the Allies. The substance of the message as it reached here Monday is as follows:—

"On this occasion of America's entrance into the war for the benefit of the great ideals which you have expounded in your address to Congress, I convey the heartfelt congratulation of the British Empire. The spiritual effect of that national declaration will be as immeasurable as will its material effect. The world's civilization, at this unprecedently great crisis owes much to the decisive action of the Great Republic."

Mr. Asquith, the former Premier, on behalf of the non-government parties sent the following greeting to the people of the United States:—

"When we know that now all the English speaking nations, by the final decision of the President and Congress of America, are carrying on the world war hand in hand, there is not a man in Great Britain who does not feel greatly relieved. President Wilson says Germany has made the world her enemy. The motive of the Allies in the war is to protect the common interest of the various peoples and their right to natural alignment. The American people has decided to offer their lives and property for this great object. The President urges the people to co-operate with the Allies to their uttermost strength and assures the Allies of strong assistance.

"We express our deep sympathy and appreciation for this action of America. Although we have never done anything to order or counsel members of our race in America what they must or must not do, it has been our suppressed desire at heart to see America co-operating with us. And now that desire has borne fruit. We are fully confident that the day will come when the great English speaking nation, with democratic principles, will share as a co-worker and fighter the joy in the triumph of liberty and justice."

MUCH ACTIVITY SEEN AS ELECTION NEARS

The canvassing movements of parliamentary candidates and election agents are daily growing more active throughout the country with the approach of the day of the general election which is only a week ahead now, and according to the latest investigation made by the "Asahi" altogether 660 candidates are now in the field competing for election to the House of Representatives. Of these 660, 30. are anti-government candidates and 40 are "neutrals," as they denominate themselves, but 70 per cent. of these neutral candidates, despite their ambiguous attitude, are considered to be supporters of the Terauchi Ministry, so that the pro-government candidates number about 341 against 319 of the anti-government parties, a balance of over 20 aspirants in favour of the Government.

Thus in the number of candidates the government apparently commands numerical strength, but in which favour the scale of the forthcoming election will finally turn, says the "Asahi," cannot be judged by numerical strength. To the best of the belief of the Tokyo paper, on the other hand, the Opposition parties will come out victorious in the approaching contest at the polls on which the destiny of the Terauchi Ministry now solely depends. It is true that these "neutral" candidates of whom many are stigmatized as "drossy" aspirants for seats are not popular among franchise holders owing to their vague attitude and the proportion that will be returned on April 20, the day of the election, is regarded as open to great doubt. However the Government and the Seiyukai are confident of final victory, while the Kenseikai and the Kokuminto, the Opposition parties, foretell their solid success too, and the final result will be awaited with great interest.

Like other cities, Tokyo is witnessing a very hot electioneering campaign now; there are 25 candidates here for 11 vacancies. Election-agents are in full swing day and night in Tokyo and even wives, daughters and mothers of a section of the Tokyo candidates are lending a helping hand in canvassing movements. Woe to citizens who have the franchise! They are now bored to death being flooded with abrupt visits from election agents who beg and implore them to cast their votes for their respective masters, and this is the reason why posters or placards on which "I will vote for Mr. So-and-So" and such sentences are inscribed and found attractively stuck on window glass or paling or gates here and there. This kind of defensive measure, however, little daunts keen election agents with the approach of election day, and some peace-loving constituents seem to be devising other measures to keep off canvassing bores. Near Kaminari-mon, Asakusa Park, there is seen a poster stuck on an entrance gate and inscribed with the following angry sentence: "Mr. So-and-So will have my vote. Other candidates and their canvassers are not allowed to enter my premises even by a single step." Not far from there another placard on the window of an intelligence office reads, "I will respectfully waive my franchise so that I refuse to see any candidate or canvasser," while near Atagoshita, Shiba, a book store posts up a notice reading "my vote will be cast for whosoever bothers me with calls least of all." Another curious poster is reported from Kyoto. A grocer there posted up the other day a notice before his store on which was written "We will discount our prices by 20 per cent. for whoever votes for Mr. So-and-So." This notice however, was ordered to be withdrawn by the police. There is no end to these campaign episodes.

The authorities are maintaining a very strict control over the election and the canvassing movements throughout the country and practically no stone is left unturned in their prosecution for offences committed by candidates and constituents. In such cherry flower resorts as Uyeno, Asukayama etc. where holiday-makers merrily enjoy floral views with prevalent indulgence in saké, detectives are on the move now-a-days not only vigilant over light-fingered gentlemen but also straining their attentions to discover possible infringements of the election law by merry holiday-makers, because the proverbially good-natured Japanese grow especially good-natured when in their cups and are likely then to commit themselves.

In these days, says the "Yorodzu," the control of the election has become rather a matter of splitting hairs. The paper says that if one visits a restaurant in Asakusa and thereabouts in company with a friend or friends now, a waitress will first of all ask these visitors to give her their cards irrespective of whether they may be patrons or not, and next comes, "what are your orders, sir?" This sounds strange indisputably but it is easily accounted for by the fact that restaurants and the police are in co-operation to prosecute offenders of the election law. These cards will be sent to detectives and investigations are started as to whether their visit to a restaurant constituted a case of bribery or other infringement or not.

Be that as it may, prosecutions in connection with violation of the election law have been so far comparatively few in the present election, as compared with 1,473 cases of violation involving 9,837 offenders at the previous election.

YOKOHAMA'S SILK HOUSE

The Yokohama Silk Conditioning House is to be reconstructed from the beginning of June. One half of the wooden structure is to be transformed to a three-storeyed brick building. For such work 110,000 yen will be spent, and it is expected to be finished with the end of the present year. Pending the reconstruction work, the Conditioning House is to be removed to godowns at No. 211, Yamashita-cho. They belong to a German firm, but a contract was duly arranged with the Union Estate and Investment Co.

The reconstruction of the Yokohama Silk Conditioning House is due to increasing silk exports of Yokohama. Last year the export reached 30 million kin, value 260 million yen. This amount should be doubled when the alterations have been completed.

CHINA AGAIN IN DOUBT AS TO ACTION AGAINST HUNS

A Peking dispatch under yesterday's date says that the Chinese Senate held a meeting of the whole House committee on Tuesday when the chairman of the committee on Foreign Relations minutely explained the reports about the outbreak of war between America and Germany and the pacification of the situation in Russia to over 90 members present. The reports over, the question of China's attitude towards Germany was put to debate. Some members opposed the idea of China's declaring war against Germany, which, according to their views, was against the good and welfare of China, while other members opined that the House should deliberate on the problem after listening to the opinion of the government. Still others advanced the opinion that the House should make a leisurely study of the question taking into consideration the reports of the foreign relations investigation committee and further take steps to exchange views with the House of Representatives before settling the attitude of the House. The meeting was closed without any definite decision being arrived at.

According to another version, at the meeting referred to Mr. Ting Shih-tak, a member of the Senate, attacked the Government for its lack of a definite principle, pointing out the inability of the Ministry to secure the consent of the Entente powers to the terms proposed to them in connection with China's participation in the war on the side of the Allies and stated that in such circumstances the nation could not rest satisfied at leaving the diplomatic affairs of state in the hands of such an incapable and weak Ministry. The speaker's remarks called forth an immense impression among the members present. Judging from the situation obtaining it seems to be impossible to secure the consent of Parliament to the proposal of China's participation in the war unless the Tuan Ministry can fulfil its pledge made to Parliament, namely to obtain the consent of the Entente powers to the proposals of the customs tariff increase, the postponement of the payment of the balance of the Boxer indemnity and other concessions.

A Peking dispatch to the "Asahi" says that Premier Tuan Chi-jui, after the meeting of the Cabinet conference on international affairs on Tuesday, interviewed President Li Yuan-hung and submitting the decision of the conference on the question of China's participation in the war sat with the President for some time. It is believed that President Li Yuan-hung, who from the very first stuck to a conservative opinion, has been affirmed of the advisability of taking a circumspect attitude in view of the strong opposition to the proposal sent in by telegraph from the governors, other prominent officials and officers, and the chambers of commerce of various provinces.

THE CABINET AND CHINA

The "Yorozu" asks what the present cabinet has been doing recently, and especially the paper wants to know what the Cabinet intends to do with China.

When Viscount Motono became Foreign Minister, he announced three policies for China, friendly relations, no interference with internal questions and the financial development of China, and the policy was announced by the order of Count Terauchi. However the three measures so publicly announced, have all failed, and the Foreign Office does not even try to carry out the policies announced.

The Cabinet said that it will not interfere with the internal questions of China, but the fact shows the contrary, and the Foreign Minister gave aid to the Tuan Cabinet, and enabled Premier Tuan to oppress President Li and the Southern people. By taking such a step, the Japanese Government incurred the hatred of the Southern Chinese. The question of severing diplomatic relations with Germany should have been solved by China herself, under the guidance of the United States, and if the Japanese Government so desired, she could have kept her hands off the question. But the Japanese Cabinet gave assistances to the Tuan Cabinet and made herself hated by the southern Chinese and those who are against the Tuan Cabinet.

The Chinese Government is said to intend to propose conditions for joining the entente, and the "Yorozu" says that it shows great failure of Japanese diplomacy to listen to the proposal of the revision of the tariff. The paper believes that the Japanese Cabinet fell into the trap set by the Chinese Government. The Japanese Cabinet declared that it will encourage the financial development of the Japanese in China, and the revision of the tariff will greatly hinder the financial development.

The present Cabinet of Japan is willing to accept the revision of tariff and has been trying to prevent the uprising of the public disapproval of the increase of the Chinese tariff.

The question of the severance of diplomatic relations between China and Germany was not brought out at the initiation of the Chinese Government, but it was brought out by the advice and persuasion of the United States. When it became probable that the United States would rise against Germany, it was not at all necessary to invite China to the Entente. The joining of China to the Entente, will not benefit the fighting nations to any extent. On the other hand, the revision of the tariff will cause the bad effect on the Chinese trade for ever.

The Terauchi Cabinet declared that it will encourage the financial development of the Japanese in China, but the paper states that since the establishment of the Terauchi Cabinet, not a single loan has been given to China, nor was a single profitable concession obtained by the Japanese, and the Terauchi Cabinet has not encouraged the Japanese to make financial progress in China. The "Yorozu" is led to believe that the present Cabinet of Japan is using the cry for the friendly relations with China for its own benefit, and has no intention to actually create friendship between the two countries.

THE RAILWAY CONFERENCE

The Conference of the Japanese and Chinese Railway officials held in Tokyo has successfully solved many pending questions to facilitate the development of traffic between China and Japan, says the "Hochi." They passed special rate return tickets, and changed the regulations covering baggage, enabling passengers to send their luggage at one half of the former rate, and many other improvements were discussed and approved at the conference.

The necessity of better transportation facilities to bring the two nations closer in friendship is beyond any doubt, and to establish this the interests of railways and steamship companies alone should not be considered, but the interest and convenience of the public should be considered first of all.

Mr. Wang Fu-wei, Director General of the Chinese railway has arrived in Tokyo, and the "Hochi" is pleased to submit advice to Mr. Wang regarding the future of the Chinese railway. In China there are at present over 20,000 miles of railway, but the Chinese Government controls only four thousand miles, and the rest of the line is under the control of other governments and corporations. There is no unity in the railway system of China, and passengers and forwarders of freights, confront many difficulties and inconveniences.

To plan the unification or nationalization of the Chinese railways is difficult, and foreign nations investing in the railways might object, but the "Hochi" says that if the present condition is left to continue, not only will the Government and investors in railways find it unprofitable, but the inconveniences to the public will be immense. When the entire Chinese railway is placed under one management, it will help to develop the country, and the Chinese Government should not hesitate to nationalize the railways. It requires a large capital, but as the nationalization of the Japanese railways proved, there is always a way to obtain the money. For the future development of China and especially her vast natural resources, it is important that railway facilities be improved, and it is imperative that the whole system should be placed under one management.

WILSON'S ACTION PLEASES

The "Kokumin" is pleased to learn that President Wilson of the United States had decided to declare a state of war against Germany. The paper is especially pleased to hear President Wilson say that the United States will give the Entente powers the best possible financial assistance. This declaration, the paper says, is more favourable to the Entente powers than the despatch of one million soldiers. The Entente powers have been suffering from financial shortage and the declaration of President Wilson will bring them a bright and hopeful future. In the eighteenth century, England gave financial aid to the nations that fought against the enemies of England. The United States of America is now following the example of England of the eighteenth century.

However the paper says that there are some who say that the present Government of the United States is Democratic, and it is not suitable in such an important period. The progressive Republican Government is more desirable at present. But the paper declares that the difference between the two parties are only nominal, and when it comes to such a crisis, there is no difference between the parties.

It is the Democratic Government under President Wilson that took so high handed a policy with regards to Mexico. It is also the Wilson Cabinet that purchased the Danish West Indies for fifty million yen and named them the Virginia Islands. The Democratic Government has adopted such progressive and pushing policies, and there is no danger whatever that the Democratic Government will fail in such an important crisis.

There is no doubt that the United States will declare war against Germany, and join in the common warfare against her.

JAPAN WILL BENEFIT BY AMERICA'S DECLARATION OF WAR

The "Chugai Shogyo" is of opinion that the declaration of war by the United States against Germany, will not cause any financial effect upon Japan, although there are many who believe that it will badly effect Japanese trade with the United States.

The joining of the United States in the war, is welcomed by all Entente Powers, and the financial assistance promised by the United States will make the economic conditions of all the Entente nations more favourable than before. The United States will send more munitions and war articles to Europe, and her foreign trade will make a tremendous increase. The American participation in the war, is not expected to destroy the wealth of the nation, and the United States will not suffer financially even if she takes part in actual fighting against Germany; on the contrary, she may profit by larger war orders.

Consequently the "Chugai Shogyo" declares that the trade between Japan and the United States will not suffer on account of the American participation in the war. The larger war orders will bring more money to the United States, and the Japanese trade may increase with the development of the war industries of the United States.

SOCIALISTS AND PEACE

It is still doubtful whether the report that Germany is trying to use the influence of the German Socialists with the Russian Socialists to conclude an independent peace with Russia, is true or not. However, the "Yorozu" says that it is a fact that the German socialists have been making various negotiations with the Russian Socialists. After the recent conference at Copenhagen, the German socialists despatched a message to the Russian socialists saying that they entertain profound respect towards the Russian revolutionists. However on the other hand, the Russian socialists at Petrograd met recently with the representatives of the Labourers and soldiers, and resolved that the Russian socialists will not consider any independent peace conclusion without first consulting with the Socialists and Labourers of France, England, Belgium and Italy.

The paper says that the reports from Copenhagen, sent by the Germans, regarding the progress of the negotiations, cannot be trusted. The "Yorozu" cannot believe that the Russian socialists desire an independent peace with Germany. Further, the paper says that it is not certain that Germany is actually using the influence of the German socialists in the negotiations with Russia. While it is true that the German socialists all desire the early termination of the war, it is doubtful whether all factions and groups of socialists have arrived at the same conclusion. The paper does not believe that the various parties of socialists are still fighting among themselves, and it is difficult for the Kaiser to unite them for the purpose of influencing the Russians. The cry for peace uttered by the German socialists is their cry for food, and simply on account of the scarcity of food, they began to cry for peace, and it is not natural that they should particularly favour independent peace with Russia.

THE CABINET THE DIVIDING POINT

The "Chugai Shogyo Shimpo" regrets that at the election, the people are swayed by sentiments, and while they should fight on political principle, they are fighting from mere sentiment. The paper states that these sentimental feelings at the time of election greatly hinder trade and commerce.

The great question that divides the opinion of the country, is the existence of the Terauchi Cabinet. One faction favours the Terauchi Cabinet while the other intends to destroy it. The paper does not desire to discuss the reasons of either side, and merely mentions that the voters are divided into these two beliefs. In the coming election, the voters will side with one or the other, according to their political opinions.

Struggles elsewhere between political parties are based upon political ideas, and not made from any sentimental feeling. However the paper declares that in reality facts show an entirely contrary situation here, and the parties and voters are fighting from sentimental causes and not from the difference of their political belief.

Especially is the attitude of the Seiyukai and its followers against the members of the Kenseikai sentimental. The members of the Seiyukai hate the members of the Kenseikai, and the hatred is even hindering their business. If a voter intends to vote for the Kenseikai candidate, the other business men who belong to the Seiyukai, will suspend trade transaction with the Kenseikai voter. The voters are oppressed by the two parties and they fear to declare any political belief as, when he favours one, the other will attack him. Many of these voters, wishing not to hurt his own trade by casting votes, will not vote at the election.

The paper says that even though their political beliefs may differ, the members of the Seiyukai should not regard the members of the Kenseikai as their enemies even in their business transactions. To try to influence a voter by pressure upon his interest, is against the election law, and the paper hopes that the Government will prevent the future occurrence of interference in business by campaign workers.

ON THE FRENCH FRONT

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Apr. 3.—Reuter's correspondent, writing from headquarters April 3, says that a blizzard has impeded operations, but the enemy has been completely cleared out of Henin-sur-Cojuil, five miles south-east of Arras. Thus, the British line runs almost dead straight for fourteen miles from Beauraine south of Arras to the Great Amiens-Cambrai road near Beaumetz.

It is reported that the British have again advanced toward St. Quentin.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, April 4.—The French have continued their advance east and west of the Somme along the entire front attacked yesterday. Reconnaissances have been pushed forward beyond Dallon as far as the south-western suburb of St. Quentin. The French have reached the southern edge of Gruigies, north-east of Costres, and captured the entire village of Moy, on the Oise. On the right, fighting continued south of the Ailette as far as the village of Lafaux, into which the French troops penetrated despite obstinate resistance.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, April 4.—The French to the east and west of the Somme attacked the enemy positions south of a line running from Cascressiny Denay and from Epine de Dallon to the Oise, and attained their objective, despite a desperate resistance.

They carried on a front of thirteen kilometres a series of strong points solidly organized and held by large forces.

They captured Epine de Dallon and the villages of Dallon, Giffecourt, and Cerizy and several heights south of Urvillers and south of the Ailette river.

They continued their progress in the region of Lafaux, and also carried Bauvemy, gaining a footing to the west and north thereof.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Apr. 4.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Tuesday evening communiqué, says: "In the course of Monday's attack south-east of Arras, we carried by storm the village of Henin-sur-Cojuil. Our artillery broke up a second counter-attack. Further south, we captured Maissemy and occupied Ronssoy Wood."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Apr. 4.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig announces: "We have captured the village of Metzenconture. Fighting continues eastward of the village and in the neighbourhood of Havrincourt Wood. South-eastward of Arras, on Monday, we captured 270 more prisoners, 17 machine-guns and 4 trench-mortars.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, April 5.—The French troops, on Wednesday, drove back the enemy along the whole front from the Somme to the Oise and threw him back beyond a most important dominating position, marked by the villages of Gruiges, Orvillers and Moy, all of which were brilliantly carried.

North of Lafolie Farm, the Germans were hustled by an irresistible attack, which precipitated their quitting three lines of trenches, protected by wire entanglements, and abandoning their wounded. This progress is part of the French encircling movement south of St. Quentin, the fate of which is sealed already. The situation is dramatic as the British, to the north, are only two miles from the town, and the French, to the south, only 2½ miles distant. The honour of capture, is expected to fall to the French. The suddenness of the British advance was a disagreeable surprise to the enemy whose overconfidence forced him to abandon six guns.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, April 5.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig announces that the British have captured the villages of Ronshoy and Basse Boulogne. They have continued their progress north-east and east of Metzen-Couture and have reached the western and south-western edges of Gouzeaucourt and Havrincourt Woods.

French reconnaissances pushed forward in the night north of Cauchy, Moy and Fars. The enemy lines found there were strongly held.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Apr. 7.—Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Friday evening communiqué reports that the British carried the village of Lempire north of St. Quentin and made further progress northeast of Noreuil, where they drove off a counter-attack. Fighting continues.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Apr. 7.—British gunfire near Arras last Wednesday caused one of the most terrific explosions experienced during the war. Behind the German lines a sheet of flame 300 feet high leaped into the air. The ground quaked for miles around. Airmen report that their machines swooped like ships caught in a tidal wave. It is believed that a great meinwerfer reserve depôt was touched off by the British guns. The damage must have been immense.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Apr. 8.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his communiqué, reports: "We have made progress at a number of points between Selency and Jeancourt and reached the outskirts of Fresny-le-Petit.

"Our aeroplanes are continually harassing the enemy's communications and seeking out his fighting machines. Seventeen successful bomb raids have been carried out a long distance in the rear of the enemy's forces and 8 tons of bombs have been dropped.

"The whole time there has been intense fighting in large formations. Twenty-eight of our machines are missing, many of which are known to have been shot down. Fifteen hostile machines have been driven down, seven with a crash; thirty-one others have been driven down damaged, a large majority of which, undoubtedly, were destroyed."

London, April 9.—It is officially announced that the British forces have penetrated the German lines at Arras and Lens. In the direction of Cambrai the British troops stormed Hermies and Boursies and penetrated Havrincourt Wood. In the direction of St. Quentin, Le Fesnay was captured. Reports from all points show satisfactory progress. Many prisoners have been taken.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

London, April 9.—The British armies have captured 3,500 prisoners in the new drive against the German lines.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, April 9.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig reports: "We attacked at 5.30 on Monday morning on a wide front, and penetrated the enemy lines everywhere from southward of Arras to southward of Lens, making satisfactory progress at all points. We stormed the villages of Hermies and Boursies, in the direction of Cambrai and penetrated Havrincourt Wood. We captured Tresnoy-le-Petit, in the direction of St. Quentin, and advanced our line south-eastward of Leverguier, taking many prisoners."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Apr. 9.—Reuter's correspondent at British Headquarters in France telegraphing on Monday evening, says "the battle of Arras is raging unabatedly and in favour of the British."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, April 9.—Reuter's representative at British Headquarters in France telegraphs: "The offensive has extended from Lens to St. Quentin. A steady bombardment was in progress for days before the assault was delivered. It reached the greatest volume of fire yet seen in the war. Shortly after 8 a.m. on Monday, the second phase of the attack developed. Fighting has intensified and the surmise is that the attack is bigger and has come sooner than the enemy expected. It is recalled that this is the third great battle for the position on Vimy ridge."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, April 9.—Mr. Beach Thomas in a description of the aeroplanes on both sides on the western front writes of the breathless skill with which a broken British machine, which had destroyed five enemy aeroplanes at one flight was brought to earth in safety. He writes of machines' plummet-like descent from 16,000 feet to bomb a train, fire a balloon, or fusilade a body of troops. The art of firing at small objects on the ground, he says, is practised every day like tent-pegging. So quickly do the divers come and go that riflemen often are too astonished to fire until the machine has disappeared. The German authorities, it is said, complain bitterly of the failure of their infantry to fire on such occasions.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

London, Apr. 9.—It is officially announced that the British troops have advanced from two to three miles on the front from Henion-sur-Cojeul to Givenchy. The advance still continues. The Canadians have captured the famous Vimy ridge.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Apr. 9.—Reuter's correspondent at British headquarters in France, telegraphing on Monday evening, says: "The day has gone well for us and the troops have made substantial progress. There have been big captures, the prisoners coming back in an endless procession, 3,500 being counted in one area alone up to mid-day. Fighting is increasing in intensity. The battle has developed strictly in accordance with the programme, but determined resistance is being offered near Arras, where a larger pocket of the enemy was reported to be still holding out at midday although entirely surrounded.

"The famous 'Harp' Redoubt, a little less formidable than 'The Labyrinth' was captured with practically a whole battalion of the enemy. The Canadians fought their way well forward upon Vimy slopes, but the resistance here is stiffening. Our immense preponderance of heavy artillery is one of the most striking features. The spirit of the troops everywhere is admirable and they are full of confidence."

In summing up, the correspondent says: "Assuredly the Spring offensive of the British campaign has opened under most favourable circumstances."

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

London, Apr. 10.—It is officially announced that the British forces have captured 9,000 prisoners and over 40 guns in the fighting in France.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, Apr. 10.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig announces: "After severe night fighting at the northern end of Vimy Ridge, where the enemy retained a footing, we ejected him. We cleared up the eastern slope of the ridge also and advanced and seized the village of Fampout and the neighbouring defenses northward and southward of Scarpe. On Monday, we took over 9,000 prisoners and 40 guns. Fighting continues along the whole battle front."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, April 10.—Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in his Monday evening communiqué, says: "Operations continue successfully in accordance with our plans. The troops everywhere stormed the enemy's defenses from Henin-sur-Cojeul to the southern outskirts of Givenchy-en-Helle to a depth of two to three miles and the advance continues. Besides a net work of trenches, the British, early on Monday morning, captured Vimy Ridge, Neuville-Vitasse, Telegraph Hill, Tilloy-le Zmoffains, the observation ridge of St. Laurent, Blagmy-les-Tilleurs and La Folie farm. Subsequently they again advanced and captured Feuchy-Chapelle, Feuchy, 'Hyderabad Redoubt,' Athies and Thelus. Up to 2 p.m., 5816 prisoners had passed the collecting stations and many more were uncounted. Further progress was made in the neighbourhood of Havrincourt Wood. We have captured the village of Demicourt, and in the direction of St. Quentin, the hamlets of Prontru and Leverguier."

ON THE RUSSIAN FRONTS

Petrograd, Apr. 6.—The Russian forces in Mesopotamia have joined hands with the British at Kyzel Rabat.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, Apr. 6.—After their victory over the Russians on the Stokhod, the Germans are continuing a scarce artillery fire on the left bank of the river. After suffering severe losses near Toboly on the night of April 3, the Russian troops occupied the right bank of the river.

According to reports of the army commanders only about forty men out of two regiments of the Fifth Fusilier Division crossed to the right bank of the river. Both commanders were killed. The third regiment of this division retreated. Of the two regiments of the other field divisions several hundred men of each regiment survived.

After a strong fire the Germans attacked and seized the Russian trenches south of the Ponievesh Railway, but were dislodged and repulsed. In the night before April 3 the enemy opened a strong artillery and mine throwing fire against the Russian trenches near Novoselki, south of Krevo, but his attacks failed.

On April 3 the enemy, using chemical shells, opened a strong artillery fire against the Russian place d'armes on the left bank of the Stokhod near Chervistche. In the meantime about thirteen gas clouds were discharged near Borovno. Under the cover of artillery fire the Germans assumed the offensive on the Toboly-Gelenin front and pressed upon the Russian troops. Part of the Germans forced their way through to the passages of the river, thus endangering the Russian troops which had to protect the place d'armes. Suffering heavy losses at some places the Russians removed to the right bank of the river.

The Russian artillery fired successfully at an enemy train on the Kovel-Romny track. Surmounting the wire entanglements nine kilometres west of Rafailov, the Russian troops took three ranges of trenches and put a number of Austrians to the bayonet.

The enemy opened a strong artillery fire in the Peniaki region April 4, firing on the first and second line trenches and also on the rear. An attack performed by the enemy on Tchepele was repulsed by the Russian fire, but after five further attacks the enemy succeeded in entering the Russian trenches. He was dislodged, however, in the evening, and the entire front was entirely reestablished,

In the Dobrudja the Bulgarians tried to cross the Georgian arm of the Danube in small boats near Tulcea, but were repulsed by the Russian fire.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, April 7.—North of Brzezany near Avgustovka Koniuha, the enemy, after an artillery preparation, attacked the Russian positions, but was repulsed. The enemy's trenches, south-east of Brzezany near Lipica Dolnaia, were destroyed by the explosion of a subterranean gallery. They were occupied by the Russian scouts and prisoners were taken. The enemy's counter-attacks were repulsed. A gas attack was performed by the Russians in the same region. A numerous hostile detachment with the use of mines, bombs and artillery fire reached the Russian trenches, but were repulsed by a bayonet counter-attack.

Rumanian front. The enemy's attack east of Toldesh, have been repulsed by the Russian fire.

Caucasus front. In the Hanykin direction, the Russian troops are fighting near Dekke. On April 7th the Russians joined the British troops near Kizilrabat.

Later. Western front. Using chemical shells, the Germans after a strong artillery preparation assumed the offensive and succeeded in seizing a part of the Russian trenches east of Plakanen (20 kilometres south of Riga), but by a counter-attack the enemy was dislodged and the front re-established.

Rumania. In the Bystrica direction, the enemy, after an artillery preparation, tried to attack the Russian positions between the Jakobeni Valeputna roadway, and the railway but was repulsed by rifle and machine-gun fire. On April 4th after his artillery had strongly fired at the Russian positions between the mouth of the river Rymnik and Krendcheny, the enemy made two attacks on our trenches, south of Cherleschi, but was both times repulsed.

[OFFICIAL TO THE RUSSIAN EMBASSY]

Petrograd, April 9.—Western front. Unimportant enemy attacks in the Carpathians, west of Dzembronie in the Marmarosh Szige direction, also west of Tomnatik have been repulsed.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

[Delayed in Transmission]

London, April 2.—The Italian communiqué of April 2 reads: "Along the whole front, the usual artillery activity has been hindered by persistent bad weather, which also interfered with our infantry action. Minor successful encounters are reported from Posina Valley. During the night of March 31 and the early morning of April 1, our troops carried out a bold coup-de-main in the vicinity of Laght, destroying the enemy's trenches."

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

After a violent prolonged artillery preparation, an enemy detachment attempted to storm our position on Mt. Faite, but was repulsed and almost annihilated by machine-gun fire. Successive assaults were likewise unsuccessful owing to the stubborn resistance of our troops. The enemy suffered severe losses and we took some prisoners.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

London, April 4.—The Italian communiqué of April 1 reads: "Snowstorms are hindering artillery activity in the mountain areas. On the night between March 30 and 31, after a violent artillery and trench mortar preparation, the enemy launched an attack against our lines north of Santa Caterina, in the Golizia district. KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

London, April 4.—The Italian communiqué of even date reads: "There have been desultory artillery actions along the Trentino front, especially in the Adige valley. On the Julian front, activity among our reconnoitring parties is reported.

"Yesterday evening, north of Boscomalo, on the Carso plateau, our troops captured and occupied an advanced enemy post by a successful coup-de-main. Most of the garrison, consisting of 30 men, were killed, only six prisoners being taken."

JAPAN'S RECOGNITION OF RUSSIAN REGIME

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, April 4.—Yesterday, Viscount Uchida, Japanese Ambassador and the Belgian, Portuguese, Serbian and Rumanian Ministers greeted the Provisional Government of Russia at the Marie Palace.

Viscount Uchida in the course of a speech on the happy occasion said: "With profound satisfaction, the Japanese Government received the declaration of the Russian Ambassador in Tokyo that the Provisional Russian Government was prepared to fulfil all the international obligations already contracted, and continue the war until victory. Upon receipt of the declaration my Government empowered me to recognize, and begin official relations with the Provisional Russian Government. The Japanese Government is assured of the bright and glorious future before Russia, and expresses its desire, with certitude of its fulfilment, that the cordial friendship, which has existed for the last few years, will be closer cemented under the new Russian régime.

"I duly handed my Government the Russian Note of March 17 and will now do my utmost to strengthen and further develop our mutual interests."

M. Milukoff, the Russian Foreign Minister, in thanking Viscount Uchida in the name of the Government for Japan's promise of adherence to what henceforth would be a free Russia, said:

"We are grateful, Monsier L'Ambassadeur, for your so efficiently expressing the certitude that our mutually allied relations will become still closer united under the Provisional Government, which has undertaken all the obligations contracted by the State of Russia. Your readiness to support the new Government of free Russia further assures our attainment of the results we are striving for, and which can be traced by all our allies; attainments which coincide with the triumph of our ideals of right freedom and justice."

AMERICA JOINS FIGHT AGAINST KAISERISM

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, Apr. 3.—The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations to-day approved, with slight verbal amendments, the administration's resolution declaring that a state of war exists between the United States and Germany.

The resolution was introduced into both Houses and consideration deferred until April 4. It is expected that it will pass both Houses overwhelmingly.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, Apr. 3.—In the course of his speech before the House of Congress last night, President Wilson pointed to the effects of the Russian Revolution on the world situation. The Russian people, he said, in all their native majesty, have now been added to the forces fighting for freedom, justice and peace.

It has been proved in the courts of the United States, the President said, that intrigues coming perilously near disturbing the peace of the United States and dislocating the industries of the country had been carried out at the instigation and under the personal direction of German officials. This proved, he said, that Germany purposed aggression against the United States when it became convenient. The interception of the note to the German Minister to Mexico was eloquent testimony of the evil designs of the German Government.

"We are accepting this challenge," the President said, "knowing that such a government can never be a friend, but must be a menace to the security of all democracies. We are accepting the gage of battle with this natural foe of liberty and shall, if necessary, spend all the force of the nation to nullify its pretensions."

Washington, April 4.—The Senate has passed the resolution empowering President Wilson to declare war against Germany by 82 votes against 2.

Senators Knox and Kirby who opposed the armed neutrality decision, announced that they would vote for the war resolution for the sake of national unity. Mr. William J. Stone, democrat nominee from Missouri, and Mr. J. K. Vardaman, from Mississippi, also a democrat, said that they were opposed to the resolution before the House, but pledged their support to Government when once the war had begun. Many Senators said they desired to speak in favour of the resolution, but refrained from doing so in order not to delay its passage.

Mr. Robert M. La Follette, Republican Senator from Wisconsin, was the principal opposition speaker. He praised the character and services of the German-Americans. He then went on to lay a charge that England had begun the ruthless naval warfare. The United States, he said, should have protested more vigorously at the British blockade. Germany, he remarked had been patient with America. His speech lasted for three hours.

Mr. John S. Williams, democrat nominee from Mississippi, in reply said that Mr. La Follette's speech would better become Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg than an American Senator. The speech, he denounced, as pro-German, pro-Goth, pro-vandal, anti-President, anti-Congress and anti-American. The essential difference between British and German naval measures, said Mr. Williams, was that Great Britain had drowned no American citizens.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, April 4.—The Senate had to adjourn owing to a technical objection raised by the Pacifist, Senator La Follette. The Democrat leaders, however, have decided upon continuous sittings throughout to-day until the resolution is ratified.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

Washington, Apr. 4.—The War Resolution was taken up in the Senate with the leaders determined to remain in continuous session until it is acted upon. The House of Representatives takes up the same resolution on Thursday morning.

The Senate debate began by some stirring speeches favouring immediate action in accordance with President Wilson's recommendation. Senator Henry C. Lodge, Republican nominee from Massachusetts, appealed to both Democrats and Republicans to forget party lines in the presence of the crisis. He urged Government to seize the German merchantmen in American ports and use them to replace the ships Germany had sunk by submarines. He said nothing was more important than the President's suggestion of co-operation with the Allies. "It would be madness," he said, "for us to attempt to make war alone upon Germany. The Entente was fighting a common foe and their foe was now ours." He urged helping the Allies with large credits and supplies.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, Apr. 4.—The Senate by a vote of 82 to 6 resolved that a state of war already exists between the United States and Germany. The measure will be taken up in the House of Representatives to-morrow, where the passage is confidently expected.

[Delayed in Transmission]

Washington, April 4.—The resolution as passed by the Senate says: "The state of war thrust upon the United States by Germany is formally declared and the President is authorized to use the entire naval and military forces and all the resources of government to carry on the war and bring it to a successful termination."

The resolution was passed after thirteen hours' continuous debate. There was no demonstration when the result was announced; all present seemed to feel the gravity of the situation. Of the twelve Senators, who originally opposed the President's armed neutrality measures, three voted in favour of the present resolution.

The matter will be taken up by the House of Representatives to-morrow morning.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, April 5.—The speeches in the Senate on the war motion were characterized by resoluteness in their utterances in support of the measure.

Senator Hitchcock, who introduced the measure, in a striking manner declared his conversion. He recalled his previous bitter opposition to war notwithstanding the overwhelming demand of the people and the views of the majority in Congress. He had besought the President to adhere to armed neutrality, but information in Mr. Wilson's possession made that impossible now. He dwelt on the high-minded purpose inspiring President Wilson's declaration of war and insisted that the United States was not influenced by the least desire to acquire territory, to recover indemnity or to settle any historic grudge. "The time for discussion had passed, and time for action had arrived," he said. Four Senators announced their intention of voting against the resolution, but pledged their support for war, when once it had begun.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, April 5.—Reuter's Agency is informed that the United States will probably make a free gift of possibly £100,000,000 to France to be considered as repayment for the financial assistance France rendered in the American revolution.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

Washington, Apr. 5.—A sensational incident occurred in the debate in the House of Representatives. Mr. Clarence B. Miller, Republican nominee from Minnesota and a member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, in the course of his speech said that an unpublished paragraph, in the Zimmermann Note to Mexico, offered to establish submarine bases at Mexican ports, supply Mexico with arms and ammunition, and send German reservists from the United States to Mexico. The Note concluded, according to Mr. Miller, with the words: "Arrange attack all along the border."

There was some disappointment later, when Mr. Lansing, Secretary of State, refused to confirm this. On the contrary, he declared that the Note contained nothing of the sort. Mr. Miller on being informed of this, insisted on the correctness of his intelligence, intimating that the denial was a diplomatic one.

Earlier in the day, Mr. Isaac Siegel, Republican returned by New York, declared that he would support the resolution, despite the fact that within the week it had been intimated to him that if he did so, the Germans would concertedly strive to end his congressional career.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, April 5.—The Resolution, after being slightly amended was passed at 11 o'clock on Wednesday night amid awed solemnity and without any demonstration or further debate.

The thirteen hours' continuous debate was brought to a climax by Senator Williams spiritedly affirming that America would stay at war until the Hohenzollerns and Hapsburgs were dethroned and the Turks driven out of Europe.

Mr. Husting of Wisconsin, a colleague of Senator La Follette, deserting the latter stated: "If the question 'shall the United States support President Wilson?' be submitted to the people, they would affirm it by an overwhelming majority.

The Resolution goes to the House of Representatives on April 6.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

Washington, April 5.—Mr. Henry D. Flood, the Chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, opened the debate on the war resolution. He declared: "We should take our stand by the side of the Entente, which is fighting humanity's battles, determined that our power shall be so employed that complete victory will crown their efforts, and that Prussian militarism shall be crushed and that the world shall be delivered from the threat of danger from the Hohenzollern dynasty."

It is a foregone conclusion that the resolution will be carried by a huge majority.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

Washington, April 5.—Requests for an immediate appropriation of $3,400,000,000 for the army and navy were made to Congress to-day by the executive departments. The sum of more than $2,930,000,000 is asked for the army alone.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

London, April 6.—President Wilson has declared war against Germany.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

London, Apr. 6.—President Wilson has signed the resolution of war against Germany, which was passed in the House of Representatives, following the passage through the Senate.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

Washington, April 6.—Orders have been issued for the mobilization of the Navy, including the Naval Reserve, the Naval Militia and the newly organized power-boat coast patrol.

There were indications after the Cabinet meeting that nearly 100 German steamers, interned in American ports, will be taken over and regarded as the property of the United States, to be paid for at the close of the war.

The Department of Justice has issued orders for the arrest of some 65 Germans here, of whom some have already been convicted of various crimes, but have been released on bail. Others are deemed dangerous to the welfare of the Government.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Amsterdam, April 6.—A message from Vienna states that the Austrian Ambassador to Washington, Count Tarnow Tarnowski, had already been instructed to demand his pass-ports in the event of Congress ratifying the resolution that a state of war existed between the United States and Germany.

The Communications Department was yesterday in receipt of a notification from the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company to the effect that wireless communications between the Kafuku Wireless station in Hawaii and the Japanese wireless station at Funabashi should be temporarily suspended owing to the order of the American navy authorities. Consequently the Communications Department has announced the temporary suspension of the wireless communications between Funabashi and Hawaii, San Francisco and Sacramento from the date of the announcement. The reason for the suspension of the service is understood to lie in the necessity of checking the leakage of U.S. naval plans.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Copenhagen, April 6.—The German newspapers published heavily censored versions of President Wilson's speech to Congress. The references to the activities of German spies in the United States and to the efforts to stir up Mexico were notably suppressed, and the denunciation of the autocrats was much toned down.

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

Washington, April 6.—The President has signed a Proclamation defining the status of subjects of the Imperial German Government here: The Proclamation announces that those who are obedient to the laws of the land will not be molested, but it is explained that the President, at his discretion will intern or deport the same if he considers it in the public interest to do so.

The President has also issued a statement approving the war measures proposed to be enacted by Congress, calling for the preparation of an army of 500,000 immediately, to be followed later by other increments of the same size. The same will be raised by voluntary enlistment until such time as the President thinks compulsion necessary.

The President says no attempt will be made now to solve a permanent military policy for the country, chiefly because in these anxious, disordered times, a clear view cannot be had either of the country's permanent military necessities or the best mode of organising a proper military peace establishment. President Wilson says: "The hope of the world is that when the European war is over, arrangements will have been made composing many of the questions which hitherto seemed to require the arming of nations, and that in some just way, the peace of the world may be maintained by such co-operation of force among the great nations as may be necessary to maintain peace and freedom throughout the world."

KOKUSAI DIRECT SERVICE

Washington, April 7.—The Senate has voted the first emergency war credit of $100,000,000 to be expended at President Wilson's discretion.

Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and Democratic leaders conferred to-day and are understood to have decided to place before Congress early in the week legislation looking to the immediate issuance of a loan to benefit the Entente Governments.

The exact amount has not been determined, but it probably will be in the neighbourhood of $5,000,000,000. It is reported that the proceeds will be loaned to the Allies at the same rate of interest as the United States has to pay. This government therefore, will derive no financial profit in the transaction.

President Wilson has received cablegrams from King George and the King of Italy, congratulating the people and Government of the United States on entrance into the war against Germany.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Washington, April 7.—It is stated that the American Government is prepared to spend 680,000,000 pounds sterling for initial war preparations in addition to lending far vaster sums to the Allies.

Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo has published the first war budget. It includes £586,000,000 for the raising and training of a million men within a year, £35,000,000 for increasing the effectiveness of the navy and £58,000,000 to be expended for navy materials.

The income tax probably will be trebled, with possibly confiscatory surtaxes on incomes of over £20,000.

The industrial mobilization of the country has already advanced to the stage where 32,000 companies have offered their factories to the government.

The American Federation of Labor has undertaken the task of supplying trained workmen to the government.

It is understood that German vessels will be regarded as the property of the United States to be paid for after the war. Sixty-five Germans, some ex-convicts and others regarded as dangerous, have been arrested, including all those identified with conspiracies to destory the Welland Canal and other works. Some of them were out on bond.

All wireless stations on American territory have been seized to be utilized by the government.

It is officially announced that the vessel was the former Russian Volunteer steamer Riasan of 3,522 tons, captured by the Emden and manned by the German crew of the gun-boat Cormorant after she was dismantled.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

JAPAN AND UNITED STATES

H.I.M. the Emperor sent under date of April 7th to President Wilson of the United States a congratulatory telegram in connection with America's declaration of war against Germany. The Imperial telegram reads as follows:

"President of the United States, Washington."

"It gives me unbounded joy to see that the United States of America has taken the side of the Entente powers and identified herself with these warring parties in order to protect the cause of humanity. I sincerely trust that the noble step taken by the United States in conformity with the proposition made by her ruler will lead to further cementing the unshaken relationship between your country and Japan."

YOSHIHITO.

AMERICA AND THE ALLIES

The American Chargé d'Affaires, Mr. Post Wheeler, on April 7 officially notified Viscount I. Motono, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, that the United States had declared war against Germany. It is a matter of course that the United States has notified the other members of the Allies, as well as all the neutral countries of the action she has taken.

Now that America has joined the world war on the side of the Allied Powers it is expected that soon the question will come up for her to decide whether she will bind herself to the London Pact not to conclude a separate peace until the Central Empires are defeated. An official here in close touch with the situation said yesterday that the allied Governments have not as yet taken up the matter. He expressed his belief that in the long run Washington would not keep aloof from the joint struggle to a finish with which the country has aligned itself.

"Very likely," said the official. "Great Britain, being on such intimate relations as she is, on behalf of the Allies will first approach the American Government and sound its sentiment with regard to its joining the London Pact. Whether the United States wants or not to be regarded as a member of the Allies she is practically one; for it is beyond question that she will not lay down her arms until Germany whom she holds as "the enemy of humanity has been crushed."

BRAZIL BREAKS WITH BERLIN GOVERNMENT

Rio de Janeiro, April 9.—The Brazilian Foreign Minister, Dr. Lauro Müller, refused to receive the German Minister when he paid an official visit to the Foreign Office to-day.

KOKUSAI-REUT

London, April 9.—Dispatches from Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires, Santiago and Lima show that the South American States are most excited at the intervention in the war of the United States, Cuba and Panama. The torpedoing of the Brazilian liner Parana has also caused quite a stir. The Chilean Press believes that Chile will shortly be obliged to act against Germany. The Peruvian papers consider that South America must jointly act against submarinism. The Argentine Press thinks the situation of the gravest.

It is thought that Cuba's action will be most useful in destroying the lairs of the pirates in the Antilles.

A message from Rio de Janeiro states that the entire Brazilian press demands reprisals for the sinking of the Parana. The Germans in Rio de Janeiro are being closely watched, especial care being taken of the interned ships and their crews. The German Minister had a prolonged interview with the Foreign Minister (presumably on 7th) to whom he asserted that the Parana was mined. The Brazilian Government, however, is satisfied that the vessel was torpedoed, and is now considering what action it will take.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Rio de Janeiro, April 10.—Diplomatic relations between Brazil and Germany have been broken off.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Rio de Janeiro, April 10.—Dr. Lauro Müller, after refusing to receive the German Minister, ordered a steamer to be prepared for an immediate mission abroad.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

New York, April 10.—The action of Cuba, in declaring war on Germany, has affected all the States of Latin America. Guatemala, Nicaragua, Salvador and Honduras are all experiencing a great anti-German wave of feeling. It is expected that Brazil's entry into the war will be the signal for all the Republics.

New York, April 10.—A Rio de Janeiro dispatch says that Brazilian Foreign Minister Dr. Lauro Müller refused to grant an interview to the German Minister at Rio de Janeiro, because, it is observed, the Brazilian government has already decided on declaring war against Germany.—"Nichi-nichi."

There are 50 German and Austrian vessels, representing nearly 240,000 tons, in Brazilian harbours. They are distributed as follows:—

Port.	No.	Total tonnage.
Rio	14	68,761
Para	2	9,199
Maranhao	2	4,672
Pernambuco	13	80,803
Bahia (and gunboat Eber)	6	27,771
Santa Catharina	1	5,703
Rio Grande do Sul	3	7,490
Santos	6	20,872
Paranagua	1	3,739
Parahyba Norte	2	10,718

These are exclusive of the Moskow (ex Gladstone), the ownership of which is disputed by American and Danish companies. She attempted to leave port lately, but was stopped by the Brazilian authorities, the captain's protest being unavailing.

CHINA AND UNITED STATES

Peking, Apr. 7.—Before America's declaration of war against Germany only a few Chinese papers commented on the war resolution, which did not affect the situation here as much as was expected. If the American decision had occurred at the time of China's rupture with Germany, it undoubtedly would have been received in official and parliamentary circles and by the press with the greatest of enthusiasm.

By now, however, China's war spirit has somewhat cooled. The majority of the papers emphasize the necessity of obtaining the complete unity of the people before taking a final step. The sentiment is that the government should proceed slowly, following America's example.

Peking, Apr. 7.—The news of America's declaration of war reached here today, and is expected to hasten China's decision. A conference is to be held to-day to discuss the question of declaring war against Germany.—"Asahi."

CUBA DECLARES WAR ON RUTHLESS HUN

Bolivia and Peru are also showing sympathy toward the United States, although the attitude of Argentine and Chile seems indifferent.

ENTENTE PRESS HAILS WILSON EPOCH-MAKER

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, April 5.—The entire Entente press hails President Wilson's decision as an event epoch-making in its significance. The papers agree that the speech will go down in History as a most memorable utterance.

The news caused a great sensation in the Russian capital of Petrograd. Speakers explained its significance to crowds of troops and civilians, who received their utterances with wild cheers.

KOKUSAI-REUTER

London, April 4.—Though the vast potentialities of American aid to the Allies is appreciated, the uppermost feeling produced by President Wilson's speech is deep emotion at the moral endorsement of the Allies' cause; in the moving utterance, which like the voice of humanity, has awakened the world to realism—namely that the present war is a fight between systems of government, not a quarrel between peoples. The speech is variously described as a new declaration of rights, and a new gospel in the governance of mankind.

Some papers regard it as a clinching argument for the policy of no peace with the Hohenzollerns. The "Daily Mail" says: "For the security of the world, the Germans must be freed from the despots, who have inoculated them with the passion of slaughter, and the cruelty must be removed."

The "Daily Telegraph" says: "We take President Wilson to mean that the United States will only conclude peace with the German people, when they have abandoned the inhumanities practised by their present régime of intriguers and desperadoes."

CHINA DRAWS CLOSER TO BRINK OF WARFARE

Shanghai, April 9.—At the meeting of the committee on international politics held on the 7th, says a Peking report, the Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs strongly urged the necessity of China's taking a further step namely declaring war against Germany and stated that it was inadvisable for China to base her action on any settlement of the question of her counter-proposals made to the Entente powers, which measures had not been well considered. The Vice-Minister further stated that Dr. Wu Ting-fang, the Foreign Minister, was also of the same opinion as the Vice-Minister. An opinion was advanced at the meeting to dispatch influential Government officials to Shanghai and cause them to mitigate the strong opposition against China's participating in the war among the public there, which is strongly opposed to China's participation in the war. The suggestion was adopted by the meeting and an official has been already dispatched to Shanghai from Peking on that mission. Dr. Wu Ting-fang, who favoured China's only taking similar steps as America vis-à-vis Germany, has now changed his opinion and insists on the declaration of war against Germany now that America has taken such a strong attitude. The Foreign Minister, who was off duty on the score of illness, is now attending office.

Another Peking dispatch says that owing to the declaration of war by the United States the Entente Powers are making an active movement to induce China to make up her mind and take a final step towards Germany without a moment's hesitation. Meanwhile the Americans are making endeavours to induce China to co-operate with America against Germany.

The "Asahi" correspondent at Peking wires that the negotiations re China's participation in the war and the question of the Allies giving financial support to China have made progress, but it is thought difficult to arrive at a satisfactory settlement in the near future in view of the difference of the interests of the powers concerned and various other complicated affairs. America's participation in the war has brought a change in the situation, and as a result of her participation the Entente powers will perhaps invite America to join their group and take measures to give financial support to China jointly with the United States. After all the financial support to China will probably be made in the form of a loan to be jointly borne by the Allies and America, the former negotiations being dropped. Great Britain, Russia and France are apparently welcoming the new plan, and if the consent of Japan and America who are the suppliers of the money required can be secured, the proposal of giving financial support, of which China is in an immediate need, will be carried out at once.

According to a telegram from America received at a certain Legation in Peking, the negotiations relating to the Chinese loan, which are going on between the four-power group and the American financiers, are making much headway and expected to be settled very shortly. The Minister of a certain power talking on the subject stated that China's participation in the war was only a question of time. As China had applied to the Entente powers for financial support, she will probably not declare war on Germany just because America has, but will take steps to reserve taking final decisive measures for some time yet in view of her relations with the Entente powers. Once China decides to participate in the war, no matter in whatever form it may be, China must compete with the common enemy with the Entente powers and America, so that the Minister thinks it most important to both countries that Japan and America should take joint action in dealing with the Chinese questions.

LATEST NEWS FROM RUSSIA

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd, April 8.—The Provisional Government has decreed that it will organise a special Commission to elaborate regulations regarding elections for the future Constituent Assembly. The Commission will consist of specialists in political statistics and other competent persons.

Yesterday an assembly of delegates of the party of National Liberty took place here and unanimously carried a resolution that Russia must become a Democratic Parliamentary Republic. The Houses shall be created by popular representatives, and the executive power shall be in the hands of a President, chosen for a definite period by the popular representatives and governing through ministers responsible to the people.

Petrograd, April 8.—M. Miliukoff, Foreign Minister of the Provisional Government, has declared that the fundamental problems of the present war consist in the reorganization of Austria-Hungary, which shall be parted from the narrow strip of land between Rumania and Italy, and the cancellation of Turkish suzerainty over Armenia and Russia's occupation of the Dardanelles and Constantinople. Explaining his statement M. Miliukoff says that not only these questions are nothing but the embodiment of the principle of national freedom, but also they absolutely concur with the opinion entertained by the President of the United States. His declaration has startled and created a great panic among the labour class and the press community who are clamouring for an unconditional peace without territorial concessions. The "Pravda," the organ of the Social Democrat party, regards the declaration of the Foreign Minister as a demonstration of the policy of the new Russian Government determined on continuing the war till the last. The paper states that the determination to continue the war for the purpose of securing the occupation of the Dardanelles and Constantinople and the design on Armenia means depriving the Russian people, who have pledged their allegiance to the new Government, of their future freedom, and insists that the true labour government, must relinquish such ambitions, and strive to settle in co-operation with the labour parties of other belligerent countries the great question of the present war, not along the principle of warring on account of the territories of other nations, but with a view to war for the cause of peace and freedom.

M. Kerensky, the Minister of Justice, declares that the statement of M. Miliukoff was merely his private opinion and did not represent the views of the provisional government. It is learned that the Minister of Justice holds the opinion to continue the war until the enemy is swept away from the Russian soil and all warlike operations are to be despised as unnecessary.—"Nichinichi."

KOKUSAI-WESTNIK

Petrograd April 9.—Last night, the evening session of the Congress of the Party of National Liberty was devoted to the question of the foreign policies of the Provisional Government. The following resolution was passed:—

"Congress expressing its entire confidence in the Government's foreign policy, based on faithfully maintaining the existing treaties, and considering the newly-won Russian liberty menaced by the militarism of the Hohenzollern Monarchy is assured that the Government will pursue the problems of the war of liberation proclaimed by the allied democracies without attempts against the liberty of other peoples, and will permit nothing detrimental to the vital interests and rights of Russia. Congress summons all Russia to rally round the Government and ensure it means to conduct the war until victory and a lasting peace which would assure the liberty of nations, a victory of the democracies over reactionary monarchies."

KOKUSAI-REUTER

Petrograd, Apr. 10.—M. Kerensky, the Minister of Justice, has announced that the Russian Provisional Government will shortly publish a declaration. It will be to the effect that Russia renounces all claims to territorial expansion, but will defend to the uttermost the liberty already won.

TO COMMEMORATE JAPAN-CHINA THROUGH TRAFFIC

Baron Goto, President of the Imperial Government Railways of Japan, was in the chair at the Celebration Commemorating the Japan-China Through Traffic on the 7th at the Tokyo Station Hotel. Mr. Wang Fu-wei, Vice-Minister of Communications and Director General of the Chinese Railways, the Chinese Delegates who attended the Fifth China-Japan Through Traffic Conference, representatives of steamship companies, and other noted Japanese and foreigners were present.

Baron Goto opened the celebration with an address of welcome, which was also translated into Chinese. It read as follows:

Your Excellencies and Gentlemen,

It is really a great honour to me thus to be privileged, on this auspicious occasion of the celebration commemorating the Japan-China Through Traffic, to give an address of welcome in the name of the Imperial Government Railways of Japan, as the carriers in charge of the management of the through traffic affairs. We have to-day among us His Excellency Mr. Wang, Vice-Minister of Communications, high officials occupying important posts in the Ministry of Communications, Directors of various administrations and projected lines of the Chinese Government Railways, and other gentlemen, who have journeyed all the way from China. Also present in this celebration are representatives of such trans-Pacific steamship lines as the Canadian Pacific and the Pacific Mail, and also gentlemen of our own country, directly or indirectly interested in the present through traffic. Indeed, we are more than delighted to thank you all for your presence which makes this occasion more brilliant and more joyous.

Your Excellencies and Gentlemen, Japan is situated in close proximity westward to the Asiatic Continent across the Japan Sea and the Yellow Sea, and hails afar eastward to America over the wide expanse of Pacific Ocean. Thus, all trans-Pacific steamers plying between the two continents, Asia and America, do not fail to call at Japanese ports, and Japan is not only the natural pivotal centre of traffic and communications on the Pacific but also holds the vital key, so to speak, to all the travel and traffic routes on the Asiatic Continent, inasmuch as we own the South Manchuria Railway connecting in the north with Russian railways and in the south with Chinese railways, and thereby forming part of the world's highway from and to Japan. As the outcome of this geographical position of the Japanese Empire, Japanese railways have not only the function of maintaining the smooth working of domestic traffic, but at the same time the still higher mission of acting as a perfect intermediary, amidst these steamer and railway routes converging on, and diverging from, the Japanese Empire.

I crave your pardon for the following personal history; I have now been appointed three times to the Presidency of the Imperial Government Railways, and, looking back on my career, I feel some satisfaction in my small share in the efforts of the Imperial Government Railways of Japan towards the development of the international railway through traffic. During my first term of office as President, I took it upon myself to establish through traffic arrangements between the South Manchuria Railway and the Russian railways—especially the Chinese Eastern Railway, maintaining close traffic relations with the former Railway. Again in my second Presidency, some schemes were set on foot to operate through traffic with those Chinese railways whose interests are more vitally associated with ours, but I was prevented from giving the final finish to my plan owing to my retirement. To-day, in my third term of office in the present post, I feel heartily glad that the Japan-China railway through traffic arrangements, thanks to the earnest efforts of my successors coupled with the demands of the times have gradually been moulded into shape, and we are now enabled to meet you all here to celebrate their growth and development. I believe it is our chief aim to benefit traffic all over the world in future by extending our joint efforts still more widely.

I avail myself of this opportunity to trace the history of the progress of the present through traffic, which I believe may not be entirely out of place. The First Through Traffic Conference was called at Tokyo in the spring of 1913, and by this conference the cornerstone was laid for the inauguration of the Japan-China through traffic, by establishing through passenger arrangements, by way of the Chosen and South Manchuria Railways, between the railways in Japan and the Chinese Peking-Mukden Railway. The Second Conference took place again at Tokyo in the next year, and resulted in the addition to the Peking-Mukden Railway, participating in the through passenger arrangements of the Peking-Hankow, Tientsin-Pukow, Shanghai-Nanking, and Peking-Kalgan Railways, thus realizing satisfactory through traffic facilities between Japanese railways and the five great lines of the Chinese Government Railways. In the Third Conference, held at Peking in the following year, that is 1915, it was decided to issue new Japan-China Circular Tour tickets for the benefit of tourists between the two countries and also Japan-China Overland Tour tickets, which aim at inducing trans-Pacific steamer passengers to make an overland trip through Japan Proper, Chosen, South Manchuria, and China Proper, thereby making these territories better known to the world.

The Fourth Conference was opened at Seoul, Chosen, in May of last year. It succeeded in introducing several improvements learned from practical experience into the former arrangements, and at the same time some methods were discussed for goods through traffic and views exchanged on the subject. The Conference convened for the third time in this city, discussed several important questions, which have been fortunately solved to the complete satisfaction of both sides, owing to the zeal and sincerity of all the delegates. From what I have said, you will understand that our arrangements, although entitled "Japan-China Railway Through Traffic," are to all intents and purposes the joint service of the principal railways on the Asiatic Continent and trans-Pacific steamship lines, with the Japanese Empire in the centre. As this central geographical position justifies, the Imperial Government Railways of Japan have so far continued to manage the present through traffic business in common, and we feel proud to see all our arrangements so satisfactorily planned and so smoothly carried out on the basis of hearty co-operations among the participant carriers.

To sum up the whole situation, the small circle of ripples caused in traffic and communications, with Tokyo at its centre, during the past few years, has extended its effects beyond the Japanese railways, and succeeded in forming part of the large circle of waves in the world's main traffic systems, with East Asia at its centre. The large circle of waves, I cannot but believe, will go far towards helping the progress of universal trade and maintenance of constant peace. It is, therefore, a matter of hearty congratulation for the sake of human welfare, not only to ourselves but also to you all gentlemen here present, that the task of joining the two continents across the Pacific has been at last realized.

Now, the number of through passengers handled since the inauguration of the present traffic amounts roughly to one hundred thousand and the receipts to about one million yen, and we admit that we cannot pride ourselves very much on these statistics, which show no very striking figures. On the other hand, when we realize that the seeds sown in the field of through traffic are now sprouting into beautiful trees that promise efficiency, prosperity, and perfection, we cannot repress our inner joy and pleasure. The fact, that the present through traffic has reached its existing development, I have no hesitation in saying, is entirely due to the co-operative spirit of all the interested carriers without exception, sacrificing their own local interests for the sake of the common interests of vaster significance, and this will also hold true in any future efforts and a greater success can hardly be expected without this self-sacrificing spirit prevailing among all the interested parties. At the same time, I believe it is no exaggeration to say that the constant devotion and tireless endeavour of the delegates of the interested carriers have also contributed in no small degree to the success of our plans. Everybody can easily see how very difficult to solve is the problem of through traffic between Japan and China. Arrangements of this kind may usually be operated smoothly between gold-using countries. But our through traffic is in force between Japanese railways with gold standard and Chinese railways with silver standard, and some difficulty was experienced at the First Conference in determining the rates of exchange applicable to through fares and their settlement. Besides, there are various disparities in railway traffic conditions between the two countries, and accordingly the rule for transactions are different, for instance, in point of the degree of the railway's responsibility for indemnity, and so on. In establishing reduced fare tickets of different kinds, too, I consider it worth while mentioning as especially praiseworthy that a satisfactory settlement was arrived at, helping to promote cordiality of international intercourse and increasing the welfare of both nations, by each party sacrificing local interests to common interests, in spite of the unavoidable conflict of different interests among the participant railways, and making a point of furthering the public advantage.

Indeed, when reflecting upon the achievements of the successive conferences, I, representing the Japanese carriers, must not forget to call to your minds the name of Mr. Foley, Traffic Manager of the Peking-Mukden Railway, who has always been present at the through traffic conferences from the very outset and has rendered inestimable service in promoting the mutual agreement and joint efforts of Japanese and Chinese railways. Many thanks are also due to those high officials, past and present, of the Ministry of Communications of the Chinese Republic, who, occupying important posts in that Ministry, have endeavoured to enforce the numerous and complex decisions reached at the successive conferences. This is true, not only with the railways, but also with the people managing the steamer lines, without whose co-operation it would have been difficult to establish convenient joint rail and steamer tickets, and of whose efforts we express our sincere appreciation. The reduction of steamer fares, we fully understand, is attended by far more difficult circumstances than is the case with railway fares. In spite of this, managements of the steamship concerns, such as the Nippon Yusen Kaisha and the Nisshin Kisen Kaisha, took the willing lead to sacrifice considerable interests and agreed to the establishment of circular tour tickets at reduced fares in connection with the railways, which fact I think to be certainly worth special mention and for which our sincere thanks are due to Baron Kondo representing these two steamship companies. As for the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services, Mr. Benjamin of that Company has been instrumental in advertising the Japan-China tour in every nook and corner of the world. While recognizing, on one hand, the merits of Messrs. Thomas Cook and Son, the International Sleeping Car Company, and the Japan Tourist Bureau, in fostering the sale of all kinds of through tickets, we have been overjoyed, on the other, that Mr. Rossetter of the Pacific Mail and Mr. Avery of the Toyo Kisen Kaisha, both of whom recently visited the Far East, have been very enthusiastic and have pledged themselves to push on the present tour in future. Although these facts are well known to you all, and it seems there is scarcely any need to repeat them, it is a great pleasure to me thus to renew our memory of them here this evening.

But, if we view the present state of the Japan-China railway through traffic from another standpoint, we must certainly be alive to the fact that we cannot rest satisfied with the arrangements we have to-day, but must strike out a new line and map out future plans for a much wider scope of activity. In other words, although we have no more than through passenger arrangements at present, we know we must by all means realize the long-cherished schemes for the through transportation of goods, in addition to improvements on the passenger service. For this purpose, the Japanese Government Railways have already despatched two or three representatives to China to study the present conditions of goods traffic in more accurate details. It is our sincere desire that gentlemen now visiting this country from China will avail themselves of this opportunity to investigate the state of affairs regarding goods traffic in Japan.

Now, as far as the steamship companies are concerned, there are to-day arrangements only for issuing special tickets for certain particular routes in connection with the present through traffic, but we hope to push on our co-operation still further and to extend arrangements to ordinary through tickets, steamship companies thus participating in the through traffic as regular members, and performing their functions to the fullest extent in connecting the ocean route between Asia and the South Seas or America. By this alone, we believe that through traffic in the true sense of the term can be developed satisfactorily. This, our real objective, can be attained only in the event of through traffic being consummated between grand railway systems in America and those in China by means of trans-Pacific steamer lines and Japanese railways.

To-day Europe is undergoing an unprecedented trial of fire and iron, and we are truly grieved at the ghastly bloodshed and the terrible havoc being wrought. But our single-eyed devotion here in this part of the world is to the cause of human welfare, by providing through traffic systems that leave nothing to be desired, and by maintaining constant peace wherever the waves of the Pacific beat, true to the great ocean's name.

Our Empire has, as I have said, a great mission, owing to its geographical position in the Pacific and adjoining the Asiatic Continent, and, in fulfilling this great mission, I believe we must be fully determined to use our very best efforts. I hope all the distinguished gentlemen from China, as well as the representatives of steamship companies in Canada, the United States, and Japan, who are present here, will kindly appreciate what I cherish in my mind and lend their useful influence and generous assistance to our joint cause for developing and perfecting the through traffic in all its bearings. Thus, I have taken advantage of this happy occasion of the celebration, commemorating the Fifth Japan-China Through Traffic Conference, and dwelt upon the brief history of the present through traffic and expressed my opinions on its future. Before resuming my seat, let me again express my fervent hope, which I am sure is shared by you gentlemen here present that the through traffic under our management may be crowned with success and prosperity by our united efforts in future.

Mr. Wang Fu-wei then read the following congratulatory address of Mr. Hsu Shih-ying, Minister of Communications of China.

The fifth Conference of the China-Japan Through Traffic having been finished, Baron Goto, President of the Imperial Government Railways of Japan, has invited to the Commemorating Ceremony leading officials of our Ministry of Communications and its subordinate officers. The Government of the Republic of China is grateful for the kindness and sincerity with which the Baron invited us. I greatly regret that on account of state affairs pressing upon me, I cannot attend the grand ceremony myself, but I feel just as if I am already at the ceremony in person, for I am already communicated spiritually with the idea of this valuable and glorious enterprise.

Now the railway through traffic between European countries has long been in practice, and has proved a great benefit to all the nations concerned, but here in Eastern Asia, it is only a few years ago that through traffic was established between China and Japan. China and Japan stand face to face across a narrow strip of water and have been helping each other from olden times. As the two nations are of one race and use the same written characters, they might well be said to be brothers. We are naturally so closely related to each other. Nowadays, things in the world are ever changing so rapidly that the speed may be metaphorically said to be 1,000 ri a day. At this juncture, as our two countries have many interests common between us, it is necessary for us to tighten the bond of friendship and to act in concert with each other.

As the railway is the pioneer of civilization, there is no reason for its being shut up in its own country and not opened to through traffic with the railways in other countries. In view of this, the railway authorities of China and Japan planned the through traffic conference, and their representatives met in Tokyo for the first session in the 2nd year of the Republic of China or the 2nd year of Taisho of Japan, in order to confer with each other upon the schemes for through traffic which would prove profitable to both nations and meet the requirements of the times. This conference did more than make an epoch in the history of communications between the two countries. Since the first session, the conference has been called once a year and the decisions passed in each conference were put in force in order to facilitate the through communications between China and Japan. The result was more than satisfactory. The time required for transportation has been shortened, the volume of traffic has been enlarged and more than this, the improvement of political relations, propagation of civilization, and development of commerce and industry in recent days are largely due to the introduction of railway through traffic.

The conference has been convened only five times, but in spite of this fact the result was significant. This is, of course, ascribable to the efforts made by those in charge of the matter, but it is also evident that the historic as well as geographical relations between us contributed not a little to the accomplishment of such a result.

If future conferences do not fail to seize upon advantages and do away with disadvantages, we may be sure that the development of railways in both countries will know no bounds and more and more important questions will be solved by the conference year after year, with the result that the trade between China and Japan will be developed, and the two nations brought into greater intimacy. Thus the through traffic between the two countries will lead the way in the realization of amity of nations which is the general trend of thought in the whole world. This will of course be a benefit to the railways in both countries, but we may expect more out of it. I believe Baron Goto concurs with me upon these future hopes and feelings of delight on this occasion.

Mr. William T. Payne, General Manager for Japan and China of the Canadian Pacific Ocean Service, also delivered a congratulatory address and said in part:

The masterly review which we have just heard from Baron Goto is only what we would expect from one who has had such a wide experience and who has so successfully promoted the development of railways in this country as well as in South Manchuria. All present will, I am sure, most cordially appreciate his broad view for the future development of international relations, for he has lifted this subject into a high plane of statesmanship and given us a glimpse of what we may hope for at no distant date, when under the auspices of his Department, travel and trade, which go hand in hand, shall be expanded, as we trust, far beyond their present limits.
